WALL STREET

(A Warning to the Gullible)

Oh, Yes!
Humpty Dumpty had a great fall,
His tumble upset the finances of all,
All Morgan's millions and keen Wall Street men,
Couldn't put Humpty together again.
Men were despoiled of their stocks and their cash,
Widows lost all in the terrible crash.
Brokers and bankers were in a bad way,
For millions of lambkins it was a black day.
They suddenly found, alack and alas,
That Humpty was principally water and gas.
The moral this teaches is now quite plain:
Never trust Humpty Dumpty again!

—Grenville Kleiser.

STREETSVILLE—EDEN W.M.S. NOTES

The members and helpers of the auxiliary will place their Easter Thankoffering on the plate in church on Easter Sunday.

Plans are being made for an exceptionally interesting and enjoyable meeting to be held in the church on the afternoon of Tuesday, April 7th. A cordial invitation has been extended to the women of the Anglican and Presbyterian churches. The Auxiliary President, Mrs. Rogerson, will be in charge of the meeting. Eden members will lead in the devotional exercises and there will be special musical numbers. The speaker of the day is to be Miss Cherry, of Toronto, her subject, 'Japan" will be illustrated with lantern slides. Lunch will be served. An offering will be taken. It is hoped that every women in the community will consider herself specially invited.

SPECIAL EASTER MUSIC IN THE UNITED CHURCH

At the morning service the choir will sing the anthem "Now is Christ Risen," by Caleb Simper, and Mrs. Harry Burton will sing "Jerusalem, Awaken."

In the evening, in addition to the Easter Hymns and the Pastors Message, the choir, assisted in the readings by Miss Mae McGregor, of Toronto, and in the music by Mrs. Nicol, of Hamilton, will render the cantata "Love Triumphant," a story of the first Eastertide. The text is taken from the beautiful story by Florence Morse Kingsley, entitled: "For", a Street Boy of Jerusalem. This is interspersed with musical numbers, consisting of solos, duets and choruses, in which leading parts are taken by Mrs. Burton, Miss Mabel Graydon, Mrs. W. Atkinson, Miss M. Hicks, Mrs. Nicol, Miss Alice Steen and Messrs. L. C. Pope and Gordon Steen.

MRS. CARMEN B. GREIG SUCCUMBS SUDDENLY

One of the saddest deaths that have brought general sorrow and regret to this entire community in recent years was that of Freda Claridge, beloved wife of Carmen B. Greig, which occured at her home on Tucker Street early on Monday morning. The news of her demise came as a shock to her host of friends and to the citizens of Arthur and vicinity generally, and as the sad intelligence of her demise was passed along it was invariably accompanied by expressions of sorrow and regret and of sincere sympathy for the bereaved husband and family. Mrs. Greig had enjoyed her usual good health until a few days previous to her death. On Thursday she was down town and on the following day she became ill with the flu which was not regarded as serious. On Sunday her physician believed pneumonia was threatening. A trained nurse was placed in charge but still her condition was not regarded as imminently critical. Early on the following morning she suffered from a coughing spell followed by a hemorrhage to which she succumbed about 5.30 a.m. As we go to press on Wednesday afternoon, the funeral, which is private, takes place from her late residence in Arthur to Greenfield Cemetery.

The late Mrs. Greig, who was in her thirty-first year, was the only daughter of Mr. William Claridge and the late Mrs. Claridge. She was born in Grand Valley where her childhood was passed and where she resided until her marriage to Mr. Carmen B. Greig, in September of 1923, when Mr. and Mrs. Greig took up their residence in Arthur.

Here she soon became popular with a large circle of friends, more especially in musical circles. She possessed musical talent far above the average. She was an accomplished pianist and organist and her services were always freely and graciously given to help in any effort publicly undertaken for the good of the town. For a number of years she ably filled the position of organist in the Arthur United Church. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband and one son, Donald, to whom the Enterprise-News joins with the community generally in extending sincerest sympathy.

She is also survived by her father, Mr. William Claridge, of Grand Valley and one brother, Dr. Claridge, of Tottenham.—The Enterprise-News, Arthur, Ont.

Woman Who Took Plane Ride At Age of 102 Passes in Manitoba

Winnipeg.—Mrs. Thomas Ballingal, one of Canada's oldest citizens, who took her first airplane ride on her 102nd birthday, July 14, 1929, died at her home in Dominion City, Man. She died on March 26 after a two-day minor illness.

Pioneer of the Dominion, Mrs. Ballingal came to Canada from her birthplace, Hillhead, near Glasgow, in a sturdy sailing vessel that took six weeks to reach Quebec. In 1864 she was a passenger on the first train to journey from Toronto to Montreal. She had travelled from Toronto to Paris, Ont., 35 years ago, by stage coach.

Mrs. Ballingal lived for many years in Ayr, Ont., where she married Thomas Ballingal, in 1857. He died in 1873, and in 1895 she went to Dominion City, where she resided with a daughter.

Children Frost Victims When School Bus Stalls

Five Perish and 15 Suffer Tortures While Limbs Thaw Out in Colorado Snow Drifts

DRIVER FOUND DEAD

Lamar, Colo.—Fifteen small children patiently endured the torture of slowly thawing arms and legs in Lamar Hospital last Sunday Night, while parents of their companions who were frozen to death in a blizzard-stalled school bus prepared for a joint funeral service.

A blizzard of almost unequalled intensity sweeping over the bleak prairie of Eastern Colorado held the bus imprisoned in drifts for 33 hours while cold killed one and then another of the children shivering in the vehicle, while the driver struggled on foot in a vain search for aid. He also was frozen to death, not far from the bus.

The survivors were rescued late Friday and taken to a farm home, then to the village of Holly, and finally to the Lamar Hospital by plane.

When the children regained full consciousness and realized the horror of all that had happened since the start of their tragic journey from school last Thursday, many of them became hysterical.

Doctors, who gave them every medical attention possible, however, said they believed no limbs would have to be amputated despite the severe freezing that all of the small passengers suffered.

Parents of the five who died and relatives of the driver, Carl Miller, indicated that all would be buried in a joint cemetery plot, on Tuesday. A father of one of the dead explained, thus:

"They died together, the bravest children that ever lived. So we will bury them together."

The surviving children were placed in a single ward of the hospital. None but nurses and physicians was allowed inside. Parents, weeping, gathered in the small ante-room. They did not speak. A childish cry occasionally pierced the stillness.

Suffering Tortures

Mrs. Marie Wadham, hospital superintendent, said the children were suffering now more than at any time since the chain of disaster started. They were dazed from cold and hunger before, but now the pain of thawing flesh was almost more than they could bear.

Blanch Stonebreaker, 10 years old, with a hair ribbon still in her blond curls, is in the most critical condition. Her arms were frozen to her elbows and her legs above the knees.

"She looks much better now," said Dr. N. M. Burnett, "but she still is in a serious condition."

The body of the bus driver, Carl Miller, was discovered face downward, arms outstretched toward the help he had been unable to reach. He had wandered apparently in circles through the blinding snow, only to die within a few hundred feet of a ranch house.

Millers body and the five children who perished, Mary Miller, eight daughter of the driver, Louise Stonebreaker, 14, Orville Untiedt, seven, Bobbie Brown, nine, and Kenneth Johnson, seven, were placed in the Morich mortuary at Holly.

All ministers in the surrounding territory will aid in the joint services. They will be buried in Holly Cemetery, under the same snow which claimed their lives.

Foot of Snow

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.—On Sunday Algoma was recovering from a record March storm, which assumed the proportions of a blizzard and left nearly a foot of snow, which drifted before a northeast wind. The storm was general over the upper lakes region. However the wind subsided, and, contrary to weather forecasts, the mercury was steadily rising.

Bald Eagle Is Killed In Attack on Airplane

Saranac Lake, N.Y.—"Old Baldy," monarch of the air for years over the Essex County section of mountain folk who daily watched the great eagle sweep high above their homes. The huge bald eagle was killed in a fight with an airplane, the battle was witnessed by scores of persons. Going far above the plane, the eagle dropped on it like a bullet, but made the strategic error of a frontal attack and was caught in the whirling propeller.

Two Youths Drown In Goderich Harbor

Two Fisher Lads Swept from Capsized Skiff in Gale

Goderich. — Two Goderich youths, William Mallough, aged 21, and Leonard MacDonald, 17, were drowned on Sunday morning when in Goderich harbor their flat-bottomed skiff capsized in the stormy lake as they were attempting to lift sucker nets.

A single-handed and heroic attempt at rescue by Eric Jenner, 16-year-old companion of the victims, was frustrated when the heaving waters washed the two boys from the upturned boat before Jenner could reach them in another craft.

Throughout the day the fathers of the two youths, assisted by seamen, directed dragging operations from the tossing deck of the fishing boat Margaret MacDonald, whose skipper, Jack MacDonald, is an uncle of the younger victim.

As the day dragged on, hundreds of anxious townspeople visited the dock to stand silently watching as the Margaret MacDonald, pitched and tossed by the stormy lake, pursued her task. As night fell the drenched crew reluctantly returned to await a renewal of the search at daybreak Monday.

The two boys, who came from a long line of Great Lakes seamen, had set nets daily near the breakwater and had daily collected their catch.

At eight o'clock Sunday morning they prepared as usual to row the skiff to the nets. The third boy, Eric Jenner, was denied a chance to accompany them because the water was too rough to warrant an extra passenger.

Some time later he walked out along the dock, to see his two chums clinging to the flat bottom of their upturned skiff. The lad hurried back to where a battered old motor boat was moored and after considerable effort managed to get under way and headed out. When he hove in sight of the derelict the two passengers has disappeared. He continued until he reached the scene, but seeing no trace of the two he headed about and notified Bert MacDonald, father of Leonard.

The father set out in the same motorboat. En route a gas line gave out, and the rickety old boat drifted north, headed for the jagged ice floes along the shore. A rescue boat saved the father from the fate which had claimed his son.

Imperial Airways To Supply Orient

Air Freight Line to Asia and Africa To Open Soon

New York.—A new high-speed air-rail service will shortly be inaugurated by Imperial Airways, Ltd., of Great Britain, Percy Beyshea, United States Manager of the Airways, announced recently.

Five important railways in Great Britain, the Great Western, London & Northeastern, London-Midland & Southern, Southern, and the Metropolitan, will participate, receiving urgent freight at 140 stations.

Mail will go by fast trains to London and by trucks to Croydon Aerodrome to despatch throughout Europe, Egypt, Iraq, India and Central Africa.

The agent said plans are being formed for through service in Europe, Asia, Africa and North America.

Keep Canada Beautiful

The Canadian Horticultural Council is setting on foot this spring a campaign to "beautify Canada." It is to touch city and country alike, to preserve our rural byways and spruce up our city streets. It is to be confined to no province, but will be Dominion-wide.

Dr. W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturist, is directing the Ornamental Horticulture Committee, which has taken steps to have provincial committees formed. It is hoped to extend the work so as to include the remoter districts, as well as those which lie upon the beaten path.

This is a splendid movement. Nature gave to us Canadians one of the fairest lands on earth. Where man has brought ugliness, whether from careless destruction or industrial necessity, let him restore whatever beauty he may. Where man has raised up noble works and broad thoroughfares, let him render them more fair by careful art. We owe this much to Canada. Montreal, with one of the most splendid city sites in the world, should lead, not lag, in this movement. —"The Montreal Daily Star."

Thunder of Guns to Greet Bessborough at Halifax Saturday

Ottawa.—A glittering pageant whose actors will be the naval and military forces of Canada will greet Their Excellencies the Earl and Countess of Bessborough when, with their suite, they disembark at Halifax next Saturday.

From the citadel, whose massive bastions tower majestically above the harbor, a salute of 19 guns will announce the fact that the new Governor-General has set foot on Canadian soil. The reverberations of the first gun will synchronize with the royal salute to be given His Excellency by a guard of bluejackets from the Royal Canadian Navy, who will be drawn up, 100 strong, on the pier.

When the Governor-General leaves the docks to proceed to the Province House, where he will take the oath of office, a troop of cavalrymen from the Royal Canadian Dragoons, garbed in scarlet and blue, with plumed helmets, will precede the Vice-Regal party. Drawn up on Hollis Street at the entrance to the Legislature 100 officers and men detailed from the Royal Canadian Regiment will receive His Excellency with a royal salute.

Immediately after the Earl of Bessborough has taken the oath of office, the guns will again thunder from Citadel Hill, thus announcing that the three months' interragnum, during which His Majesty was represented in Canada by the administrator, Rt. Hon. Lyman P. Duff, is at an end.

The Governor-General will leave the Nova Scotian capital at 4.30 p.m. on Saturday. At the ocean terminals the infantry guard will again be present.

All units participating in the reception will wear full pre-war dress.

Jellicoe to Visit Canada in August

Toronto.—A visit to Canada by Lord Jellicoe, as a delegate to the British Empire Service League meeting at Niagara Falls, is expected to take place in August. Lord Jellicoe was admiral of the British Grand Fleet during the war, and also First Sea Lord of the Admiralty.

He may be in Toronto during the Canadian National Exhibition, and it is believed he will take the salute of returned men there upon Warrior's Day.

Representatives of returned soldier organizations from all over the Empire will be present at the meeting of the British Empire Service League. Plans have also been made for the presence of Lord Jellicoe at the provincial conference of the Canadian Legion at Oshawa, which takes place near the time of the other meeting.

A Record

Kingston, Ont.—The seven-year-old Holstein cow, Sagis Spofford Triumph, bred by W. E. Wood, of Bloomfield, and now owned by G. F. Murton, of Portsmouth, Ont., has just completed a year's record in the 365-day division of the R.O.P., on twice a day milking, with a production of 16,573 lbs. milk containing 756.25 lbs. butter, giving her an average test of 3.65 per cent. fat. This cow's best month production was 1,869 lbs. milk containing 63.55 lbs. fat.

Governor-General's Flag to Make Debut in Canada With Bessborough

Ottawa.—The new flag for Governors-General, ordered and approved by His Majesty King George, will be used in Canada for the first time after the Earl of Bessborough has arrived here to take up residence at Rideau Hall. It will not be the personal flag of Lord Bessborough but rather symbolic of the position he will hold as Governor-General.

The flag has a field of navy blue while in its centre are a crown of gold and the British lion. Beneath the crown is the word "Canada." The same flag will be used in other Dominions, except that the name beneath the crown will vary.

The new flag will be flown over Rideau Hall, official residence here of the Governor-General, and also over the east block of the Parliament Buildings when Lord Bessborough occupies his office here.

Gain in Exports Of Canadian Fruit

Canada's Shipments to Britain More Popular Report Shows

London, March 29. — Canada's exports of canned fruit to Great Britain have increased enormously since the war, according to a report issued by the Empire Marketing Board on "The Demand for Canned Fruits." The report was the result of a survey of the tastes of 15 million consumers in all parts of Great Britain and in Belfast. During the war Canada's export amounted to about 100 pounds. To-day it is approximately three million pounds.

The report states that people in Great Britain are eating five times as much canned fruit as they did in 1912. Home-grown and Empire fruits from Canada, Australia and South Africa are supplying more and more of this rising demand. The Empire share of imports has risen from a negligible proportion to nine per cent. There is room for development, the report states, since 87 per cent. of the trade is still in the hands of the United States.

Spring Blizzard Sweeps Over States

70-Mile Gales Pile Snow in Many Sections and Cripple Traffic

Chicago.—Spring showers became raging snow storms last Friday, gentle zephyrs turned to wintry gales and balmy temperatures skidded to "cold wave" readings in a blizzard which surged eastward across the nation.

From Canada to the Texas Panhandle and from Idaho to Chicago the countryside was lashed by snow and sleet-laden gales. A mixture of snow and rain fell in Chicago, while the weather bureau predicted temperature of 15 degrees above zero.

Gales of 60 and 70 miles an hour piled snow in drifts so deep in Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Minnesota, North and South Dakota and parts of Iowa that motorists and aviators gave up the struggle. Railroad trains plowed through the drifts only with the greatest difficulty.

Temperatures fell to zero in Denver for the first time this year and to four degrees above zero at Fergus Falls, Minn. Winnipeg, Man., where sub zero temperatures prevailed, reported heavy snows had brought about its worst traffic tangles of the year.

Rural schools throughout the Dakotas were closed, most highways were blocked completely and many telegraph and telephone lines were blown down.

Witnesses of April

April, I take your witness clear
That Christ shall come in light,
For I have seen a dogwood tree
Blow whitely in the night.

Shall any ask more proof than this,
That in such light is love?
In darkness of Gethsemane
White dogwood shone above.

April, I take your witness high
That He shall come in flame,
For I have seen the living fire
That crimson boughs proclaim.

What burning credence shall the ground
Demand that flame is joy?
The Judas Trees are red as blood,
That death could not destroy.

April, I take your witness pure
That He shall come in grace,
For I have seen a lily gleam
Upon a shadowed place.

Shall faith not come to seek again
God's peace, when lilies stir?
These floyers bloomed when Mary said,
"Art Thou the Gardener?"

—Cecilia Ellerbe.

Britain First on List of Merchant Shipping

Washington—Great Britain maintained her position as dictator of the world's merchant shipping in 1930, a recent report made public by the United States Shipping Board reveals. British merchant ships totalled over 18,300,000 gross tons, the United States and second position with less than half that amount.

During 1930, the Board says, a total of 359 vessels of 2,000 tons or over were placed in operation. Great Britain led with new tonnage, placing 139 vessels in service. Norway was second with 71, and the United States third with 15 new ships.

Coal Consumption Shows Big Decrease

Increased Use of Waterpower and of Electricity Chief Factors

Ottawa.—Coal consumption in Canada has decreased approximately three and a half million tons in the past year.

Statistics now available show the quantity of coal made available for consumption in Canada in 1930 was 31,865,880 tons, as compared with 35,278,683 tons the preceding year. This decrease is due to several causes, one of which is the increasing use of electricity as a medium of power for operating factories, newsprint mills, saw mills, etc., and to the increased usage of water power instead of steam power in the generating of electricity. Of the total power used in manufacturing industries in 1928, it is estimated 72 per cent. was electricity. In 1929 and 1930 this percentage is expected to have been greater.

It is estimated electric power has displaced the consumption of coal in Canada to the extent of 14,500,000 tons in 1930.

While the consumption of coal last year shows a decrease, the output of central electric generating stations has increased from 18,014 million kilowatt hours in 1929 to 16,256 millions in 1930. The large stations, generating approximately 98 per cent. of the total electrical output, generated only 302 million kilowatt hours by steam power in 1930, as compared with 331 millions in the preceding year.

$4,500,000 Grain Elevator

Prescott, Ontario.—Built during the past two years at a total cost of $4,500,000, the Dominion Government's huge new grain elevator, situated on reclaimed land on the St. Lawrence River, three miles east of Prescott, is now completed and ready for the opening of navigation in April. Towering to a height of 205 feet at its loftiest point, and extending diagonally riverwards for a distance of 1,240 feet, the great structure forms an impressive piece of skyline. Its capacity is 5,500,000 bushels.

Parents' Example Influence Child

Happy Home Atmosphere Vital Factor in Bringing Up Children

London—Modern psychology has shown that the attitude of any man towards the problems of life and the degree of courage with which he meets those problems depend almost entirely on the conditions under which he has spent his earliest years, writes "A Mother" in Daily Express. He learns from his mother his first social lessons; from his father the lessons of work and livelihood, and from both parents together his attitude towards sex.

He begins to learn in his cradle. The baby who hears constant quarrelling between his parents is bound to develop some disability which does not diminish, but rather increases, with age.

Standard of Conduct

The least disability he will acquire will be a quarrelsome, nagging disposition. Some children become subject to permanent nervous disorders as a direct consequence of living in the presence of threats and bad tempers.

Such a child will be out at elbows with some one all his life; his brothers and sisters, his playfellows, his co-workers, his wife, his own children. So the evil goes on, for ever increasing its sphere of influence and harmfulness.

The importance of the behavior of parents towards one another and towards their children cannot be over-emphasised.

The home is the first unit of society with which the child comes in contact, and it is there that he learns ineradicable lessons of behavior.

If he is set an example of dignity, courage, and good manners he will take that example as his own standard of behavior. If, on the other hand he meets with intolerance, shrilling and squabbling, these things will be the foundation on which the conduct of his life will be built.

The teacher was giving a lesson on the Creation. John interrupted with the remark: "My father says we are descended from apes." Teacher: "Your private family affairs have no interest for the class."

Father—"Well, Tommy, how do you think you will like this fellow for a brother?" Tommy (inspecting the new infant somewhat doubtfully)—"Have you got to keep him, dad, or is he only a sample?"

Clever Apprentice

Frank Coward, bright young Canadian Pacific Weston (Winnipeg) shops apprentice, aggregated 92.6 per cent. over a period of three years annual examinations—the highest average ever made since the inauguration of the competitions in 1923. He is shown being congratulated on his remarkable record by D. C. Coleman, vice-president, Canadian Pacific Railway western lines.

Where Our Names Came From

In the year 1387, Ladislas, King of Poland and Duke of Lithuania, called his subjects together and announced that for the good of the nation they were all to be baptized. This was a rather elaborate undertaking and might have perplexed most monarchs, but Ladislas had carefully laid his plans. So separated the men and the women into two camps, and these in turn were divided into two more. The men of the first group received the name of Peter, those of the second Paul; likewise, the ladies were designated either Catherine or Margaret, according to where they happened to be standing.

Up to five or six centuries ago, this matter of names was a perplexing problem; judged by modern standards, the King of Poland's program seems rather impractical but at least he was trying to establish some definite system of nomenclature. The fact that he specified no surnames for his subjects was not an oversight, for at that period surnames were not a popular commodity. Our ancestors seem to have managed to get along without them, and it was not until the fifteenth century that surnames came into general use in western Europe and the British Isles. In the course of years, the population increased, commerce was developing rapidly, and in every respect the business of living was continually growing more complex; and presently there came a time when a surname to distinguish an individual from his fellows became an absolute necessity.

Surnames developed naturally, and they sprang from innumerable sources. Many are easily traceable, but there are others whose beginnings are largely conjectural. The origin of names covers a vast field, and within certain limits the layman's guess as to the why and the wherefores of English surnames is as good as the learned doctor's.

As an example of how some of the commonest names have more curious origins than might appear, take the case of Green. The natural inference is that Green, in its earliest beginning, was somehow associated with color.

The original Mr. Green, however, came to his name in an entirely different manner. In medieval England, "The Green Man" was a favorite title for an inn or tavern. A certain Edward, let us say for example, was the proprietor of such an establishment; to distinguish him from other Edwards in the neighborhood he was referred to as Edward of The Green Man. This was too much of a mouthful, and eventually it was contracted to Edward Green.

In his account of London during the reign of Charles II, Macaulay wrote:

The houses were not numbered. There would, indeed, have been little advantage in numbering them, for of the coachmen, chairmen, porters and errand boys of London, a very small proportion could read. It was necessary to make marks which even the most ignorant could understand. The shops were therefore distinguished by painted signs which gave a gay and grotesque aspect to the streets.

These medieval signboards were the source of many present-day surnames, and, as in the instance of Green, other tavern keepers derived their titles from those of their establishments. Thus "The Wild Man" gave rise to Wilde, or Savage. Similarly "The Lamb and the Flag," "The King's Head," and many others gave rise to Lamb, Flagg, King, and so forth.

Industries and occupations were of course responsible for a multitude of surnames. Before the introduction of the roller, the manufacture of cloth depended upon its being trodden by human feet into the proper consistency. Those engaged in this work were the first to bear the name of Walker. The glove-maker's shop was marked by a hand above its door; James or George or Robert Hand naturally followed, as being somewhat simpler than James or George or Robert the glove maker. The progenitor of the Fletchers fletched arrows for his living, and the original Mr. Pepper apparently obtained his name, not on account of a stormy disposition, but because he was in the spice business. At some remote period, a lady brew master appeared on the scene and founded the family of Brewster, the Wainrights owe their title to a wagon maker, and the most ancient of the Parkers had charge of the inclosed areas of his lord's domain and was so designated.

The origin of surnames, however, does not always follow such clearly defined courses, and frequently the search for the beginning of a very common name leads into controversial territory.

The name Turtle, for example, although a comparatively infrequent surname, derives its meaning not from the animal in question, but from the turtle dove, the symbol of constancy. Whover named the original Mr. Turtle was therefore paying him a high compliment. Just the same, a great many animal names were originally conferred on their bearers in a literal sense.

At some period in history, there was a person conspicuous for his large bulk and elephantine traits in general; his descendants are the Oliphants and Ollivants of to-day. Some authorities hold that the original Mr. Fox received the name because of his prowess as a hunter; but it is just as possible that he had a shrewd and tricky temperament and that Fox expressed it exactly. Our ancestors did not distribute such names as Bear, Beaver, Crane, Swan, Drake, Pigeon, Otter, Oyster, Wren, Fish, Cod and a hundred others among the populace for nothing; it is not illogical to suppose that the first of the Cranes was tall and lanky and that the original Mr. Bear had a surly disposition.

Occasionally, a family name of the most incongruous sort survives for generations. Until 1881, the name of "Hell-Cat" was to be found in the directory of Manchester, Eng. It had a curious origin; in the beginning, certain members of this family were credited with occult powers of a kind to enable them to transform themselves into cats at will. Their descendants were proud of this tradition and retained the name up to a period when it appeared ridiculous and must have proved a considerable embarrassment.

There is some doubt as to whether such names as Black, Brown, or White were originally conferred in the sense of color or complexion. One Stephen Black in the Norman period was conspicuous for his dark features and is sometimes thought to have been the founder of the Black family. It is also supposed that the Blacks received their name from the blacksmiths, or workers in iron, that the Browns were not necessarily dusky hued in the beginning, but took their title in abbreviated form from brownsmiths, or copper workers, and that the Whites may have sprung from the whitesmiths who controlled the tin and silver industries. But Gray was evidently first applied in respect to physical coloration, and Green, as explained, came from a tavern sign.

Many surnames developed from an individual's place of residence. John, for example, to distinguish him from a hundred other Johns, was referred to as John at the wood. He was listed thus in the Hundred Rolls, or county records, of medieval England. John at the wood, however, was too cumbersome and it was presently contracted to John Atwood. Similarly, Edward at the ash (tree) become Edward Nash, Thomas of seven oaks, Thomas Snooks, Robert in the dale, Robert Dale, and so on.

Such names as Joy, Pride, Vice, Bliss and Love are traceable not necessarily to the qualities of their original bearers, although that is quite possible but more likely to the miracle plays or mysteries of medieval times. These were allegorical dramas, primarily religious, and they afforded the foundations of the modern theatre. The parts were acted, not by professional players, but by citizens of the community. If Adam interpreted the role of Pride on the stage, he was quite apt to be known as Adam Pride for the rest of his days.

The crusades were also a factor in the origin of surnames. Jordan, as the result of thousands of Englishmen journeying to the Holy Land, began to be applied as a family title. The design carried by a warrior on his shield in the campaigns against the Saracens frequently became his name; Griffin or Griffith has its source in the dragonlike figure on the arms of some medieval knight, and Cross, as the crusaders' standard, came into common use as a surname.

It is the element of uncertainty that makes the origin of surnames a fascinating study. The field is so vast that no one can speak with undisputed authority; and beyond a certain point, the doughtiest scholar and the veriest tyro are on an equal footing. Where and how surnames originated is of no practical consequence; they are no longer an expression of character or personality. But if one sets out on the trail of a name, he will presently find himself in a province of curious facts and fancies whose existence he may never have suspected before.—F.L.S., Jr., in "The Christian Science Monitor."

"What, fish again?" growled Peck. "We're always having fish." "Well, John," said his wife, "it's good for you. It feeds the brain." "Bosh! Why should you think my brain needs so much feeding?" "Well, didn't your mother give you fish before you got married?" "No," he hissed. "I wish she had."

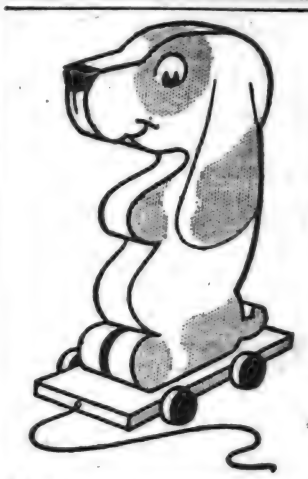
The Two Miracles

The yearly miracle of spring,
Of budding bough and greening sod—
Is it less wonderful to view
Than is the Risen Son of God?

What man can call the flower forth
Or bid the buried seed spring up?
Can free the prisoned butterfly
Or paint the golden crocus cup?

No more than he could think or dream
That God could die, that man could rise!
The selfsame power that calls the seed
Out of the darkness where it lies



Could call the Christ from out the grave.
O ignorant and foolish men
Who watch the miracle of spring,
Yet doubt that Jesus rose again!
—By Annie Johnson Flint in "Youth's Companion."

WHEN CHILDREN FRET

THERE are times when a child is too fretful or feverish to be sung to sleep. There are some pains a mother cannot pat away. But there's quick comfort in Castoria!

For diarrhea, and other infantile ills, give this pure vegetable preparation. Whenever coated tongues tell of constipation; whenever there's any sign of sluggishness. Castoria has a good taste: children love to take it. Buy the genuine—with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on wrapper.

Fletcher's CASTORIA

ACID causes Headaches

WHEN there's too much acid in your stomach, you must force yourself to work, and even pleasures are too great an effort. Appetite lags; the digestion is poor; the whole system suffers.

Laboratory tests show an acid condition is due to errors in our modern diet. But you need not wait to diet your way out of the trouble!

Take a tablespoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

This will neutralize the excess acid instantly; make you feel like a new person in just a few moments.

Take a little whenever heartburn, sick headaches nausea, flatulence, indigestion or billiousness show the digestive system is becoming too acid. Whenever you are taking cold or feel sluggish, weak, constipated, Phillips' Milk of Magnesia has a gentle, laxative action.

Delightful to take. Endorsed by physicians for 50 years and prescribed everywhere for men, women and children. The genuine is always a liquid; it cannot be made in tablet form. It always bears the name Phillips for your protection.

RHEUMATISM

15 Convent sisters say there's nothing to equal Kruschen

This letter is not one person's opinion; it is the unanimous vote of the sisters of a large convent.

"We are a large community (15 in number) and find no medicine to equal Kruschen Salts. Many of the sisters are troubled with Rheumatism, which necessitates taking more than the daily dose . . . . . We cannot speak too highly of Kruschen Salts, and the benefit we derive from them."—Sister M.J.

The natural treatment for rheumatism is Kruschen Salts. The six mineral salts of Kruschen have a direct effect upon the whole blood stream, neutralising uric acid, which is the recognised cause of rheumatism. They also restore the eliminating organs to proper working order and so prevent constipation, thereby checking the further formation of uric acid and other body poisons which undermine the health.

FREE TRIAL OFFER

If you have never tried Kruschen—try it now at our expense. We have distributed a great many special "GIANT" packages which make it easy for you to prove our claim for yourself. Ask your druggist for the new "GIANT" 75c. package.
This consists of our regular 75c. bottle together with a separate trial bottle—sufficient for about one week. Open the trial bottle first, put it to the test, and then, if not entirely convinced that Kruschen does everything we claim it to do, the regular bottle is still as good as new. Take it back. Your druggist is authorised to return your 75c. immediately and without question. You have tried Kruschen free, at our expense. What could be fairer? Manufactured by E. It is quite noticeable the number of religious sects who are observing the Lenten season of late years. It is most fitting and proper that everyone should come in closer communion with the Prince of Peace who shed His precious blood on the cross for the redemption of mankind.

Owing to the condition of some of the country roads the monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of Bethel Church was held in the Church on Monday. The attendance was not as large as usual.

TRINITY CHURCH

In addition to the regular meeting, services of special interest were held during the Lenten season. Six visiting preachers, who were very much appreciated, bringing helpful devotional and inspirational messages, were the Rev. Dr. MacElheran, the new principal of Wycliffe College, Toronto; Rev. J. H. Warren of Long Branch; Rev. H. P. Earle of Port Credit; Rev. Sextus Stiles of Swansea, St. Olaves; Rev. R. W. Allen of Brampton, and Rev. C. W. Holdsworth of Islington. All these clergy are very much appreciated. Then Mrs. Payne of the Council for Social Service gave two very interesting talks on the work for the underprivileged, illustrated by views. The rector gave an illustrated address on "Around the world with the M.S.C.C." on two Sunday evenings. Splendid views on the life of our Lord were given.

Services for Good Friday and Easter Day

Good Friday—10.30, service and sermon, "Today thou shalt be with Me in paradise." 7.30, "From the upper room in Jerusalem to the sealed tomb," and the "Story of the Cross" will be sung.

Easter Day—8 a.m., Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Holy Communion and service; 3 p.m., holy baptism; 7 p.m., evening prayer and sermon.

All are asked to be present and join in these helpful services of Holy week.

The Parish House, which has been under construction during the winter, is about completed and will (D.V.) be opened in the course of a month.

PORT CREDIT

Mrs. Donald Alexander of Port Credit celebrated her 80th birthday on March 25.

The roof of the home of Magistrate G. W. Gordon, Port Credit caught fire Saturday, but by the quick work of the firemen the blaze was extinguished before much damage was done.

COUNTY TAXES

The following table shows the amount of taxes for 1930 and 1931, collected by Peel County Council. There is an increase in every municipality. Streetsville has to pay $416.-00 more this year than last, which means about 1½ mills on the dollar extra.

	1930	1931
Albion	$ 23,455	$ 26,551
Caledon	$ 29,446	$ 33,33[illegible]
Chinguacousy	$ 62,374	$ 70,592
Toronto Tp.	$ 77,622	$ 87,254
Toronto Gore	$ 14,226	$ 16,114
Brampton	$ 42,479	$ 47,868
Bolton	$ 2,915	$ 3,312
Port Credit	$ 9,775	$ 11,108
Streetsville	$ 3,074	$ 3,490
	$ 265,365	$ 299,628

The County will have to raise $35,-300 more this year than last on account of the following increased expenditure: Debentures $11,000; Maintenance Provincial Highways $10,000; Old Age Pensions $3,000; High Schools $10,000; Public Schools $1300.

in this district, we imagine who hasn't read about how to save a day a week, save money and save herself the drudgery incidental to washday in the home by sending the family bundle to a laundry. It just remains for us to stress the point of our service — regularity of calling and delivering— and the excellent quality of our work week-in and week-out. We have six different kinds of family wash service from which you may choose — all moderately priced — and each one suited to a particular requirement. Let our young lady on the phone tell you about these and help you select your needs or stop any one of our courteous driver-salesmen.

OUR PRICES

1. Damp Wash—20 lbs. for $1.00—
5c. per pound
Everything washed in mild suds and rinsed in ten changes of water. Excess water removed and the bundles returned damp, sweet and clean, ready to be ironed.

2. Damp Wash, Flat Work Ironed,
8c. per pound
12 1-2 lbs. lbs. for $1.00—
Same process as Damp Wash with the exception that all body clothes are returned ready to iron and flat work such as bed linen, table linen and towels are ironed by us, ready for use.

3. Dry Wash, 14 lbs. for $1.00—
7c. per pound
Everything washed in mild suds and rinsed in ten different waters and thoroughly dried in moderate air-cooled dry room tumbler.

4. Dry Wash, Flat Work Ironed.
10c. per pound
10 lbs. for $1.00—
Same process as dry wash with the exception that all body clothes are returned dry and flat work such as bed linen, table linen and towels ready for use.

5. Semi-Finished, 9 lbs. for $1.00—
11c. per pound
Everything ironed. Flat work perfectly done and body clothes or wearing apparel ironed in such a manner that it is entirely finished except a few of the fussy corners and 90 per cent. can be worn without any further touching up.

6. Shirts Fully Finished, 11c each
In addition to the weight charged in the service that they be sent in excepting Damp and Dry Wash. Dress Shirts extra

Rag and wool rugs, mops, awnings and comforters may be included in any of the above services at no extra charge.

Pillows Washed, Fluffed, Aired

APRIL ESCAPADE

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Kate O'Hara works for Gordon Rountree. A friend of Rountree's, Christopher Steynes, proposes to Mary that she play the part of his wife at a reception at Rountree's to a Russian countess, in order to discourage the countess who is on his trail. Mary's brother, Martin, is studying medicine, and the proposition means enough money to give Martin his opportunity. Mary tells her mother she is going on a business trip for Rountree, and Steynes meets her at the station at Burlingame. The countess is discouraged. That night she stays at Steynes' house and during the night a burglar breaks in; Steynes shoots him; the police take Mary's name and address and she is terrified for fear her mother will find out. Mary returns home and finds she is in love with Steynes. She tells this to Cass Keating, who is engaged to her. Steynes phones her and they have lunch together. Steynes tells Mary that he wants to drop the case against the burglar but the burglar refuses to let it be dropped. He asks Mary to go to the hospital to persuade the burglar. On entering the room at the hospital, Mary sees—her brother Martin.

CHAPTER XXXV.

On the following night Mrs. O'Hara went over to see Uncle Robert, as always on Wednesday evenings, escorted by Tom. Martin was left in Mary Kate's care, his bandaged arm carefully propped on pillows, himself comfortable in the big kitchen chair.

Cass came in, and he and Martin played cribbage; both furtively watched Mary Kate, who busied herself quietly and constantly about the kitchen, wiping the last spoon, putting it away, brushing the stove with the old turkey wing that hung beside it, wiping sinkboards and chairs carefully.

She was subdued and nervous tonight; close to tears. Mrs. O'Hara had imagined this condition a natural reaction to Mart's accident; she had a turn herself that she would not soon forget. She had suggested that Mary Kate go with her to Aunt Julia's, but the girl had wearily declined. She didn't feel like going out, somehow.

The little children straggled up to bed at eight o'clock. Cass, made uneasy by Mary Kate's paleness and her manner, wondered if there was anyone to whom they could telephone, for a fourth at bridge. But Mary Kate also negatived this idea: she said suppressedly that she meant to go to bed early.

Martin had not spoken to his sister since his return home the day before; they had avoided even each other's eyes. Of the shadow on his handsome face she had been fearfully conscious all day; she knew the terrible hour of reckoning must come. And meanwhile, it was unbearable to be at outs with Mart. They had been inseparable friends since actual babyhood; they had never quarrelled. It had been a mutual admiration society, Mary Kate thinking that no brother had ever been like Mart and Mart as proud of his pretty, clever sister as a father, brother and lover in one.

It made her heartsick tonight to think how good, how pure and safe, Mart had always felt his sister to be.

When the last claim of the children above stairs had been satisfied for the night, and when the gate had clicked behind Mrs. O'Hara and Tom, Martin suddenly put the cribbage cards aside, and jerked his head authoritatively in the direction of his sister.

"Sit down a minute, Mary Kate, I want to talk to you," he said.

Cass gave her an apprehensive glance and turned red. But Mary Kate obediently sat down, and turned a tired and miserable young face toward her brother.

"Does Ma know any of this?" Martin asked, without preamble.

"About what really happened? No."

"How much do you know, Cass?" Martin asked.

"I know it all," Cass assured him, promptly.

"You know it all?"

"I told him," Mary Kate explained, very white. "I didn't want to marry him without telling him."

"You didn't have to tell me," Cass said, embarrassed.

"You know how I knew you were down there, Mary Kate?" Mart asked.

"Yes. You told me in the hospital. You said that you had driven Doctor van Antwerp home, and that you saw me at Mr. Rountree's."

"Where'd you get the dress?"

"Mr. Steynes bought it."

"I might have known!" Mart said. He looked ten years older than his twenty-two years tonight, and as he spoke he put his hand over his eyes, with a gesture of despair.

"You can't take that tone with me, if you are my brother!" Mary Kate said, trembling, but in a restrained tone.

"Look here, I understand the whole thing," Cass put in suddenly, "and it isn't half as bad as you think, Mart."

Mart moved his haggard eyes to him.

"I don't get you," he said heavily.

"Why, look here, Mart. All Mary Kate did was to go down there—this Chris Steynes had a house party, and she pretended to be a girl he was engaged to. Gordon Rountree knew all about it—there was no harm done!"

"Did he?" Mart asked, with sudden incredulous hope in his eyes, of Mary Kate.

"Certainly he did!" she said coldly.

"And how many people were at the house?" Cass supplemented, encouraged.

Mary Kate could ignore this question, for Mart spoke simultaneously.

"I thought you pretended to be his wife, Mary Kate?"

"No," she answered unhesitatingly, just—just his girl."

"Oh—!" Martin said. But look here," he went on, puzzled. "I went up to Rountree's door, after I saw you—I had been home to change my clothes—and I asked if Mrs. Steynes was there, and the girl said that Mr. and Mrs. Steynes had just gone home. That was after one. Then I went to the Steynes house, and everything was dark."

The girl shuddered. She was sitting sidewise at the table, her elbow resting on the red oilcloth. She leaned her cheek against her hand, looking down at the floor, her face, her whole aspect, desolate.

"I wish you'd taken Tess or me along with you!" Martin said, suddenly.

"I didn't think Mother or you would approve."

"It wasn't such an awful thing to do," Cass said generously. "He had his nerve to ask her. But I don't think it was so bad!"

"I lay in the hospital there, trying to think how I could get hold of you. I knew there must be some explanation," Martin said, with a somewhat mollified glance at his sister. There was distinct placation, appeal in his tone. "I wanted to die," he said, simply.

Mary Kate did not change her position. Her sorrowful gaze was lowered to the floor, with its old linoleum of red and yellow, black and white. Now the tears began swiftly to fall, running down her cheeks, splashing on the little frilled collar she wore on a plain blue dress, and on the thin young hand that looked forlorn and helpless, somehow, curled in her lap.

"Why couldn't you tell Rountree that you couldn't do it?" Martin asked in what was almost his usual gentle tone with her.

"I thought—" she said huskily, in a lowered tone, "that you could use the money, Mart. I thought you could go to Germany."

"The money!" he echoed, with a scowl.

"Yes. That was what started it."

"He paid you?"

"But why should I have done it, otherwise?"

"You mean you thought I'd take his dirty money!"

"Mart, don't talk that way."

"I might have murdered the fellow, and you take his money!" Mart said bitterly.

"But I couldn't know that," Mary Kate reminded him, openly wiping her eyes, looking at him through sopping lashes. "I am as sorry as I can be," she said. "But—but you have no right to be so hard on me, Mart."

Just then there was an authoritative knock on the kitchen door. And instantly she knew it would be Christopher who stood in the opening when Cass opened it—as indeed it was Christopher.

He sent a quick glance about the orderly, homely room, and came in. Hardly a word was exchanged as he took off his hat and overcoat, and hung them on a peg by the hall door. Mart nodded toward a chair, and Chris sat down in it. Mary Kate was rooted to her own seat; she could not move. Her lashes were wet and dark with tears, her shining hair had slipped back into a careless cap of waves and loose tendrils, her face was pale and stained with tears. She continued to rest her head on her hand; she did not look up as Chris came in.

"Am I late?" Chris asked. His voice went through her like an actual pain; her senses whirled about in a sort of vertigo.

"No, it's not nine," Martin answered coldly.

"What's the matter, Mary?" Chris asked, in an undertone, leaning from his chair to bring his face within a few feet of her own. She twisted about, doubled both arms on the red oilcloth, and burst into silent, tearless sobbing that was all the more violent because of her effort to restrain it. "What's the matter?" the man asked. "Have they been riding you?"

"I wanted to ask you a few questions, but my sister answered some of them already," Martin began, in a measured tone. His uneasy eyes moved continually to Mary Kate, who had controlled herself and sat frozen with fear. He faced Chris. "You and she were alone in the house on Friday night, weren't you? Your house, I mean, in Burlingame?"

"My servants were in a garage room that is attached to the house—yes," Chris answered somewhat surprised.

"And she had been introduced that evening as Mrs. Steynes, hadn't she?" Martin pursued, after a moment of electric silence.

"Didn't she tell you that? That was the plan," Christopher countered, in annoyance and surprise."

Londoners Toil At Strange Trades

Sponge Wetters, Coin Ringers and Confetti Counters on List of Strange Trades

London.—There are queer jobs in London, jobs Sherlock Holmes could never detect by a glance at a man's shoes, his clothes or his hands.

Sponge wetters, nippers, mudpushers, confetti counters, clock winders, pea shooters, coin ringers and the patient men who sit in little boats under Thames bridges, paddling and waiting for somebody to fall in, are among the persons in strange trades.

Sponge wetters run around with a bucket of water at racetracks and wet bookmakers' sponges. Nippers are the chefs of London's streets who cook for laborers and brew them strong tea. Mudpushers are the valets of Father Thames. Every time the tide recedes they clean the gravel bed by pushing the silt and muck back into the stream.

Girls Count Confetti

Confetti counters are girls, scores of them, who take the ticket punches of London bus conductors, sort out the hundreds of colored bits of paper from the tickets punched and check them against the tickets sold.

Clock winders with long necklaces of dangling keys pass their lives winding the old clocks in government buildings and city offices. Pea shooters are early risers who scuttle through the streets where poor people live and blow a mouthful of peas through a little tube to rattle against upper bedroom windows so the occupants will wake up in time for work.

Rigers Test New Coins

Coin ringers are in his majesty's service, employees at the royal mint, where they stand hour after hour, day after day, flicking new coins on small circular anvils, testing them by the silvery note for perfection.

Then there are men who paint the spots on rocking horses, just the right number and in the right places, and the men who keep the post boxes a brilliant royal red. There are still lamplighters in old London, and men who make quill pens, and, of course, muffin men and the old women who sell lavender.

World's Deadliest Plant Found in South Africa

Cape Town—Discovery of the most deadly plant in the world, a small quantity of which was said to be sufficient to kill thousands of persons, was reported recently from Pretoria. The discovery was made by a botanist, who named the plant Adenia. One ten-thousandth of a grain was reported as sufficient to kill an adult. The poison is not traceable after death.

Railway workers in the interior died after they inadvertently tasted the plant. A botanist and two natives were overcome by the fumes of the plant when they sliced a bulb, reports said.

"Ethel, will you run to the door and call Fido, please?"

"I can't, mamma, 'cos I aren't speaking to Fido since he broke my doll."

"Charity is a cruel word, the very utterance of which imposes limitations and puts a barrier in the path of growth and effort."—Samuel L. Rothapfel ("Roxy")

What New York Is Wearing

BY ANNABELLE WORTHINGTON

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With This Pattern

A [illegible] dress that is truly versatile. It is extremely wearable. It will be found quite as suitable for luncheon or an afternoon bridge as for street wear.

Today's model will give an idea of what Paris is doing with peplums. It has been lowered to a point to give even greater emphasis to the flat slimness of the hipline. The panel suggestion at the centre-front of the bodice, contributes further to its slenderness.

Shaped trimming pieces of plain crepe at the end of the V-neckline and on the sleeves are voguish.

This smart Style No. 3039 may be had in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38 and 40 inches bust. The 16-year size requires 3⅞ yards of 39-inch material.

Plain navy blue flat crepe silk with white crepe trim would be charming for all-day wear.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS

Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Enclose 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number, and address your order to Wilson Pattern Service, 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto.

The Fear of Death

(Arthur Styron in Scribner's).

The fear of death is not, as most persons would like to believe, in inverse proportion to the love of life. Generally it is the other way around. Those who have little reason to love life cling to it tenaciously and fear death proportionately.

Age and illness and vicissitudes seem to strength, rather than weaken, the instinct of self-preservation. The artist or genius whom life serves badly almost always has a morbid fear of the cessation of beloved energies and of the great silence, so that in his imagination he literally dies a thousand deaths.

"When I have fears that I shall cease to be," Keats wrote; and the pathetic music of Tchaikowsky and the wistful poetry of Poe record poignantly their despair at watching the golden sands vanishing on a "surf-tormented shore."

Doctor Johnson so dreaded the thought of death that his friends took a malicious delight in tormenting him with it. Once when Boswell persisted in persecuting him with the subject, Doctor Johnson was thrown into such a state of agitation that he thundered out: "Give us no more of this!" and sternly told the trembling and too-curious philosopher: "Go; let us meet to-morrow!"

If hyacinths should wait until
The weather were serene
Before they forced aloft their spears
Of tender April green;

If birds should wait until the trees
Provided them with food
Before they sang; would not the world
Be steeped in solitude?

If poets never lifted pen
Save when in ecstasy
Or suitable environment,
Where would be poetry?

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

There we were! Standing on the edge of that little mountain lake. Fire to the right of us, fire to the left and behind us. Then we heard that strange crashing through the underbrush.

Scottie stood bristling and growling—then to our relief, a deer and a fawn burst through the bush and rushed along the edge of the lake. They passed so close I could have touched them as they dashed along.

Then the woods seemed to be alive with scurrying small animals all rushing down to the shore. Ancient enemies ran together—grudges and racial fears forgotten—and a score of little furry things one never sees by day, came out of their hiding places and made for the water line.

It was quite useless to try and go around the fire in either direction—we must have a raft. There was plenty of time now for it would take the fire some time to reach us from any direction. I casually set about getting through logs to build one.

Of a sudden Scottie cocked his ear. I listened, too—and sure enough it was the drone of a motor. Before long we could see the plane, and in a few minutes it was spiraling down to make a landing in the lake. You see, it was an amphibian plane that lands either on the ground or on the water.

It hit the water with a "splash," "splash," and taxied slowly up to us. There was good old Bob from the airdrome—and maybe he didn't look good to me. But what a rattletrap of a machine he had! "Bob, where did you get that old crate—it sounded like a Vickers—but if that's a Vickers, then I'm a negro!"

"Well," said Bob, "you don't look unlike one, and speaking of old crates—where did you get that swell suit of clothes?"

Sure enough, I was black from head to foot from soot and cinders. My leather coat had been cut up to make a rope—my shirt to make a sling to lower Scottie over the falls.

"But seriously, Bob, wherever did you get that floating wreck?"

"The motor is a hummer—it's a real Vickers," answered Bob, "but whoever hung that scarecrow of a plane on that good motor I cannot imagine. It would make a good wagon for the wheels are sound—or a good boat, for it doesn't leak—but it acts like a flying rooster in the air—lots of noise but no lift."

"I don't like it any better than you do," continued Bob, "but when I heard that you and Scottie were lost there wasn't much time to go around looking for a good machine. It was a question of getting hold of some kind of plane and getting started. In fact, I didn't even stop to enquire who owned this craft, just as long as the propeller went around, that was all I asked of it."

"Anyway, here's your life preserver," said Bob, "and you'd better strap it on. If this bunch of misfit parts does not hang together—you may have to walk home."

By the time the parachute was strapped on, we were ready to go. Bob gave her gas carefully—we moved out into the lake, turned and headed into the wind.

If we did have to jump, I must find some way of strapping Scottie so he could not possibly fall out of my arms. I found a piece of strong canvas in the bottom of the cockpit and in the middle of this I cut four holes, just big enough to shove Scottie's legs through.

This sling I fastened securely to one of the parachute straps. Scottie was now well tied to the parachute, and if I had to jump his chances were about 50-50 with me, and with all these autos around, that's a dog's chance anywhere.

After a while I settled down, and somehow it seemed so secure drifting along up there far above the ground, that I forgot all about the possibility of having to jump.

Suddenly I received a sharp reminder. We ran into an air pocket and dropped like a lead shot. Only for an instant—then we were out of it—but that instant was a death blow to the old plane. It just seemed as if every nut and bolt were ready to fall apart. Bob turned and motioned me with his hand. Up to the edge of the cockpit I stepped—then jumped.

The Unemployed

We pick up the newspapers day by day and read with real concern of the privations of people out of work. It comes nearer home when one or two of our own find themselves in that unenviable position as they watch, with sinking feeling, their hard earned savings gradually diminish with no promise of employment in the immediate future. Many have reached the end of their resources and it has been necessary, in quite a number of cases, to avail themselves of the provision of necessities by relief workers.

The present unemployment situation is no respector of persons either. The skilled and the unskilled, the laborer, mechanics or artist all suffer and one can easily visualize the homes of the men where wives and children are in are in real want, which municipalities during privations while many of them and relief organizations are meeting in a commendable way.

The business world is also naturally feeling the effects of the depression and the middle class business man with small manufactures as well as others find their markets unresponsive or lacking. Although not actually among the unemployed, he and his family must live very sparingly, helping and sharing where he can as he too, catching a glimpse of the grim spectre of want, is forced, unwillingly, to swell the crowd of the unemployed by dispensing with the services of some of his workers for a time until times improve.

Occasionally we find those who depreciate the state of affairs existing and quite often they are the people who are in comfortable circumstances. The thought of unemployment and distress is disturbing and it is so much easier to close their eyes to things as they are, failing to realize the need and the opportunity afforded of alleviating human distress and want.

The work carried on for the relief of the unemployment situation is truly wonderful. At the same time each person should feel it to be his or her own responsibility to help wherever possible.

"While you lie snug and warm
Between your soft white sheets,
A worthier one than you
May have to walk the streets,
Under a freezing sky
Or through the sleet and snow,
A worthier one than you
May wander to and fro.
Do you deserve to be
Well-housed, well-clothed, well-fed?
A worthier one than you
May search dust bins for bread,
While you lie snug and warm,
While you forget the poor,
Christ, in his mother's arms
May be outside your door."

Twilight Hour Story—About the Chicks and Other Little Friends

Chapter 16

Mama Lady and Billy were beginning to have quite a family, don't you think? Let us see who they were. There was Jimmie Chick and his three little chick sisters who looked so much alike in their cosy little box. Then there was the little gray kitty with short hair, and its mother, Black Topsy, the barn cat and Fluffy, the beautiful Persian house cat, and we mustn't forget Madam Butterfly with her beautiful wings, who was very nearly frozen but is getting along so nicely in the sunny window. But do you know, we haven't said a thing about good old Rover, the big collie dog. I guess we didn't say anything about him until now because we wanted to tell about the little ones first, for do you know, Rover was a wonderful watch dog, and that means he took care of everything that belonged to Billy's daddy and Mama Lady and he even took care of them too if they needed him.

Well, Rover was a fine looking dog. He had a good thickcoat of long yellow hair, except that his hair was white all over his breast so he looked as though he had on a white shirt all the time. He kept it pretty clean, too, although often Billy took him down to the river in the summer and they would both splash and play and swim around in the water and have good fun so that when they came out of the water all Rover had to do was stand still and shake himself well. All the water flew around then, I can tell you. After he did that he was all dressed and looked so clean. Billy was careful not to have his clothes near or they would have gotten wet from the spray. Billy often thought it would be nice to be a dog, for of course he had to get all dressed while Rover laid down in the sun until he was ready to go home. In the winter the water in the river was too cold, so every little while he had to have a bath in the tub of warm water out in the wood shed on a nice, sunny, warm day. Then he would shake himself outside and come in and dry himself beside the warm stove. You see, dogs don't wash themselves much like cats do, with their tongues. Fluffy and Topsy were always washing themselves, so they always smelled sweet and clean. Isn't it funny that dogs must be washed by people but kitties don't need to be? And goodness, we could never wash the butterfly at all, could we? All its lovely wings would be spoiled. I guess butterflies all hide under a big leaf in the garden when it rains in the summer. Do you think that is what they do? Let's remember and watch one when summertime comes, shall we?

But I want to tell you about Rover. Rover especially loved Billy. In fact, Mama Lady always knew Billy was safe if Rover was with him for he took such good care of him.

One time when Billy was just a very little boy and had just learned to walk he got out on the road when Mama Lady was upstairs for a minute, and he found a whole lot of nice stones on the road. When she came down stairs adn found him there she ran and picked him up in such a hurry and tried to tell him not to ever go there again. I guess you know why she didn't want him to go on the road. But he was so little he couldn't understand why she didn't want him to play there. And mind you, first thing she knew he was out there again. Oh! Mama Lady didn't know what to do, and Rover barked, for he could see Mama Lady didn't want Billy there. Well, this time Mama Lady had to give Billy a few spanks so he wouldn't go again and then she tied the end of a long rope onto him so he couldn't run away. Billy didn't like that very well, so when he said he'd be a good boy, in a few days, she took it off, and he really was a real good boy.

But one day, when she was very busy, he forgot again. She thought of that old road right away as soon as she saw Billy and Rover were gone, and ran outside just in time to hear an awful noise, like a car makes when it has to stop real quick. "Oh!" she thought, "I wonder if Billy was on the road again." And it made Mama Lady feel sick all over. When she got to the road here was a man holding Billy in his arms, coming towards her, and Rover was running alongside.

"Is this your boy?" he said.

"Oh, yes," said Mama Lady. "Is he hurt?"

"No, he is just frightened, but he was very nearly run over. You can thank that wonderful dog of yours that he was not run over though. I was coming along the road and could not see the child, but I did notice the dog standing on the road barking at something. I honked my horn for him to get off, but he wouldn't budge. Being in a hurry, I kept on coming, expecting him to get off. Of course I didn't want to run over the dog, although I felt like giving him a little scare. Then I noticed he was pulling at something and applied the brakes quick and shot off into the ditch. This little chap was seated in the middle of the road, doubled over, playing, I suppose, so he could hardly be seen. When I got out your dog was trying to pull him off the road. That is some dog. I wouldn't mind having him myself."

By this time Billy, who was in his mother's arms, could talk, after his big scare, and he looked up with his big blue eyes and said: "Billy not do on the woad any more—no—bad Billy—pank Billy. But Mama Lady held him up close and kissed him over and over again on his hair and his eyes and his little hands. She was so glad he was safe. Then she potted Rover until he wagged his tail nearly off, he was so pleased with himself to think he saved Billy. After that Mama Lady always knew Billy was safe if he was with Rover.

But Rover looked after more than Billy, and that's what I'll tell you about next week.

Bermuda Churchyards

(From the English Review)

The palm-tree's plumes spring up against blue heaven;
Hibiscus burns red flames within the shade;
Sweetness of jasmine and of rose is given
Till drowsy airs more dreamy still are made.

Softly these sweet winds blow, soft fall the flowers
Of tropic red or far-strayed English bloom,
And softly pass the long uncounted hours
Here where Time's hand is stayed upon the loom.

The red-bird thrills the silence with his chatter;
Chicks-of-the-village, yellow, roguish, small,
Call from the bushes; and the ground doves patter
On coral feet upon the low grey wall.

Green moss and maidenhair are close embedded
On monuments half sunken in the grass;
And blue cups of convolvulus are threaded
Among fresh leaves—cups blue as birds that pass.

And springing from stone walls, from rocks, from ledges,
Sprouting in thick-leaved vigour all around,
The life-plant hangs its bells, eternal pledges,
The life-plant blooms again in this quiet ground.

Far, far on some tranced afternoon come stealing,
Like fairy chimes beyond unnumbered miles,
Bells in sweet changes and wild tuneful pealing,
To lull the dreamers of the Somers Isles.

—Phillis Rowley.

Millionaires

Washington—Despite the stock-market crash, 504 persons in the United States had incomes in excess of $1,000,000 for the calendar year 1929, according to Federal income tax returns filed from January 1 to August 31, 1930, the Bureau of Internal Revenue announced in its preliminary statistics of income. For 1928, as shown by returns filed in the first eight months of 1929, there were 496 "millionaire incomes." Final figures for 1928, which included returns filed in the last four months of 1929, showed 511.

Sunday School Lesson

April 12. Lesson 11—The Prodigal Son—Luke 15: 11-24. Golden Text—There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.—Luke 15: 10.

ANALYSIS.

I. THE GOSPEL IN THE PARABLE.
II. THE PRODIGAL SON.
III. THE LOVING FATHER.

I. THE GOSPEL IN THE PARABLE.

The whole parable is in two parts; the Prodigal Son is the subject of the first part, the Elder Brother of the second. The first part has constantly been taken as the gospel itself in story form. This is quite right, but the objection has been raised that the Christian gospel is the gospel of the Cross, and that there is nothing about the Cross nor about the Mediator here. But this seems a somewhat superficial judgment. We speak of the Cross as revealing the Father's love; in the story the father directly reveals his love, and there would be no place for a mediator. But is there no cross in the story? When the father, knowing his boy's character, let him go, when news came to the father of the disasters that had overtaken his son and of the shame to which he had brought himself, was there no Cross in the father's heart? Of this the boy had no inkling at the time. But when he actually reached his father, who cut his speech short, and looking into his father's face he realized what his departure had meant to him and still more the disgrace to which he had fallen, then surely the Cross was in his own heart! He was, as it were, crucified with his father, and their reconciliation is effected veritably through a Cross. It is not really true, then, to say of this parable that it omits the Cross.

II. THE PRODIGAL SON.

Further, the parable indicates the nature of true love. A sentimental affection on the father's part would have prevented the lad from ever leaving home. It seems that, as the younger son, he had the right to expect one-third of his father's movable possessions at his father's death, but he had no legal claim upon his patrimony in his father's lifetime. His father, therefore, might properly have refused his request. He might have compelled the boy to live at least outwardly a decent life. But the father was too strong and brave, too truly loving to do that. The boy must go and learn for himself. There is no other way that kind of boy can learn. Then, when the inevitable has happened, his father will be ready for him, and home will be a new place.

There is a Jewish saying, "when Israel is reduced to the Carob-tree, they become the repentant." The "husks which the swine did eat" are the carob-pods. The possession of pigs, as well as the eating of them, was forbidden to Jews; the care of pigs, therefore, was the lowest possible service to which a Jew could sink. If the father had been the kind of man at all costs to keep his son from suffering, if he had been concerned for the family reputation in such a way as by any means to prevent a scandal, he would never have won his son. Nothing is harder than to watch while some loved person "goes to the dogs," but it seems that there are some people who can never be saved till they have brought themselves "to the gutter." They may slip away from decency and all the restraints and all the traditions of home, but they cannot slip away from their place in the Father's heart. It is disaster that brings the Prodigal Son to his senses. The disaster, therefore, to which sin and folly lead may all be part of the Father's loving purpose. But the Prodigal, though he was repentant, was not yet saved. Repentance is here a disgusted turning away from sin and a turning towards God, but it is not of itself salvation.

III. THE LOVING FATHER.

Once again, the father is not a sentimentalist; he does not pretend that nothing has happened. The boy had been lost and is now found. He is, as it were, risen from the dead. He is indeed reinstated at home, but neither to him nor to his father will home be what it was before. In the old days he had been unwillingly kept at home; home had irked him, and of what home really means he had no idea. His father held him, but never possessed him, but now his father possesses him for ever. He knows his father as he neither knew nor could have known him before. We may imagine that both the father and the son, as they look back over the dreadful days that are behind them, are almost glad they went through such suffering for the sake of the unspeakable preciousness of that which they have discovered through it. The past cannot be wiped out, and sins once committed cannot be undone, but the past can be redeemed, and God is able, even out of sin and shame, to bring forth gladness and salvation.

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern

Good taste in togs for 2, 4 and 6 year old, must necessarily remain simple.

This cute bloomer dress offers infinite possibilities for the thrifty mother.

It's a smart variation of one-piece styling. A Mother Hubbard yoke, that is quite shallow at the front, gives it a quaint smartness found only in the better frocks.

The Peter Pan collar, the turn-back sleeve cuffs and knee bands of the bloomers, provide a nice trim in contrasting color or fabric.

A gay cotton broadcloth print in French blue on white ground with plain white and plain blue trim, is cute as illustrated.

Style No. 3016 takes but 2⅝ yards of 35-inch material with ⅝ yard of 35-inch contrasting and 1¼ yards of binding, for the 4-year size.

Pique, dimity, sheer chambray, gingham, linen, dotted swiss, percale and shantung are pleasing fabrics for its development.

Increasing Divorce Rate Adds to China's Troubles

Peiping, China.—More than 800 suits for divorce were filed in the Peiping district courts during 1930 and 90 per cent. of them were instituted by women. Canton reported nearly 200 divorces during the same period, while Shanghai averages above eighty divorce suits a month.

The striking thing about these statistics, according to accounts in the native press, is that only a small proportion of unsatisfactory marriages reaches the law courts, for the government is still indifferent to what it regards fundamentally as a family affair. Thousands of coolies are married and divorced without public record of either event.

Divorces are much more common, therefore, than the figures alone would indicate. Many Chinese observers declare that the situation is far more critical than all the other woes of this troubled country.

College Women Found to Prefer Feminine Jobs

Columbia Survey Shows Now Enter Men's Occupations; Careers of 900 Studied

New York.—Despite the much-heralded entry of woman into business and professional life, the self-supporting woman of to-day continues to follow the traditional occupations of woman and does not encroach upon the occupational domain of man, according to a nation-wide survey of jobs and salaries of women college graduates just completed by Dr. Roy N. Anderson, associate in guidance and personnel at Teachers' College, Columbia University, results of which are to be published soon by the National Education Association.

From his study of records of about 900 women, all of whom were college graduates or former college students, Dr. Anderson reported that college women were non-discriminating in their choice of an occupation, that most of them turned to education or clerical work, and that attendance at a business school in addition to regular collegiate work remained an invaluable asset in commanding maximum earnings.

College women enter a very restricted range of occupations, according to the survey, which showed that 56 per cent. took up routine clerical occupations, such as stenographer, secretary, typist, telephone operator and bookkeeper. The next largest group was home economics, which included about 12 per cent. in such positions as tea-room managers, dietitians, companions and nurses. Only 5 per cent. of the women entered education, although Dr. Anderson points out that the placement bureaus were not primarily concerned with educational positions.

The 900 women had entered but twenty-eight occupations out of a total of 533 listed by the census bureau, the survey showed. Dr. Anderson accounted for this by saying that manufacturing and domestic jobs were automatically barred from consideration by college graduates and that "the majority of women who leave college take the first job that comes their way."

Study of the salaries received showed that the college graduate received highest beginning salaries as teacher, social worker, or secretary, while saleswomen received the lowest. Such figures compare unfavorably with salaries received by business and professional women, Dr. Anderson said, adding that the greater experience and age of the latter group were largely responsible. Typical annual salaries received were $1,314 for stenographers, $1,100 for typists, $980 for saleswomen, $1,106 for libraries and $1,508 for social workers.

The chances for increasing one's salaries in occupations entered by the majority of college women are "rather limited," according to Dr. Anderson, although earnings showed a tendency to increase with age and experience.

The income of college students less than nineteen years old averaged $976, that of the group of graduates between twenty and twenty-four years was $1,027, while those over forty-five averaged $1,500, according to Dr. Anderson's tabulation.

Comparing earnings of those graduates who had taken only college work with those who had also taken work in a business school, Dr. Anderson found that the business school student earned an average of $100 a year more and that "it pays financially for college students to secure business school training."

Only 10 per cent. of the women studied were married, while 4 per cent. had been divorced or were widows, according to Dr. Anderson, who explains that "these women were only recently graduated from college and have not had the opportunity to marry."

Here and There

In 1930 a total of 9,272,480 cans of vegetables, exclusive of soups, were packed in Canada, an increase of 2,646,382 cans or 6.8 per cent. over the 1929 pack.

The annual harvest of maple sugar and maple syrup is now well under way. Last year total cash value of these products in Canada was $5 250,620. Most of it comes from the province of Quebec.

"It's a long way to Mool River," crowed six lusty cockerels on the railway platform at Nanaimo recently. It was their first transfer on a 50-day journey from Vancouver Island, to Mool River, Natal, South Africa.

In figures drawn from the provincial government statistics, it appears that motor accidents at level crossings during 1930 total only 1.0451 per cent. of all automobile accidents occurring in the Province of Quebec in that year.

Vanishing cream as a material to improve the complexion of grain kernels will not be tolerated in competitive classes of the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference to be held at Regina in 1932, the Canadian Seed Growers Association announces.

About the end of April wheat harvesting will begin at the Canadian Government Experimental Farm at Ottawa—in greenhouses. These have been built to complete two years' research work in one year and as a result, "we are two years ahead in our work," said L. H. Newman, Dominion Cerealist, recently.

Installation by the Canadian Pacific Telegraphs of a new telegraph carrier system between Toronto and Windsor, increasing telegraph facilities by ten two-way channels, has recently been put in operation. It also provides Windsor and Walkerville with a direct circuit to Montreal over the new carrier system.

Marine history was made when members of the British Royal Academy were commissioned to decorate the interior of the Empress of Britain, 42,500 ton giant of the Canadian Pacific Atlantic fleet, which will make her maiden voyage from England to Quebec in May next. Addressing the combined Board of Trade and Empire Clubs of Toronto recently, E. W. Beatty chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, pointed out that the total tax bill of his railway from incorporation to 1929 had been $105,812,944, while the total value of the original Government contribution to the railway in cash, land and completed sections had been $31,118,227.

The Strathmore Supply Farm, operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway, won the first five places in all Canada for highest milk production in 1930 for 4-year-old cows; three-year-olds took first and third places; and 2-year-olds took first four places. In the mature class the Farm took second highest milk record. The figures were issued by the Livestock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. 7j4

CANCER IN WOMAN

The number of deaths from cancer can be reduced providing cases come under treatment early.

If every person were to go regularly, once a year, to his doctor for a health examination, diseases, such as cancer, would be discovered early. That is one of the reasons why we say that it is most desirable for everyone to have a periodic health examination.

In order to secure early treatment, the patient must come to the doctor during the early stages of the disease. The doctor cannot go out and look for such cases himself.

What is it then that brings the woman to her doctor? Symptoms. If the woman does not go to her doctor regularly each year for an examination, the only chance for her to secure early treatment for cancer is to know something about the early signs and symptoms of the disease.

It is not possible for us to instruct our readers to such an extent that they will be able to diagnose cancer or any other disease. The most that we can do is to inform them that the occurrence of certain conditions is to be regarded by them as being sufficiently suspicious to send them to their doctor at once.

There are certain people who believe that such articles as this one do harm by arousing fear among those who have no cause for alarm. We believe, however, that the public is to be informed if lives are to be saved. If our readers will clearly understand that there are conditions other than cancer which cause similar symptoms, they will also realize that it is their doctor and not they themselves who must decide as to what the actual condition is.

More than a third of all cases of cancer in woman develop in the uterus. Injury to the lower end of the uterus—the cervix—is not uncommon during childbirth. If such injury is not properly repaired at that time, there results a chronic irritation which predisposes to the occurrence of cancer. It is in the cervix that most cancers of the uterus begin.

It is evident that every mother should be examined several weeks after the birth of her child in order to determine if all the parts are normal and, if they are not, to receive the treatment which is necessary to restore them to normal so that chronic irritation of the cervix may not occur.

Proper care after the birth of the baby will do the most to prevent cancer of the uterus. Irregular bleeding particularly after the menopause, should send a woman to her doctor at once.

If, in addition to paying attention to these points, women would go to their doctor promptly when there is any lump on or discharge from the breast, there would be a different story to tell about cancer.

Father of Ten In Hospital

When you have a small farm with a heavy mortgage and a family of ten children to look after, you don't feel like passing up any chances to earn a few extra dollars. This was Daniel A.'s position in Northern Ontario. He used to work in the evenings, cutting wood and doing chores for his neighbors, because the demands for food and clothes at home were so great. Daniel kept it up for several years but in time the strain told on him, and he developed tuberculosis. He was admitted to the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives, very ill indeed.

However, rest, good food and kindly care are performing their customary miracle for Daniel at this Institution, and there is every hope that he will soon be sent home, able to take care of his family again.

Young Airman In Grave Difficulty

Little Ted is going to be an airman some day. He has a picture book full of airplane pictures, and also an airplane which he wistfully tells you is down in the basement, broken. Although he is only seven, he seems to know already that there is a big difference between him and other boys he hears shouting and playing out on the lawn. And, indeed, there is a difference! Like the broken plane, there is damage to the little body that will take long to mend.

The patient nurses and the kindly doctors at the Queen Mary Hospital are doing their best, and hope to restore the wasted lungs to health and vigor. Children are very susceptible to consumption, but nine out of ten can be saved if taken in time. This work requires the co-operation of many, many friends if it is to grow in usefulness.

Your assistance is greatly needed. Will you kindly send a subscription? Please address it to Mr. A. E. Ames, 223 College Street, Toronto.

MARRIAGES

Herbert—Newman

St. Peter's Church, Erindale, was the scene of a pretty spring wedding on Saturday afternoon, when Miss Mabel Newman, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Newman, Clarkson, became the bride of William Herbert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Herbert, Monmouthshire, England. Rev. H. V. Thompson, rector, officiated.

The youthful bride entered the church on the arm of her father, and was lovely in a gown, of white lace and satin with embroidered tulle veil arranged in cap effect and caught with orange blossoms. Her flowers, a shower of pink and white ophelia roses and sweet peas. Miss Elsie Newman, sister of the bride, was her attendant, wearing a period gown of yellow lace and satin with mohair picture hat to match and a bouquet of Talisman roses. Mr. W. Newman, Port Credit, was best man and Miss Dorothy Adamson, Erindale, played the wedding march. During the signing of the register, Mr. Walter Newman, cousin of the bride, sang "Because."

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The happy couple will reside in Clarkson.

MRS. ISAAC ASKIN

The funeral of the late Mrs. Isaac Askin who died on Monday at her home near McCurdy's Corners, Trafalgar, took place to Hornby Cemetery to-day and was largely attended. Deceased celebrated her ninetieth birthday on March 18th. She was formerly Miss Jane Beatty and was born in Peel County. She resided near Churchville for a number of years before moving to her late home and was a member of the Presbyterian Church She is survived by one son Mathew.

HOLSTEIN AND JERSEY CALF CLUBS FOR PEEL COUNTY

In past years after a boy had graduated from public school and thus was not eligible to compete any longer in the School Fair work, there were no projects for him until he reached the age to join a Junior Farmers' Club. To remedy this situation the Agricultural office in Brampton is offering this year, club work for farmers' sons between the ages of 12—20 years inclusive.

Calf Clubs have done great work in other provinces in interesting the boys in better livestock. They create greater interest among the young people in caring for, feeding, and developing cattle and also develops the principle of community breeding. The boys take an active part with their fathers in improving the herd.

The Peel Holstein Breeders' Club will sponsor a Holstein Calf Club and the Peel Jersey Breeders' Club will back a similar club for Jersey calves. All the calves entered must be born after January 1, 191, and can be either grades or purebreds provided they are sired by purebred bull. The calf must be owned by the boy and he has to agree to personally feed and take charge of his own animal. Monthly feed cost records will be kept and sent to the Agricultural Representative each month and in return he will visit the boys periodically and give instruction in judging and herd management.

An annual exhibition of the animals will be held, likely at the Brampton Fall Fair. Substantial cash prizes are offered to the contestants in the following classes: Showmanship, livestock judging and the exhibition of animals. These clubs must be definitely organized before the middle of April. Further particulars can be secured from the Agricultural office at Brampton.

PEEL COUNTY BOYS' HOME GARDEN CLUBS

Two clubs with a membership of 25 boys each have been formed, one in Toronto Township and the other in Albion. The boys are between 12-20 years of age. Packages of seed containg 18 vegetables and 10 flower seeds were sent to each boy. The objects of these Garden Clubs are to demonstrate the value of a good farm garden, to encourage the use of a greater variety of vegetables, and to encourage interest in the improvement of home surroundings.

These gardens will be judged during the summer by the Agricultural Representative and displays of garden produce will be made by the club members at an exhibition in late summer.

Study Feed and Fertilizers

Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, has announced the appointment of George R. Paterson, formerly agricultural representative in Huron and Peel Counties, to the crops co-operation and markets branch in charge of feed and fertilizer distribution. A survey of the feed and fertilizer situation in Ontario is to be made. Farmers will be encouraged to make purchase in carload lots either as individuals or in groups, and to pay cash.

S.H.S. NOTES

The Literary Society met this Thursday afternoon for its monthly meeting, featured by a special programme of music, contests, an address, and the publication of an enlarged edition of the School Journal.

TORONTO TP. COUNCIL

Unemployment relief is at an end in Toronto township, council decided at their meeting on Saturday. In making the announcement Reeve J. H. Pinchin stated that 50 men, formerly on the road gangs, had secured outside jobs within the last week.

He explained that nothing more than the ordinary road work would be done henceforth on which local labor would be used. About 124 men had been on the relief gangs, he said.

Council was pleased to receive letters from several of the men who have found jobs expressing appreciation of the council's efforts in providing work for them during the winter. Cases of distress will be dealt with individually.

As a mark of esteem to the late John R. Kennedy, clerk and treasurer, council adjourned until Wednesday afternoon.

ERINDALE

James Cornell of 134 Coxwell Ave., Toronto, and his wife, had a narrow escape from serious injury west of here when the car in which they were riding turned upside down on the Dundas highway, crushing in the top. Cornell suffered a cut lip and his wife escaped uninjured.

According to Traffic Officer Fraser Bell, who investigated, Cornell turned out to pass a car driven by W. C. Brown, 49 Wallace Ave., and in avoiding a car coming in the opposite direction, struck Brown's car, his own swerving and turning turtle.

Cornell was charged with reckless driving.

S. H. S. NOTES

Last Thursday afternoon the High School literary society assembled for the last meeting of this term. We were honoured by the presence of our honorary president, Rev. Geo. H. Purchase.

The meeting was opened by singing the chorus of "Canada Faces the Sunrise."

The minutes were read by our secretary-treasurer, Iola Hope. It was moved and seconded that they be adopted.

Margaret Falconor then favoured us with a delightful piano solo. The next item on the program was a spelling match. The captains were Mary Steen and Hilda Haddon. It was a very exciting match. It was conducted by Mr. Gerhart and the words were chosen from a public school speller. Unitt Bailey and John Ross proved to be very good spellers.

Unitt was on Mary's side and John was on Hilda's side. The word that broke this tie was "moustache". Unitt forgot the "o" and John remembered it, so Hilda's side won by a very small margin.

Elizabeth and Erma Bailey then broke the tensity of the situation when they transported us to the land of beautiful melodies in a lovely piano duet.

All entertainments have their special features. The "high-light" of this one was the presentation of the medals to the winners of the annual oratorical contest. These lucky individuals were Bernice Temple and John Ross for middle school and margaret Falconor and Alex Dick for Lower School.

The medals were presented by Rev. Mr. Purchase, who congratulated the students on their hard work and final success. A game called "shrads" was then engaged in. First form was represented by Lucy Scheid, third form by a number of the students, and fourth form by Bill Lines.

Journals were then rapidly sold at five cents each. Those who contributed to this magazine received their copy free. The meeting was closed by singing "God Save the King".

Helen Turner, reporter.

COOKSVILLE

Readings by Mrs. S. Crummie, Toronto from the works of her poetess sister, Mrs. Alice Brewer, Vancouver, was the unusual treat provided by the Women's Association of the United Church for their April meeting. Mrs. C. S. Jones occupied the chair, and assisted in completing plans for the story of the Passion Play at Oberammergau, to be given by Rev. Crossley Hunter in the United Church on April 30. The ladies received a splendid shower of linen articles for the annual bazaar, and enjoyed a social hour together with Mesdames Harris, D. Kirby, C. Belford, and N. S. Hazard as hostesses.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Thompson of Kingston visited with Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Reid this week.

Erindale Farmers' Club has a car load of wire on the way. Send in your orders. Have your coal order ready for Saturday night. Remember the meeting at Church's Hall Saturday night.

EASTER SERVICES LARGELY ATTENDED

At the Thursday evening meeting held at St. Andrews church, the pastor, Rev. W. T. McCree, told the story of Christ's Crucifixion. So vividly did he picture the scenes in the Upper Chamber ,the agony in the Garden, and the road to the cross, Peter's denial of his Lord and Master, and the treachery of Judus, that an awe came over those who were assembled there that night. Mrs. Nichol sang, "Jesus Lover of my Soul", as a solo, in her usual charming manner.

UNITED CHURCH

The Easter Services in the United Church were most helpful and inspiring. In the morning, the pastor, Rev. G. H. Purchase, preached a powerful sermon on the "Resurrection," and the hymns, anthem by the choir and solo by Mrs. Harry Burton all proclaimed the same glad theme. The large congregation was still further augmented by the atendance of the Junior Worshipper's League. The Church was made beautiful with palms and lilies.

In the evening the church was again filled, both auditorium and front gallery with a congregation that showed the keenest interest in and deep appreciation of the sacred cantata, "Triumphant Love" presented by the choir, assisted by Miss Mae McGregor, of Toronto. The minister presided over the opening service of worship and then introduced Miss McGregor, who told very beautifully the story of the first Eastertide, entitled, "Tor", a "Street Boy of Jerusalem." The story stopped at intervals and the choir in full chorus of twenty-five voices or solo or duet in music, glad and triumphant or sweet and tender, emphasized the points of the story. Solos were taken by Mrs. Burton and Mr. Len Pope, of the choir and Mrs. Nicol, of Hamilton, duets by Mrs. Burton and Miss Mabel Graydon, Mrs. W. N. Atkinson and Miss Mabel Hicks and Miss Alice and Mr. Gordon Steen. Mr. Herbert Falconer presided at the organ and Mr. Roy Elderfields added to the sweetness of the music by playing the contralto parts on his saxaphone. The cantata was under the direction of Mrs. R. A. Lundy, the choir leader.

TRINITY CHURCH

Service was held on Good Friday morning and entered into the meaning of the Passion of our Lord for which the whole service lends itself so beautifully. A large number attended the evening service when an illustrated talk was given on "From the Upper Room to the Sealed Tomb" The views were very illuminating and all followed with the closest attention and deepest feeling the teachings and lessons of the last hours of our Lord's life. The story of the cross was sung after the address and was a fitting ending to the foregoing part of the service.

Easter morning broke in all its glory. Eight o'clock: Holy Communion in the quiet of the morning brought out over 30 worshippers. It is a deeply devotional and helpful service at any time but Easter morning brings out the deepest and the best.

At eleven o'clock a large congregation entered with fullest spirit into the wonderful Easter service. The Lessons, Psalms, Hymns and Prayers all bearing upon the Risen Lord have a solemn and sacred appeal. The Easter anthem "Christ our Passover" is always dear to Easter worshippers. The special anthem by the choir was "The Angels of the Lord" and bore upon the Resurrection. Over seventy remained for their Easter Communion.

Evening Prayer brought to a happy conclusion the services of the day and all felt it was good to be able to join in the time honored and always new service of praise and prayer. The Vesper was especially beautiful and soul appealing. Beautiful new hangings for the Holy Table, Prayer Desk, Lectern and Pulpit were used for the first time. The congregation deeply appreciate the work of those who prepared them as an added service to the worship of God.

The Rector preached in the morning on the message of the angel to the woman "Go tell the disciples and Peter that He goeth before you into Galilee, then shall ye see Him."

The evening sermon was on the Walk to Emmaus and the Revelation of the Crucified and Risen Christ to the disciples as "the companionable Christ", "the Teaching Christ" and "the Enkindling Christ."

"Fear not I am the first and the last, I am He that liveth and was dead and behold I am alive forever more and have the keys of hell and of earth. Rev. I.—17:18.

PORT CREDIT

For the second time, "Beauty," a valued bulldog owned by H. Cohen, clothier of Port Credit, saved its owner's store from being robbed. Early Sunday morning burglars alighted from a car, broke the plate-glass pane on the front door and were about to enter when the dog engaged them and put them to rout. In making for the intruders "Beauty" was badly cut by broken glass. Mr. Cohen, who lives at New Toronto, was appraised of the affair by Chief Constable Telfer Wilson, who investigated, but after checking up his stock found nothing missing.

Figuring in a three-car crash at the corner of the Toronto-Hamilton highway and Oakwood Ave., here early Sunday, Herbert Dale of Oakville, driver of one of the cars, was charged with reckless driving by Chief Telfer Wilson.

Dale is alleged to have been driving east and sideswiped a car driven by Fred McDermott, also of Oakville, overturning it. Two passengers in the McDermott car, J. R. Black and Mrs. S. Hewetson, both of Oakville, suffered shock.

A third car driven by F. W. Johnston, 1874 Bloor St., W., and following Dale, took to the radial tracks to avoid a collision and turned over, the driver escaping unhurt.

APRIL ESCAPADE

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Kate O'Hara, in order that her brother, Martin, may have an opportunity to go to Germany to study medicine, agrees to play the part of Christopher Steynes' wife at a function given by her boss, Gordon Rountree to a Russian countess and her daughter who are desirous of marrying Steynes. Mary tells her mother she is going on a business trip; Steynes meets her at the station at Burlingame. That night a burglar enters Steynes' home and Chris shoots him. Police enter and take Mary's name and address. She returns home, only to find she has fallen in love with Steynes. She tells this to Cass Keating, who is engaged to her. Then she meets Steynes at lunch and he tells her the man whom he shot refuses to let them drop the case. Mary goes to the hospital and finds the wounded man to be her brother, Martin, who had entered Steynes' house to protect her. Martin returns home. Chris Steynes and Cass Keating are with Martin and Mary, Mrs. O'Hara having gone out. Mary has told Martin that she only attended the function as Christopher's lady friend and that there were others in his house that night, and now Steynes unwittingly exposes the falsehood.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Mary Kate had stopped breathing. All was lost now. She raised her head and looked defiantly, steadily at her brother. Martin's face was ghastly.

"You said there were others in the house, Sis?" he asked, almost in a whisper. The eyes of sister and brother met, and they might have been alone in the world.

"There weren't," Mary Kate answered, hardly audible.

"And he did call you 'Mrs. Steynes,' didn't he?"

"Yes, Mart."

Mart's tone was suddenly gentle, all brotherly.

"How much money did you take from him, dear?"

"None—" she had been planning to say, while he spoke. But the little tender word disarmed her, and she faltered out an indistinct monosyllable, and was silent, hanging her head.

"Tell me the truth, won't you, Molly? You know no one in the world loves you as much as I do," Mart pleaded.

Her armor was pierced. Through eyes suddenly drenched again she tried to smile at him.

"Honestly, Mart, I didn't do anything wrong! Honestly, Marty."

"I know you didn't mean to," Mart said. "But you let him buy you clothes, you took his name, you went to his house and spent the night. Ah, don't now, Molly—" he protested. For the tall girl had left her chair, and taken three steps toward him, and was on her knees with her face against his cheek. "And you took his money," he finished the arraignment. "Why, you know what all that looks like!"

"But, Mart, if it isn't what it looks like, and if I didn't take his money!" Mary Kate sobbed.

"Don't cry, Molly—" he said, crying himself. His well hand was on her abased coppery head. He looked across at Christopher, and spoke with a simple and broken dignity.

"I sent for you today, Mr. Steynes," Martin began, "because I thought there was only one thing to be done. And I still think so."

Cass Keating laughed, as an older man laughs at a boy's dramatics; Mary Kate brought her head up suddenly, and stared amazedly into her brother's face. Christopher pursed his lips thoughtfully.

"You have your sister's word for it, and you have mine, Mr. O'Hara," Chris presently said, in his poised, leisurely way, "that nothing wrong took place."

"I know that," Martin assented.

"But that isn't enough for you?"

"It isn't that," Martin said. "But she's not quite twenty, and you are several years older. She's very poor, she hasn't a penny or an influential friend—you're a very rich man, and accustomed to buying what you want. Yachts, houses, horses for your polo, jewels, and I suppose women, too."

"You can suppose what you like, naturally," Christopher said, in a steely tone. He lighted a cigarette with a shaking hand.

"She went to your house, when there was no other woman," Mart pursued; "you called her your wife before your friends, she wore clothing you had bought, and spent the night alone with you. That there was a police investigation wasn't your fault, but—"

"I'll tell the world it was not!" Chris agreed scornfully, as Martin paused.

"Now you say, and she says, hat it was all a practical joke, and I believe you," Martin resumed, reddening a little, but in no other way taking any notice of Chris' manner. "But you must see that you have done her a terrible injustice. She has been engaged to Mr. Keating here—"

"My dear Mr. O'Hara," Chris said airily, all the man of the world, "you are taking all this far too seriously. Of course we took a chance, your sister and I. But just because appearances were against us doesn't mean that you have to treat the girl as if she's outraged all the laws of God and man!"

"No, honestly, Martin, he's right," Cass added. "You musn't make too much of it."

He came to Martin's side and held out his hand to Mary Kate, and she got to her feet, and went over to take the chair he had vacated. Cass sat on the arm of it, with his arm about her.

"She told me about it," he said. "It was all a mistake."

Mary Kate leaned her head against his arm, and closed her eyes. He was being so generous, so kind. And it mattered so little!

"When she says that everything was straight and aboveboard, why, that means everything was straight and aboveboard!" Cass said cheerfully.

Martin looked from one man to the other gloomily.

"He's not afraid of what people think of her reputation, Cass," Martin presently said, with a glance at Chris. "It doesn't cost him anything to hush it up, buy me off, pay my hospital bills—that's nothing to him.

"But if I'd gotten him that night—as I wish I had," the boy went on, levelling a sudden look of hate at the late comer, "If I'd gotten him that night, then he would have paid. Then he would have paid!"

"And you would have paid, too, and Mary would have paid," Chris reminded him, unperturbedly.

"She pays anyway," Martin returned sharply.

"I was a fool," Mary Kate whispered, her head still resting wearily against Cass' arm, her eyes still closed. "But that was the worst I was!"

There was a moment of silence, when she could feel, like tangible currents throuhg the air, the hostility of the glances the men exchanged. Then there was a stir, and she opened her eyes and started to her feet as her mother's voice struck suddenly across the other voices.

"Well, what is all this? What's going on here?"

Mrs. O'Hara, rosy and breathless from walking, her widow's veil dangling from her dingy bonnet, her cotton gloves in her hand, was standing, amazed, in the hall doorway. She had come in from the front of the house; Tom was peering sleepily, curiously, over her shoulder.

Christopher rose politely to his feet, extinguishing his cigarette with a quick motion of long brown fingers against the little ashtray on the sink. Martin, trapped, locked desperately about him, brought his eyes back to his mother's face. Mary Kate, her face tear-stained, her hair dishevelled, her breath coming shallow and quick, went to her mother. She took off the widow's veil with her own loving experienced hands, and carried it, as she had carried it many times before, into her mother's room. She came back to smile gallantly at the older woman.

"Nothing's the matter, Mother!" she said.

"Don't tell me that!" Mrs. O'Hara rebuked her sharply. She crossed to the chair Mary Kate had just vacated, and sat down, staring bewilderedly from face to face. "Whatever's happened, Mart?" she asked.

For a full minute there was the silence of utter confusion. Christopher and Cass sat down again, and Mary Kate took the chair she had first occupied at the table, and rested her chin in her hand again.

"You've met Mr. Steynes, Mrs. O'Hara?" Cass remembered to say, then, rather flatly.

The older woman acknowledged the introduction only with a shrewd appraising glance, and a brief nod.

"What' come to all of you?" she demanded.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Again for a moment nobody spoke, in the orderly kitchen, with its wiped, shabby table oilcloth, and its brushed linoleum that was worn into brown circles. The clock ticked, and the hot water faucet dropped an occasional pearl upon the dry zinc surface of the sink. Only one lamp was lighted, the green-shaded light on the table, where the children did their evening lessons; the drop light over the sink was dark.

"Mother, we've been in—sort of—trouble, the last few days," Martin then began, haltingly. "And perhaps we ought to tell you about it—"

"I couldn't go out," he added, as in sheer stupefaction Mrs. O'Hara was still, and none of the others spoke. "So I had to ask Mr. Christopher Steynes (the syllables were so many threats) I had to ask Mr. Christopher Steynes to come here," Martin repeated, with a glance at him. "I thought you'd be at Uncle Robert's until at least eleven."

"Your Uncle Robert is very bad, and I promised I'd get into a wash dress and go back and set with him," Mrs. O'Har said automatically, her mind not upon her words, her anxious eyes upon his children. "I don't know why you had to keep anything from me, Mart," she added, her look moving from one member of the silent, self-conscious circle to another.

"In this case, Mrs. O'Hara," Cass said, "there was no reason why you should ever have been bothered by it!"

Mary Kate's mother gave him a glance of superb scorn, a look expressing all the resentment of the reticent, proud woman whose private affairs are indecently and unfairly made public. Then she turned her expectant eyes toward Martin again.

Sticking to its Number

The two rather racy-looking men met on the race course and their conversation turned to the topic of strange coincidences.

"The most amazing coincidence I ever remember happened last year," said Charles, the bigger man of the two.

"What was that?" asked Henry eagerly.

"It was the eleventh day of the eleventh month, and I lived in a house with number eleven on the door, and I backed the eleventh horse in a race," explained Charles.

"And," broke in Henry, "the horse won, I suppose?"

"Nothing of the kind," came from his companion. "The beastly animal came in eleventh."

Once on a time (the fairies tell me so)
The trees grew weary of green livery.
Saying, "Why should not" we the radiance know
Wherewith the dainty garden flowers glow:
Would we not wear such beauty splendidly?"

Then jacaranda, borrowing the blue
Of skies in summer, wore it, and was proud
A little while; but certain gumtrees knew
A better secret, and the long day through Waited till color stained a sunset cloud.

Saffron and rose and crimson then were blent
Burning toward beauty with a gentle flame
And when adown the leafy lanes I went
I saw the wise trees crowned so, and content
To face the rifled skies and know no shame.

DRAPERIES MADE NEW

"When we resumed housekeeping a month ago I found my draperies had become creased from packing. I hung them out on the line, hoping to remove the creases. Then I forgot them. The result was they became badly faded and sun-spotted.

"I was heartsick until the happy thought struck me to dye them. I just dyed them a deeper green, and as I used Diamond Dyes they look gorgeous and new. I have never seen easier dyes to use than Diamond Dyes. They give the most beautiful colors—when used either for tinting or dyeing—and never take the life out of cloth as other dyes do."

He Wanted His Share

Midnight! Slowly the householder crept down the stairs. Suddenly he threw open the drawing-room door.

"Don't move!" he cried, pointing a gun at the man who crouched by the trophy case.

The burglar raised his hands.

"What's in that sack?" asked the householder.

The burglar lowered his hands and revealed a glittering array of silver cups and cutlery.

"Put them back on the sideboard at once," ordered the other.

"Lumme, guv-nor," cried the burglar, a pained look on his face, "not all of it! Be fair! 'Arf belongs to the 'ouse next door."

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

There is a race of men who are born with a gift of roving, and a thought that all lands are home. They'll hang their hats in an Esquimaux igloo, or a chinese Emperor's palace, and settle down as complacently as a black cat on a warm hearth rug. Give them a stout old pair of shoes and a new highway, or an old boat and a salt wind to push the sail, and they'll find their way into the queerest places—with absolute surety that all will come out right in the end.

If you asked these men why they get along so well, they might tell you that this is just because they have found that folks are much the same anywhere. They would tell you that the little black boys in Africa and the brown boys in India—yes, and the yellow boys in China—like to play at the same kind of games as you do, and that Big Folks are just Little Folks grown up.

In China, for instance, there are about 400,000,000 people, mostly Chinese. Some are wise and learned, others are poor and ignorant. Some are kind and honest—others dangerous and wicked. There are other things, too, in China. There are great bamboo forests full of tigers, bears and wild animals. There are shady rivers where pirate junk ships lie in wait for plunder. There are gilded temples with the funniest little spires and turrets, and there are frowning, forbidden cities away up in the mountains, where the bravest white man dare not go.

One bright morning Scottie and I talked it over, and decided to go to China and meet with new adventures. Inside of a week we were on board a steamer bound for Shanghai, and our good plane safely crated. Talk about your rough weather. They screwed down the hatches and shut all the portholes, while great black seas crashed over the ship, driven before the blast of a screaming east wind.

Landing in Shanghai, we began to assemble our plane. Just as the job was finished, reports came in that fighting had broken out between two rival armies less than a hundred miles away. I asked Scottie if he would be interested in going to the front, and he wagged his tail and danced about.

We must confess that Scottie didn't like the Chinese very well at first. Once he had been captured by Chinese bandits, and since then had carried a grudge against the entire race. He mixed with them just as a lighted match mixes with a keg of gunpowder.

Knowing the grouch Scottie carried I shouldn't have taken him with me when I went to see General Lu to ask for a pass to the front.

General Lu was located in a palace in a small walled city. Walking into the room he greeted us with dignity, shaking hands with himself in the Chinese fashion. General Lu was an immense man—very tall and stout, and gorgeously dressed in silks. He was extremely impressive to me—but he didn't impress Scottie a bit.

Imagine my dismay, when right in the midst of the bow, Scottie growled, and, tearing the leash from my hand, made a jump at him.

The General was startled—then angry. Instinctively he shot out a velvet slippered foot to ward off Scottie's attack, but the terrier was all ready for such a move. He dodged—and quick as a flash, he caught the slipper in his teeth, shaking and tugging, and pulling for all he was worth—finally making off with it.

There are times when whatever one says it is the wrong thing, so I waited for the next move. I glanced up, expecting to see the General order us put out, or what not, and much to my surprise he was smiling. The situation was so ludicrous that it had appealed to his sense of humor.

That was indeed a relief, and I apologized fluently for Scottie's shortcomings. General Lu stood and smiled and didn't understand a word of it. Then the interpreter began to talk in Chinese. Suddenly General Lu spoke sharply. I waited in suspense—so much depended on his answer.

An Early Start

The young couple were married and set off for the Lake District to spend their honeymoon.

"Let me have a postcard from you as soon as possible," were the bride's mother's parting words.

The newlyweds duly arrived and, after booking accommodation at a hotel, went for a row on one of the lakes.

The following morning the bride's mother received a postcard, which read: "Arrived safely. Dick and I had a grand row before supper."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the fond parent to her husband. "I didn't think they'd begin to quarrel so soon."

Wild Flowers

Oh, the thrill of Spring! We never tire of welcoming with glad acclaim the tender bursting buds of plant life or ever cease to wonder at the yearly resurrection which unfolds so surely and marvellously before our eyes.

Out in the woods, from a lofty pine tree, the crows send forth their glee song over the meadow and through the aromatic pungent air. One could hardly call his song melodious nor is it a chant, but nevertheless he is heralded as the unteniably affable and friendly announcer of Spring even though his song may be boisterous and occasionally raucous in quality.

Then down far below him through the apparently desistless frozen earth the delicately petalled hypatica shyly and so quietly pushes up bravely from its cool sequestered spot and wafts its fragrant perfume, scarce perceptible, on the Spring breeze.

Truly, wild flowers need their wood environment if we are to appreciate their full beauty. One often wonders, though, whether it is because they are a free gift that they are, more and more, in great danger of becoming extinct. For some reason children and, sad to relate, many grown ups, too, seem to be possessed with an insatiable desir to pluck every wild flower they see, and worse still, it is not an uncommon thing to see a bunch of withered dog tooth violets or hypatica lying forlorn in a ditch, carelessly thrown there because the flowers have drooped and faded from the warmth of the hand that plucked them thoughtlessly, depriving the woods, in that one discarded bouquet, of many next year blooms. The lovely plot from which they were gathered will be much smaller or gone altogether the following year.

In years gone by it was not too rare a thing to find deep in the woods near by our towns and cities, the showy and much desired pink and white orchid or the yellow lady slipper. To find them now one must go far north where the miles of forest still stretch untouched by man. Climbing over logs and through its guard of marsh lands one is suddenly confronted by a show of dozens of these wonderfully beautiful and rare flowers. A lovely bouquet is discriminately picked and lovingly many are left for next year's propagation, only to find the following day a carload of people laughingly come out of your secluded spot with their arms full of these rare flowers, many of which were torn up by the roots and every last flower hunted out.

"We can never use all these," one can imagin them saying as they sort out the best ones and leave the others, which are carelessly thrown by the side of the road to wither and die.

How much better it would be to always remember the rule when gathering wild flowers, "pick one and leave one," a silent thank you for the woodsy gift.

How lovely our Canadian woods could become if determined efforts were made to multiply and protect our wild flowers in their own environment. What bowers of natural beauty Canada migh have. There they grow, their gardener the spirit king of the forest who keeps the ground moist and black and free from weeds in some mysterious way. He covers them over carefully in the fall with a thick but light coverlet of downy leaves and in the spring, quiet and perfect, his garden blooms.

With forest preservation and wild flower protection along with education, what wonderful places our Canadian woods might become.

The Twilight Hour Story—About Wee Chicks and Other Little Friends.

Chapter 17

Last time, you remember, I told you how well Rover looked after Billy and even how he saved Billy one time, but Rover looked after more than Billy. Did you know that there are some dogs that run after every kitty they see? They don't care how we love our kitty, if they see her they run after her and, oh dear, if they catch her they'll even kill her perhaps. Isn't that awful? Well, Rover looked after Fluffy and Topsy and the little gray kitty.

This is how he did it. Of course, you know, Rover had lots of dog friends. Yes, he was even friends with the dogs who ran after kittens. But, I te.. you, none of those other dogs could come onto Mama Lady's farm, if they did Mama Lady would say, "Now you better go home," so Fluffy would be safe, and immediately Rover picked up his ears and all at once, barking softly, would run at the other dog. If the stranger didn't run away, he'd bite him and make him go, then dun after him hard away off over the lawn until he came to the dividing fence which belonged to the next farmer. But the funniest part was this: After he chased him and was so cross to make him run away, he was suddenly friends again with the dog he was so cross to at first, as soon as the dog got off Lady Mama's land, and then the two would trot off together like too good chums.

Pretty soon the dogs knew they could just come so far and then they'd wait for him down the road. Oh, he was a funny, wise old dog.

You know, even if he did take such good care of Fluffy, I don't think he was very fond of her. Not many dogs are real fond of cats, are they? I think he was a little jealous of her at first when Mama Lady brought her home when she was just a little ball of thick furry kitty. She was so cute Mama Lady and Billy wanted to play with her all the time, and so that made Rover jealous, even though they petted him too. Fluffy was pretty frightened of big Rover, too, at first, and so until she got used to him they put him outside for a while when they wanted to play with her, which also made him kind of cross at her, too, for a while. But then he was a good Rover and he knew Mama Lady loved her, so that was why he took such good care of her anyway.

Next time I'll tell you what Rover did to Fluffy one day when she was a kitten.

Sunday School Lesson

April 19. Lesson III—The Rich Man and Lazarus—Luke 16: 19-31. Golden Text—Lay up for yourself treasurers in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal.—Matthew 6: 20.

ANALYSIS.

I. THE PURPOSE OF THE PARABLE.
II. THE POOR BEGGAR.
III. THE RICH MAN.

I. THE PURPOSE OF THE PARABLE.

The surest way to misunderstand this parable is to take it as giving us Jesus' teaching about the next world. It is natural, but unprofitable, to ask such questions as "Is Jesus teaching that there is an intermediate state between death and the Last Judgment?" or "Is Jesus giving us here a doctrine of hell?" or "Is the fate of men eternally and irrevocably settled for them at death?" We must remember that this story presents us, not with a map of heaven or hell, nor with a prophecy, nor with theological dogmas, but with a parable. The first part of the parable, giving the surprising interchange of fortune between the rich man and the beggar, is not in any way unique. Similar stories have been told not infrequently within and without Judaism and Christianity. Indeed, it is probably right to suppose that in the first part of the parable Jesus is taking over and repeating a Jewish version of a well-known story. It would, therefore, be a great mistake to press the details in order to arrive at the mind of Jesus about the future or at some authorized foundation of Christian doctrine about heaven and hell. The distinctive element in the story lies in its conclusion.

II. THE POOR BEGGAR.

Lazarus, alone of figures mentioned in the parables, is given a name. Lazarus seems to be an abbreviation for Elazar, meaning, "God help!" or, we might say, "God help him!" It may thus be emblematic of his condition. Apparently Lazarus, who was the victim of some loathsome disease, could not walk. He was "dropped" or "chucked down" at the rich man's gate and left there to do the best he could for himself. He longed to satiate his hunger with the crumbs that dropped from the rich man's table, but even this, it seems, was denied him. To make matters worse, he had to suffer the indignity of having his sores licked by dogs. He could not keep them off. We are apt to contrast the sympathy of the dogs with the callousness of the rich man. But that is not the meaning here. To the Jews the dog was an unclean animal, a mere scavenger. We are not told that Lazrus was a good man, and we should not understand Jesus to mean that any man who has been sufficiently poor and miserable in this life will be taken to heaven for compensation. He is simply repeating the familiar story for the sake of the moral which is to be drawn. The poor man is carried at death by the angels to Abraham's bosom, or, as we should say, to Paradise. When the rich man dies, and has been properly buried, he goes to "Hades." This Greek word corresponds with the Hebrew "Sheol," the place of the departed. It normally means the place where all departed souls go to await the final Judgment. Here, however, it seems, unusually, to mean "hell" or the place of torment; not a place of waiting, but of doom. Presumably Jesus tells the story as it was usually told and without any thought of harmonizing it with theological ideas.

III. THE RICH MAN.

The rich man in torment asks Abraham that Lazarus may be sent to him with a drop of cooling water. Abraham replies that between him and the rich man is "a great gulf fixed," and that the rich man has no cause for complaint, for he has had his good time and now it is Lazarus' turn. Our natural inclination is to say, "how very unchristian!" Can we imagine that those in Paradise look on with equanimity at the sufferings of the damned? What had Lazarus done that he had deserved (apparently) endless bliss? And can we really believe that God would condemn the rich man to endless, hopeless, unrelieved torment? Could anything be less like the spirit of Jesus than the answer of Abraham? But these natural objections are really beside the point. The story is a parable, not an account of the future life. We have, rather, to ask, what is it which the parable illustrates? Of whom was Jesus thinking when he spoke this parable. It is difficult to be sure, but there seems a close connection with the often quoted saying of Jesus, that the first shall be last and the last first. The kingdom of heaven will reverse the judgments of earth; such Pharisees as make long prayers in public, or fast and pray to get a reputation for piety on earth, "have received their reward." They sought the regard of men, and it has come to them. That is all they sought. That, therefore, is all they will receive. He who prays in secret, lets not his left hand know what his right hand does, will have treasure in heaven. It will not do for the former to declare, "It is not fair." It will be open to them to claim some of the reward of the latter; it is a matter of spiritual and moral impossibility.

Isolated!

Eighty persons who live within three and a half miles of Coleford (Gloucestershire, Eng.), are at times cut off entirely from the outside world. They are the inhabitants of Drybrook, a hamlet between the spurs of two hills in the Forest of Dean, and they live in conditions that recall the Middle Ages. Drybrook has no public lighting nor drainage, no main water, and, worst of all, no road. The only approach is by a tortuous, treacherous footpath through the woods. Projecting tree roots, deep pits and swamps are a danger to life and limb at night time. Tradesmen are often unable to deliver essential supplies; doctors have sometime been unable to make the perilous journey to visit the sick; and the dead have literally to be hauled up the hillside for burial.

Spring Brings Hope

The farm is always an interesting place in the early spring. No matter how serious the drought in summer, how disappointing the harvests in the fall, or how discouraging the outlook through the bleak days of winter, when spring comes with its warm rains and the warmth from the sun daily increasing, there is renewed hope.

All nature has lain dormant for weeks and weeks. The world, in the country has seemed to be at a standstill. The farmer has been wellnigh in hibernation, he has stuck close to the sheltering roof and the fireside.

Then comes along April, and, in response to her showers and sunshine, all thing in sight seem to come to life—the sap begins to rise, the grass springs green, the farmer gets out and sees his shadow and finds the air and sunhine good and delicious to stay out in.

Just a few of these warm days and we see teams of horses tramping too and fro in all the fields about us, and hear the familiar hum of tractors as they pull the tillage tools or plows across the fields. Another season of work and hope is here.

Peace

There is a green land hid away
Within the hearts of all,
A pleasant land of light and shade
Whehe happy voices call.

Beneath its wide and azure skies
Its cool, clean houses rest,
In gardens wide where roses blow
Upon the warm soil's breast.

And wide-eyed women sit and spin
Beneath the tall trees' shade,
And in the fields the men at work
Are strong and upright made.

A river flows through that fair land
By meadows lush and green,
No boat with oar piles thereupon,
Nor ship with sail is seen;

But cattle lie along its banks
Or stand in shallows calm,
And woolly sheep with tinkling bells
Soothe heart and ear with balm.

And every home is full of song,
And every back unbowed,
And every head is lifted high,
And every face is proud.

There is the hush of eventide
When purple shadows fall,
The shepherds on the hilltops high
Across the valleys call.

And men let go their pleasant tasks,
And children cease from play,
And bleating kids run to their dams,
And homeward all things stray.

Then, when the silver moon is flowered,
And fireflies gem the breeze,
The silver-throated nightingales
Give tongue in all the trees.

In praise of Him who loveth all,
The flower, the man, the beast,
And guardeth all, and guideth all,
The greatest and the least.
—Charles Grenville Wilson in "The Christian Science Monitor."

BAD TEMPER

A man's most constant companion is himself—a companion never to be shaken off from birth to death. Yet he who is careful to choose desirable companions often forgets to train himself in the essential of happy living. To live in the same house with a bad temper is disagreeable enough; but some men and women condemn themselves to live in the same body with a bad temper—which is one of the worst discomforts imaginable.

DISCONTENT

Much of our discontent in life is due less to any lack of our own lot than to the seeming overabundance in that of our neighbor. If he had not so much we should discover fewer deficiencies for ourselves. We are not so greatly dissatisfied with what we miss as with what he has.

Springtime Touches For the Home

New Paint for the Front Door

In driving through the country what is more pleasing to the eye than a lovely freshly painted front door at some farmhouse?

One house owner re-enameled his door in white. The surface was in fair condition, but that part of it which was exposed to the weather was badly blistered. First of all the door was thoroughly scrubbed with a solution of sugar soap and hot water. Sugar soap can be purchased at a drug shop. About half a pound in half a gallon of water is sufficient.

When the paint was thoroughly scrubbed the door was washed off in clean water. This removed every trace of the strong alkali which was used in the scrubbing process. After the washing down had been completed the door was wiped with clean rags.

The next process was in scraping the surface. This was done with an old knife, care being taken that no cut was made into the wood itself.

The surface was a bit uneven and it was rubbed down with a piece of pumice stone and the door was given a coat of filling. This coat is not essential, though it is useful where the door is exposed to bad weather, as it makes a good foundation for the coats that follow. Filling is made up of red lead, white lead and boiled oil. It can be purchased ready for use.

For white enameling nothing is better than white lead flatting for an undercoat. This may be bought already prepared.

It will dry very quickly, and so must be applied fairly rapidly. Under coating does not spread well and it shows the brush marks, but this is all to the good, as it gives one excellent practice for the actual enameling. If you can get a good surface with the undercoating there is no fear of failing with the enamel.

The number of coats required will depend on circumstances. Generally speaking, three coats will be sufficient, though if you have to paint on a dark surface, four may be necessary to cover it. tI is a good rule to continue giving coats until none of the original color shows through.

Nothing remains now but to apply the finishing coat of enamel; but here let it be emphasized that you will never be able to make a fine job of it unless you use the best enamel.

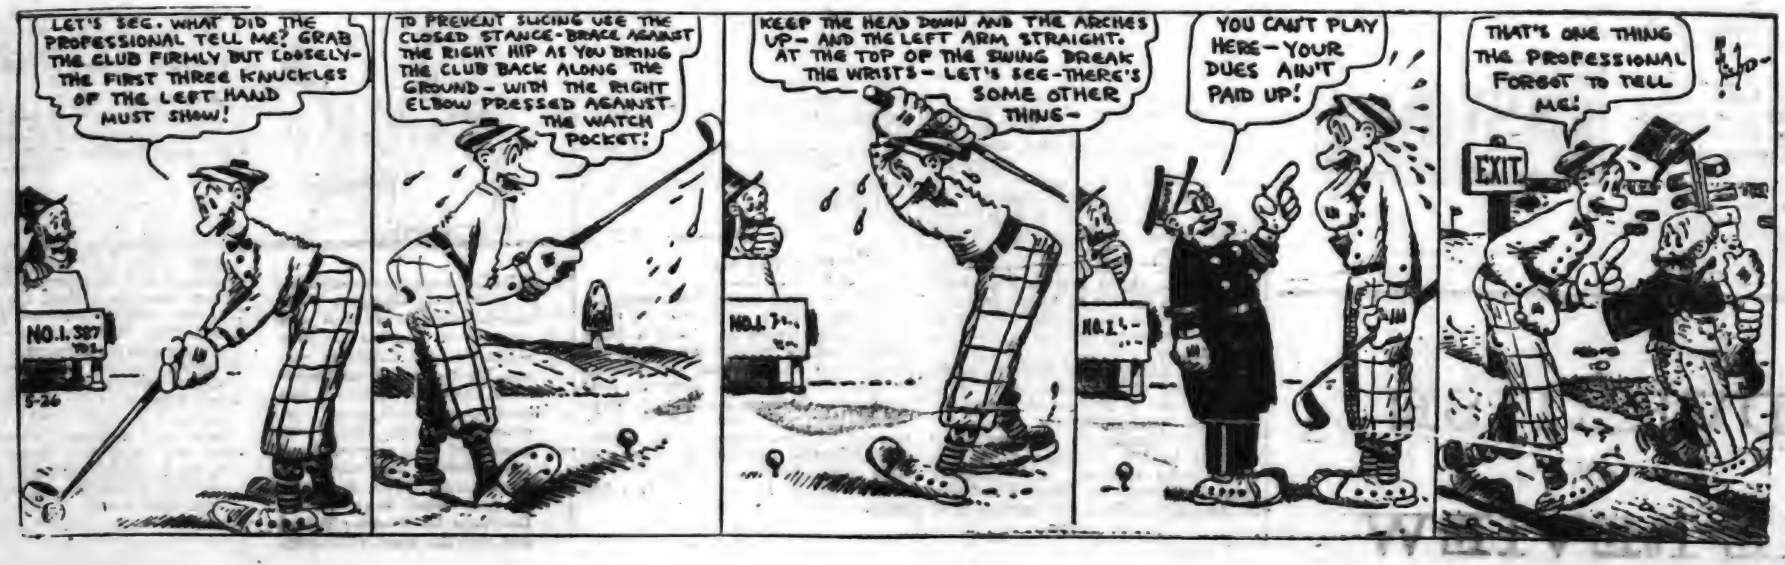
Experts always say use fresh brushes for enameling; but it is our opinion that nothing is better than the ordinary brushes that have been used before for paint work.

Apply the enamel quickly and freely. Keep the brush well down, else the enamel will tend to run down to the stock, and so slop about.—Julia W. Wolfe.

"Is it true you have been arrested so often?"

"Yes, mum. I couldn't have been arrested any oftener if I owned an automobile."

Start Spring Chicks Right



(From the Southern Agriculturist)

By far the greatest mortality and loss encountered in chick raising occurs during the first four weeks of brooding. One of the most important factors in keeping the chicks in good health and vigorous condition, and keeping them growing properly, is the feed which they are consuming.

A good all-mash-ration is as follows: 80 lbs. ground yellow corn, 20 lbs. standard wheat middlings, 5 lbs. ground raw bone, 5 lbs. ground limestone (any commercial grit high in calcium carbonate), 1 lb. common salt. Skim milk used freely—no water first two or three weeks. Cod liver oil, 1 pints to 100 pounds mash, when chicks do not get direct sunlight.

Quick
for fretful
upset children

ALL children are subject to little upsets. They come at unexpected times. They seem twice as serious in the dead of night. But there's one form of comfort on which a mother can always rely; good old Castoria. This pure vegetable preparation can't harm the tiniest infant. Yet mild as it is, it soothes a restless, fretful baby like nothing else. Its quick relief soon sees the youngster comfortable once more, back to sleep. Even an attack of colic, or diarrhea, yields to the soothing influence of Castoria.

Keep Castoria in mind, and keep a bottle in the house—always. Give it to any child whose tongue is coated, or whose breath is bad. Continue with Castoria until the child is grown!

For sale by all druggists. Be sure to get the genuine product with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on wrapper, and this familiar name-plate:

Machin—Clark

Miss Agnes Clark of Mayfield and formerly of Nottingham, England and Mr. Douglas Machin, of Streetsville were married on Monday in the Church of the Transfiguration in Toronto, with Rev. Canon Hedley officiating. The service was choral. The bride wore a gown of white chiffon with white hat and bouquet of Calla and Easter lilies and lily of the valley. Afterwards a reception was held at the home of Mrs. Thos Ryan, Lola Road, and later Mr. and Mrs. Machin left for a honeymoon at Furnace Falls, the bride travelling in a blue costume, the coat collared in squirrel, and blue hat. They will live in Streetsville on their return. Sixty guests motored to Toronto for the event, from Mayfield and Snelgrove.

OBITUARY

John R. Kennedy

The death occurred at Toronto General hospital of John Kennedy, clerk and treasurer of Toronto township for a number of years, following a lengthy illness. Deceased was a brother of Brig.-Gen. Hon. T. L. Kennedy, minister of agriculture in the Ontario government.

Born at Dixie 47 years ago, he served on township and county councils. He was a Past Master of River Park Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Streetsville. He was also a member of Cooksville L.O.L., 1181, and St. John's Anglican church, Dixie.

He is survived by his widow, seven sons, and one daughter, besides Hon. T. L. Kennedy, and two sisters, Mrs. Percy Gordon, Regina, and Mrs. Janie Gordon of Toronto.

The funeral took place Monday afternoon and was attended by nearly 500 people. Service was conducted at St. John's Anglican church, Dixie, by Rev. H. V. Thompson, assisted by R. J. W. Perry, Streetsville, and Rev. Henry Earle, Port Credit.

A large number of Free Masons were present from Streetsville, Port Credit, Brampton, Lambton and other lodges; the service of the Order being conducted at the grave.

The pallbearers were: Messrs. J. H. Pinchin, Thos. Bryans, G. S. Bonham, Walter Irwin, G. B. Jackson and J. J. Jamieson.

The floral tributes were numerous and very beautiful and were evidence of the high esteem in which deceased was held by a wide circle of friends. The flowers were carried by his brother Masons.

In his address the Rector spoke very highly of the character of John Kennedy and of the loss his departure would be to his wife and family and to the community, adding words of comfort to the bereaved in a very sympathetic manner, and pointing them to Christ, the Great Comforter in the time of their sad bereavement.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. McNabb of Drumquin spent the week end with friends in Niagara Falls, N. Y. and Bufialo. They experienced in motoring through the American cities and on their highways that motorists were most courteous and considerate. While it is "Get and Go," yet everyone keeps to their own side, and at turns and intersections look to the other fellow's safety, as well as their own.

ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Ellingham, of Cooksville, Ontario, wish to announce the engagement of their elder daughter, Charlotte Jane, to Mr. Robert Lionel Roy, son of Mrs. W. J. Roy and the late Mr. W. J. Roy, of Bowmanville, Ontario. The marriage will take place quietly on April 25th.

Mrs. William Cox, St. Clements Ave., Toronto, announces the engagement of her daughter, Stella Irene, to Mr. Thomas McClure Fraser, Ottawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Fraser, Streetsville. The marriage will take place quietly the latter part of April.

Solomon R. McKeig, who passed away suddenly at his residence, 161 Wellington street, was born in Toronto and was in his 57th year. He spent his boyhood in Streetsville and Hespeler and came to Galt 30 years ago where he had lived ever since. He was a patternmaker in the Malleable Iron works.

Deceased was an adherent of Wesley United church and a member of the I.O.O.F.

Surviving are his wife, one son, Clarence, city, and two grandchildren, Ruth and Bobby. Four brothers, Elmer, Guelph; George, Hespeler; Wismer, Detroit, and William, city, and one sister, Mrs. S. McDowell, Streetsville, also survive.

Mr. McKeig had been suffering from heart trouble and had not been working for the past week. He decided yesterday afternoon to return to work and had only gone a short distance from the house, when he had a severe attack, from which he never rallied, passing away one hour afterwards.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 from his late residence, to Mount View cemetery.—Galt Reporter.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

The sale of baking and the Tea held by the Woman's Association of Streetsville Presbyterian church on Saturday afternoon was a very successful affair. Mrs. D. Ross and Mrs. W. T. McCree received the guests, and the generous supply of cooked food was disposed of by Miss Clara Steen, Mrs W. Bailey, Mrs. C. Carter, Mrs. Milligan, Mrs. Hiscox. In charge of the tea room were Mesdames W. Hardy, S. Webster, J. P. Dunn, E. Buck, C. Patchett, R. H. Greig, and young ladies assisting were Misses Ruth Greig, Marie Chamberlain, Elizabeth Bailey, Jean Dunn and Claribel Patchett.

COMMUNITY CLUB

The last meeting of the Community Club was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Leslie, eighth line, Trafalgar, on April 1st. The meeting opened with the usual song and the roll call. After the business part of the meeting, there were two contests. The winners were Mrs. Cliff May and Mrs. Harry Lee. As the meeting was held on April Fool's Day. A good deal of amusement was provided.

After the meeting, the hostess served a real nice lunch.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Nat. McCracken, Wednesday, April 15th.

OPEN MEETING OF STREETSVILLE-EDEN W.M.S.

About seventy-five women attended the special Easter meeting of the Streetsville Eden W.M.S. last Tuesday afternoon. Representatives of the Anglican and Presbyterian Women's societies were there by special invitation and all enjoyed very thoroughly the splendid lecture on Japan, given by Miss Cherry, of Toronto, and the beautiful views with which it was illustrated. Miss Cherry's lecture was none the less appreciated because it was punctuated with bits of spontaneous humor. In the devotional exercises presided over by Mrs. Rogerson; Mrs. A. Waites read the scripture sesson and Mrs. D. Sinclair led in prayer. Mrs. Wm. Chambers and Miss Mildred May sang a duet. These ladies all of Eden, made a very fine contribution to the programme. Following the lecture a trio was sung by Mrs. Chas. Falconer, Mrs. C. P. McArthur and Mrs. R. Lundy, and after a closing hymn all enjoyed a social cup of tea together.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Petrie and Miss Mae McGregor, of Toronto, visited Rev. R. A. and Mrs. Lundy on Sunday.

Watch for the posters of the Old-Fashioned Social to be held on Friday evening, April 17th. under the auspices of the United Church choir. Get acquainted contests, fine program and tasty lunch are some of the attractions.

In Memory of Mrs. I. Askin

What a pleasant world this is to live in when people rejoice with those who rejoice, and mourn with those who mourn.

But sometimes it might put a damper on a day's enjoyment if we could look into the future and see what was hovering over us. Coming events do not always cast their shadows before. Did any one know on March 18th, when they were rejoicing with Mrs. Askin cleebrating the anniversary of her 90th birthday, that death was slowly stealing on her silently.

Or had Mrs. Askin some mysterious presentment when she asked them all to join hands and march around her singing, that this was he: departing farewell to her home and friends on earth before joining the ones who had passed on before.

Mrs. Huster led the singing, her sweet voice lent a charin to "Happy Day", "Lead kindly light, and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus."

On March 30th, a message came to Mrs. Askin, your room in Heaven is ready. You must come and wear your crown and after a short spell of severe bodily suffering she embarked on that mysterious dark and unknown sea that rolls around all the world.

From far and near many came on April 2nd to pay their last respects. At 2.30 p.m. a solemn service was conducted at the house by Rev. Mr. McFaul and Rev Mr Tough Mr. Tough, said when I received the message that Mrs. Askin was dead, my 25 years ago when I was the Minister at the Presbyterian Church, Hornby, one of the places I loved to visit was the hospitable home of the Askins, where Mrs. Askin was so faithful in the performance of her daily duties but never too busy to give her friends a hearty welcome and was a faithful helper in the Church for what she thought was right.

In the family plot in God's acre beside the Presbyterian Church, Hornby, she was laid to rest by the side of her husband, Isaac Askin, who passed away 16 years ago. Surviving is one son, Isaac, and one grandson, Elgin, both on the homestead. The pallbearers were William Henderson, Johnnie Speirs, William Beaty, James Beaty, John Askin Johnny Grant. Nephews carrying the flowers were Gerald Beaty, Harold Beaty, John Fox, Howard Welsh.

Sunshine and Shadow

What a pleasure it was to our pioneer friend
To be respected and loved at her journey's end
It was little we thought how soon she would find
Her friends and her home she must leave behind
In the mystery of life no one can tell
The place or the time we must say farewell.
Death is hovering around both Castle and Cot,
And the places that know us will soon know us not.
To-day if we are rich, strong, weak, or proud,
Tomorrow we may be wearing a shroud
You may think sometimes you have so much to do
But the next open grave may be waiting for you.

MEADOWVALE

After hearing a report from Miss Jessie Gooderham on the recent Missionary Board Executive in Toronto, the W.M.S. of the United Church accepted and learned the theme song suggested at that meeting for all branches. Mrs. Will Lamb was hostess, Mrs. W. J. Brett taking the chair. The study book was presented by Mrs. D. Hunter, Mrs. G. Preston and Mrs. W. Vast sang, Mrs. L. Davidson reported on temperance, Mrs. W. E. Gooderham on branch business, and Mrs. J. Austin gave a reading.

UNITED STATES TO CANADA

(A Gesture of Friendship)

Elder brother am I,
You are the younger son;
Bound by ties of kinship,
We work together as one.

The weblike line between us,
Needs not sentry nor gun;
In mutual understanding,
We work together as one.

Some may boast of warfare,
Of that we will have none;
In peace and fruitful labor,
We work together as one.

The race now set before us,
Alike with patience we run;
Girded with truth and honor,
We work together as one.

Elder brother am I;
You are the younger son;
Under the guidance of God,
We work together as one.

—Grenville Kleiser.

The editors of local newspapers are often blamed for partiality in their notices for churches, societies and even families, when the fact is the parties most interested are the ones to blame. The local newspaper does not possess a sufficient number of reporters to send to every church service in the range of its circulation, and it must needs depends upon some person to send in the news. Many pastors or leaders of the congregation do this and their items are gladly printed. Many societies appoint one of their members to attend to this important work.

King's Health Gives Concern

Chill Caught in Garden Confines Monarch Indoors

Windsor, England.—While Britons were observing Easter Sunday under drizzling skies and chilly winds, King George V suffered a slight renewal of laryngitis, his old complaint, before a snug fire at Windsor Castle. He was progressing "as well as can be expected," the attending physicians declared.

The King, who is 65, became ill following a chill contracted while walking in the gardens of Windsor Castle last Friday.

His surgeon, Sir Stanley Hewett, and Dr. H. L. Martyn, a Windsor physician, visited the King several times over the week-end. They both attended him during his serious illness in 1928, when laryngitis developed complications and nearly proved fatal.

Although His Majesty's cold is not considered serious, a flutter of apprehension ran through the country when it became known that he was confined to the royal apartments. Since his illness several winters ago, his slightest indisposition causes national concern.

The King is not confined to his bed and is able to transact necessary state business. However, he did not attend divine services at the Castle chapel as this would have necessitated a walk through the drafty corridors and passages of the old castle, which are not heated.

Former Nurse Attends

No bulletins are being issued in regard to the King's health. The presence of a nurse, one of the four who attended the King during his siege three years ago, is explained by the fact that she is now permanently attached to the royal staff and is in residence at the castle with the rest of the court.

In 1928 the King stood bareheaded in the rain before the London cenotaph during the Armistice Day ceremonies. That night he had a bad cold, and within a week his physicians put him to bed. Pleurisy developed and the whole world for a time feared that he would die.

For weeks he lay seriously ill, but gradually his own determination and his doctors' constant care brought him around again.

On Armistice Day last year he was standing again at the same spot before the cenotaph, but this time care was taken that he did not expose himself dangerously. Since then his health has been normal.

U.S. Will Not Limit Battleship Size

European Proposal Will Not Be Entertained Before 1936

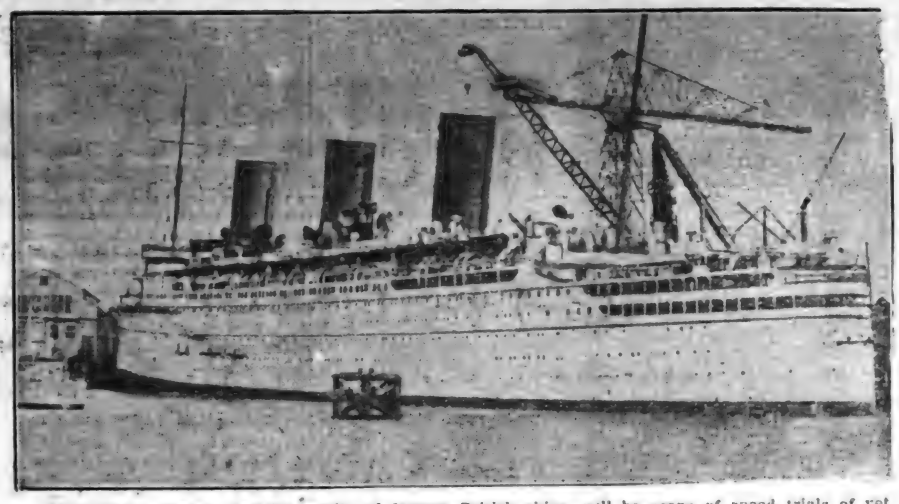
Washington.—A friendly but firm "no" will be the United States' answer to any European proposal to limit the size of battleships before expiration of the London naval treaty in 1936, it was said authoritatively recently.

This pronouncement was evoked by reports from Europe that London shortly would propose battleship size limitation to Washington and Tokio. The state department said the intended proposal had not been reported yet through diplomatic channels.

In replying to such a prosopal, the state department would point out that the Washington and London treaties effectively disposed of battleships until 1936. Hence discussion of this class of ships now would be in this Government's opinion, to revive a dead issue.

The reported clamor for scaling down the size of battleships is a by-product of the recent British-Franco-Italian naval agreement. Under its terms France and Italy were allowed to build two capital ships, which they decided should be of 28,233 tons and armed with 12-inch guns, rather than the monsters of between 30,000 and 35,000 tons, armed with 16-inch guns, which Great Britain and the United States have built since the war.

Alaskan Village Disease-Stricken



Old-Fashioned Methods Used as Serum Runs Low

Point Barrow, Alaska.—Four new cases of diphtheria, a scarcity of anti-toxin and word from Juneau, territorial capital, that it will be impossible to send additional serum, served over the week end to depress the morale of this little northernmost community which has been fighting the disease for weeks.

Dr. Henry A. Griest, Presbyterian missionary, who with his wife has battled the epidemic unceasingly, was forced to use old-fashioned methods on two cases, saving enough anti-toxin for any exceptionally bad attacks that might develop. No reasons for the inability to send further serum were given in the cable from Juneau, it was said.

Almost all immunizations are now ineffective as the period for which they were good has expired.

First View of New Liner

River Clyde, famous Scottish cradle of famous British ships, will be scene of speed trials of yet another famous liner, when 42,500 ton Empress of Britain steams down river, April 5, for first time. Photo, first to reach North America since liner was completed, shows her just after last funnel was "stepped".

Pioneer Accountant Passes in Toronto

E. C. R. Clarkson, Well-Known in Dominion—Built Up Wide Reputation For Honest Administration

Toronto. — Edward Roper Curzon Clarkson, pioneer Canadian accountant, and an outstanding figure in the financial and commercial life of the Dominion for half a century, died here on Sunday. He was in his 79th year.

Born in Toronto, August 11, 1852, Mr. Clarkson was head of the firms of E. R. C. Clarkson and Sons, and Clarkson, Gordon, Dilworth, Guilfoyle and Nash and the most widely known figure in his profession in Canada. His firms had acted as trustees and auditors in the largest financial undertakings within their sphere during the past quarter-century.

Mr. Clarkson had been in ill-health for several months and underwent an operation recently in an effort to regain his strength. The strain proved too great for his weakened constitution and he died late Sunday.

Widely known because of the scope of his organizations, Mr. Clarkson was more widely known for the principles which he had always upheld and upon which his professional reputation was based. The name of his firms was synonymous with thorough administration of weakened financial structures.

Built Up Organization

"Mr. Clarkson was the first chartered accountant in Canada, I believe, and his organization is the monument to his ability and integrity," commented Hon. W. H. Price, Attorney-General. "His loss will be keenly regretted by the Bench and the Bar of the province and the Dominion.

"Starting his business over half a century ago he so conducted it that the courts of the time were glad to be able to gain his counsel and appoint him trustee or auditor," continued Col. Price. "He maintained the high standards all his life and he gained the confidence of the courts to an extent seldom extended any person. On any question involving trusteeship or auditing, his word was always sought.

"His name in the legal profession was symbol for outstanding integrity and honesty. The large firm he built up during his lifetime, to-day, I believe, the most constructive organization of its kind in the Dominion, was evidence of the respect in which he was held. It was almost sufficient assurance to the public to say that Clarkson was in charge in any matter involving financial search or examination.

"His character, integrity, and principles were widely known," concluded Col Price. "His death is a great loss to his profession. I am very sorry he is gone."

Man Aged 105 Enjoys Busy Life In Perfect Heath and Strength

Ingersoll, Ont.—John Minard, West Oxford township, set his age at 105 years on April 2nd. He appears in the same good health he has always enjoyed. He enjoys every day in his home, where he is up and about daily, helping his son Jack with the chores and the meals. He is considered the oldest pensioner of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, for whom he worked as a section hand for many years. Minard sets his age by his retirement from the C.P.R. 34 years ago, at which time he was in his 71st year. He says the company looked up his age at the time, and after going into records, told him he was really one year older than he had represented to them. He helped lay the Great Western right- of-way through here, which preceded the C.P.R.

His wife died 34 years ago. He raised a family of eleven, nine of whom are still living. They were with him at his West Oxford home on his birthday, as is the annual custom. His health is perfect. He has smoked all his life.

Strange Tremors Shake Argentina

People Seem Glued to Earth and Cannot Walk—Clocks Stopped and Seismograph Needle Jumps Off Instrument

Buenos Aires. — An earthquake of unusual violence shook the entire northern part of the Argentine Republic at 1.15 Friday morning, with its greatest intensity in the City of Tucuman and the Town of Graneros, in the southern part of Tucuman Province. It was felt with some violence throughout the Provinces of Salta, Catamarca, Santiago del Estero, part of Jujuy, and the territory of Los Andes.

Until a late hour no deaths or serious injuries had been reported, but considerable property damage was done throughout the shaken area, including the loosening of several railway bridges.

Half-Minute Quake

The quake lasted from twenty to thirty seconds over the entire area, and was so strong that the seismograph needles at La Plata Observatory jumped off the instrument. The oldest residents of the City of Tucuman said it was the strongest quake within memory, and the city appears to have escaped destruction only because the movement was vertical instead of horizontal. It was so strong that people in the streets were unable to walk, and seemed held to the earth by some strange, irresistible force.

In Tucuman the quake was accompanied by underground rumblings and a strange roaring in the air, which increased the panic. All clocks in the city stopped when the tremor began. Walls of many buildings and residences were cracked, and are unsafe for occupancy.

City Shaken

The quake was felt over an area measuring 550 miles from north to south, and more than 400 miles from east to west. Although it was strong at the City of Salta, it was not felt in the City of Jujuy, but several other cities in the Province of Jujuy were shaken, especially Perico and Yuto.

There had been fifteen slighter quakes at Yuto between Saturday and Sunday, and many people there were already sleeping outdoors, fearing that the quakes were warnings of a more severe one yet to come. Santiago del Estro reported two distinct earth movements to the south, the first of slight intensity and the second strong.

In the City of Catamarca the quake was felt by people who were awake, but was not strong enough to awaken those who were asleep.

At the beginning of last week Martin Gil, director of the National Meteorological Bureau, writing in La Nacion, predicted severe earthquakes in various parts of the world as a result of the influence of sunspots, which, he said, would reach a period of maximum electro-magnetic activity at this time.

2-Year Trek of Reindeer To End This Year

Ottawa—The 3,000 reindeer which are carrying out the great trek across the northern regions of Alaska, will reach the delta of the Mackenzie River in December of this year, according to information received by the North West Territories branch of the Department of the Interior from Lomen Brothers Corporation of New York. The deer will lie up for a few months during the fawning season and will resume the journey along the Arctic circle late in the Summer.

The reindeer drive began in November, 1929, when the Canadian Government contracted to purchase 3,000 of these animals from the Lomen Brothers. The contract called for their delivery in good condition, in the eastern district of the Mackenzie delta.

A soft-headed nail and a hard-headed man are both difficult to drive.

Education costs London $65,000,000 a year, for the upkeep of over 1,000 schools, with 17,000 teachers and 700,000 pupils.

Brings Relief to Stricken Village

Just before start of mercy flight from Fairbanks of Chief Pilot Joe Crosson of Alaskan Airways, carrying 280,000 units of diphtheria antitoxin to Point Barrow, where Eskimo residents of Arctic will be inoculated against disease. Three have already been seriously stricken. Pilot Crosson carried 180,000 units of the antitoxin to Barrow in a previous flight. He is shown third from left in heavy fur flying kit.

By this time a copy of "On Lone Scout Trails", the Ontario Lone Scouts' own paper, will be in the hands of every "Lonie" in the province. This is a most important number as it commemorates the 2nd birthday of Lone Scouting in Ontario, and it is full of interesting and useful information.

It is interesting to note that the only complete set of "On Lone Scout Trails" in existence is in the hands of the Lone Scout Commissioner, Capt John Furminger, and he too has the very first copy that ever came off the press.

The "Trails" is running a Bird House Competition at present and a number of entries have already been received. Some of these are very original and it will be interesting to see who is the first Lone Scout to report that he has a tenant in his birdhouse.

Of course, every Lone Scout should have two or three such houses erected in the vicinity of his home, so that he can get better acquainted with his feathered friends.

And now is the time to start collecting information for the Bird Warden's Badge, and this takes quite a long time to complete and requires a little patience. Ask your Scoutmaster for particulars about it, if you do not already know.

This week we have news of interesting activities from several sources. At Hensall, Patrol Leader Albert Passmore reports that his Patrol have been at work reconditioning their "Den". They have put in a new floor and have tar papered the roof, and decorated the interior with a collection of shells and souvenirs of their various hikes and trips. A valuable asset to this den is a library of over fifty volumes.

From Shedden comes the news that the Patrol, under Hugh Creagh have found a new Patrol "Den"—an old sugar shanty in the woods—and they are very busy putting it into shape for Scouting purposes.

We hear that the Silver Fox Patrol at Pickering, under P. L. Fred Robinson, has now reached it's full strength, thanks to the perseverance and grit of the original members. This Patrol meets regularly in the basement of the Rectory.

As recorded in last week's issue, Scouting at Lakefield Preparatory School is in a flourishing condition, there now being fifteen Lone Scouts registered there, and these are divided into two Patrols the Lions and the Bears. When the Lone Scout Commissioner visited the School a short time ago, ten of these Lonies were put through the Investiture Ceremony, and officially became members of the Great Brotherhood of Scouts.

From Burks Falls come more applications to join our ranks and we must congratulate Lone Scout Bill Ware on the keenness with which he has worked to form a Patrol in that place.

It may be that some Lone Scouts are contemplating a trip to Toronto in the near future, and in any case they are undoubtedly interested in the activities of their city brothers. On May 8th next the Toronto Association are staging a "Scout Circus" at the Varsity Arena on Bloor St. This will be a most spectacular affair and well worth seeing, and all Lonies will be welcome at that show.

And now Easter is with us once again, and we have commenced Spring officially. Every Lonie is eagerly looking forward to the long days and the warm weather. At this time of the year Nature seems to make a new start, and shall we not also follow her example as regards our Scouting?

See to it, then, Lone Scouts, that your Good Turn is done every day, that your "Do your best" in everything you undertake and that the ten Scout Laws are carefully followed. And above all each one of you should "Be Prepared" at all time for any emergency and to respond to the calls for activity which are sent out to you from time to time.

"LONE E."

Moth Plane Crashes Kills Instructor

Sudbury Air Pupils is Injured —Victim From Clinton

Sudbury.—Pilot Frank Murdock, of the National Air Transport, was killed, and Murdock Smith, a student pilot of Sudbury, were seriously injured when the Moth plane in which they were flying crashed at Cook's farm, across Lake Ramsay from here, at 2.20 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Smith was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital with a fractured skull, broken jaw and broken leg. He is expected to recover.

There were no eye-witnesses of the accident. In the opinion of pilots Gordon Bisset and T. H. Higgins, who were the first to reach the wrecked plane, the machine had gone into a side slip and crashed before it could be righted. It is believed that Smith was handling the controls, as he went up with Murdock for a lesson. Murdock was in the front seat of the dual control machine.

Murdock From Clinton

According to word received by Captain Earl M. Hand, president of the National Air Transport, the Moth plane was a total wreck.

"Frank Murdock was a very capable pilot," stated Captain Hand. "He had been with us since last Fall."

Pilot Murdock's home was at Clinton, Ontario.

Big Brains From Large Families

A reader sends the following in support of the suggestion that some of the greatest brains have come from large families.

Shakespeare was the third child; Walter Scott, the tenth; Tennyson, the fourth (of 12); Nelson, the third surviving son; Wellington, the fourth son; John Wesley, the fifteenth child; Joshua Reynolds, the seventh child; Gainsborough, the ninth; Coleridge, the tenth; Dickens, one of eight; Darwin, the fifth; Huxley, the seventh; Gladstone, the fourth; Lord Haig, the fifth.

The Success of Sanctuary

Canada is a great believer in the criterion of figures. She even counts the birds in her sanctuaries and as a result the value of these establishments has been proved beyond any shadow of doubt. There are now more than forty such sanctuaries scattered across the country from Nova Scotia to British Columbia and it is safe to assure that no species of bird life now in existence will ever become extinct. As compared with 1925 the bird population of the reserved areas has actually increased by 19 per cent., the ten sea-bird sanctuaries in the Gulf of St. Lawrence being the scene of the hatching of well over 100,000 birds of 16 different species in 1930 alone. Some of the most important of the birds in Canada's reserves with their respective gains during the past five years are: elder duck 27 per cent., puffin 13 per cent., razor-billed auk 37 per cent., common murre 11 per cent., black guillemot, 134 per cent., herring gull 159 per cent. and common tern 57 per cent.

Street at Night

There's something rather lovely
About our street at night:
The dusky gabled houses
With here and there a light,
The pattern of the elm leaves
In lace work on the walk,
The church's bulky tower
Transformed to silver chalk,
The whistling velvet figures
Of homeward-faring men
Whose footfalls tap the silence
Till stillness wakes again,
The sky's brocaded curtain
Tassel tied with stars,
The post-historic monsters
We know as motor cars.
A kitten's furry-scurry
Across the street-lamp's arc—
Our street is rather lovely
To traverse after dark!
—Doris Wilder, in Poetry.

To My Son

Little boy, the golden dust
Of half a million years
Glimmers forth among your hair,
But in your eyes gleam tears

Of desires unfulfilled,
Childish things today
Before the wine of life is spilled
And love's song gone gray.

Little boy, the primrose paths
Are waiting to be trod,
Reaching out towards Beauty
Smiling up to God.

Follow them until the end,
Nothing matters after . . .
But while living, I commend Honesty and laughter!
—E. Leslie Sapulding, in the Chicago Tribune.

Old Mother Nature And Her Marvels

By Charles D Stewart. Condensed from The New York Times Magazine.

Nature is, above all, an inventor. Her specialty is tools and machinery. The naturalist taking things apart and looking into their construction, finds himself working in the atmosphere of a patent office. Life itself may be a mystery but a mechanical motion may be at once so clever and so simple that the mind seizes upon it with delight. Nature is full of such shrewd devices as are produced by the inventor.

In inventing a bird, for instance, Nature was confronted with a fine little problem. How was she to make a roosting bird that could tuck its head under its wing, settle down for a night's rest and go sound asleep without danger of falling off the perch?

The problem was solved by attaching to the cords which operate the toes an extremely long tendon—one which runs nearly the whole length of the leg and broadens into a muscle situated high up on the front of the thigh. This ingenious tendon passes over the knee in front, runs in a spiral direction 'round the bone of the lower leg, and then passes over the heel behind. As a result of this rigging over opposed joints the bending of the leg serves to put the muscle and tendon on the stretch, and the weight of the bird in settling down to sleep causes them to pull the toe tendons together. Thus the bird is clamped automatically to the perch. No brain work, no attention is required. It works while the bird sleeps.

Any bird that is equipped with Nature's Patent Roosting Clamp always brings her toes together every time she raises a foot in walking.

It isn't an easy feat to walk on stilts which have a hinge in the middle, as do those of the stork. And to tuck its head under the wing and take a nap while standing in water is more precarious still. Muscles which work very long are likely to become fatigued; and in such an event the stork would topple into the stream. To obviate anything like this, Nature has made a contrivance for locking the joint. The bone of the lower part of the leg is made to fit into a socket above it. When the two are allowed to come together the leg becomes as one piece of bone; the hinge is thrown out of service and muscular fatigue is prevented. This is Nature's self-acting lock-joint for the use of storks and other altitudinous birds.

The beehive presents to the mind an industrial community so completely given over to factory methods as to make us wonder whether it is not the bee, rather than man, who should be given the credit for the great idea behind the Industrial Age. Every bee carries with her a large assortment of tools, consisting of special adaptations of legs and joints, and of these tools the sting is an especially well-thought-out contrivance. It has the power and mechanism to drive itself into anything as thick and tough as a horse's hide, with a self-acting muscle of its own, which is detachable and even capable of going on working by a sort of pumping motion, and driving itself in after the bee has flown away.

The sting consists of two highly polished javelins, each with barbs like a fish-hook, fitted into a supporting sheath or scabbard, so that they can be alternately thrust forward by the self-acting muscle. The bee needs to insert only the first barb or two of the lance, and the self-acting muscle does the rest. Even if the bee loses her sting, the sting drills into the victim, emptying its bag of poison into the wound through a groove between the two sliding spears.

Here is a mechanism as ingenious as the self-starter or anything to be found on an automobile.

The poison gas of the World War was not new when one considers the insect world. The little Bombardier beetle, when danger threatens, fires off an explosive charge of an acrid and irritating gas. When a number of these beetles are alarmed and all fly at once, their little explosive shots seem like a miniature regiment in battle; each beetle is capable of producing from ten to twelve shots in succession.

And how about the submarine? It is this an invention unparalleled outside the patent office? Of course it is one thing for nature to make a fish capable of breathing water instead of air, and of remaining permanently below the surface, and another for man, a land animal, to do down into the water and stay submerged by means of a reserve supply of oxygen. But this is nothing new, either, in Nature's machine exhibit. The whale, a land animal which has been made over to fit conditions at sea, has storage places for carrying extra supplies of oxygen. Essentially the whale is as much a land animal as is a horse or a cow, but the young whale is fed from the breasts by a quick gulp, an act of rapid refueling among the tumultuous waves. The whale is provided with a thick wall of insulating fat against the cold, an essential part of the design to keep the engine of the warm-blooded animal going.

The oxygen reserves of the whale are extensive tracts of arteries and capillaries carrying a supply of oxygenated blood that is not needed when the whale is on the surface and breathing, but which is drawn upon during periods of submersion. The cry "Thar she blows!" which the sailor raises from the masthead, means that the whale is blowing off the carbon dioxide preparatory to filling its tanks and going down again.

Deep down in the fat of the whale are to be found the remnants of legs, which are taken as an evidence of evolution. But the whale has been so deeply made over by means of special devices that if it were deprived of them there would scarcely be any whale left.

It is scarcely known that an egg is a piece of machinery, a real, moving mechanism. It is no simply an organism and a mystery but works according to the principles of the magician's magic bottle and of physical laws. The chalaza, a thick cord of twisted, tough albumen stretching from the yolk on opposite sides to the two ends of the egg serves to hold the yolk in place. When an egg is turned in the fingers or rolled slowly back and forth the yolk does not revolve, but remains with one side always uppermost.

The means by which it does this is the weight on one side, due to the fatty globules on that side being heavier and denser than in the rest of the yolk. Floating in the white like a ship in ballast, it turns on the albumen cord like a ship's compass hanging in the gimbals; it is as true to the Zenith as a compass to the pole. The lighter, uppermost side of the yolk bears on its surface the germ spot which represents the future chicken. As a result of the way the yolk is built this germ spot, being always uppermost, is near the warm body of the hen in hatching.

The chalaza is slack enough to let the yolk float near the upper surface of the egg—a further fine evidence of the need of the chick to be close to the source of heat. Nor is that all. A chick or young bird even before its true lungs are formed, needs a small but constant supply of fresh air. There is a special organism by means of which it absorbs air through the shell, and for this reason all eggshells are porous. There is a great unity in the complications of the egg, the yolk as a whole being of less specific gravity than the white as a whole, all assisting in making the machinery act as it does.

The small flat place at the big end of the egg provides an air compartment for the use of the chick just before it is hatched. A chick develops with its head toward the big end; when it is fully formed and its lungs are ready for use, it pricks the slight membrane which forms a wall to this air space and takes its first breath. Inspired by this new access of energy, the chick gives the shell a vigorous peck and makes a hole through which it can continue breathing. The soft bill of the chick is provided with a point of flint-like hardness, which it uses for the purpose of breaking its shell and then discards.

Working models in our museums would be valuable to illustrate these principles of nature.

English School Head Teaches Pupils Juggling

The directress of a large English school has initiated a novelty in education, which, however surprising it appears at first consideration, says "Le Matin," after a little study reveals far more intelligence than is usually found in features of a similar character. She makes all her pupils learn juggling!

Thanks to long continued exercises of this sort with oranges, plates and other objects—a course which she has added to her lessons in gymnastics—the instructress is achieving the happiest results. Her pupils acquire a sense of perfect balance and equilibrium, and become able to coordinate every move and gesture in graceful rhythm with these rising and falling articles.

Such practices add to feminine charm and elegance; their bodies become more pliant and more lithesome, and their contours more natural and pleasing. For these advantages, what girl in France does not desire to take up juggling?

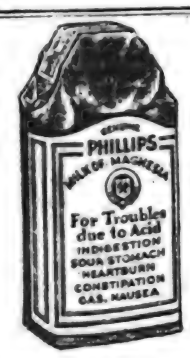
TEARS

Tears never yet wound up a clock or worked a steam engine.—Wise Sayings.



CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—

CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.

Castoria is sold in every drugstore; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

Fletcher's CASTORIA

When You OVER— INDULGE

EVERY man, woman and child will occasionally over-indulge. But don't suffer for your indiscretions. It's folly to do so when you can so easily sweeten and settle a sour, upset stomach with a little Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Hearty eaters have long since learned the quick comfort this perfect anti-acid brings. Smokers know how it neutralizes nicotine; brings back a sweet taste; guards the breath. Women know what it does for nausea—or sick headache. And when children have over-eaten—are bilious, constipated or otherwise upset—give them a little of the same, pleasant-tasting and milky-white Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

You'll be through with crude methods once you learn the perfect way. Nothing else has the same quick, gentle effect. Doctors prescribe it for indigestion, nausea, heartburn, gas, sour stomach and headache. It has been standard with them for over 50 years

Insist on genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia; a less perfect product may not act the same. The genuine is always a liquid—never in tablet form—and the name Phillips' is always on bottle and wrapper.

WATCH YOUR HANDS

Disease germs are the cause of a large percentage of all illness. If we could keep these germs out of our bodies, they could do us no harm, because all the mischief they do to us occurs after they get inside our bodies. They usually gain entrance through the mouth; in other words, we eat them or drink them.

Our ability to keep out disease germs lies very largely in our own hands, and this is meant literally and not figuratively. Our own hands are, unless we take proper care of them, the means whereby many germs are carried past our lips into a nice warm, moist body where germs delight to be.

As we go about our daily work or play, our hands are sure to become soiled. Because of the uses to which we put our hands, it follows inevitably that they become dirty or soiled. They are contaminated with germs, some of which may be disease germs.

There is no harm in having germs on your hands as long as they stay there. The unbroken skin prevents any germs from entering in that way. The danger of having germs on your hands is that they may be carried into your mouth or nose.

This happens if you put your unwashed hands to your face, bite your finger nails or moisten your fingers with saliva to turn the pages of a book or magazine.

If food is touched with the unwashed fingers and then eaten, the effect is just the same as if the fingers had been put directly into the mouth.

We can avoid practically all of the very real dangers that confront us from these causes by paying attention to two simple but very important points.

The first is that we should keep our hands away from our faces. The only time unwashed hands need to go near the face is when the handkerchief is used. Some people keep touching their faces with their hands, and so there is danger. Watch yourself and see how often you put your hands to your face, then make up your mind to stop the practice.

The second point is that before you touch food, before you eat, your hands need to be thoroughly washed. After washing, remember to use your own towel. This is just as important as is the washing. Common towels spread germs from one user to the next, and they should never be used.

Washing your hands before eating is one of the most practical and simple ways of preventing disease.

Father of Ten In Hospital

When you have a small farm with a heavy mortgage and a family of ten children to look after, you don't feel like passing up any chances to earn a few extra dollars. This was Daniel A.'s position in Northern Ontario. He used to work in the evenings, cutting wood and doing chores for his neighbors, because the demands for food and clothes at home were so great. Daniel kept it up for several years but in time the strain told on him, and he developed tuberculosis. He was admitted to the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives, very ill indeed.

However, rest, good food and kindly care are performing their customary miracle for Daniel at this Institution, and there is every hope that he will soon be sent home, able to take care of his family again.

Your subscription in aid of this excellent work will be very welcome. Please send it to Mr. A. E. Ames, 223 College Street, Toronto.

Young Airman In Grave Difficulty

Little Ted is going to be an airman some day. He has a picture book full of airplane pictures, and also an airplane which he wistfully tells you is down in the basement, broken. Although he is only seven, he seems to know already that there is a big difference between him and other boys he hears shouting and playing out on the lawn. And, indeed, there is a difference! Like the broken plane, there is damage to the little body that will take long to mend.

The patient nurses and the kindly doctors at the Queen Mary Hospital are doing their best, and hope to restore the wasted lungs to health and vigor. Children are very susceptible to consumption, but nine out of ten can be saved if taken in time. This work requires the co-operation of many, many friends if it is to grow in usefulness.

Your assistance is greatly needed. Will you kindly send a subscription? Please address it to Mr. A. E. Ames, 223 College Street, Toronto.

LORNE PARK COMPANY

ENROLLMENT SERVICE

Enrollment service for the 1st Lorne Park Girl Guide Company was held in the Community Hall here. Mrs. Pepler, District Commissioner for Ontario, conducted the service. The girls gave a play which was well received. Captain Miss Edna Denison, Lieutenant Ruby Robus, the two patrol leaders, Dorothy Scott and Molly Adamson, and the girls in the Patrols were enrolled. Mrs. Pepler then gave a very interesting lecture, accompanied by moving pictures of a recent tour to Vancouver. Refreshments were served by the ladies of the Troop Committee, assisted by the Boy Scouts.

WEDDINGS

HILL—IRVINE

Britannia, April 4.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Irvine, Centre Rd., here, was the scene of a pretty wedding this afternoon when their only daughter, Edythe, became the bride of Mr. Rodger Hill, son of Mrs. Grace Hill and the late R. Hill of Toronto. The bride was unattended. The wedding music was played by Miss Blanche Whaley of Brampton. Rev. C. Sinclair Jones of Cooksville officiated.

Watson—Colville

A pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday, April 4, at Yorkminster Church, when Marjorie Constance, oly daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Colville, was married to Charles Howard Watson, son of Mrs. Watson and the late J. E. Watson. The church was prettily decorated with ferns and flowers of the season. Rev. W. A. Cameron, minister of the church, officiated, the organist playing the bridal music. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was beautifully gowned in eggshell satin and embroidered tulle veil in cap effect with orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and lily of the valley. Miss Grace Lenore Constance, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, and wore a gown of beige lace, matching picture hat and shoes, carrying a bouquet of Talisman roses. Mr. Roy Cook was groomsman, and Mr. P. Bishop and Mr. C. Thompson, cousins of the bride and groom, were ushers. During the signing of the register the organist played appropriate music. The mother of the bride wore a gown of cocoa lace and satin, with hat to match. Mrs. Watson, mother of the groom, wore a black lace dress and black had. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Watson left for a short trip to New York and Atlantic City, the bride travelling in a black tailored suit, with baku hat and suede shoes to match, wearing a silver fox fur, the gift of the groom. On their return they will reside at Dixie, Ont.

BOLTON TO LOSE TRAIN SERVICE

Bolton, April 4.—Definite word has been received that, commencing on April 27, C.P.R. passenger trains will be routed to Owen Sound by way of Streetsville instead of by Bolton, as formerly. This will cut off the passenger service to Mono Road and Caledon village, unless, according to a rumor, a "mixed train" with passenger coach attached is run each way daily. Bolton and points south to Toronto will be served by trains on the Sudbury division.

VALUE OF TOURISTS

(Sarasota Herald.)

The money spent by tourists this year in Florida is estimated at $200,000,000. This is many times the value of the citrus crop and many times the value of another industry in the state. The tourists come to Florida at their own charge, they look after themselves while they are here and they contribute in many ways to the maintenance of the state's enterprises. Without them, Florida would be dull, monotonous and colorless. The cities which give the most attention to the tourists and make the largest provision for their entertainment are the ones that get the lion's share of their patronage.

The vice president of the Tampa Tourist club recently called attention of the business men of Tampa to the fact that the tourist business is slipping away from that city. In 1928 the tourists' roster showed 3,300 as over against a meager 755 so far registered this year.

If Tampa has been neglectful of the tourists, St. Petersburg has pursued an opposite course. The registration in St. Petersburg this season has been about 40,000, and this number is supposed to represent only about half the tourists in the city. Proper and adequate provision for entertainment, diversified facilities for recreation and a generous expression of friendliness and appreciation on the part of resident citizens go a long way in the direction of securing tourist business.

The people of Sarasota will do well to make the major enterprise of this community the cultivation of tourist business. We have made a good start and it only remains for us to go about the work earnestly, intelligently and continuously to make Sarasota one of the chief tourist centers of the state.

LET US SMILE

Mrs. Gotcashe (engaging an orchestra)—"What's the very best music you play?"

The Leader—"Um-well, I suppose the very best things we play are the Beethoven symphonies."

Mrs. Gotcashe—"Very well; I want you to play a lot of those throughout the evening—one for each dance. I won't have anything but the best, you understand."

COUNTY OF PEEL
1819 to 1931

By Donal Ray
Champion Speaker of Port Credit

In 1819, four years after the Battle of Waterloo and while the great Napoleon was ending his career at St. Helena, the County of Peel was born.

Twenty years previous the vanguard of civilization had invaded the region when a few straggling U. E. Loyalists spread themselves along the Northern shore of Lake Ontario. They came to share the land with the Indians, and to battle with forest, virgin, and vast. From those early days of pricoval wilderness, there was grown the Peel of to-day one of the most important municipal divisions of Ontario.

Peel is bounded on the east by York, on the north by Dufferin, and Simcoe, on the west by Halton and Wellington, and on the south by Lake Ontario. The county therefore lies in close proximity to Toronto, perhaps Canada's greatest market.

Peel is one of the smallest counties in the province. It contains but five townships, is only seven miles wide along the lake and 38 miles from north to south. Twenty thousand people are spread over its 290,000 acres, an average of 55 persons to the square mile. Its assessment is $20,000,000. Of its assessed acreage 91½ per cent is suitable for growing purposes which is incidentally the highest per cent. of cleared land of any Ontario county. The villages of Port Credit, Streetsville, Bolton and Brampton the only town and seat of local govetrnment comprise the only four incorporated urban centres of the County.

Peel boasts 70 miles of asphalt highway. The centre road runs north from Port Credit, the entire length of the county. The Lake Shore and Dundas highways parallel paved roads, 2½ miles apart, cross Toronto Township from east to west. Several other short spans of pavement intersect or unite with these; and all county roads except four are gravelled and kept in constant repair. Several branches of the C. P. R. and C. N. R. serve practically all communities of any size and there are two electric lines the T.T.C. from Toronto to Port Credit, and the Toronto-Guelph radial some five miles north of the lake. A constant stream of buses along the main thoroughfares completes an excellent system of transportation.

The county is divided physically into two distinct sections by a chain of ridges running horizontally through it. There is a very marked difference in the character of the soil and climate, as well as in the general appearance above and below this ridge, which reaches a height of 900 feet above the lake level. The soil of the lower region is generally loamy clay, but as you ascend the escarpment you come upon a country with rich sandy loam, in some places inclining to pure sand. The air is clearer here, the climate colder, and perhaps more healthful than below the ridge.

Turning to industries, we find agriculture naturally the chief occupation of the people. The first wheat shipped from Ontario to Montreal was shipped a century ago by W. H. Paterson of Streetsville. General farming is everywhere carried on except in the south of Toronto Township, where there are numerous market gardeners. Everywhere grain, and root crops thrive and in the south, fruits and vegetables are abundantly grown for sale in the nearby great market of Toronto. Peel county alfalfa seed is well and favourably known for its hardiness to withstand the cold winters, over 25,000 bushels being sold last year. Colonel the Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture for the Province, is a resident of Peel County.

Toronto Township boasts the largest poultry farm in Canada—the Oak Ridge hatchery on the Mississauga Road, north of Port Credit. Here in 1929 were hatched over 400,000 baby chicks. The figures for last year are not yet available but are generally conceded to be well in advance of this huge output of 2 years ago. The chick industry has so grown in Peel that now the hatcheries ship as far as Saskatchewan on the west and Cape Breton on the Atlantic. Farmers are getting away from the old-fashioned method of renewing their flocks and are having their eggs hatched at so much per chick. Chich hatcheries in Britannia, Streetsville and Dixie swell the annual county output to considerably over ½ a million. This industry saves the necessity of 40,000 hens rearing broods of chickens.

In the breeding of live stock Peel holds an enviable position. The B. H. Bull & Sons estate near Brampton are the largest importers of Jersey cattle on the North American continent. They have at present some 800 Jerseys. Their policy is to bring importations over from the Island of Jersey in the English Channel twice a year and sell these high quality animals to American breeders. They have supplied all the show winners at the leading live stock shows during the past decade. Several other stock farms are outstanding. A Meadowvale breeder who happens to be a lawyer in Toronto, Mr. G. L. Smith, has a fine herd of dual purpose Shorthorns which made a clean sweep at the C.N.E. and Royal Winter Fair this past autumn.

Peel County has the largest and most completely equipped flower-growing establishment in America. This is the Dale Estate located in Brampton. This firm owns and operates 250 acres, of which 35 acres are under glass. Their greenhouses, 132 in number, if placed end to end would reach 9 miles. Founded by Edward Dale, an English gardener, fifty years ago, it has grown to phenomenal proportions. Four hundred and fifty employees are required to operate this immense concern, where over 10,000,000 blooms are annually grown and sold. The walks between flowerbeds amount to 32 miles, there are 90 miles of steam pipes and the annual consumption of pulverized coal is 7,000 tons. Shipping points extend to Regina, Halifax and New York. A walk through these green-houses in the dead of winter has been likened to a sudden drop into the luxuriance of the tropics.

Turning to manufacturing we find the county for its size, well up among the leaders. The St. Lawrence Starch Co. of Port Credit, manufacturer of starch and corn syrup is a huge concern employing 250 people. Their corn syrup sweetens the palates of Canadians from coast to coast.

The Cooksville Shale Brick Co. is a large producer of high quality brick, as is also the Tile and Brick Co. of Cheltenham. In Brampton are located the Copeland-Chatterson Co. specialists in loose leaf office supplies; the Williams and Hewetson Shoe Companies; and Evangeline Beverages. The first sheet of paper manufactured in Canada was made at "Crooks Hollow" now Streetsville, by a man named James Crooks. He received the sum of $500 from the Dominion Government in recognition of his achievement.

Peel County may also be called a summer playground for Toronto. The beautiful Caledon Hills in the north end of the county, with its winding streams well stocked with trout, are annually visited by thousands of tourists. The Credit River running the entire length of the County is also unsurpassed for the beauty of its course, on the banks of which at Erindale the Lieut. Gov. of Ontario maintains his residence. The Mississauga Golf Club, near the lower end of the river, is one of the finest in America. Several other golf courses are also located in the County.

The history of Peel is one of steady progress. The Dundas Highway, one of Canada's busiest thoroughfares today was the first road to be gravelled 95 years ago. Next in turn were the Lake Shore and Centre Roads. As the forest gradually disappeared, wheat growing for a time became the chief industry of the county. In the 60's and 70's Port Credit was one of Ontario's leading grain ports and during the season Centre Road had a continual string of wagons loaded with wheat. With the steady growth of Toronto, and the increase in railways the grain business was gradually drawn to the larger centre. In 1865 the county limits were officially set and the first County Council met in Brampton. Today after 60 years the present county officials wrestle not with pioneer but with highly up-to-date problems. The pioneers of Peel are gone—they sleep in the country churchyards—but they have left as a monument of their labours one of the most progressive municipalities of Ontario.

CONSERVATIVE CONVENTION

The annual meeting of Peel County Conservative Association was held at Brampton on Saturday afternoon and was largely attended by delegates from all parts of Peel.

All officers of the association were returned for a second term. Officers are: President, G. B. Jackson, Cooksville; vice-presidents, George Duck, Lakeview, Mrs. Margaret Broddy, Brampton, Thos. R. Evans, Caledon east; secretary, Gordon Graydon, Brampton; treasurer, Jack Drennan, Streetsville.

Speakers of the meeting were Gordon Graydon, Jack Drennan, G. B. Jackson, Arthur Fletcher, past president of the association, and the two members, Sam Charters and Hon. T. L. Kennedy.

Mr. Kennedy commended Mr. Henry, whilst admitting that the departure of Mr. Ferguson had been a severe blow to the administration of the province.

Only through more co-operative marketing can Mr. Kennedy see a bright future for the farmers of the province.

Mr. Charters was insistent on an individual responsibility. He believes that everyone has been spending too much money on cars, radios and what not.

Resolutions of appreciation and endorsation were passed on Premier Henry, Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Mr. Bennett and Mr. Charters.

The Young People's Society of St. Andrews Church, Streetsville, rendered their play "Climbing Roses" to a full house at Norval, Tuesday evening.

Thomas Goodeve, for many years a prominent Peel county figure, passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Hamilton, Brampton. He was one of this town's few nonagenarians.

The old Leslie homestead at Lakeview was destroyed by fire on Thursday. It was owned by R. G. Taylor, who was in Buffalo at the time. This building was formerly the old stone school.

The Risch home, south of Dundas Street, Dixie, was damaged by fire on Monday. The Risch girls and neighbors succeeded in putting the fire out before the Port Credit fire brigade arrived.

Miss Vera Frances Goodison has resigned her position with the Toronto General Trusts Corporation, Toronto, and was presented with a sterling silver tea service last Saturday, as a token of esteem. Many functions are being held for her by friends.

A demonstration of the "Ever-Wear" aluminum was held in the Streetsville United Church on Tuesday, under the auspices of the Women's Association. Mr. Ross, of Toronto cooked a lunch to demonstrate the aluminum, which was served to about twenty people. He also gave a lecture on the use of value of aluminum. The cooking was done without the use of water on meats or vegetables.

The Consumers Gas Company of Toronto has been given permission by the Ontario Cabinet to extend its works and pipes east and west of Toronto, including Streetsville, Port Credit, and Malton. This means that Streetsville may be served with gas in a very short time.

The play entitled "The Dust of the Earth", a four-act comedy-drama, was given in the Oddfellows' Hall, April 8th, by members of St. John's Church, Dixie, under the auspices of the local Oddfellows lodge, and was well enacted in every particular. Mr. Omar Turney acted as chairman and explained each act. A good orchestra came with the players, as did also a number of supporters from Dixie. The quality of the play warranted a larger attendance.

The At Home given by Peel Chapter, Order Eastern Star, last Friday night in the Oddfellows Hall, was attended by upwards of 200 people. Several tables of euchre were engaged during the early part of the evening, and the winners were as follows: Men, Mr. Harry Gill; Ladies, Mrs. M. Williamson and Mrs. H. Schied. Streetsville Harmony Orchestra furnished excellent music for the dancing which followed, and which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. The winners of the Lucky Spot prize were Mr. Gordon Rundle, Streetsville, and Miss Croxon, Erindale.

BRAMPTON

About a hundred inquisitive townsfolk rallied round the Rosedals avenue crossing of the C.P.R. on Saturday night to discover the cause of a prolonged humming whistle that was audible all over the town. The whistle on a C.P.R. freight was jammed, and the freight, waiting for a signal, drew quite a lot of attention before it moved on. The train crew were all forced to wear cotton waste in their ears, so loud was the noise.

The whistle was still blowing when the train passed through Streetsville and citizens thought it was a fire alarm.

Mr. Theo. Gould visited the city on Monday on important business.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Sibbald are spending several weeks with their son, Emory, at Hatchley, Ont.

Miss Bertha Cliff of the High School Staff has returned from her Easter holidays, spent in Kingston.

Miss Hillier, who is attending the College of Education, Toronto, spent the week end with her friend, Miss Vera Cooke.

At a largely attended meeting of the official board of the United Church it was decided to start using the New Hymnal the first Sunday in June.

Twenty-two of the members of the United Church choir gave their Easter Cantata, "Love Triumphant," at Wesley Church (Snider's Corners) on Sunday afternoon.

Do not fail to hear the Young People of St. Andrew's Church put on their play "Climbing Roses" in the I.O.O.F. Hall Saturday evening under the auspices of the local Oddfellows Lodge. Proceeds to be used in relief work.

Miss Edith M. Bird, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bird, Streetsville, and Dennis Gorman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gorman, Brampton, were quietly married at the Baptist parsonage by Rev. Norman McLeod. Miss Velma Martin was bridesmaid and Donald Jordan best man. Mr. and Mrs. Gorman will make their home in Brampton.

PORT CREDIT

At the annual meeting of the Port Credit Women's Institute, held in Clarke Hall, it was decided to enter a chorus in the county music festival here in May and also to present a medal.

Officers elected were: President, Mrs. Clarence Hook; Vive-President, Miss O. Collett and Mrs. H. Campbell; assistant secretary, Mrs. F. B. Pense, and district director, Mrs. W. H. Green.

Deputy Reeve R. M. Parkinson was elected president of the local Liberal-Conservative Association at its annual meeting. Other officers elected were: Mrs. Charles Urquhart, vice-president; E. McNeice, secretary; John Stewart, treasurer.

Speaking on the "Actual Object of the Legion," Col. McIntyre Hood, president of the Oshawa branch and vice-president of the Dominion command, addressed the Col. Alex. Thomson post of the Canadian Legion at their annual Vimy night banquet held in Kingsbury hall here Saturday. Capt. W. C. C. Innes, president, was in the chair.

With ten new members initiated at the meeting, the membership of the organization has now reached 130 and comprises practically 100 per cent. of the returned men of the district.

The Credit Valley Tennis Club held its annual meeting at Clarke Hall on Saturday night, at which the following officers were elected: President, H. G. Burgess; vice-presidents, C. R. Hamilton and G. T. Sayers; treasurer L. B. Hamlin.

WESTERN FEED GRAIN

Ontario live stock would be fed almost entirely upon feed from Western Canada instead of feed imported from the United States, under a scheme of Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, which has already been put under way. The chief reason why Ontario live stock is not fed on grains from Western Canada is that cattle raisers do not care to run the risk of pollution of their farms by using Western grain, which contains a great quantity of weed seeds and wild oats. To overcome this obstacle Colonel Kennedy has appointed Howard Fraleigh, M.P.P. for East Lambton, to confer with Western Canada representatives as to the possibility of having all feed grains ground in the elevators before being shipped. This would eliminate the risk of spreading noxious weeds, as the seed would be ground along with the feed.

King Congratulates Young Marksman

Canadians Win King's Trophy and Imperial Challenge Shield

Ottawa—Canada's boy marksmen, who have won the King's trophy and the Imperial challenge shield for 1930 as the result of their expert shooting, have been congratulated by His Majesty the King. The Department of National Defence announces receipt from the Secretary of the National Rifle Association, Bisley Camp, England, the following message from His Majesty:

"The result of the competition for His Majesty's trophy has been laid before the King and I am to ask you to convey His Majesty's congratulations to the boys of Canada on their second victory.

"They have set a very high standard for future competitors.

"(Signed)

"SIR FREDERICK PONSONBY,

"Keeper of the Privy Purse."

In the Empire match Canada had in 1925 only 2,020 entries, which number has been increased each successive year until for the 1930 contest, 7,909 boys took part. A total of 84,312 boys from all parts of the Empire fired in the competition. According to the report of the competition issued by the National Rifle Association, the young marksmen of Canada won His Majesty the King's trophy with the remarkably fine average of 86,967 for their national team. This is the highest average yet made in the match, and is an advance of 3.7 points over South Africa's winning score in 1929. Canada's previous win in this contest was in 1927, when the team of 3,000 boys whose scores top the averages in the various parts of the Empire averaged 79,211 points.

Canadian boy marksmen won 158 silver and 222 bronze medals in the 1930 match, a number considerably in excess of the numbers won by all other parts of the Empire combined.

In addition to the King's trophy the Junior Imperial Challenge Shield was won by Canada, and is to be held for the year by St. Willibrod's Academy Cadet Corps, Verdun, Que., a unit which had 289 cadets fire in the competition. This corps under the instruction of Lieut.-Col. E. Mackay-Papineau, V.D., averaged 91.629 points per boy, and won 31 silver and 53 bronze medals.

Second place for the junior shield was taken by the Quebec Seminary Cadet Battalion, Quebec, with 200 competitors who recorded an average of 87.562 points, winning 65 silver and 27 bronze medals.

Third place was awarded to the Calgary public schools cadet regiment (Central Public School), Calgary, Alberta, whose team of 41 boys averaged 95.4.

The senior Imperial Challenge Shield goes to Abergavenny Company, First Monmouthshire Cadet Battalion, Church Lads' Brigade, England, with an average of 98.136 points. Early Jellicoe's sword is awarded to the Kingston Navy League Sea Cadet Corps, England, with an average of 97.605. This sword was awarded in 1929 to the Military, Ontario, Cadet Corps. The sword of the late Earl Haig goes to St. Peter's School, Seaforth, Sussex, England.

The trophy presented by the Duke of Devonshire, when Governor-General of Canada, for annual award to the cadet corps of the Dominion showing the highest all-round proficiency in this competition has been awarded to St. Willibrod's Academy Cadet Corps, which unit in the "honors list" of the best hundred units in the Empire ranks first.

Under special awards, three Canadian competitors receive bronze medals. The special medal awarded to the youngest boy who makes the highest possible score of 100 points is won by J. Macdonald (age 12) of the Central Public School, Calgary, Alberta. Miss L. Gillmour and Miss M. Leigh, both of the All Saints Girls' Rifle Club, Westboro, Ont., receive bronze medals for scores of 95 points.

Liner Eclipses Promised Speed

New C.P.R. Empress May Rival Bremen and Europa

London—The new $15,000,000 Canadian Pacific steamship, Empress of Britain, left the Gladstone Graving dock at Liverpool over the week-end for the Clyde for her speed trials. Built for a speed of 24 knots, she has already done 26 in her preliminary trials. In further tests she may approach the speed of the Europa and the Bremen.

The Cunard Line's 73,000-ton ship, now known simply as No. 534, being built at the Clyde bank yard of the Messrs. John Brown & Co., was originally to have been delivered in September, 1932, but the speeding up of construction makes it virtually certain she will be completed five or six months earlier than expected. Thus she will be ready for the summer invasion of Europe by tourists in 1932 instead of being handed over at the beginning of winter, an unprofitable time for steamship companies.

Better an impediment in the speech than in the brain.

Violent Deaths Take 3 in North

Drowning, Suicide and Falling Tree Fatalities Reported

Cochrane—A series of tragedies in the district over the week-nd are reported here, the list including a drowning, a death from suffocation under a fallen tree, and a suicide through drinking poison. All the victims were men.

Stanislaus Holdys, Polish by birth, a laborer employed by the Dominion Construction Company at the Abitibi Canyon, fell into the river while at work there, was swept away and drowned. His body was not recovered.

John J. Hamilton, 28, married, with two children, who arrived from Gilbert Plains, Man., recently to settle on a farm seven miles from town, was pinned under a huge tree when it toppled over the wrong way while he and Russell Buchanan were felling it. Buchanan could not lift the trunk alone, and Hamilton was dead from suffocation when help came.

John Scluk, a Russian, about 40 years old, who owned a bush lot near Bourkes, drank half of the contents of a ten-ounce bottle of sulphuric acid in a stable on the farm of Valentine Kroadachuk, with whom he lived, and died in agony after telling of his deed.

Princes Leave For England

Prince of Wales and Brother End 20,000-Mile Tour of South America

Rio De Janeiro.—The Prince of Wales and Prince George, his youngest brother, sailed for home on the liner Arlanza Sunday evening, terminating a 20,000-mile good will tour of South American countries.

The ship sailed at 6.35 p.m. The Princes were given a cordial farewell. Thousands cheered as they went up the gang plank and stood on the ship's deck, waving as the liner moved out of the bay.

The Princes have visited most of the countries of South America during the past several weeks. The peak of their tour, in so far as their trade mission was concerned, occurred last month at Buenos Aires, where the Prince of Wales formally opened the British Trade Exhibition.

Many New Industries To Start in Manitoba

Winnipeg, Man.—Mr. J. M. Davidson, secretary of the Industrial Development Board of Manitoba, who has recently returned from a trip through the east and south, reported at a meeting of hte board that new industries will be established in the province, involving an aggregate expenditure of more than $5,000,000.

The prospective industries include food products, implements, two furniture factories, building material, and household products, based on the packing industry.

There will be a beet sugar refinery here next year, as the result of experimentation which has been carried on for several years in the province.

Six-Engined Planes For Tasmanian Trip

Hobart, Tasmania.—Planes driven by six engines are being planned to replace the three-engined machines now handling the tri-weekly service between Tasmania and Melbourne. So successful has the present service proved that a daily service is now proposed, so that any day Tasmanians may hop across Bass Strait after breakfast and take their midday meal with friends in Melbourne.

The passage via northern Tasmania is scheduled for four hours, clipping 18 hours off the rail-steamer time.—The Christian Science Monitor.

When Cold, Shiver, Says Scientist

Body's Method of Resisting Cold and Manufacturing Heat

Montreal—Lacking a comfortably-heated atmosphere or a fur coat, the thing to do is to indulge in plenty of plain and fancy shivering, according to Dr. R. W. Swift of the University of Rochester, who read a paper before the physiological section of the Federation of American Societies for experimental biology in session here.

People shiver to keep warm—and it is a good substitute for that, Dr. Swift said. Shivering is the body's method of manufacturing heat, he explained. Dr. Swift said he had experimented with volunters who had been placed in a refrigerator for varying periods while electrical apparatus was attached to their bodies to register the efficacy of their shivering. Those who lent themselves most readily to shivering stood the cold test best, he said.

Blind Are Aided By New Invention

Instrument Produces Raised Letters from Ordinary Pages

New York—Robert E. Naumberg of Cambridg, Mass., demonstrated for the first time last week a "printing visagraph," an instrument that produces magnified, raised letters from the pages of ordinary books.

He told the combined meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers the machine would be especially valuable in providing reading material for blind persons.

The visagraph reproduces large, embossed letters on a wide roll of this aluminum foil, with the result that the finished product corresponds in some respects to the Braille system. Naumburg estimates his machine will increase the reading range of the blind a thousand-fold.

Bessborough To Be Patron Regina World Exhibit

Ottawa—His Excellency the Governor-General has consented to act as chief patron of the World Grain Exhibition and Conference which will take place at Regina in the summer of 1932. His Excellency was requested to act as patron shortly after accepting the post of Governor-General, and has agreed to do so.

French War Budget Shows Big Cut

Paris.—There is no indecision in France's attitude toward the forthcoming World Disarmament Conference at Geneva in 1932, if comments on France's recently approved 1931-1932 war budget are to be taken at their face value.

Although the present budget is 180,000,000 francs higher than in 1930, French writers have brought forth figures to show that France's military expenses, compared with 1914, show a greater drop than any great power. The official table showed:

France .....16 per cent. less than 1914
Italy .....14 " " " " "
Britain .....10 " " " " "
Japan .....48 per cent. more than 1914
U. S. .....86 " " " " "

Another table shows that France has reduced her fighting effectives 45 per cent. in the same period, while England has reduced 19 per cent. and Japan 25 per cent. Germany is not mentioned in the statistics as it would be unjust to give Germany's reduction which were demanded by the Allies.

The Journal des Debats, commenting on these statistics in connection with the forthcoming confer nce, says:

"These figures, and others, show that the situation has reduced its military effort by considerable proportions. She has executed with willingness more than a limitation; she has entered resolutely in the road of diminutions. Certain foreign propaganda pretends that this effort does not count, because it has been done under financial pressure."

Canadian Exports Decrease

Ottawa.—Expressed in percentages, imports from Canada represented 3.81 per cent. of the total imports into the United Kingdom in 1930, compared with 3.95 per cent. in 1929, writes V. E. Duclos, Assistant Canadian Trade Commissioner in London, in the Commercial Intelligence Journal. The United States, which is Britain's largest supplier of goods, also experienced a decline, the figure being 15.33 per cent. in 1930 against 16.67 per cent. in the previous year. Canada took 5.39 per cent. of the United Kingdom's total exports in 1930 compared with 5.05 per cent. in the preceding year. The United States was responsible for only 5.35 per cent. against 6.57 per cent. in 1929.

There is nothing so easy but that it becomes difficult when you do it with reluctance.—Terrence.

National injustice is the surest road to national downfall.—William Ewart Gladstone.

WITH THE LONE SCOUTS

This week brings us news from our most northerly Lone Scout, who lives at the Hudson Bay Post at Landsdowne House, in Northern Ontario. His name is Walter Wraight, and Walter is quite an outstanding Scout in other respects besides his northerly location.

Coming from the "Old Country" last year, he brought a very fine record with him, and he is the possessor of the coveted "Silver Cross for Bravery" which was bestowed upon him for saving the life of a dog. The Lone Scout Commissioner has a picture of Walter with the dog, a cocker spaniel, that he saved.

On arrival in Canada, he was sent to one of the Hudson Bay Company's Northern Ontario Posts, and he has been in that part of the country ever since, and tells us that he quite enjoys the life, although it is a little lonely at times, especially in the winter time when travelling is difficult and he has to wait for a long time for his mail.

Walter has learned to drive a dog team, but he says that if you talk kindly to the dogs they think that you are a weakling and just lie down on the track and won't budge. It is necessary to use quite strong language to them, before they will take any notice of you. The last mail which the Post received was brought in by dog team, driven by an Italian Priest, and he was quite embarrassed by the fact that the dogs would take no notice of ordinary language, so he compromised by swearing at them in Spanish!

Walter is a Lone Scout indeed!

Lately we have noticed several people busily engaged in their gardens, and this reminds us that every Lone Scout will of course have a garden of his very own, which he will lay out and plant to his own liking.

And therefore every Lone Scout should qualify for the Gardener's Badge, and now is the time to commence operations to earn this badge.

Like quite a few of the other Scout Badges the Gardeners requires quite a little patience, and cannot be earned overnight.

It is necessary to have some knowledge of soils, and to actually grow a number of flowers and plants from seed, but all this is very interesting work which would be enjoyed by every Lonie.

Get busy and ask your Scoutmaster to send you particulars of the Gardener's Badge, so that you too can qualify for it.

And talking of Gardening reminds us of a very good turn that was performed last year by the Lone "Wolf Patrol" of Paris, the founders of the present Paris Troop.

These Lonies looks about them and discovered some old folks who were too feeble to dig and plant their own gardens, so they armed themselves with spades and rakes and all the necessary tools and set to work to plant these old peoples' gardens for them, and then later on they also tended them when necessary.

Wasn't that a real good turn? Maybe you can do the same thing this year.

And still talking of good turns in the Springtime, have you noticed how the bright sunshine shows up that dirty rubbish heap and untidy scrap laying all around the house and which was previously buried underneath the snow?

How about making this week a Lone Scout "Clean Up" week, and so put everything ship-shape for the bright weather which is ahead of us?

Go to it, Lone Scouts, and then write to your Scoutmaster and tell him what you are doing.

All-Canadian Phone System Now Installed

Toronto—The first Canadian all-wire telephone service between Montreal, New York and London, and direct radio telephone service between Canada and England via the Canadian Marconi system will soon be in operation.

A new circuit is under construction which will give transatlantic telephone communication by wire for the first time, according to J. H. Brace, general manager of the western division of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada. This involves open wire plants from Montreal and New York to Nova Scotia, submarine cable to Newfoundland, open wire across that island, then submarine cable to the British Isles. At present there are five radio telephone circuits between Great Britain and North America, three short-wave and two long-wave circuits.

Radio service from North America to Japan, the Philippines and Australia was another step planned. Of the 35,000,000 telephones in the world today, 21,000,000 were in a position to exchange conversations. This is 83 per cent. and will soon be raised to 100 per cent.

At the recent Imperial Conference London, Mr. Brace said, "We now have available public telephone service between ships at sea and any telephone on the North American continent. We have on the trains between Toronto and Montreal, facilities so that conversations can be carried on while these trains are in motion, to telephones in the homes and business places. This conversation passes from the trains through the air to the wires along the route, which are connected to the telephone system at Kingston, Ont., then via land wires to a radio telephone station along the Atlantic coast, over to Great Britain where again it is picked up by land wires and carried to a radio station which sends the message to Australia, again being picked up by land wires and carried to the place of business or home of the man to whom our Canadian friend wishes to speak. Such a conversation would normally be established within the course of ten minutes."

Geological Relic Is Found Near Quebec

Quebec—A relic estimated to be 15,000,000 years old, has been uncovered in the city of Quebec.

It is part of the shell of a giant snail, and it is estimated that when the creature lived it measured 15 feet in length.

The piece of shell, which lies horizontally on a cliff on Viaduct Hill, is imbedded in grey limestone, and stands out clearly from its surroundings. At first it was thought to be part of a tree or some other object, but inspection by Theo. Denis, superintendent of mines, placed it as being part of a giant snail which lived thousands of centuries ago.

AN ILL WIND

By WILLIAM FRANCIS

"Frankly sick of it—and here's life offering me a way out. I'm taking it, Wally, so I think it's good-bye."

She added a line about divorce papers, signed, sealed and addressed the letter, and crossed the hall to his dressing-room. He'd find it when he came home to dress for dinner—another of those poisonous dinners at the Hillsons'. How she hated them! The soppy inanities of Laura Hillson, the rot about the younger generation, the shares market talk, and Wally's heavy wisdom about the need for calm conservatism.

Calm conservatism!

That was all her life had been since she had married Walter Weatherby for his money—two mortal years of deadly, paralyzing calmness without a thrill except the thrill of spending—and Wally, generous as he was, seemed, somehow or other, to take the joy out of that. He gave her all the money she could use. All she could waste had been Jim Dorriston's proposition.

She opened her husband's dressing-table drawer, disturbing the orderly arrangement of its contents—club cards, golf scores, keys and the loaded service automatic he had used in France. She put the letter in beside it and, in so doing, touched the cold steel of the dull barrel.

For a moment she stood motionless. Then, slowly withdrawing the letter, she went to the window and flung it open. A tiny breeze was enough to brace her courage and steel her resolve.

She laughed aloud.

"Wally do anything rash? What a chance!" she assured herself. "No, Wally will be his own conservative self."

Returning to his dressing table, she leaned the letter against the mirror. Then, going to her room, she threw on her coat and closed her bag. The hall clock was striking five as she let herself out of the flat. She was to meet Jim at Victoria at five-thirty. The boat train left at six.

In the gloomy isolation of the taxi doubt assailed her again. What if Wally did—well, something tragic? Her mind clung to the sense of impending tragedy.

In Parliament Square fugitive raindrops fell, heralding a storm; dark, scurrying clouds brought night before its time, and the tiny breeze, which but a few minutes before had fanned away her fear now grew to a wind of almost hurricane force.

Nervously she felt for her passport and conclusively confirmed the presence of her pearls. She rather hated herself for taking them, but Jim had promised to send Wally a cheque for them—his "lucky beads" as he called them. He really believed they had brought him his good fortune "on 'Change." They'd actually been worth a quarter of a million to him, he insisted, great big superstitious baby that he was.

"Don't leave Wally my luck," he had pleaded. "I'll pay him twice what the pearls are worth, and that goes for the diamonds, too."

She had brought both.

Jim could post the cheque from the boat.

She arrived at the station ahead of time, despite the storm which now was blowing in full fury. They would probably have a rough passage. She didn't care; Heaven knows she'd had calmness enough—and to-morrow she'd be in Paris.

She came upon her trunks, the new ones she had bought and sent on ahead. Jim's were near by.

"These your trunks, ma'am?" A porter was inquiring.

"Why—er, yes." Her voice was queer.

Where was Jim? He was to have

Where was Jim? He was to have had the luggage attended to. All they'd have to do, he had said, would be to get to their compartment.

Oh, where was Jim? Imagine him being late at a time like this. It was a quarter to six.

She waited a few minutes more and then went to telephone in the booth at the end of the platform. She asked for change at the bookstall. It was counted out to her on a pile of evening papers—upon the inky half-tone portrait which, on that day, was featured on the front pages.

With gloved hands she began picking up the coins and then, suddenly, as though stricken, she let them fall.

Wild-eyed, she gripped the sheet, read the incredible headline, and recoiled as she recognized the photograph of Jim Dorriston.

Big type proclaimed: PROMOTER ARRESTED, and then followed a story of which, to her befuddled gaze, only a few phrases stood out: Huge Stock Swindle—Arrested on eve of flight abroad—Criminal record bared—Victimized women say Dorriston took jewels. . . .

The cab which bore her home seemed to crawl. Home? There was a bare chance that she still might have one—one thin, forlorn hope of getting that letter back before Wally got in. Thank God it was Thursday, the day he had an appointment with the dentist. Thank God for that delay—it might save her, keep for her the only comforts her life had known—the only man who had ever been good to her. Wally had been that, and she had been happy enough until Jim had swept her off her feet with promises.

What a fool she had been! What a fool!

She felt herself close to the point of madness as a policeman held up the traffic.

A few minutes later she was at her door.

The hall-porter did not know if Mr. Weatherby was in. He had not taken him up in the lift.

Hysterically, she fumbled for her key and, letting herself in, ran to his room. He was not there.

Quietly she opened his dressing-room door and turned her anguished eyes to his dressing table.

And then utter panic seized her. For the letter was gone, the drawer was open, and sprawled, inert, upon the brilliant crimson of a Persian prayer rug, with arm limply outstretched beneath the radiator, lay the prostrate form of Walter Weatherby.

White with horror, she tried to scream, but no sound issued from her fear-numbed throat and, staggering, she crossed to the still figure and sagged down beside it.

And then the form that was Walter Weatherby stirred ever so slightly and a cool, calm voice was heard to say:—

"Don't move; I've dropped my pearl stud under the radiator. There's a letter or something there, too. Someone left the window open and it blew off the dresser."

". . . I'll get it, dear," Mrs. Weatherby said.—Tit-Bits.

England-Australia Air Mail Started With 15,000 Letters

Croyden, England — The fifteen-day air mail service from England to Australia was inaugurated on April 4th with departure of an Imperial Airways liner carrying 50,000 letters for Indian and Australian destinations.

Australia's 15,000 letters will be transferred at various points so as to reach Port Darwin, on the western Australian coast, on April 19. An Australian machine will pick them up there and carry them eastward across the island continent. Return mail from Port Darwin will leave there on April 27 and reach Croydon on May 14, approximately seventeen days en route, or a saving of thirteen days over the surface route.

The greatest bet ever made was the alphabet.

The acreage of beet grown in England last year was 347,000, in 1925 it was 54,750. In England and Scotland there are now 19 beet-sugar factories.

HAD TO GO TO SEA AGAIN

Rheumatism or No Rheumatism

BUT KRUSCHEN KEPT HIM FREE FROM PAIN

This skipper of a steam trawler was "up against it." He had Rheumatism, and his doctor said he must not go to sea. But times were hard, and he was forced to go afloat again. That was two years ago. Now see what he says:—

"I go to sea and two years ago I was laid up for six months with very much suffering from rheumatism and general breakdown, and was forbidden by my doctor to go to sea, or to touch water. But it was 'Hobson's Choice' with me. There was so much unemployment I was forced to get somewhere. So I am still here weathering the storms of the last two winters, and I can honestly say I have never felt the slightest pain from my old complaints, since I started two years ago to take Kruschen Salts. I wish Kruschen every success, and you may make whatever use you think fit of this letter."—Skipper J. J.

It is common knowledge that rheumatism is associated with an excess of uric acid in the system. Uric acid is composed of needle-like crystals, and the pain of rheumatism is caused by these "needles" settling down in the joints, muscles and tendons.

Kruschen is a powerful solvent of these torturing crystals. It swiftly dulls their sharp edges, then expels them from the system. Your pains ease; swellings subside, knotted joints become loose. Afterwards, the "little daily dose" so stimulates the liver and kidneys that regular and complete elimination is ensured. Your inside is kept clean. Mischievous uric acid never gets the chance to accumulate again.

Start on Kruschen to-morrow. Keep up "the little daily dose" and you'll soon joyfully agree with thousands of others that rheumatism meets its master in Kruschen.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 65c. and 75c. per bottle.

When Food SOURS

About two hours after eating many people suffer from sour stomachs. They call it indigestion. It means that the stomach nerves have been over-stimulated. There is excess acid. The way to correct it is with an alkali, which neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

The right way is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia — just a tasteless liquid; pleasant, efficient and harmless. But it kills excess acids. It has remained the standard with physicians for more than 50 years.

It is the quick method. Results come almost instantly. It is the approved method. You will never use another when you know.

Be sure to get genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for over fifty years in correcting excess acids. 50c bottles—any druggists. So look for the name Phillips on wrapper and bottle.

ISLINGTON

Last Monday evening in the community hall, Mr. H. J. Moore gave an excellent address on "Trees" at the Business Men's monthly meeting. Mr. Moore is an authority on horticultural subjects, and his well-written articles in prominent magazines are largely read by lovers of nature. He used a number of excellent slides to illustrate his lecture. He remarked that, "Poems are made by fools like you and me, but only God can make a tree." He deprecated the careless pruning of trees which often causes decay if limbs are not cut off close to the trunk, and ultimately the tree dies. Mr. Moore is secretary of the International Peace Garden, and he gave a brief account of the progress of the movement.

The firemen's annual dance and euchre was held last Wednesday in the assembley hall. This was their third "annual" and in point of numbers and a real sociable time, it eclipsed any of the previous annuals. Chief Mitchell and his lieutenants keep everything running smoothly. Visiting firemen were present from Oakville, Long Branch, New Toronto, Mimico and Toronto.

Last Tuesday the call entered by Bonar Presbyterian Church Toronto, to Rev. G. S. Lamont of Dixie, and Islington was sustained. Spokesmen for Dixie were Messrs. Jamieson and Sabiston, while Mr. J. H. Beamish spoke on behalf of Islington congregation. The spirit of the addresses by the representatives from these Churches was that the entire membership of both congregations, would wish their popular pastor to remain, but on the other hand not a member would attempt to oppose his promotion to the larger sphere where there would be greater scope for his abilities. Mr. Lamont who has been in Dixie and Islington for three and a half years, will preach his farewell sermon on April 26th. Rev. Mr. Meek of Long Branch Presbyterian Church has been appointed interim moderator.

Last Thursday evening the annual five-pin bowling tournament between six teams from Islington and six from Lambton, resulted in eleven games won for Islington and seven for Lambton, the former winning by over 800 pins. The Lambton twirlers served an excellent supper and entertainment, and Reeve Marshall presented a silver challenge cup to the winners.

PEEL MUSIC FESTIVAL, MAY 8, 9.
Clarke Memorial Hall, Port Credit

Already entries are being received by the Secretary of the Peel Music Festival at the Department of Agriculture. This promises to be an outstanding event for the county and it is hoped that with everyone co-operating it may be one of the best to be held in the Province this year. Some twenty new classes have been added to the Syllabus and in every case where there are six or more entries three prizes will be given. Approximately fifty people from the County and surrounding territory have donated money and prizes. All this is much appreciated by the committee in charge.

Elimination contests will be run off on Friday, May 8th, at Port Credit with Mr. G. D. Atkinson, Toronto, and Mr. Chas. Peaker, Mus. Bac. F.R.C.O. Toronto, acting as adjudicators for all musical classes and Miss Clarice Spencer also of Toronto, acting as adjudicator for elocution. Final contests will take place the following day.

Four classes are open to the Province and all other classes are for residents of Peel County only.

The committee in charge are as follows: J. W. Fleury, President; Lloyd G. Lynd, Vice-President; Alma E. Wise, Secretary Treasurer.

Executive:—South, Miss E. Miller, Miss R. E. Goldthorpe, Mr. F. G. Russell, Mr T. H. Barrett, Mrs. McFadden. North, Miss L. Rutherford. Centre, Mrs. W. Fulton, Mr. A. S. Thomas, Mr. W. E. Capps, Mr. D. T. Appleton, Mr. A. Firth, Mr. M. R. Fydell.

LET US SMILE

Wife: Funny about these strawberries I bought. They look red but they are hard and sour.

Hub: My dear, the redness of early strawberries doesn't indicate ripeness, they are merely blushing at the price that is charged for them.

Watch for the posters of the Old-Fashioned Social to be held on Friday evening, April 17th, under the auspices of the United Church choir. Get acquainted contests, fine program and tasty lunch are some of the attractions.

"I WANT MY MAMA"

Evening rates on "Anyone" [station-to-station) calls begin at 7 p.m. Night rates begin at 8.30 p.m. Just give "Long Distance" the number you want — it speeds up the service.

It was really the first time Dorothy had ever been away from home alone. She was happy as could be at Aunty's, and romped and played the whole day long—till bedtime came—then a terrible fit of homesickness came over her.

Aunty was at her wits' end—till she thought of Long Distance. In just a few seconds Dorothy's mother was talking to her little girl . . . quietly, firmly, cheerily . . . then she told her to let Aunty tuck her away in bed.

Everything was all right after that. Dorothy felt that her mother really wasn't far away after all. And the telephone had saved Aunty from an awkward predicament—at a cost of just 35 cents.

BY-LAW NO. 698

A by-law to regulate the keeping and harbouring of dogs in the Village of Streetsville.

Whereas it is deemed expedient to regulate the keeping and harbouring of dogs in the Village of Streetsville.

Now therefore the Corporation of the Village of Streetsville by the Council theretof enacts as follows:

1. The assessors shall enter upon the assessment roll opposite the name of every person assessed the number of dogs, female dogs and spayed dogs respectively for which he is liable to be taxed.

2. The amounts hereinafter set forth as dog tax levies shall be entered upon the tax roll and shall be collected in the same manner as the Municipal taxes and said tax shall be due and collectable with the first instalment.

3. When the tax is demanded and is not paid, then person assessed may be summoned before a Police Magistrate who may direct the dog to be destroyed unless the tax and costs shall be paid within 10 days after the due date of the tax. For the purpose of carrying out such order the Constable may enter upon the premises of the owner and destroy the dog.

4. Any person when so required by the assessor shall forthwith deliver to him a statement in writing of the number of dogs owned by him or which are habitually kept upon the premises for which he is assessed by whomsoever owned.

5. Every person shall on or before the first day of February in each year procure from the Clerk or Treasurer or assessor, a tag for each dog owned or harboured by him and shall keep the tag securely fixed on the dog at all times during the year and until he procures a tag for the following year, provided, however, that the tag may be removed while the dog is being lawfully used for hunting in the bush. The fee for the said tag shall be 25c.

6. Every owner of a dog who neglects to obtain a tag and keep it securely fixed on his dog or who uses the tag upon a dog other than that for which it was issued shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding $10.00.

7. Every dog which is found off the premises upon which it is habitually kept without a tag and not under the control of any person by means of a leash may be killed.

8. Where an owner of a dog applies to the Clerk for a tag after the assessment roll has been returned and before the collector's roll has been delivered to the collector and the Clerk finds that such owner has not been assessed for the dog, the Clerk shall make the necessary entries in the roll, but when owner acquired ownership of the dog after the expiration of 6 months of the year he shall only be charged with one-half of the dog tax.

9. The owner or harbourer of any dog shall keep the said dog tied up on his premises during the months of April, May, June, July, August, September and October, provided however, that the dog may be taken upon the street by the owner or any person he may authorize, if under control by means of a leash.

10. The following levies are hereby imposed for the keeping and harbouring of dogs: male dogs $5.00; female $8.00; Spayed female $5.00.

10A. The owners of a kennel of pure bred dogs registered in the Canadian Kennel Club shall pay an annual tax of $10.00 to the Treasurer of the Municipality, and he shall not be liable for any further tax on such pure bred dogs.

11. It shall be the duty of the Chief Constable to enforce the clauses set forth in this By-law and where the Constable or his deputy or any person he may see fit to appoint, finds a dog running at large during the months of April, May, June, July, August, September and October either with or without a tag he shall take the dog or cause it to be taken in charge. He shall then make every endeavour to ascertain the owner of the dog and shall notify him and in case the dog is not removed within 96 hours it shall be the duty of the Chief Constable or his deputy or any person he may see fit to appoint to see that the dog is fed and watered during this period and to destroy the dog in a humane manner and the owner shall be required to pay any costs arising from the destroying of the dog provided, however that such costs shall not be more than $2.00. If the dog is released within the 96 hours a pound fee of $2.00 shall be charged.

12. Any person convicted of the breach of any of the provisions of this By-law shall be liable upon summary conviction before a Justice of Peace or a Magistrate to a fine not exceeding $50.00 for each offense exclusive of costs and in default of payment forthwith the said penalty and costs or the costs only may be levied by distress and sale of goods and chattels of the offender and in case there being no distress to be found, out of which such penalty can be levied the convicting Justice of Peace or Magistrate may commit the offender to the common jail of the County of Peel with or without hard labour for any period not exceeding 21 days unless the penalty and costs are sooner paid.

This By-law shall take full force and effect over any previous By-laws passed by any previous Council of the Village of Streetsville.

Passed in open Council this 8th day of April, 1931.

H. W. HOPE, Reeve.
S. H. SMITH, Clerk.

The editors of local newspapers are often blamed for partiality in their notices for churches, societies and even families, when the fact is the parties most interested are the ones to blame. The local newspaper does not possess a sufficient number of reporters to send to every church service in the range of its circulation, and it must needs depends upon some person to send in the news. Many pastors or leaders of the congregation do this and their items are gladly printed. Many societies appoint one of their members to attend to this important work.

United Church Choir Concert—Friday, April 17

Mrs. Gallagher of Toronto is the guest of Mrs. T. Farrell.

D. W. Reid & Son have just received a carload of Oat Groats.

The Young People of St. Andrew's Pres. Church will give their play entitled "Climbing Roses" in the Prince of Wales Theatre, Saturday April 18th.

Mr. W. W. Tracy, Jr., of Toronto Mr. J. Godfrey, just out from the old country, and Mr. and Mrs. Marcham and son, Fred, of Toronto visited Mr. and Mrs. Tracy over the week-end.

Mrs. George McClintock Sr., who has been quite ill, is recovering nicely now.

Mrs. W. E. Durie and Miss Edith Drennan visited friends in Paris and London last Sunday.

Little Florence Chambers has been very sick during the Easter holidays, but is now on the road to recovery.

Mr. Fred Chambers has recovered sufficiently to return to his home at Lisgar after spending some time in Peel Memorial Hospital.

The new groom and bride arrived in town on Monday and are now enjoying marital bliss in our peaceful village —— in the Johnston Apartments. Welcome to our city !

The new Trinity Church Parish Hall will be officially opened on Monday, May 4th, preceded by Sunday services on May 3rd. Rev Archdeacon Perry of Welland will be the preacher on Sunday and The Bishop of Toronto will be present on Monday evening

The new Dog By-Law passed by the Village Council appears in this paper. It is in force now. Dog owners should read it and learn the new regulations. The fee for one dog has been raised from $2 to $5 and dogs must be kept tied up from Apr. 1st to Oct. 31st. Dog owners are grumbling about the raise in the fees. Its up to the Council to enforce the By-Law. There are still a few dogs running loose.

The Young People of St. Andrews Church are repeating their play Climbing Roses, in the Oddfellows Hall, Streetsville, this Saturday under the auspices of Streetsville Oddfellows and the proceeds will go towards providing medical treatment for a local child. The Young People and the Oddfellows are to be commended on their charitable tendency and this entertainment should be patronized by the whole country-side. The Independent Oddfellows are one of the greatest charitable organizations in the world and spend thousands of dollars annually for the relief of the distressed. Let's all go to this play and fill the Hall.

Waldie Steen

The very sad news of the death by accident, at Hillsburgh, of one of our former schoolmates, in the person of WaldieSteen, was received here yesterday. When a beech tree drawn back like a huge bow by another tree he was pulling down with a team of horses, rebounded, striking him in the head and chest, Waldie Steen, aged 57, died a few minutes later. He, with his son, was in the bush, on his farm, nearGuelph cutting down trees when one tree became wedged with another. Getting his team of horses he attempted to pull it loose, with his son, Joseph, handling the horses. Mr. Steen turned his head momentarily and did not notice the tree he was near being pulled back by the weight of the other tree

His son immediately ran for help. Dr. Reynolds was passing in his car and rushed to the injured man. He found him terribly crushed about the head and chest and with one leg broken by the impact. He lived but a few minutes.

Deceased was born in Streetsville and settled in the Erin district 13 years ago. He is survived by his wife Lavina Matthews of Meadowvale, 4 daughters, and two sons, two sisters Mrs. Fred Van Camp, of Vancouver and Miss Ethel of Toronto, and 3 brothers, Campbell of Georgetown, Herbert of Winnipeg, and Evans of Kingston. He was a Presbyterian

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Kate O'Hara accepted the proposition of Christopher Steynes, a friend of her boss, Gordon Rowntree, and acted as his wife at a reception given to a Russian countess and her daughter at Rowntree's home in Burlingame. The countess, with the object of marrying her daughter to money, had been chasing Steynes. When the countess is introduced to "Mrs. Steynes" she is discouraged. Mary stays at Steyne's house that night and a burglar enters; Chris shoots him; police take Mary's name and address, and she is terrified for fear her mother will find out. On returning home she finds that she has fallen in love with Chris.

On visiting the burglar in the hospital, Mary discovers him to be her brother Martin. Martin had seen her enter the house and had entered to protect her.

Then Martin returns home. He and Mary, Chris Steynes and Cass Keating, to whom Mary is to be married, are in the kitchen talking it over, when Mrs. O'Hara return

"Tell me what on earth is going on, Mart," demanded Mrs. O'Hara.

"Mother—!" Mary Kate began impulsively. But her mother stopped her.

"Leave your brother talk!" she commanded. Mary Kate subsided into silence, her whole slender figure drooping, as she sat at the kitchen table, her softly tumbled coppery head resting on her hand.

"Ma," Martin began, "this Mr. Steynes here is a friend of Mr. Rowntree's, and they asked our Mary Kate, last week, if she would pretend for two days to be married to Mr. Steynes."

A sharply horrified look at her daughter was Mrs. O'Hara's reception of this. Chris essayed to speak.

"The reason being—" he was beginning, when Mrs. O'Hara silenced him as she had her daughter.

"Just a moment, please!"

"The reason was," Martin resumed, accepting Chris' opening, "that some woman was pursuing him and hoped he'd ask her to marry him. She had followed him out from New York."

"You didn't get yourself mixed up in that sort of thing?" the mother asked, with a stern and incredulous look at Mary Kate.

"There was to be money in it," Martin pursued relentlessly.

"Between us and all harm!" Mrs. O'Hara whispered.

"Look here, Mr. O'Hara, you're giving your mother an entirely false idea of the whole thing," Chris interrupted impulsively.

"I'll take it the way my son gives it, if you please," Mrs. O'Hara told him. And again Christopher fell silent.

"Mary Kate wanted the money for my German trip," Mart conceded before continuing.

"Mart," his mother pleaded, "don't tell me she knew no better than that!"

"Well, anyway," Martin went on, "she and Mr. Steynes bought clothes, and she went down there to Burlingame—she didn't go to Sacramento at all—"

"Molly—?" her mother questioned, heartbreak in her voice. Mary Kate made no answer; she did not raise her head.

"She told us she was going to Sacramento," Martin pursued, "but she went to Burlingame, and when she went to dinner at Mr. Rowntree's, she went with Mr. Steynes, here, and was introduced as his wife."

"Don't say such things, Mart," Mrs. O'Hara rebuked him.

"It's true. I drove the doctor home that night," the boy said, "and I saw her. His place is just opposite the Rowntree place, and I was starting for home when I saw her come out on a sort of terrace there, all dressed up—"

There was absolute silence in the kitchen, except that Mrs. O'Hara drew her breath with a sort of whimpering sound.

"I went kind of crazy, I guess," Martin said. "I started to come back to the city, like I always do, leaving the doctor's car down there, and all of a sudden something seemed to burst inside my head—"

"Oh, blessed and merciful Lord—" Mrs. O'Hara whispered. Her eyes were shut.

"I came in here 'round midnight, or later," Martin said. "You called out to me, remember? Anyway, I stayed in my room upstairs until I thought you were asleep, and then I changed my clothes, and emptied my pockets, and drove myself back. I went to Rowntree's, there were still lights there, and a maid answered the door. I said that I had come to get the young lady—the red-haired young lady—that I was to call for her—and she said, 'Oh, that was Mrs. Steynes. She and Mr. Steynes went home long ago!' I went back to Burlingame, and into the telephone office, and asked the girls there where Mr. Steynes lived, and they told me. I suppose they thought I was his chauffeur, or had to call for someone at his house, I don't know.

"For about an hour I walked around the place, listening and watching. And after that I began to go crazy again, thinking of our Mary Kate in there—and you, and my father, and all of us loving her so! And him with his money—

"You know I wasn't going to kill him. But I wasn't going to let him get away with that, either—not with our Molly. And that's what got my arm, Ma. I never went to Portland any more than she went to Sacramento. Mr. Steynes here got me before I got him."

Mrs. O'Hara looked at her son for an endless moment.

"And Mary Kate wasn't there at all!" she whispered.

"Oh, yes, she was. She was upstairs in his room."

"You liar!" Mary Kate said simply, with a look.

"Allow me to say that you have gotten an entirely false idea of the whole thing," Chris interpolated authoritatively and impatiently. "This is all nonsense! Your daughter took part in a little masquerade, and except for her brother following her, and causing a lot of police interference, nothing would have come of it at all."

"Police interference?" echoed the mother's voice.

"After the shooting. Yes. But the whole thing," Chris explained, briskly, "has been closed up. It's done. There's no follow-up whatever. It was all extremely foolish, and we got a bad break, but it's over. Your son's wound practically healed, I believe he takes off the bandages in a few days. And as for your daughter here, Mary, she played her part with a beautiful dignity, and lived up to her agreement absolutely. As for anything else, I never put my hand on her. She'll tell you so. I never kissed her!"

"And furthermore," Cass added, unexpectedly, "Mary Kate and I are going to be married, and the sooner the better. When she tells me that everything was all on the level, I believe her. The whole thing was a mistake, but we all make them, and as far as I'm concerned—I'm never going to allude to it again!"

"I told you that because it's true!" Mary Kate said, explosively.

"And now that everything is settled so beautifully, what do we do with Mr. Christopher Steynes' money, that can buy him anything?" Mart asked, in an ugly tone.

"We do nothing with it, we don't want it," Cass said.

"Mother," the girl asked, turning her tear-soaked eyes and stained, pale face toward the older woman, "do you believe me?"

Mrs. O'Hara looked at her. Then her own eyes filled, and she smiled, and opened her arms. And with a burst of bitter tears Mary Kate went into them, sitting on her mother's lap, straining her slender figure against her mother, locking her arms about the older woman's neck, and hiding her shamed face on the breast that had been her refuge from the first hour of her life.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

"Why, darling girl," Mrs. O'Hara said tenderly, "have they all been har'rd on you? Has Mart been har'rd on you? You'd only have to tell me that you'd done nothing wrong, and however foolish you might have been, I'd never hold it against you! It was only when I thought his money had bewildered you a little, dear—"

"But, Mother, I'm no fool!" the girl said emphatically, gulping, and drying her eyes on her soaked little handkerchief. "I'm not one of those poor little ignorant fools that they send out to Saint Catherine's! I knew what I was doing, and I thought it would be—just fun, and that Mart could go to Germany with Doctor van Antwerp, even if I got married. I wasn't—led astray," Mary Kate assured her brother fiercely. "I've been working in a downtown office two years. I finished high school. I know about life!"

"It seems to me that this whole thing has arisen from the fact that Mr. O'Hara here put the worst possible construction upon what his sister did," Chris said, coolly.

Martin shot him a contemptuous look, but before her son could speak, Mrs. O'Hara answered him.

"It was very easy to put that same construction upon what she did, sir," she reminded him, with simple dignity. "Mart only thought what the world would think, and we have to remember the world—we live in the world. Mary Kate did very wrong—but who'd know the true good heart of her," her mother said tenderly, with a downward glance at the bright head on her breast, "if her own mother did not? She's never refused one of us any kindness she could ever do us, be it what it might! She'd see only the money her brother needed, when she'd step into trouble like this, and put her hand in the fire for any one of us, if it was only little Pat himself that ast her to!"

Mary Kate at this cried more bitterly than ever, and increased her hold upon her mother almost to the strangling point.

Mrs. O'Hara's fine, simple, tired face was deeply worried; her faded gray eyes were filled with anxiety still. But, as she had gotten their tangled affairs in hand a thousand times before, in the last hard years, so she was beginning to catch at the threads of tonight's fresh predicament. Indeed, there was to her a certain exhilaration, a certain actual stimulation in this evidence that "the creatures" so palpably needed their mother's guidance still. They were not so big, so tall, so smart, so free but what they could get themselves into trouble, God love them, and turn to her, and to nobody else, in the last pinch, to get them out.

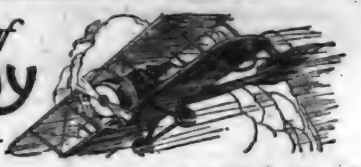
Household Deities Queen's Occupation

London—"Home duties" will be the Queen's occupation described by King George in the census which will be taken in Great Britain on Sunday, April 26, and His Majesty will describe his own occupation as "Head," according to The News-Chronicle, which says the King will fill in the same kind of form as any other householder in that land. Every householder in Great Britain will be required on census night—the returns being made at night instead of in the daytime—to give full particulars concerning the various members of the household, as outlined in the blank forms. The Master of the King's Household, Sir Derek Keppel, will be responsible for the returns concerning the servants and those members of the court who may be in residence on census night.

The Weathercock



Each painted weathercock on earth
Is coldly crucified at birth,
A truth he realizes after
He perches high above his rafter
To imitate in brass or tin
The rooster which he might have been.
Windward he turns his steady eyes
In wonder whence the storm will rise;
For, though he neither flies nor crows
A weathercock is one of those
Who only in the storm's hard drive
Knows how it feels to be alive;
For when all lines are blurred and gone
Till earth and space and cloud are one,
And rain, like lead, or stinging hail,
Or sleet, or snow beat down the gale
The weathercock believes he flies
With perch and barn roof to the skies.

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

That came before: Captain Jimmy and and his dog Scottie are exploring China in their plane. They call on a Chinese General to get a pass, when Scottie foolishly catches him by the foot.

There we stood before General Lu, wondering what was going to happen next. Scottie, bristling with anger and ready to fight at the drop of a hat. The interpreter scared white, or rather, scared lemon yellow—and myself anxious and worried for fear that General Lu would refuse to give us our pass to the Chinese front.

Fortunately General Lu was too great a man to bother much about dignity. Without even a word of comment on Scottie's absurd attack, he sat down and wrote quickly on a sheet of paper, to which he affixed a bright green seal. Five minutes later we left the palace with a pass that gave us freedom to go anywhere we pleased.

Early next morning we took off in our plane for Liuho—a little town where the fighting was in full progress. Soon the country below showed the ravages of war. Buildings were wrecked by shell-fire, bridges were down at the rivers, and the ground was so rough that we almost crashed at our first landing.

Leaving our plane well back from the battle front, we took a road leading up to the lines. The air was damp and foggy, and the rumble of the guns seemed muffled under the heavy grey sky. Bullet-scarred walls stood bleak and white, and now and then a tree, with the wood torn into ribbons, showed the spite of high explosives.

Suddenly we noticed a group of soldiers, off duty, grouped around some object tied to a tree. Coming near we heard a loud and complicated din—moaning, groaning and gibbering enough to make your hair stand on end. To our horror, we found that the soldiers had caught a few of the enemy, and tied them up to a large branch by their wrists, so their feet were several inches off the ground. Of course, it must have been fearfully uncomfortable, but the soldiers only laughed and jeered.

"Come on Scottie", I said, "Let's bust up this party."

Punching and poking my way through the ring I stood beside the prisoners. The soldiers, of course, did not take this treatment too kindly, and began to whisper among themselves and finger their rifles. Then I took out General Lu's pass. Luckily no one could read it—but I pointed to the bright green official seal and made gestures and faces that must have convinced those Chinese soldiers that dire calamity would befall any man who interfered.

Taking out my knife, I cut the captives down, and automatic pistol in hand I shoved them through the ring of soldiers who were too surprised to resist.

"Herd those prisoners into that house." I said to Scottie, pointing to a house which remained standing. In fact, it afterwards proved to be the headquarters of the Colonel in charge. Scottie needed no second invitation—with a fierce growl he lunged for the ankles of the three Chinese, and they covered the distance in no time at all.

Then the soldiers suddenly woke up. Several fired shots, and others ran toward us with their bayonets. I ran to the door. This was guarded by a sentry. He made a stab at me but missed, so I bowled him over and turned just in time to see two more figures rushing toward me. There was no time to think. Hiding behind the door, I hit each as hard as I could as he jumped over the sill, and scored two knock outs.

Then as my eyes became accustomed to the gloom of the house, I looked more carefully, and discovered to my dismay that one man was my interpreter, and the other no-less than the Colonel himself.

Fortunately the Colonel revived in a few moments, otherwise we would have been in a bad fix, as everyone was running toward the house shooting and yelling. Sitting up, he fairly screamed some orders in Chinese. Instantly the hubbub ceased.

The Colonel turned to me. Quite evidently he hadn't the slightest idea what happened.

Freedom

Let me be free always.
As a swift stream is,
As a wild bird
In heedless, maddened flight.
Let me lift up mine eyes
To the boundless sky,
To the tall trees,
And to all things
That are free.
And let me hear
Notes of music unrestrained,
The melody of spring rain,
And the carefree laughter
Of children.
Let me be untrammeled
And know no bonds—
The Song of Life
It all too quickly sung.

Eclipse of Moon Visible in London

London—There was a total eclipse of the moon visible in London on April 2nd.

As a matter of fact, the moon was eclipsed twice—once by the earth's shadow and again by one of those thick fogs which have made this a notable winter even in London.

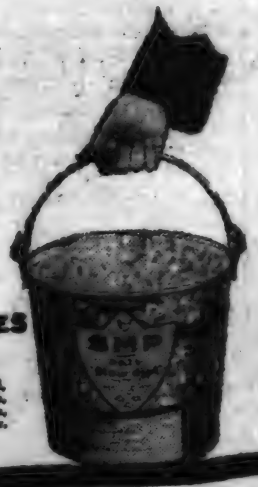
SAVED IMPORTED DRESS

"After a little wearing, a lovely green voile—an imported dress—lost color so completely that it was not wearable. A friend who had admired it asked me why I wasn't wearing it any more. On hearing the reason, she advised dyeing it and recommended Diamond Dyes. To make a long story short, it turned out beautifully. I have a lovely new dress that really cost just 15c—the price of one package of Diamond Dyes.



"I have since used Diamond Dyes for both tinting and dyeing. They do either equally well. I am not an expert dyer but I never have a failure with Diamond Dyes. They seem to be made so they always go on smoothly and evenly. They never spot, streak or run; and friends never know the things I dye with Diamond Dyes are redyed at all!"

What do we plant when we plant a tree?
A thousand things that we daily see;
We plant the spire that out-towers the crag,
We plant the staff for our country's flag,
We plant the shade from the hot sun free,
We plant all these when we plant a tree. —Henry Abbey.

A Good Spring Appetizer and Spring Tonic—The Lowly Dandelion in Salad

Gather the early tender plant of dandelion. It is best when just showing on top of the ground. The whiter and more blanched it is the more delicate is the flavor. Sometimes it grows up long, blanched and delicious under fallen boards or around and under stones. Sometimes you may find it in a freshly plowed field. And you may be sure the farmer will be only too glad to see you come and gather all you can take away for it is an undesirable weed to him except when he sees it on his table, if he has also grown to like its slightly bitter taste.

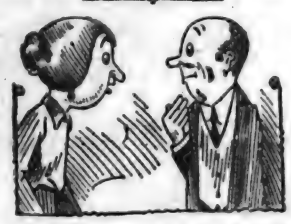
Cut off the roots as you gather it and keep as free from grass as possible as you go along. Put it all in a large dishpan (it takes a lot of dandelion to make a good sized dish full for it goes together a good bit), cover well with warm salty water, wash through a number of waters to remove all the sand, then cut a few slices of bacon into dice and fry brown in large frying pan. Add ¼ to ½ cup white wine vinegar not too strong, 1 tblsp. sugar more or less according to taste, salt and pepper. When it is boiling add the dandelion. Turn it over and over with a spoon to get it well mixed until it is wilted, but do not boil or cook it. Put it into a salad bowl and cover with sliced hard boiled eggs.

This tastes very good with a ham and eggs dinner. Many people eat it every day in the spring if they have time to gather it until the dandelion grows too old.

An Easy Crumb Cake

2 cups pastry flour, 1½ cups brown sugar, ¾ cup butter, 2 teasp. baking powder, dash of cinnamon. Work above ingredients to crumbs, then take out ¾ of a cup and add to the remainder 2 eggs, not beaten, ¾ cup sweet milk and vanilla if desired. Beat up well. Put in greased pan and cover with the crumbs. Bake in moderate oven. Cool in the pan and cut pieces out as needed.

Twilight Hour Story—Chapter 18



About Wee Chickies and Other Little Friends

I told you last week that when they first brought Fluffy, the persian pussy, home, Rover didn't care about it very much. Of course he wouldn't hurt her because he knew Fluffy belonged to the house just as much as he did, but one day just shortly after Fluffy came she was outside enjoying a sun bath. Mamma and Billy were up town and Rover thought it would be fun to make Fluffy run and he actually chased her up a tree. She was so surprised to think he'd run after her, but she found she could climb a tree almost as easily as walking. But even when she was high above Rover she was so frightened that she kept on climbing up and up. Then when she was away up there and looked down she was so high up she was afraid to come down. I tell you Fluffy was glad when she saw Mamma Lady and Billy coming home just then. It happened a little neighbor boy saw Rover chase Fluffy, so he came over and said, "Rover chased Fluffy up the tree. I saw him."

Mamma Lady looked hard at Rover and said, "Rover, did you chase Fluffy up there? Shame! I didn't think you'd do that." And Rover hung his head and came over slowly, then when he got to Mamma Lady he put up his paw to shake hands. That was his way of saying he was sorry. But Mamma Lady had to punish him for doing that so he wouldn't do it again, and she took his head in her hand and slapped the side of his nose a few times. Not very hard, for, did you know, you don't often need to punish animals very hard to make them mind. But then you mustn't let them off altogether, either, for they must know what is right and what is wrong just the same as little boys and girls must be taught. Don't you think so?

Well, Fluffy was away up in the tree seeing all this, and when Mamma Lady looked up at her and called her, she was so excited and delighted she couldn't stand still. She called her again, and do you know what Fluffy did? She didn't climb down this time but she jumped down all the way. It may be she lost her balance, for the branch was so little away up there and she wasn't used to climbing yet. Anyway she jumped down all that way, and what do you think? She landed right on her paws. Kitties always fall on their paws if they slip, did you ever know that? They never fall on their sides where it would hurt like everything, the way we would most likely fall. No, they never do. Well, when she plunked down right beside Mamma Lady she didn't run either. No, she knew Rover wouldn't run after her again if Mamma Lady was there, so she just waited until Mamma Lady picked her up and took her into the house.

But Fluffy got back at Rover after a few days for running after her like that. She wasn't quite so afraid of him now when he'd come in the house. This is what she did: You see, when Rover is glad he wags his big tail, which is his way of saying he is happy. Well, when he came in one day feeling awfully good and wagging his brushy tail like a good fellow, Fluffy was behind him and she started to play with it. He was so surprised and stopped and looked round at her. But Fluffy knew he couldn't come after her with Billy around. She just hid until he stopped looking at her and as soon as he wagged it again she grabbed it again, and the only way he could keep Fluffy from pulling at his long hair was to keep it real still, and such a funny look came into his brown eyes. He didn't like standing still when he was feeling glad and not be able to wag his tail. Do you know, he had to go off in a corner if he wanted to wag his tail in comfort. Fluffy was pretty smart that time, don't you think? But I wonder what Jimmie Chick and the three little chick sisters have been doing all this time. We're going to find out next issue.

Mrs. Brown: "You used to call me your turtle dove."

Mr. Brown: "Well, I was something of a bird, myself, in those days."

Her Majesty Discovers Quaint Wallpaper

London—Many collecting families which have been long settled in one house have been known to discover hidden treasure in some neglected attic. It is now disclosed that Queen Mary, herself an ardent collector, has made several interesting discoveries of this kind. Not long ago, she found in Buckingham Palace, I understand to her surprise and delight, a gayly painted Chinese wallpaper, acquired by King George IV, stored away and forgotten.

The beautiful, and incidentally valuable, wallpaper now adorns one of the sitting rooms in the palace, known as the Yellow Drawing Room because the color-scheme is carried out in a charming, clear, jasmine-yellow.—Collector.

Sunday School Lesson

April 28. -Lesson IV—How to Pray—Luke 18. 1-14. Golden Text—Lord, teach us to pray.—Luke 11: 1.

ANALYSIS.

I. THE PARABLE OF THE UNJUST JUDGE, 18: 1-8.
II. THE PHARISEE AND THE PUBLICAN, 18: 9-14.

I. THE PARABLE OF THE UNJUST JUDGE. 18: 1-8.

The point of the parable is to show that Christians are to pray "at all times" (that is, even when their prayers seem not to be answered) and not to faint or give up in despair. The judge in the story is perhaps a local magistrate, or one of the two regular police-court magistrates in Jerusalem, who, because they sat continuously, were paid out of the Temple treasury. There are various references to the "ignorance, arbitrariness and covetousness" of such men. In v. 5 a very strong expression is used, "lest in the end she come and give me a black eye," but perhaps this is not meant literally.

For some reason or other the unjust judge does not want to right the woman's wrong, but in the end because of her importunity he listens to her, thinking it will on the whole be less bother to him to be rid of her. We must not understand by the parable that God, who otherwise would not trouble to answer our prayers, will in the end answer them if we bother him enough. God does not answer our prayers because of our importunity, but we are to go on asking him without ever despairing, because we know he will answer our prayers. This is another instance of the "how much more" argument which Jesus so often employed in his teaching about God; if even an unjust judge in the end will listen to prayers, how much more shall God, who loves his children, in the end (in his own good time) answer their prayers!

By "avenging his elect" we are presumably to understand the deliverance, vindication and justification of those who have been faithful through trial and persecution. The parable, as we have it, seems to deal in general with the question of prayers that seem to be unanswered, and in particular with the sufferings and trials of the Church between the death of Jesus and his eagerly expected return. Let the persecuted Church take heart: God will speedily "avenge his elect."

It is not clear whether the second part of v. 8 is a saying of Jesus or a comment by the evangelist. "When the Son of Man comes, will he find" (not "faith" but) "the faith on the earth?" The words "the faith" seem naturally to mean "true Christianity," and it is perhaps right to suppose that the words are the comment of some disheartened Church leader, who does not doubt that soon Christ will come, but who is gravely disquieted about the state of the Church. In any case, the point of the parable seems to be this: your prayers for deliverance seem not to be answered; you are doubting whether God will do his part, but the real question is whether you will do yours; of course God will vindicate his elect, but are you sure that you will be found numbered among the elect?

II. THE PHARISEE AND THE PUBLICAN, 18: 9-14.

Self-righteousness is the subject of this story. The public and official worship of the Temple was almost exclusively sacrificial; but the Temple courts, it would seem, were also used for private prayer. It is difficult to see how far the "prayer" of the Pharisee may properly be called a prayer at all; he gives thanks to God for the blessedness of his condition, but the impression is not so much grateful to God for the gifts of God's grace as he is boasting before God of his own attainments. He has done more than the Law requires; he has fasted on Mondays and Thursday (the Christians, to be different, chose Wednesdays and Fridays for their fasts); he has paid tithes, not only on his produce, as the Law required, but on the whole of his income; he has avoided the open sins of the worldling. A not dissimilar prayer of a rabbi has come down to us: "I thank thee, O Lord my God, that thou hast put my part with those who sit in the Academy, and not with those who (like money-changers and traders) sit at the corners. For I rise early, and they rise early; I rise early to the words of the Law, and they to vain things; I labor and they labor; I labor and receive a reward; they labor and receive no reward; I run and they run; I run to the life of the world to come, and they to the pit of destruction." It would be a great mistake, however, to suppose that these prayers give us a complete and normal picture of the piety of the Pharisaic party. Moreover the Pharisee in the parable does not seem to be wholly condemned; the publican returns to his house with a heart more acceptable to God than the Pharisee's because he has a greater sense of moral realities, but the righteousness of the Pharisee is not despised.

What is meant by saying that the publican is justified rather than the other? "Justified" is strictly a term taken from the law courts and means "acquitted." It applies here that all men are sinful in God's eyes, and all must pray, "forgive us our trespasses," but that "a broken and contrite heart" is more acceptable to God than a proud and self-satisfied righteousness. Humility is the right attitude of man before God, and the friendship to which we are called is not an easy and lighthearted companionship and familiarity.

One thorn of experience is worth a whole wilderness of warnings.—J. R. Lowell.

"When I got home last night," said the struggling author, "I found that burglars had been in my place." "Really!" exclaimed his friend. "What happened? Did they take anything?" "They searched through every drawer in the flat and then left $2.00 on my desk."

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern

Darling youthful chic for all-day occasions is expressed in this simple frock of printed crepe silk.

The cowl drape and flounce trimmed sleeves lend a softened touch to the bodice.

The unusually clever shaping of the skirt produces a decidedly slimming effect. The lower part displays a comfortably full hemline.

To copy it exactly takes but 3½ yards of 39-inch material for the medium size.

Stle No. 3082 is designed for sizes 16, 18 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust.

It is very fashionable too in plain crepe silk in navy blue. Or if you prefer, black crepe silk, it is stunning with a touch of white in embroidered organdie with narrow lace edge used for the flounce sleeve frills.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Enclose 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number, and address your order to Wilson Pattern Service, 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto.

Spring Song

Just smell a crocus, and close your eyes—
But you can't shut out the blue of the skies,
The green of the grass and the glint of the brook,
The racing and chasing of mad chinook,
You can't shut out the fleecy clouds,
Floating and downy—fairy shrouds—
For the crocus has in it the spirit of Spring,
And its gay purple bells the Spring Song ring,
And its gay yellow heart is the heart of Spring.

Just smell a crocus and listen not—
For you'll hear the songs that can't be forgot;
The song of the lark in an airy dell,
The rustling of fairies at wishing well,
The raucous cry of the coal black crow,
The honk of the wild geese as over they go;
For the crocus has in it the spirit of Spring,
And its gay purple bells the Spring song ring,
And its gay yellow heart is the heart of Spring.

We know Spring is here when days grow long,
When the brain is cleared and the heart beats strong,
When ice breaks up and the lakes shine blue,
We know spring is coming, then, we do!
But we greet the crocus with roll of drums
For Spring is here when the crocus comes;
For the crocus has in it the spirit of Spring,
And its gay purple bells the Spring Song ring,
And its gay yellow heart is the heart of Spring.

Short Hours and One Job Offered As Solution

Berlin—The commission appointed by the Chancellor, Dr. Heinrich Bruening, to study Germany's unemployment problem, suggested two partial solutions—general shortening of working hours and prohibition of civil servants engaging in side jobs.

The commission headed by the former Minister of Labor, Heinrich Brauns, believed that shortening of working hours would afford an opportunity for at least part time work to many who now are without jobs. The commission recommended that where industries proved recalcitrant to the plan the Government be empowered to fix the hours of work.

The commission urged also that all civil servants be prohibited from accepting remunerative jobs outside their regular civil service.

British Author Gives List of Favorite Works

Philadelphia.—John Galsworthy discussed English and American literature of the past century, at the Philadelphia Forum here.

He discussed the so-called "realists" with frankness, saying that their philosophy would not live, though their style was arresting. The novelists Mr. Galsworthy himself finds perennially interesting, were Charles Dickens, Robert Louis Stevenson, Katharine Mansfield, Joseph Conrad, W. H. Hudson and Mark Twain.

"Dickens was the greatest of English novelists," Mr. Galsworthy said. "The quest for truth and beauty is a hard one, but what else is there worth seeking," he added, in discussing the use of satire, which, he said, was to forcibly point out truths.

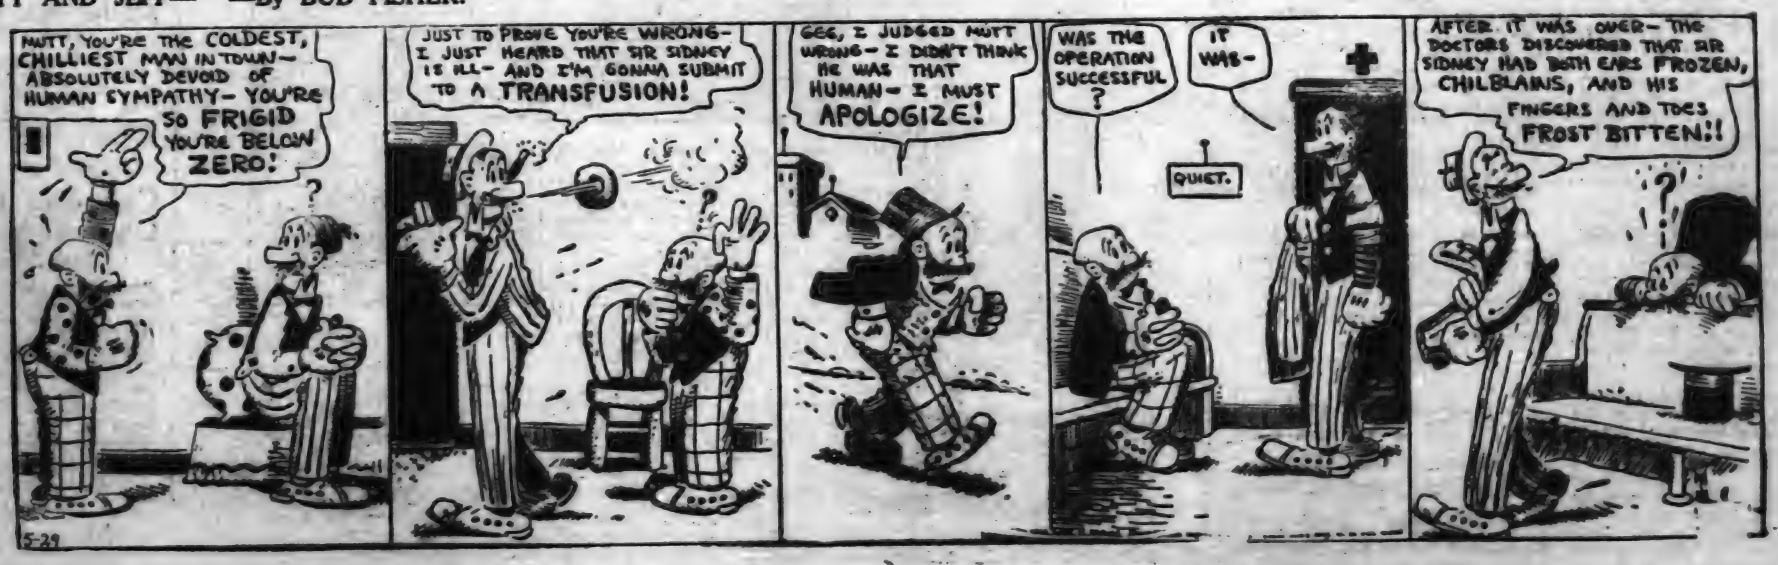
"Stevenson," Mr. Galsworthy remarked, "gave us the unexpected in diction more frequently than any other English writer, excepting Shakespeare."

The outstanding literature produced by writers of the United States were listed by Mr. Galsworthy as Mark Twain's "Tom Sawyer," Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter," and Frank Norris's McTeague."

Mending Curtains

Springtime and house-cleaning time approach. Those muslin curtains need laundering and yet they are rather old and delicate to withstand another washing. Try this and see how well it succeeds: After the curtains are washed, starched and dampened, put a piece of thin white net under the worn parts and press the two together while ironing them. The damp starch will cause the net to stick to the curtains and the net backing will make them look like new. It will save hours of mending and when the curtains are hung the net will not be noticed in the fullness. Curtains mended in this way have been in use for two years or more and the results are very satisfactory.

Fire Halts Wolf-Pack



North Bay, Ont.—Like a tale from Siberia came the story of the all-night vigil of a trapper and two young boys who, forced to camp near a lonely northern lake, burned pine-boughs until dawn to keep a wolf pack at bay.

The trapper, an experienced man, and his companions had started on a fifty-mile trip to a northern settlement. Heavy snow slowed their progress and forced them to spend a night on the trail. Startled near midnight by the howls of wolves, they heaped boughs upon their fire until flames shot high into the night. The wolves could be dimly seen in the surrounding woods, but they kept away, and at the first streak of dawn they disappeared into the brush.

More than half the fresh water of the globe is contained in inland waters of Canada and twenty different varieties of food fish are obtained from them in abundance by commercial fishermen.

Final figures of gold production for 1930 may find Canada in second place instead of the United States — following South Africa, according to estimates of the Director of the United States Mint.

Travelling health clinics operated by the Alberta Government in that province to visit remote districts and provide free medical service, went to 27 points last year including 396 school districts.

The habit of taking snuff is on the increase in Canada. In 1929 over 997,000 pounds were made, valued at $1,230,933, an increase of over 337,000 pounds and more than $530,000 in value as compared with 1919.

Fish as candles? Certainly, some of them, sometimes. Oulachons, small oily fish taken in British Columbia waters, are also known as "Candlefish," because the Indians used to dry them and use them as candles.

Forty-one anglers who fished the 4½ miles of open water reserved for regulated public fishing on the famous Restigouche River in New Brunswick during the 1930 season caught 312 salmon weighing 5,257 pounds.

NATURAL FEEDING

There is, beyond question, one food which is best for the baby, and that is the natural food—breast milk. It would appear that this fact is not generally known if we are to judge by the number of babies who, upon the slightest excuse, or for no excuse at all, are placed on artificial feedings of one kind or another.

The natural food is best. It is suitable for the baby because it is made for him. It is clean because there is no chance for it to become contaminated by handling. It is fresh and it is also sterile, that is, there are no germs, and consequently, no disease germs in it. For all these reasons, it is superior to artificial feeding.

The breast-fed baby is more likely to avoid disease, to have strong bones and teeth, to have firmer muscles. The breast-fed baby is, in general, a healthier and more sturdy baby than is the baby who is artificially-fed.

Many infants have been brought up successfully on artificial feedings, but this does not alter the fact that, comparing the artificially-fed baby with the naturally-fed, those who have been deprived of their natural food do not thrive as well.

Another advantage of natural feeding is that it makes for the development of the baby's jaws through the act of nursing.

Natural feeding is much more simple and takes far less time than bottle feeding. The proper preparation of artificial feedings requires considerable attention and takes time.

No mother should ever deprive her child of his natural food just because she thinks she cannot nurse the baby, or because some one has told her how well babies do on some artificial food.

The decision to wean the baby is a very serious one to make, and it should not be made except for some good and sufficient reason. The mother should talk the matter over with her doctor and leave the decision to him, because it is, after all, a medical problem. It is not right to wean the baby and then ask the doctor to prescribe artificial feedings. The doctor should be consulted before weaning, not after.

The quality and quantity of the breast-milk can be improved by attention to health. Regular feedings by the clock are desirable for both the mother and the child.

Every child should be breast-fed, and no mother should give up breast-feeding unless she is instructed to do so by her doctor.

Under the direction of Miss Alma Wise, home demonstrator for Peel, four young ladies, Misses Elsie and Florence Elliott, Wilma Boucher and Gladys Peacock, gave a demonstration on etiquette.

Clever actors, the young ladies took the part of the host and hostess, guest and small boy, and caused gales of laughter over the "improper" etiquette which they demonstrated. During the business hour, a report on the public library showed that 65 well-read books have been sent to the Peel Halton Home for the Aged. A grant of $5 was made to the Peel Musical Festival, and arrangements were made to have a caretaker in charge of the local park during the summer. Miss Jessie Pearson was hostess, 30 ladies attending the meeting, at which the program was given by Miss Alma Wise and Miss Mary Philpott.

TORONTO TP. COUNCIL

From discussion of a communication from W. D. Monkman, a farmer of the Cooksville district, who raises high-priced pure-bred sheep, it would appear that steps are soon to be taken to curb the wandering at large of dogs in Toronto Township.

Mr. Monkman stated in his letter that eight times in the past four years he has had sheep worried, and alleged that in the last instance, in which dogs got through a wire fence, the dogs were untagged. Mr. Monkman suggests that the township increase the tax on dogs.

Frank C. Oliver, of Clarkson, lake Shore, had his request for a lease of the Lake Shore road allowance on which part of his house stands, refused. Mr. Oliver, at a previous meeting, pointed out to Counncil that through breakwaters which he has built at his own expense, the road has been saved.

Mr. Oliver's house is six feet on the road, which is not a frequently travelled thoroughfare, and Council was regretful of the necessity to refuse him a clear deed to the site.

W. R. Cluff's store at Lakeview will be the scene of the activities of William Courtney, the new tax collector of the township, each Saturday afternoon.

Council was notified by the Royal Bank branch at Cooksville that the advances to Council will be charged at a rate of 5½ per cent., rather than 6 per cent., as has obtained hitherto.

Immortalizing Pioneer Priest

(3)

One of the most colorful figures of the development of the Canadian West is immortalized today, at the scene of his labors, St. Albert, on the Sturgeon River, just outside Edmonton, by the preservation in the Mission Park of the Oblate Fathers of the original "cathedral" and mission which he founded in 1860, under orders from His Lordship Bishop Tache, of St. Boniface, and in which he carried on his work until his death in 1916. This celebrity is no less renowned a personage than Rev. Father Albert Lacombe, after whom Lacombe, Alta. is named, and who played such an important part in the pacifying of the warring Indian Tribes of the West and the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway. His untiring efforts in the latter connection won him special recognition from Sir William Van Horne, its president, who not only gave him a permanent pass on the line, but made him its head for one day. From the day of his arrival in the West in 1849, from Quebec, where he was born in 1827, this brave and energetic Oblate had staunch friends among the Indians and continued to establish himself, both among them and the white population, as one of the best-known and most-loved characters of the most stirring days of the Prairies. Apart from his religious activities, Father Lacombe is known as one of the real Westerners of Canada. The country was in a very undeveloped state when he first established himself in it and Mission Park, today, stands for a great deal more than just a mission station, or the scene of a devoted missionary's labours. It is a milestone in the progress of the Canadian West and, hence, in the progress of the Dominion. The pictures show: (1) the approach to Mission Park. (2) the interior of the old "cathedral." (3) its exterior, with the brick building which now encases the old log church, and, (inset) the statue of Rev. Father Lacombe.

CLIMBING ROSES PACKED HOUSE

Benefit Play Saturday Night Big Success

The great advance that has been made in amateur theatrical productions in the county of Peel during the past five years, was seen at its peak in Streetsville on Saturday evening last, when the Young People's Society of the Presbyterian church put on "Climbing Roses" as a benefit for little Maragaret Amos, co-operating with the Oddfellows in securing treatment and surgical appliances for the afflicted child.

The young folk had an admirable vehicle, for there is a laugh in every line, and the audience did not miss one. "Climbing Roses" is a satirical comedy, demonstrating the worry and care that exists in a home that is anxious to rise to higher rungs of the social ladder. It depicts the heart-burnings, that come from ambitions thwarted, the heartaches that are felt when snubs are administered by those who have reached the higher rungs.

There was a clever mystery, apparent to the audience from the first, but hidden from the Rose family, and unravelled only with the closing lines of the play. But the unravelling brought peace and happiness, sent the Roses to the point to which they aspired to climb in the opening lines of the story, and brought together two lovers who otherwise might never have met.

Taking the part of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Rose were Victor Johston and Miss Reba Weylie, and it would be superfluous to tell Streetsville people how well they acted their parts. Mr. Johnston was the bluff, whole-souled market-gardener become rich, and willing to go the length or the height with his wife. And no one will quickly forget Miss Weylie in her assumption of the supposed manner of millionaires, and her activities with the lorgnette. As their neice, Miss Cora Woodruff showed extreme naturalness at all times, depicting various sorts of temperament very cleverly. Her scene with the "arrived" society folk, in which she "told them off," was delicious, and warmly applauded.

Human nature flavoured every bit of the comedy from first to last. Tony Ironsides played the part of a successful author, who brought out a hired man, and took his place on the Rose estate. His friend, who thought the author's plan to secure material for a novel was a funny one, was Floyd Marlatt, and his pursuit by May Hollingshead, who intended him for her husband, though not acquainting him with the fact, was brilliant comedy work on the part of these two young people.

Reg. Tucker, the high-power salesman, who dominated Allan Couse, to be in turn heavily dominated by the latter, furnished examples of up-to-date aggressiveness, unbacked however, by personality. Mr. Couse appeared to lack the personality, but read, chapter by chapter, a book on domination, and put it over the aggressive salesman in splendid shape, to the intense delight of the audience.

Miss Winnie Carter was the sweetheart of the man who became dominant, and the audience enjoyed hugely, the manner in which she, who had been "boss" was dominated in turn. Her quivering delight, and her admiration for her changed lover, was a delightfully natural piece of acting.

Mrs. Harold Couse and Miss Leora Buck had very difficult parts to play, in the socially-arrived ladies, who pestered the Roses with their uppishness and patronage. Clever indeed, did they sustain the characters of perfect ladies who could be cattish as well. Mrs. F. A. Maas, whose nerves and heart required the consumption of a pill at every happening, did excellent work in a genuine character part, and dodged in and out and at all times, just as such a character would.

A feature of amateur acting that is usually overlooked was well taken care of in "Climbing Roses," facial expression. At all times, the young actors were ready to smile, and did smile constantly. They followed the meaning of the lines very closely with eyes and mouths, thus increasing immeasureably, the naturalness of the presentation. Costuming was done with clever attention to balance off the parts, and it was a wonderfully effective idea, to have the principal characters dressed in their everyday clothes as the last scene drew to a close.

Too much praise cannot be given Rev. W. T. McCree, who directed the play and coached the cast. Not only has Mr. McCree the appreciation of the audiences who have witnessed these clever presentations of the Climbing Roses, but the community at large is appreciative of the fact that he is bringing higher and finer ideals of dramatic art to the general public.

During the intermissions, violin and piano music was given by Andrew Young and Miss Lily Carr, Toronto, whose popular and classical selections proved very acceptable.

No finer undertaking has been achieved in Peel, than the adopting of little Margaret Amos by the Emergent Relief Committee of the Oddfellows, with the intention that everything that money and altruistic interest can give the little girl will be done for her. Her brave, patient and cheerful manner, under her sad affliction, has not gone unnoted, and hearts warmed during the week, as citizens were asked to join in doing something for her.

S. S. Rice, recording secretary of the Oddfellows Lodge, was warm in his appreciation of the splendid response to appeals to buy tickets for Saturday night's performance by the young people of the Presbyterian church, who joined with the Oddfellows in giving the benefit for the child.

It is not only that surgical appliances are to be bought with the proceeds of the entertainment, but assurance has been received from Dr. P. F. Williams, Toronto, that he will give the child the medical care and treatment that is necessary to improve her lot in life. Never was the Saviour's reminder, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me," as applicable as when the results of the entertainment were counted up.

Anson Pope, S. S. Rice, Leonard Pope and W. C. Andrew, were the quartette belonging to the lodge who undertook the greater part of the work, and to whom the results were most gratifying. Not that this one achievement will end such work as far as the local Oddfellows are concerned, the community may rest assured that this is but the beginning of what will be accomplished in Streetsville in the future.

The Oddfellows Lodge has passed a resolution, expressing in warm terms their appreciation of the co-operation of the Young People's Society of the Presbyterian church, in their effort to assist a little girl of the village to a greater enjoyment of life and health. S. S. Rice, recording secretary, voiced this appreciation publicly this week, and wishes to thank the players in the cast of "Climbing Roses", the musicians who helped at intermissions, those who sold tickets, the audience who attended the play, and last, and in a very great degree, Rev. W. T. McCree, through whose untiring efforts as director and coach, the young people gave such a delightful evening's entertainment.

JUNIOR PUBLIC SPEAKING CONTEST

Saturday, May 16th—To be a combined event this year

Peel Junior boys and girls will run their public speaking finals off on the same evening this year. The date set is Saturday, May 16th. Each organization is holding an elimination contest within their group and the winner will enter in the finals to be held in Brampton in May. In previous years an evening has been given to both girls and boys but this year the combined contest is a new undertaking. Each contestant is allowed 10 to 15 minutes in which to deliver his or her speech and in judging, 40% will be given for subject matter and 60% for delivery. Three judges will be selected by the Dept. of Agriculture at Brampton, and suitable prizes will be presented to the winners. Contestants are allowed to choose their own subject and entries must be mailed to the Dept. of Agriculture not later than May 5th and must include subject chosen.

It is hoped that new life will be put into this contest and that it will be one of the best held in the Province this Spring.

COMMUNITY CLUB

The last meeting of the North Trafalgar Community Club was held at the home of Mrs. Nat. McCracken on Wednesday, April 15th. The meeting opened with our song and roll call. There was not a very large attendance due to the busy time. After the business part a small contest was put on by Mrs. Wilmer Hamilton, Mrs. Will Leslie winning first prize. The hostess then served a dainty lunch. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Bob Coulson, on Wednesday, April 29th.

OBITUARY

Murray Brunskill

Very sudden indeed was the death of Murray Adam Brunskill, second youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Brunskill of Cooksville, who passed away at the East End General Hospital, Toronto on Tuesday, April 21st, at the age of 38 years, with pneumonia.

Deceased was a railway mail clerk. He had served overseas in the Great World War. He was unmarried. Besides his parents, he is survived by three brothers, Fred, Huttonville; James, Barrie, and Oscar, at home, and four sisters, Mrs. W. F. B. Switzer, Streetsville; Mrs. F. Hopkins, Tottenham; Mrs. W. Dennison, Cooksville, and Mrs. T. Weir, Windsor.

The funeral took place to Dixie Cemetery this afternoon.

MARRIAGES

Pollock—Macdonald

The home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Macdonald, Port Credit, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Saturday evening when their daughter, May Flora, became the bride of Samuel James Pollock, son of the late Mr. Samuel and Mrs. Pollock. The Rev. S. Lundie of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church officiated. They will reside in Montreal.

Ferguson—Goodison

The marriage took place at Christ's church, Deer Park, Toronto, Saturday afternoon at 2.45 o'clock, of Miss Vera Frances Goodison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Goodison, of Streetsville, to Mr. S. Clement Ferguson, of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew D. Ferguson, New Westminster, B.C., and grandson of the late Lieut.-Col. T. R. Ferguson, and Stephen Clement, Esq., Cookstown. Spring flowers and palms were used to decorate the chancel for the event, and Canon H. F. D. Woodcock, rector, performed the ceremony. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of skipper blue flat crepe with gray lapin jacket, a blue and gray panamalac hat with accessories of gray trimmed with blue. Her corsage was of periwinkles, forget-me-nots and sweetheart roses. She was attended by Miss Agnes McKechnie as bridesmaid. Miss McKechnie wore a tailored suit of steel colored broadcloth with tuck-in blouse of embroidered blue georgette, a silver fox scarf and black sisol hat. Her corsage was of crimson roses and lily of the valley. Mr. Winston Burgess, cousin of the groom, was groomsman. Mrs. Elgin R. Hastings sang during the signing of the register and the wedding music was played by Mr. Fred B. Bollard, organist at Christ's church. There was no reception, the bride and groom leaving immediately after the ceremony for a wedding trip to Montreal and other cities. Mrs. Goodison, mother of the bride, wore a costume of black and white printed georgette with black coat and hat. Mrs. Ferguson, who is here from New Westminster, wore a gown of navy georgette with lace top, blue wrap and hat of navy baku. Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson will reside in Toronto.

Rev. Robt. and Mrs. Lundy and the Rev. Geo. H. Purchase attended the convocation of Immanuel College held in Trinity Eaton Memorial Church on Tuesday evening of this week.

The Streetsville Review extends its sympathy to Bro. F. L. White, editor of the Milton Champion, and family, in their sad bereavement, Mrs. White having passed away last Thursday.

Damage estimated at $8,000 and covered only by small insurance was done when fire swept the barn, stables and sheds of Norman Thompson, Esquesing township. Stock was removed before fire reached the stables, and implements were also salvaged.

Traffic on the T.T.C. radial line between Long Branch and Port Credit was completely tied up for three hours Sunday afternoon when an east bound car jumped the track near Adamson's Gates, at Lakeview. Six passengers were aboard at the time, but none was injured. The mishap is attributed to a spread rail.

At Young People's meeting of United Church held on Monday evening it was decided to close the meeting for the summer months, next Monday evening, when a literary and social evening will be spent. The past year has been very encouraging and the members look forward in the fall to the re-opening when a bigger and better year will be expected.

When fire broke out Sunday in the roof of the Port Credit Brick Company's power house, the local fire brigade found themselves at a disadvantage owing to the fire truck at the time being under repair. Quickly adapting themselves to conditions, the men, equipped with extinguishers, scaled a large Hydro pole close to the building, and from the improvised fire ladder succeeded in quelling the blaze, which is said to have been caused by sparks from the chimney.

The Maple Leaf Euchre Club closed its season with a social evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Beaty, tenth line, Trafalgar, on Wednesday night, April 15th, when a hundred and twenty-five guests spent an enjoyable time with cards and dancing. 1st prize in euchre went to Mrs. Jim Beaty; 2nd, Mrs. Mason. Consolation prize went to Mrs. Dave Russell, also the Lucky number. A sumptuous chicken dinner was served, followed by ice cream. Every one spent a most enjoyable time. Excellent music was furnished by Jones' Orchestra, Palermo.

WITH THE LONE SCOUTS

Have you ever thought how interesting it would be to keep a "Log Book" of your Lone Scout activities, for yourself or for your Patrol?

Every ship that puts out to sea carries a Log, and the officer of each watch must enter into it any occurrences of importance during his term of duty, and frequently at the end of the voyage this Log proves interesting reading indeed.

So you, too, can keep a Log Book of your Scouting experiences, noting all the details of your Scout Career, the Tests you have passed, the Badges earned, the special Good Turns you do and the Hikes and Camps that you enjoy. Maybe some other Lonie, passing by, will see your Lone Scout sign outside your gate, and drop in for a visit. How interesting it would be to show him your Log, and to enter the details of his visit, obtaining his autograph and perhaps his picture to illustrate the book. And don't forget the pictures, as they make the Log more interesting and you should try to make the whole book read as much like a story as possible.

Later, when you have grown up, you will cherish your Log amongst your most precious possessions.

The Chief Scout, Lord Baden-Powell, possesses Log Books which he has kept for many years, which are full of the adventures of his marvellous career, and which no money would buy him. These are the books which the Chief himself takes special care to place behind safe doors before he goes abroad, and he reckons them amongst his most treasured possessions.

So, Lone Scout, what about a Log Book?

And some Scouts also like to keep a record of another sort.

Did you ever see an Indian Totem Pole? On it, carved into the wood, are many signs and pictures, each with a special meaning, commemorating some special event concerning the tribe, or recording the history of the Indian people.

If you are handy with a chisel, there is a lot of fun ahead of you in the making of a Totem Pole to record your history as a Lone Scout.

Your pole should be about seven and half feet long, with about eighteen inches of this sunk into the ground. If you can do so, tar the end before sinking it, to prevent rot. The Pole should be about eight inches square, and a square pole is preferable to a round one, as it becomes more decorative if the corners are rounded off in some places. And on this pole is recorded all your Scout history, carved into the wood, using pictures in preference to letters and numbers. For instance, Wigwams represent a camp you have attended, Footprints indicate a Hike, your Patrol emblem should be prominent and each of your badges should be reproduced. The use of a little color, Black, Red, Blue, Green, etc., greatly adds to the decorative value of the Totem Pole, and before very long you will find that you have not only a record of your career but also a very handsome garden ornament.

It may be that this article has been read by a boy who is not a Scout, and who would like to be one. If you are living in a place where there is no Scout Troop near enough for you to attend, why not become a Lone Scout, and have lots of fun as the hundreds of other "Lonies" throughout Ontario are doing?

If you are interested, just write a note to The Boy Scouts Association, Lone Scout Department, 330 Bay St., Toronto, telling them why you are not able to join an ordinary Troop, and they will send you full particulars as to how you can become a Lone Scout.

Canadian Wins Skating Trophy

Former Toronto Professional Triumphant in England

London.—With an exhibition of school figure skating which stood out almost in a class by itself, Harold Nicolson, Canada, at the London Ice Club recently carried off the first cup presented by the National Skating Association for international style competition. The event is open to professionals who have practised on British rinks during the season.

Nicolson was placed first by all seven judges, and but for the fact that he had only been in England for a week since his voyage from Canada would undoubtedly have given as perfect an exhibition in free skating as he did in the school figures.

Harold Nicolson is a native of Switzerland who came to Canada some years ago. Last year he acted as professional at the Toronto Granite Rink.

World's Phone Exchange Situated In London

London, with telephonic communication with 95 per cent. of the civilized countries of the world, is regarded as the world's greatest and most complete long-distance telephone exchange. Although the capital is low on the list of percentages of telephone subscribers when compared with populations, the city is already in telephonic communication with 32,000,000 users of all races and this number will be considerably increased when plans for extensions are completed. London is connected with some 24 countries on the European continent and in addition to making British calls to these countries is often kept busy passing calls through to them from the United States and Canada. Moscow, however, remains aloof from telephonic communication with the outside world except Berlin.

Hull Businessmen Have Place of Prayer

Hull has a place of prayer for businessmen. It is in Whitefriargate. Sandwiched between shops, it has a white tiled front. There is a small hall, like the entrance to a modern suite of offices, and a further door admits to the prayer room. This looks something between a board room and a chapel. A small, windowed alcove at the side has a group of chairs for Jewish visitors to the room. A voice is never raised in this dimly-lit room, and no sound comes from the busy street only a few steps away. Men come and go unobserved and unrestricted. The texts are typewritten, and even the rubber mat at the door strikes an efficient note. It is lettered: "Business Men's Prayer Room." The founder is Herbert W. Tate, a glassware and crockery merchant.

Whoever degrades another degrades me, and whatever is said or done returns at last to me.—Walter Whitman.

April Song

Let you and me and this April day,
The three of us, up and be away—
You and me with the young green spring—
Will follow the wild birds' caroling
We will laugh and sing a merry song,
For youth is good and joy is long.

Let you and me and this day of spring
The three of us all go gypsying.

Let you and me and this bright spring day,
The three of us, up and be away—
The brown road beckons the laughing sky
To a rare adventure sweet and high,
Where hide fresh violets new and blue,
And the April day will follow, too.

Let you and me and this day of spring,
The three of us all go gypsying.

—John C. Ritchey.

Stockholm Harbor Traffic in Big Gain

Stockholm—Traffic in the Stockholm Free Harbor has increased nearly 200 per cent. during the past five years, according to the last annual report of the Harbor Administration.

Notwithstanding the economic depression, traffic in the Free Harbor has been active during the past year, with a total of 3469 vessels clearing a total of 1,530,09 net registered tons.

King of Siam Says Adieu to Canada

Monarch Enters United States at Portal, Saskatchewan

Portal, Sask.—Canada said au revoir but not good-bye to His Majesty the King of Siam, first of the world's crowned heads to have visited the Dominion while actually a ruling monarch.

The King, who reached Canada's shores on the record-breaking voyage of the Canadian Pacific S.S. Empress of Japan Thursday night, is hastening to the eastern United States, and, after a 48-hour journey by special train over the Canadian Pacific Railway, was officially welcomed at the border by officials of the United States Government at 11 o'clock Sunday night. He returns to Siam by way of Canada later in the summer and will probably spend some time at Banff, Alberta, on the way to the Pacific Coast.

Official ceremonies were brief, due to the lateness of the hour. His Majesty bade farewell to Canadian officials who have accompanied him from Vancouver. These included: Ernest J. Lemaire, Clerk of the Privy Council of Canada, who met His Majesty at the Pacific Coast in the name of Hon. R. B. Bennett, K.C., Premier of Canada; Brigadier-General E. de Panet, C.M.G., D.S.O., representative of E. W. Beatty, K.C., president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and Inspector T. V. Sandys Wunsch, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Vancouver, who commanded the royal bodyguard on the eastward journey through Canada.

Urges Inter-Provincial Parley on Wheat

Edmonton — Preliminary discussion by leading farm organizations leading to an inter-provincial conference at which ways and means for marketing the 1931 crop would be given earnest consideration was suggested by Premier J. E. Brownlee. This was a timely question for consideration, the Premier believed, and one on which discussions should be held some time before the end of May.

Quake Stops Farmers From Joining Empire Tour

Wellington, New Zealand.—Owing to the financial depression and losses sustained by the disastrous earthquake in the rich Hawkes' Bay area, New Zealand farmers will not participate this year in the Empire Farmers' tour to Great Britain.

Disastrous Fires Take Heavy Toll

Villages Destroyed and Several Deaths Result From Blazes

Milwaukee, Wis.—Several deaths, more than 200 families made homeless, $2,000,000 property damage, one village destroyed and half a dozen others were threatened when forest fires roared through hundreds of square miles of timber lands in Northern Wisconsin and Michigan last week.

Although most of the blazes were brought under some semblance of control after thousands of men fought for 48 hours to check about 100 separate fires, the situation still was regarded as critical.

In Wisconsin, where flames crackled in all of the 11 fire protection districts, the state conservation commission predicted the "most hazardous forest fire situation" in history unless abnormally heavy spring rains were forthcoming immediately.

The fires were equally as serious in the vast vacation lands of the upper Michigan Peninsula, where miles of virgin timber crashed in embers, and in Northern Minnesota, where high winds fanned the flames and sent clouds of dust and smoke rolling over the countryside.

Pungent haze hung over the whole district so heavily that rangers in their tall steel fire towers could not spot new blazes and could not define the limits of the present fires.

Women and children in Wallace, Mich., fled to a clearing in the forests to watch the whole village crash in flames. The men of the town had gone to Ingalls, nearby, to battle a fire there. When they returned they learned that blazing brands from a brush fire had fallen into their own town and wiped it out. Only a school house remained standing. About 150 families lost their homes.

The villages of Lena, Laona, Kennedy, Cuyuga and Swim Creek faced similar fate. Frantic calls for help streaked over rural telephone lines, but in most cases citizens were battling with fires which threatened their own homes.

Trade Shows Decrease of $670,000,000

Ottawa—An unofficial estimate of Canada's trade for the fiscal year, which ended March 31, indicates that when the final figures are published they will show a decline for the 12-month period of something in the neighborhood of about $670,000,000, divided fairly evenly between imports and exports.

For the fiscal year, which ended in March, 1930, the total trade of Canada had a value of $2,392,000,000 in round figures; for the recent fiscal year the value is not expected to exceed $1,723,000,000.

These are made up as follows:

	1930	Estimated 1931
Imports	$1,248,000,000	$ 930,000,000
Exports, domestic.	1,120,000,000	776,000,000
Exports, foreign ..	24,600,000	17,000,000
Total	$2,392,000,000	$1,723,000,000

Manchester Seeks More Enterprises

Manchester, Eng.—The City Council is to be asked to contribute $7500 for three years to the expenses of a Manchester Development Committee, to be formed with the object of encouraging new industrial enterprises.

A public appeal is to be made to business firms and individuals, with the purpose of bringing the funds to an annual minimum of $15,000, of which $3500 a year has already been promised. Business groups have approved the plan prepared for submission to the municipal authorities, and as soon as the necessary minimum guarantee fund has been obtained a committee will be established.

Rio Developing Beaches To Resemble Europe's

Rio De Janeiro.—Rio de Janeiro's beaches are being Europeanized. Stretching for many miles, the clean, white, rockless sand is now to be dotted with colorful bathing booths for those seeking recreation in the blue waters of the Atlantic.

Rio's greatest attraction for tourists is the ocean-washed beach. The city has provided various stretches along the sand in the Copocabana and Ipanema residential districts, about twenty or thirty minutes from the heart of the city, where lifeguards are on duty all day. There are three other regulated bathing posts, one in front of the American Embassy, near the business district, and two others in the Flamengo and Botafogo residential districts.

Falls Tower Looted

Niagara Falls, Ont.—For the second time within a week, and the third this year, burglars visited the observation tower at Falls View. This time the intruders spent considerable time inside, selecting the most valuable articles, and got away with goods valued at around $400. Other visits had netted the thieves little of value.

Highways Crowded But Accidents Few

Thousands of Cars Out Under Influence of Fine Weather

Thousands of motorists were travelling on the highways over the week-end to enjoy the mild air and warm sunshine and many of them spent the time inhaling gasoline fumes from the car ahead. Traffic was the heaviest of the year on all highways but there were no serious accidents and few minor ones.

Provincial and suburban police officers were kept busy throughout the day and evening superintending the endless flow of traffic going in both directions. The Kingston, Dundas and Hamilton highways were black with vehicles all through the day and at night the headlights seemed like fireflies in the distance.

"Lots of traffic but no accidents," was the pleased announcement of police officers Sunday night.

434,000 Toll of Quakes In Last Quarter Century

In the last twenty-five years earthquakes have killed 434,000 people. A list of the principal disasters follow:

August 16, 1906—Chile, Valparaisi; 1,500 lives lost, $100,000,000 property damage.

January 14, 1907—Jamaica, Kingston, earthquake and fire; 1,100 killed, 2,000 injured, $25,400,000 property damage.

December 28, 1908—Italy, Sicily and Calabria, 76,438 lives lost, 95,470 injured, 1,100,000 homeless property damage not estimated.

August 9, 1912—Turkey, 3,000 killed, 6,000 injured.

January 13, 1915—Central Italy, 29,978 killed, 372 communes destroyed.

December 24-31, 1917—Guatemala, Guatemala City, 2,500 killed.

January 3, 1920—Mexico, Orizaba (volcano) district, 2,000 dead, 11 towns affected.

December 16, 1920—China, Kansu Province, 200,000 killed, ten cities destroyed, 300 square miles affected.

May 29, 1923—Persia, Khorassan Province, 4,600 lives lost, six towns and villages destroyed.

September 1, 1923—Japan (Tokio, Yokohama and vicinity), earthquake and fire, 99,331 killed, 102,000 injured, 43,476 missing and 702,495 houses destroyed.

March 7, 1927—Japan, northern part of Kioto prefecture, 3,274 dead, 6,734 injured, $7,000,000 loss.

July 1929—Turkey (northern Anatolia), 1,000 reported killed by earthquake and landslides, 10,000 homeless.

May 5, 1930—Persia (Azerbaijan Province), more than 2,000 killed, 5,000 homeless.

July 23, 1930—Southern Italy, 1,404 dead, 4,551 injured, 85 cities and hamlets damaged or destroyed.

January 16, 1931—Mexico (fourteen states), 106 killed.

February 3, 1931—New Zealand, town of Napier destroyed, 221 killed.

March 31, 1931—Managua, Nicaragua, destroyed, and 1,000 lives lost.

Would Fingerprint Babies of Nation

Washington.—Establishment of a National Bureau of Identification with a staff whose work consist of getting fingerprints of every child born in this country is urged by C. C. Bennett, of the War Department's Bureau of Identification.

Bennett believes fingerprinting is a positive means of identification and establishment of such a bureau would protect rights or heritage, and in the discovery of owners of unclaimed funds, and do away with any "unknown dead."

Bennett said that Argentina now has on record the fingerprints of every person in the country. He said Chile and Brazil were making progress along this line and that students at the University of Havana are taught fingerprinting methods.

He urged establishment of a National Bureau of Identification because fingerprinting "establishes identity under the most adverse circumstances."

Argentine Exports Increase Over 1930

Buenos Aires, Arg.—Argentine exports for the first quarter of 1931 showed an increase in volume but a decrease in value as compared with the same period of 1930, the National Statistical Department announced recently.

The exports were valued at 162,014,000 gold pesos, approximately $113,403,000, as compared with 189,937,000 gold pesos for the first quarter of 1930. That the decrease was due entirely to the lower prices of exports is shown by the fact that the volume increased 1,083,000 tons over 1930.

New York Restricts Miniature Golf

New York—In rules of its own added to the code of miniature golf for the 1931 season, the city of New York includes a ban on courses within 250 feet of a church, hospital or school or anywhere in a residential district. It also declares that children under 16 must not play between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. on school days, or on indoor courses at any time without a guardian. Courses must close at midnight on week days and 11 p.m. on Sundays.

The man who is content with what he is isn't much.

Johnny—Say, Dad, remember the story you told me about the time you were expelled from school?

Dad—Yes.

Johnny—Well, isn't it funny how history repeats itself?

A wife is somebody who remodels funny story as you go along.

Old Boy—I have had my life insured in your name for $10,000. Now, can I do anything, better than that to show my devotion?

Young Wife—No, dear; not as long as you live.

Teacher (questioning class) — What do you call a man who keeps on talking and talking when people are no longer interested?

Boy Pupil—Please, sir, a teacher.

Mrs. Perkinson — Hello, Bobbie. What are you looking for, huh?

Bobbie — Looking for elephants. You got any elephants or giraffes or lions with you?

Mrs. Perkinson—No, not one. I see that you like animals.

Bobbie—Yeah. Got any ponies or anteaters or nuffin' with you?

Mrs. Perkinson — No. Bobbie, of course not. Why do you expect me to carry around such a menagerie with me?

Bobbie—Well, you did the other day.

Mrs. Perkinson—What day? What on earth do you mean?

Bobbie — Well, anyhow, mamma told papa at dinner that she seen you on the street and you looked like a circus.

Little James (on train) — What was the name of the last station we stopped, mother dear?

His Mother—I don't know. Don't bother me. I'm reading a story.

Little James—Well, its too bad you don't know the name, because little brother got off there.

Our idea of a mean husband is one who sends candy to his wife when she's on a rapid reducing diet. Only those who are "indispensible" dare take long vacations, and even they find often that they are not seriously missed. Next to making a profit in business these days, the next hardest job is distributing your income in such a way that your family is happy. "Whales," somebody suggested.

"No," said John, "we were baiting with whales."

Toilers

God give them peace and plenty and bless the homes they keep,
When ends the long day's toiling may restful be their sleep,
May many a joy repay them for all the pains they bear,
And may our nation's workmen in all her glories share.

The toilers at the furnace, the toilers in the field,
Translate their strength in iron or in the harvest yield.
In bricks the mason sings us the poems of his clan,
And every door and archway proclaim the working man.

A few there are who toil not and have no bouts with care;
They walk the realm of pleasure to end with boredom there,
But all the nation's workers with duty spend their years,
And earn their right to laughter whenever mirth appears.

God bless the nation's toilers and let their dreams come true,
May happiness reward them for all the tasks they do.
May blossoms deck their gardens and love their homes maintain,
And pride's sweet satisfaction make worthwhile every pain.

The Wheat Crisis

London Daily Herald (Lab.): It has been rather lightly taken for granted that the main reason for the crisis in the wheat industry is that the world as a whole is now producing more wheat than it needs. The Italian Premier suggests that the explanation is that the improvement in the standard of living at the end of the war has caused people who were mainly living on bread before to turn to other and more expensive foods. We doubt this. The crisis did not come in those years. It has come at a time when the standard of living is being depressed everywhere. Lack of purchasing power—largely due to gold shortage— has affected the consumption of wheat as of other commodities. Surely the common-sense thing is to bring purchasing power up to a point at which it can absorb production, not to cut production down to the limits of an artificially-restricted purchasing power.

TUNNEL SAVE TOTS

Los Angeles—The construction of 60 tunnels at a cost of $12,720,000 is considered here to enable school children to cross streets in the neighborhood of their schools in safety.

Don't Forget to Call

Jack Clark had secured temporary work with the Wainwright Construction Company. It meant leaving home, but both Mother and son realized how difficult it was to get a job, and when the chance came, Jack took it.

"Don't forget to call me on the telephone often, Jack," said his Mother. "You know how anxious I will be."

"You need not worry, Mother. I went over to the Bell Telephone office when I got word about the job and they told me I could call you from the telephone in the Construction Camp and have the charges made on our own telephone bill each month."

"You think of everything, Jack," exclaimed his Mother.

"Far from it, Mother, but you know how Dad insisted that I always keep you and him posted by telephone if I could not be home just at the time promised. Well, I have what they call the Telephone Habit."

Canadian Industry Best in World

France Now Feeling Depression Which Holds Europe and East

Toronto.—"There is no place in the world better off than Canada," declared L. Babayan of Toronto, who has just completed a twelve-week tour of the Orient and Europe. He further commented:

"In Europe every country has been suffering from depression. France, one of the most favored nations in Europe, has now begun to feel the pangs of depression that has caused so much distress in places like Italy and in Germany. Factories are closing in France as they are in Italy, and business is good.

"I came into personal contact with a number of Soviet Russian agents," said Mr. Babayan. "They are all agreed on one thing—that is, to flood every country they can with their goods. They have a particular desire to swamp England first. Englishmen will wake up to the real condition that confronts them, just as Canada has. Chocolates are being brought into London, England, at 8 cents a pound and sold retail for 16 cents a pound against the home product selling at about one dollar a pound. That condition cannot last with any benefit to the British people.

"I had the pleasure of a personal invitation to attend the reception and ball given by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson to the new Governor-General prior to his leaving England. Mr. Ferguson has the right idea, and as a result of his efforts there has been a substantial movement of Canadian wheat," said Mr. Babayan.

Jasper Park "Haymaker"

One of the interesting and curious little animals that inhabit Jasper National Park in Alberta, is the pika. It is about the size of a Guinea pig, with rounded ears, short legs and no visible tail. It can often be seen running rabbit-like across the boulders. Another name for the pika is "the haymaker" from his habit of storing away dried grasses and plants for his winter food. Sometimes under an overhanging rock there will be found his miniature haystack, a bundle containing perhaps a bushel of well cured vegetation, which includes apparently specimens of every plant in the neighborhood.

"You appreciate play twice as much when you have earned it with work."

Song of the Unafraid

There may be mists and fog about,
There may be sudden turns — and doubt—
There may be ghosts who stand at bay
Where shadows shut the stars away;
But this enlivens life's romance
For those who like a sporting chance,
Quite willing at to-morrow's sun
To face whatever Fate has spun.

The fairway beckons green and straight,
But still the pits and bunkers wait,
And no one knows just where the ball
Upon its upward flight may fall,
And who would care an awful lot,
When time permits another shot,
With surer grip and firmer stance,
To gamble of the sporting chance.

The harbour flames with shining sails,
But just beyond the roaring gales
Call to the bolder, braver crew
Who dare to see the journey through;
Who know that life is something more
Than dreaming on a sunlit shore;
Where they shall find through storm and flame
The thrill and glory of the game,
To gamble on the sporting chance.

LOSE YOUR FAT
This sensible way

Start taking Kruschen Salts—that's the common-sense way to reduce—but don't take them with the idea that they possess reducing qualities in themselves.

This is what they do—they clean out the impurities in your blood by keeping the bowels, kidneys and liver in splendid working shape and fill you with a vigor and tireless energy you'd almost forgotten had existed—you get the needful exercise.

As a result instead of planting yourself in an easy chair every free moment and letting flabby fat accumulate you feel an urge for activity that keeps you moving around doing the things you've always wanted to do and needed to do to keep you in good condition.

Kruschen Salts are the up-to-date Fountain of Youth. Take one-half teaspoon in a glass of hot water to-morrow morning and every morning—be careful of the foods you eat—take regular moderate exercise—then watch the pounds slide off.

Restless CHILDREN

CHILDREN will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper: mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than a more powerful medicine.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is need. In cases of colic, diarrhea or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. A coated tongue calls for just a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed.

Too much ACID

...ny people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms, such as headaches, gas, heartburn, etc., will disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief. Please do that—for your own sake—now.

Be sure to get the genuine, prescribed by doctors for conditions due to excess acid. Look for the name Phillips' and the word genuine in red

Castoria made especially for CHILDREN

CHILDREN usually hate to take medicine but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And mothers like its action—so gentle, yet so prompt and effective.

Castoria is a never-failing comfort to children and mothers alike because it was formulated expressly for children—to correct their little ills and upsets.

The beauty of it is you can give Castoria to children of all ages with equally safe results. When baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed; and free from pain, he is asleep again in a jiffy.

In an older child when coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, a more liberal dose is usually all that is needed to cleanse and regulate the bowels.

Your doctor will tell you Castoria deserves a place in the family medicine cabinet until your children are grown. He knows it is safe for the tiniest baby; effective for a child in his teens.

Look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, printed on the wrapper.

PEEL MUSIC FESTIVAL

Bigger Than Ever—100 More Entries Than Last Year

250 entries have been received by the Secretary for the Musical Festival. Last year there were 125 entries with 830 people taking part, but the figures this year are much higher, showing that the Festival is a growing event and that increased interest is being shown. In classes open to the Province, entries have been received from Fergus and in the County Competition from as far north as Alton. Thirty shields have been donated, 4 trophies, 17 medals and 8 cash donations. These figures are outstanding and are very gratifying to the committee in charge. Four shields which were to be won three years in succession will be competed for again this year. The Hohner trophy given for the best Harmonica band is now held by Central school in Brampton. The S. Charters Shield is being held at present by S.S. 8, Toronto. The M. R. Fydell shield by S.S. 15, Toronto, and the Col. Hon. T. L. Kennedy shield by McHugh school, Brampton. These are being called in and will be presented again.

Twenty new classes were added to the Syllabus this year and nearly all the classes are well filled. At present one class alone is standing with 22 entries. This shows that competitions will be keen. Elimination Contests will take place at Port Credit on May 8th, and finals on May 9th. Presentations will be made at the Final Competition and the prize winners are expected to compete.

Adjudicators from Toronto will be present. Mr. Chas. Peaker, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., and Mr. G. D. Atkinson will be in charge of the music, while Miss Clarice Spencer will look after the Elocution Pupils taking part in the competition will be admitted to the building free of charge, while 50c entry fee will be charged to all adults on final night; admission at all other times free. It is hoped that Clarke Memorial Hall will be filled on the dates mentioned in order to encourage the splendid work that is being done by the Juniors and others taking part in the competition.

ISLINGTON

ISLINGTON BARBECUES COME UNDER FIRE OF BIG DEPUTATION

(From The Globe)

Islington, April 20.—The new Municipal Chambers at Islington were filled to their capacity this evening when a deputation of nearly 200 persons waited on the Etobicoke Township Council to voice disapproval of certain roadside barbecues on the Bloor Street extension.

The deputation was headed by Rev. J. H. Wells of the Islington United Church; R. H. Tier of St. George's Anglican Church; J. H. Beamish of Islington Presbyterian Church; Mrs. A. Proctor, representing the St. George's Society of Islington, and comprised representatives from the local business men and merchants, Young People's Societies and other social and church organizations.

The speakers were strong in their condemnation of the barbecues, which, for the most part, it was claimed, were patronized by young men and young women from Toronto in the early hours of the morning. One of the deputation told the Council that he had recently counted over fifty cars parked outside two of these barbecues in a single night.

As an alternative to closing the places, the Council was asked to enforce nightly closing at 12 midnight, and Reeve Robert Marshall promised that the whole matter would be given early and careful consideration.

"We, are keeping a very watchful eye on all these places, east and west of the city," stated Inspector A. R. Elliott, under whose direction the "flying squad" of the Provincial Police has been operating for some months. He told The Globe that the barbecues protested were not operating under any license, either from the Province or the municipality of Etobicoke. No complaints had been received of late, but nevertheless the places were being closely watched.

Rev. J. H. Wells, a member of the deputation, speaking to The Globe, said that the two barbecues brought to the Council's attention were operated as night clubs, and patronized by what he described as the "riffraff of Toronto." Dancing was carried on at all hours, and in general the tone of the places was immoral and debasing. He thought that by forcing them to close at midnight the menace would be greatly reduced.

Here are a few of the uses of Gyproc

GYPROC fireproof wallboard is manufactured from gypsum rock. It comes in sheets that are 4 to 10 feet long, 4 feet wide and ⅜ of an inch thick. It costs little, nails and cuts like lumber, has structural strength and insulation value. It is Canada's premier material for lining all interior walls, ceilings and partitions. Ask your dealer for a Gyproc direction sheet, it gives full details.

Streetsville Juniors

The Streetsville Juniors held their annual meeting this week, when addresses were made by Miss Alma Wise, Mr. J. G. Shearer and Rev. W. T. McCree, the later being presented with a $5 gold piece as a token of appreciation for his assistance in the past year, the presentation being made by Mr. Jack Drennan.

Following officers were elected—President, Beatrice Quennell; Vice Presidents, Alex Wallace and Winnie Carter; sec.-treas. Dorothy Graydon; Social committee, Ruth Ross, Jim Steen, Tom Adamson,; pianists, Dorothy Graydon and Violet Bowie. Representative to public speaking competition, Ruth Ross.

Choir Concert

The old fashioned sociable and concert held under auspices of the United Church Choir was very successful in every way. There was a good attendance and all present entered into the spirit of the evening and threw themselves heartily into the games and contests. Then the Pastor, Rev. G. H. Purchase, introduced the President of the Choir, who took charge of the program. This consisted of choruses by the Choir, songs by Mrs. Harry Burton, Miss Alice Steen, Little Brenda Redick, Mr. Root, and Mr. Joseph Fulton; duets by Messrs. Fulton and Root: readings by Mrs. C. P. McArthur, Mrs. Clarence Stewart, Miss Ruth Ross, Brenda Redick and Mr. J. Spears: a saxaphone solo by Mr. Roy Elderfield; a piano solo by Mr. Len Pope: and a piano duet by Mrs. W. Atkinson and Mr. Pope. A tasty lunch was served and all dispersed well satisfied with the evening's entertainment. The proceeds go towards buying copies of the new Hymnary for use of the Choir.

A Useful Life

(From The Exponent, Grandview, Man., April 9th, 1931)

JAMES B. GRAHAM

Born July 18th, 1840, at County Down, Ireland, came with his parents to Canada in 1847, who settled at Streetsville, Ont., twenty-two miles west of Toronto.

He received his education at the Grammar School at that village and in 1857, began his apprenticeship as a printer on the Streetsville Review, then owned by Solomon Barnhart. He afterwards worked on the following publications: Milton Champion, Hamilton Advertiser, Fergus News Record, Uxbridge Journal, (Proprietor) Owen Sound Comet, Mt. Forest Express, Bowmanville Statesman, Qu'Appelle Progress, Bradon Mail, Brandon Sun, Paris Star, Melita Enterprise, (Prop. in conjunction with his son) Carnduff Gazzette (in conjunction with his sons) Hull Advance and Grandview Exponent.

Mr. Graham became a member of Streetsville Brass Band in 1862, and has played in Bands for sixty-nine years and is still on the job in Grandview. The past winter has been the first that he has not indulged in the pleasure of skating. He became a member of Zeredatha Lodge, No. 220 at Uxbridge, Ontario in 1871, and is probably the oldest Canadian made Mason.

BY-LAW NO. 698

A by-law to regulate the keeping and harbouring of dogs in the Village of Streetsville.

Whereas it is deemed expedient to regulate the keeping and harbouring of dogs in the Village of Streetsville.

Now therefore the Corporation of the Village of Streetsville by the Council theretof enacts as follows:

1. The assessors shall enter upon the assessment roll opposite the name of every person assessed the number of dogs, female dogs and spayed dogs respectively for which he is liable to be taxed.

2. The amounts hereinafter set forth as dog tax levies shall be entered upon the tax roll and shall be collected in the same manner as the Municipal taxes and said tax shall be due and collectable with the first instalment.

3. When the tax is demanded and is not paid, then person assessed may be summoned before a Police Magistrate who may direct the dog to be destroyed unless the tax and costs shall be paid within 10 days after the due date of the tax. For the purpose of carrying out such order the Constable may enter upon the premises of the owner and destroy the dog.

4. Any person when so required by the assessor shall forthwith deliver to him a statement in writing of the number of dogs owned by him or which are habitually kept upon the premises for which he is assessed by whomsoever owned.

5. Every person shall on or before the first day of February in each year procure from the Clerk or Treasurer or assessor, a tag for each dog owned or harboured by him and shall keep the tag securely fixed on the dog at all times during the year and until he procures a tag for the following year, provided, however, that the tag may be removed while the dog is being lawfully used for hunting in the bush. The fee for the said tag shall be 25c.

6. Every owner of a dog who neglects to obtain a tag and keep it securely fixed on his dog or who uses the tag upon a dog other than that for which it was issued shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding $10.00.

7. Every dog which is found off the premises upon which it is habitually kept without a tag and not under the control of any person by means of a leash may be killed.

8. Where an owner of a dog applies to the Clerk for a tag after the assessment roll has been returned and before the collector's roll has been delivered to the collector and the Clerk finds that such owner has not been assessed for the dog, the Clerk shall make the necessary entries in the roll, but where owner acquired ownership of the dog after the expiration of 6 months of the year he shall only be charged with one-half of the dog tax.

9. The owner or harbourer of any dog shall keep the said dog tied up on his premises during the months of April, May, June, July, August, September and October, provided however, that the dog may be taken upon the street by the owner or any person he may authorize, if under control by means of a leash.

10. The following levies are hereby imposed for the keeping and harbouring of dogs: male dogs $5.00; female $8.00; Spayed female $5.00.

10A. The owners of a kennel of pure bred dogs registered in the Canadian Kennel Club shall pay an annual tax of $10.00 to the Treasurer of the Municipality, and he shall not be liable for any further tax on such pure bred dogs.

11. It shall be the duty of the Chief Constable to enforce the clauses set forth in this By-law and where the Constable or his deputy or any person he may see fit to appoint, finds a dog running at large during the months of April, May, June, July, August, September and October either with or without a tag he shall take the dog or cause it to be taken in charge. He shall then make every endeavour to ascertain the owner of the dog and shall notify him and in case the dog is not removed within 96 hours it shall be the duty of the Chief Constable or his deputy or any person he may see fit to appoint to see that the dog is fed and watered during this period and to destroy the dog in a humane manner and the owner shall be required to pay any costs arising from the destroying of the dog provided, however that such costs shall not be more than $2.00. If the dog is released within the 96 hours a pound fee of $2.00 shall be charged.

12. Any person convicted of the breach of any of the provisions of this By-law shall be liable upon summary conviction before a Justice of Peace or a Magistrate to a fine not exceeding $50.00 for each offense exclusive of costs and in default of payment forthwith the said penalty and costs or the costs only may be levied by distress and sale of goods and chattels of the offender and in case there being no distress to be found, out of which such penalty can be levied the convicting Justice of Peace or Magistrate may commit the offender to the common jail of the County of Peel with or without hard labour for any period not exceeding 21 days unless the penalty and costs are sooner paid.

This By-law shall take full force and effect over any previous By-laws passed by any previous Council of the Village of Streetsville.

Passed in open Council this 8th day of April, 1931.

H. W. HOPE, Reeve.
S. H. SMITH, Clerk.

The Village Sanitary Inspector is giving citizens notice to clean up their premises before May 1st and put them in proper sanitary condition. The majority will do this because of a sense of cleanliness and tidiness, others have to be forced to do it. Let everybody get busy and clean up so that when visitors come to town they will admire the place. People are often judged by the kind of a house they live in and by the appearance of the surroundings. How about yours. Are you satisfied ? If not, clean it up, and plant some flowers. Yes, and paint up, too.

Joseph Phair

After a short illness, Mr. Joseph Phair passed away at his home here early Tuesday morning. He was born in Streetsville, a son of the late Robert Phair, of Alpha Mills north of this village, and had lived here all his life, 70 years. Forty four years ago he was married to Miss Sarah Jane Kirby, who survives him besides one daughter, Mrs. Hugh Burns, and four grand children. He was a carpenter bytrade, was foreman for the late John Graydon, builder and contractor, for several years and later purchased the business. He had been living retired for some time. He was an Anglican and a Conservative. The funeral took place this Thursday afternoon. Service was conducted at Trinity Church by the Rev. R.J.W. Perry, and interment was made in Streetsville cemetery.

Deceased was the last of a family of three boys and one girl.

APRIL ESCAPADE

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Kate O'Hara, daughter of the Widow O'Hara, foolishly accepts a proposition of Christopher Steynes in order to get the money to give her brother Mart his chance. She plays the part of Steynes' wife at a reception, in order to discourage the attentions of a Russian countess to Steynes. Mart, in order to protect her, breaks into Steynes' house at night and is shot by Steynes. On her return home Mary discovers that she is in love with Steynes. She tells this to Cass Keating to whom she is engaged.

Mart, Mary, Keating and Steynes meet at the O'Hara home to discuss the situation, and Mrs. O'Hara walks in on them. Mart tells his mother about the affair, and after Mary says she is innocent of any wrong-doing, Mrs. O'Hara takes her in her arms and says she believes her. Only Mart cannot be reconciled.

Here was the dapper and modern and successful Cass Keating devotedly championing Mary Kate, and here was haggard, wounded, angry, passionate Mart ready to kill anyone and everybody who dared impugn the honor of the O'Hara's, and here was her slender, tall, brilliant miracle of a girl, crying her loving, impulsive, misguided little heart out, in her mother's arms. And with all these she knew how to deal.

There was only one troublesome foreign element in the kitchen tonight, and Mrs. O'Hara proposed to get rid of it as rapidly as she could. This well-dressed, self-possessed young man, Mr. Steynes, who had all that assurance and confidence that is the heritage of the rich man's son, was throwing the whole situation out of key.

"Maybe," Mrs. O'Hara began, as a first step toward dismissing him, "maybe we've been making much ado about nothing, Mart. Anyway, all's well that ends well."

Unaware of the classic source of her simple phrases, she managed to give them a force of her own. Mart was still scowling.

"It isn't 'nothing' that Mary Kate had to be questioned by the police!"

"That could have happened to any witness—you fool!"

Chris did not say the last words aloud, but they were there, none the less.

Mary Kate, now secure in her one sure fortress, looked resentfully over her shoulder at her brother with tear-wet eyes.

"I wouldn't care if I was in jail!" she exclaimed, "as long as I hadn't done anything wrong."

She buried her head against her mother's neck again, sure of the maternal aproval, which was indeed bestowed by a pat.

"I only want to say," Christopher began, with an air of closing the discussion, "that, since Mr. O'Hara here wants to go to Germany with Doctor van Antwerp, it would give me tremendous pleasure to feel that I had—I had, indirectly, helped him to do it."

"It's a pleasure you never will have!" Martin assured him, rudely.

"I don't know that I could spare him, with Mary Kate marri'd," Mrs. O'Hara said mildly. "But if other matters could be adjusted, indeed I'd see no reason that Mart shouldn't have his chance. Mary Kate did nothing wrong, and it would be a pity that all her lovin' effort to help her brother should be thrown away."

This statement, somewhat hesitatingly made, as the speaker felt her way, and sought out her words, produced a profound impression upon them all. Chris was the first to speak, and there was genuine feeling, there was even a trace of huskiness in his voice.

"I'm glad you feel that way, Mrs. O'Hara," he said simply.

Perhaps Martin, who was but twenty-two, after all, and whose own hopes and dreams were close to his heart, had had, while they spoke, time for a swift vision of a great ship, a foreign city, the piers and the gray stone buildings of Hamburg, the thought of himself, in close attendance upon the famous old surgeon who was his friend, the mirage of strange surgeries, a strange language, a young Irish-American listening, looking, learning all the thousand things that O'Farrell Street never could give Martin O'Hara.

At all events, his expression, his tone, had changed, when he said, with a little difficult, boyish dignity.

"To borrow money from—anyone that would lend it would be one thing. But I'd never want her to feel that she took the chance she took to help me!"

"If we believe that everything was all right then we have to act as if everything was all right, Mart," his mother observed, with that quiet and dispassionate glance from her faded gray eyes that was more forceful than the snap of a whip to her children.

"I don't think he should have done it," Mart muttered, stubbornly.

"I know that!" Chris himself answered sharply. "You don't think I'm proud of myself, do you?"

Mary Kate's tears had by this time dried and she was now twisted about in her mother's lap listening. Her cheeks were still flushed and the silky mop of her copper-wire hair enchantingly disordered; her blue eyes were dark and shining under their wet lashes. Except for these long lashes, stuck into little points by tears, all the traces of the late storm had vanished. As quickly as a baby she had recovered; the straight little nose Christopher had thought one of the prettiest things about her, when she had worn the ivory satin gown last week, was white again, the usual soft bloom was outlined, in the lamplight like a pollen, on the shapely, finely cut temples and cheek-bones.

"Ma, I'd—I'd take care of you, if Mart and Mary Kate were gone!" Tom offered now, hoarsely and awkwardly. "I'd get a job, maybe down at Mills Field—"

They all laughed, and he subsided into silence again, his cheeks blazing. That is, they all laughed except Mrs. O'Hara, who gave this dearest problem of them all a glance that said that his mother perfectly appreciated the value of his suggestion, and would trust herself to his protection with perfect confidence.

"Will you keep that cheque until mother and brother have had time to think it over, Mary?" Chris asked them, humbly.

For answer the girl looked at her mother, whose eyes were only a few inches from her own.

"Suppose we leave it like that," said Mrs. O'Hara.

"Then there's just one more thing," Chris recommenced, with a brief nod. He turned toward Martin. "You telephoned me today, and asked me to come out here tonight, didn't you?" he asked.

Martin nodded in his turn, his eyes a little puzzled and still faintly hostile.

"What did you want of me?" Chris continued.

The other hesitated, and then said, uncertainly:

"I wanted to—talk to you."

"You wanted to talk to me when you came to my house on Friday night, didn't you?" Christopher asked mildly.

Martin was silent, his eyes held by Chris' eyes.

"You wanted to make me do something, didn't you?" Chris pursued.

"I thought you had—harmed Molly," Martin admitted slowly.

"You don't think so now, do you?"

The boy's eyes moved slowly to his sister's face. He cleared his throat.

"No, I don't think so now."

"You were going to make me ask her to marry me, weren't you?" Chris said. Mary Kate's color rushed up like a blown flag; Cass, lighting a fourth cigarette, halted halfway.

"I suppose so," Martin admitted sternly.

"Why, you know so! You all but said so, today." Chris reminded him. "Well—" Martin said.

Chris looked suddenly young, and tired, and boyishly stubborn, in the mellow lamplight. There were circles about his eyes; he shook his heavy mop of hair backward patiently.

"I do ask you to marry me, Mary," he said, steadily. "I realize that—that I had no right to—

"Anyway, I wish you would."

A dead silence. Then Chris repeated, rather flatly:

"I wish you would."

CHAPTER XXXIX.

The color had drained from Mary Kate's face, and she looked young, too, with her pale cheeks and dilated dark blue eyes, and her soft tumble of hair, as she sat on her mother's lap, one slender arm still lying about her mother's neck.

"Oh, thank you, Chris," she said, very faintly. "But—but—" She stopped short. "But thank you very much!"

And she looked at her mother in perplexity, like a child who is about to cry.

"Since I came here tonight," Chris said, "I've come to realize what—what your family means to you, and what you mean to them—

"I don't believe I have much to offer you. Money, of course—"

Another silence.

"Money," Mrs. O'Hara pronounced superbly, ending it, "buys very little."

And suddenly they were all in a gale of laugher. Martin laughed, Cass laughed, and Mary Kate laughed almost hysterically. Even Chris laughed, caught by the contagion of their mirth.

"Ma, you are priceless!" said Mary Kate.

The atmosphere cleared. She and Cass and Chris were all on their feet. Mary Kate looked herself in a little mirror by the sink, and made a few quick adjustments of collar and hair, and Cass held Chris' coat for him. Martin, his wounded arm strapped over his breast, watched them from his chair, and Mrs. O'Hara, fallen into deep thought with the amazing easiness of her mystical race, continued to occupy the shabby old piece of furniture known for many years as "Ma's rocker," her eyes narrowed thoughtfully, her full, disciplined, patient mouth slightly pursed.

Chris, overcoated, hat and big creamy gloves in hand, went over to Mart.

"Good-bye, and good luck!" he said. "I hope—I hope you'll decide for Germany."

'Thank you," Mart said, gruffly, but in a friendly manner too. "I'm sorry if I blew up.

Trinidad Island May Yield Precious Helium

Port of Spain, Trinidad, B.W.I.—Does helium gas exist in Trinidad? This is a question of exceptional interest to the people of the Island, and the findings of the Government analyst are being watched very anxiously, as if helium gas is found in Trinidad it will mean a great aid for the colony in its present industrial depression, and Trinidad will have another distinction to add to that of being the "largest oil producer in the British Empire."

Experiments have been started on a Trinidad oilfield by an investigator whose work along these lines previously inspired the hope of obtaining the gas in appreciable quantities. At the same time it is understood that the Mines Department is directing a series of tests. The search for this commercial product which all aviation countries are on the look out for has previously engaged the attention of the Trinidad Government. Certain analyses for this gas were made some time ago, but did not prove a success.

The R-101 disaster has called attention to the need of finding sources of helium supply within the Empire, although the United States has since relaxed its restrictions on the export of this gas. Helium not being inflammable, its use in airships removes the risk of explosion which is a real one in some cases of emergency, although under normal conditions it may be negligible.

Raw cotton now costs about 2 cents per pound less than the average price before the war.

Liverpool to Become World Corn Centre?

Liverpool is to become the capital of the world's corn trade. Such is the confident prediction of corn merchants on Merseytide. The policy of interference with private trading by the United States Farm Board is said to be adversely affecting Chicago, which has hitherto held the dominant position in the world's corn market. Speculation and hedging have been driven into the Liverpool market. "Liverpool is in the happy position of being the only free market in the world, and we are the world's barometer in wheat prices," a Liverpool leading corn merchant believes.

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

What came before: Landing his plane near the Chinese war zone, Captain Jimmy takes three enemy prisoners away from their cruel captors. In the confusion that follows, he knocks out the Chinese Colonel by mistake.

After the Colonel recovered, I told the interpreter to tell him I had orders to take the three unfortunate enemy prisoners back to General Lu, who was a personal friend of mine.

"Colonel say," answered the interpreter. "He personal friend of Christopher Columbus, too, Ha! Ha!"

Then I showed my pass. The Colonel glanced at it in embarrassment. He could not read a line. After some protesting, he consented to let me have the prisoners, but would not lend a hand to help. We were spoiling his fun, and we knew that if he could upset our plans without openly stopping General Lu's orders, he would gladly do it.

So after dark we quietly stole out of the house with our prisoners—but as we came near the plane, shadowy, sinister figures moved about.

Cautiously we crept along the ground toward the plane. The darkness covered us, and not a soul dreamed we were anywhere near. The Chinese whispered among themselves in subdued tones.

"What do they say?" I asked the interpreter.

"Big China boy say getee big rock, brakee whirlee stick."

So they were going to break the propeller.

"What else?" I asked.

"Little China boy say big China boy fullee soup. Getee big rock, brakee wing."

That was enough for me. Feeling around in the dark, I found a big rock about half the size of a man's head. Swinging it back, I tossed it into the air, so it came down in the middle of the crowd.

There was a howl of pain, and then, such a time! Each one accused the other of hitting him, and in no time at all they were all at it, hammer and tongs. This gave me my chance, and I crept up toward the cockpit of my plane. A few feet more, and I could make out the dim shape of someone sitting there—keeping watch!

I gathered myself for a spring. The fight was about over up front and any noise would be quickly noticed, so, throwing caution to the winds, I jumped for that Chinese in the plane.

He turned with a blood curdling yell just as I hit him on the head. Not bothering to see what happened, I leaned over him into the cockpit; fired my gun just as I switched on my searchlight. The result was electrical. The mob started to rush back to the cockpit, when suddenly, with a bang the light flashed full in their faces.

Startled, they stood perfectly still for an instant—then broke and ran. So far, so good! I whistled shrilly. There was a commotion in the field—Scottie was driving the prisoners in and making them step.

"You China boys hold wing so," I told them, showing them how to do it. I gave the propeller a whirl. "Climb in" I yelled, and we started.

Soldiers were running from camp to cut us off. Crack! went a rifle and a bullet sped by. Crack! went another and another. Up the road we came, gathering speed. Another thirty seconds and we were lifting, while the Chinese soldiers banged away until we were out of range.

Have you ever felt that something was wrong, and didn't know what? Have you ever sensed that someone was about to grab you but you couldn't see him? That was just the way I felt now. Someone was about to jump on me. Instinctively I turned my head — and looked right into the eyes of one of the most vicious, blood-thirsty faces I ever saw. It was the man I found in the plane. His arm was raised, and dimly I could see the glitter of the long, thin knife-blade he held. Through my mind flashed the thought "Well, it's all over now."

Bank of England Plans To Put World to Work

London.—A Bank of England plan for international financing to make money available for investments in countries needing relief will be taken up shortly by the directorate of the bank for International Settlement at Basle.

It was learned that the plan, which provides for an international league of bankers, financiers and businessmen to co-operate in the directing of money needed in countries when rehabilitation is necessary, already has been discussed in Paris and Berlin and was personally explained to United States authorities by Montagu Norman in his conference in New York and Washington.

The Manchester Guardian said it understood the plan was designed to get the world "back to work," especially providing for financing in Germany, eastern European countries, Australia, the Argentina and Brazil.

Such projects would be under the direction of an international company which possibly would be capitalized at $100,000,000. It would arrange long-term loans to revive trade.

The plan has been kept strictly secret in the past, and has been called the Norman plan after the Governor of the Bank of England. It was understood, however, that Sir Robert Kindersley and Sir Charles Addis shared in formulation of the project.

A Unique Summer House

The summer house need not be of elaborate design or of great expense. Indeed the simpler the building the cooler and more enjoyable it will be. A boy at home could easily make the kind described.

Secure posts by thinning out the tops of willow trees. Then trim and cut to proper length, and set in eight holes, three feet apart, forming an octagonal shaped upright foundation on which a pyramid top can be built.

To the top and upper parts of the sides short strips should be nailed to form simple designs finishing off at the top with some decoration.

Within the summer house, at suitable height, a seat should be built consisting of short strips of branches halved.

Quite often the willow posts will send out shoots which extend from the top in all directions. They continue to grow and by interlacing form a natural and attractive roof for the summer house.

Twilight Hour Story—About Chicks and Other Little Friends.

Chapter 9

It was getting pretty cold outside now. In fact it was just about time for Thanksgiving Day. That is a nice time in the year, isn't it? Do you remember last Thanksgiving, when the big juicy grapes were ripe and the apples all rosy and sweet? In fact it is the time when everybody gets ready for winter, isn't it? All the good things to eat which took all summer long to grow are ripe then, and are brought inside the house or the barn or the cellar, somewhere so Jack Frost can't get a hold of them. Then all winter long everybody and you and I and little Jack Horner and Dolly Dimples will have all we want to eat even though there is ice and snow outside and everything frozen up hard. Then enough is put away for the animals too. That is for the animals who live with us. Let me see what animals do live with us. Well, on the farms what kinds are out in the big warm barns? Of course the barns are not as warm as our houses because, you must remember, animals have fur or feathers, so they don't want it so warm. Well, in those barns, if you look all over you'll see great piles and piles of hay, and it is lots of fun to play in it too, isn't it? Then there are great big boxes of oats and wheat and everything that animals like and the animals are the horses and cows and pigs and chickens. Oh, a single house full of chickens grow big and fat and lay lots of eggs for Mamma Lady and Daddy and Billy. Of course, the little boys and girls who live in the city or town haven't got a barn, very likely, so they just have a kitty or a dog who like to snooze in front of the warm fireplace.

But in our story it is nearly Thanksgiving Day, and Thanksgiving Day comes because we have so much to be thankful for, don't you think? I'm sure mother can think of many other things too, which you will want to be thankful for besides all these good things to eat, won't she? We only need to think a little and find that the world is just full of wonderful things.

Do you remember what you had for Thanksgiving dinner? It's just awfully good when we have roast chicken or turkey, isn't it? I guess most people have roast chicken on that day, don't they? It must take a great many chickens to feed everybody. And do you know, little girls and boys, the chickens don't mind after they grow up if they are used for chicken roast. No, they don't. In fact, that is why a lot of them were born. So they just have a good time while they are here, and they can have such a good time if we take good care of them, feeding and watering them and keeping their little houses clean and giving them a nice bed while they are here. Then they give us their good bodies, all fat and sleek, and —puff—just as easy as that, they are gone, leaving behind them good chicken roasts, and then another little chick comes to take its place.

Well, this Thanksgiving Day Billy went to his auntie's in the city for a while. He had a good time there too, I can tell you. She took him to some fine picture shows and showed him the store windows all lit up so brilliantly and full of such beautiful things. You see, Billy's home was in the country and this was all new to him. So he enjoyed it immensely. But after a while he began to think about Rover and Fluffy, and he wondered how Jimmie Chick and three little chicks that looked so much alike were getting along and oh, he was getting homesick to see his Mamma and Daddy, so when the two weeks were over they all got in Uncle Will's car and off they started to bring Billy home. So next you'll hear about what happened when Billy got home again.

Sweets Induce Early Rising

Saratoga Springs.—That there is as much truth as poetry in the expression "sweet sleep" is shown, we are told in a bulletin issued by the Colgate University Press Bureau, by the record of an inter-collegiate slumber contest recently conducted between men students at that University and girl students at Skidmore College in Saratoga Springs.

The contest, conducted on a scientific basis jointly by Dr. Donald A. Laird, director of Colgate's department of psychology, and Dr. Linus W. Kline, Skidmore psychologist, ended in a walkaway for the girls, and indicated that the most restful and refreshing sleep was the reward of those who went in for diets rich in sweets and other carbohydrates. We read:

Furthermore, the sweet-eating girls were said to be much sweeter and prompter about rising in the morning than the Colgate men and their sister students who went in for more ascetic eating. Most of the young men at Colgate had to be called at least twice before they could be aroused from their slumbers. The Skidmore girls bounded out of their beds at the first note of the alarm clock.

Each of the 136 Skidmore students and 140 Colgate students who participated in the experiment reported daily over a period of two weeks on 225 items of data which had to do with their mode of living, their emotional states, and their reactions to physical exertion.

A classification of this data showed that the two contestants having perfect sleep scores were girls who consumed the largest quantities of sweets. It also showed that the girl students in general slept about 15 per cent. better than men students.

May 3. Lesson V.—Jesus In The Home of Zacchaeus—Luke 19: 1-10. Golden Text—The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.—Luke 19: 10.

ANALYSIS.

I. JESUS IN THE HOME OF ZACCHAEUS, 19: 1-7.

II. ZACCHAEUS REPENTS AND REFORMS, 19: 8-10.

I. JESUS IN THE HOME OF ZACCHAEUS, 19: 1-7.

Jericho was a very rich and very famous city. It had many times been destroyed and had as often arisen from the dust. The site of the city in the time of Christ seems to have been some six miles west of the Jordan River and six miles north of the Dead Sea. It was a rich city for two reasons, first because there are but two places where the Jordan can be crossed, one here, one further north by the plain of Esdraelon. A very large amount of merchandise, therefore, passed inevitably through Jericho. In the second place, the city was situated in a veritable little paradise. It was called the city of palms. Here, too, were famous rose gardens and fragrant balsam plantations. Jericho was therefore known as "the sweet smelling." It follows that the chief taxgatherer of such a place, or, as we might say, the head of the customs and taxes department, was a man of great importance, a man, too, who, if he were not honest, would have unrivalled opportunities for "feathering his own nest."

Zacchæus' Hebrew name would be Zechariah. He was a man of small stature. We are not told why he wanted so much to see Jesus. It may have been idle curiosity to see the man whose name was on every one's lips and who had quarrelled so publicly with the Pharisees. Or Zacchæus may have been moved by a more religious motive, having heard that this new teacher in Israel did not despise nor refuse to consort with men of his class. Or rumors may have gone round that Jesus was planning or expecting some great "sign" at the coming Feast. Or, again, Zacchæus may have been interested in Jesus only as a miracle worker. At any rate, the effect of Jesus' visit on Zacchæus was very different from anything he had anticipated.

It seems that this incident of the meeting with Zacchæus took place as Jesus was on his way up to Jerusalem for the Feast, where he made his last, great appeal to the nation, and where he met his doom. If Jesus had any hope that he would prevail in his great challenge to the Pharisees and Sadducees in Jerusalem, it must have seemed important that he should draw all possible popular support to his side, and that he should not unnecessarily alienate any who might sympathize with him. We cannot but wonder, therefore, at the courage which led him, at this critical moment, to go out of his way to favor with his presence the man who was probably the most hated person in Jericho, the man who stood for compromise with the Roman power and epitomized all that most most obnoxious to the fanatical nationalism of the day.

II. ZACCHAEUS REPENTS AND REFORMS, 19: 8-10.

When Zacchæus says in v. 8, "the half of my goods I give to the poor," he is making a declaration of his purpose, not stating his habit in the past. In Exodus 22: 1 the man who has stolen one sheep is required to restore four, and fourfold restitution is known to Roman law in the case of a man caught in the act of robbery. It is not plain whether Zacchæus' repentance and solemn reparation are due to something (unreported) that Jesus had said to him, or simply to the fact that Jesus came to his house. In any event, we should compare and contrast the impression made upon notorious rogues by Jesus and by Christians. Christians have always denounced robbery, rapacity and swindling. They have not infrequently lost their tempers with the wrongdoer and have done their best to get him punished by any means in their power. No doubt they have often expressed a concern for the wrongdoer's soul, but they have generally felt that punishment must come first.

Here, however, we have no reason to think that Jesus denounced Zacchæus. It would seem that already "in his heart of hearts" Zacchæus had often denounced himself, and his excuses were for the public eye only. Jesus showed no inclination to "get Zacchæus punished," for he was only concerned to get Zacchæus changed. Jesus never for a moment condoned sin, or suggested that it did not matter. Indeed, in his presence, men realized their sinfulness in a way that no scorching denunciations would ever have effected. But Jesus made it plain that, in spite of sin, he loved the sinner and believed in him. We may assume that in some dim way Zacchæus realized the nature and character of Jesus. This made Zacchæus realize, as never before, his own wretched sinfulness. But, in addition, he realized that this spotless person, who knew him through and through, yet really liked him, believed in him, called him to be his real self. Then something broke in Zacchæus and he was a converted man.

There can be no real repentance that does not carry with it inevitably the attempt, so far as possible, to put right the evil we have done, no matter how much of publicity and scandal this may involve. Verse 10, is the unique gospel of Christianity.

Lazy England!

An Irish Colonial in Truth (London)—(Andre Siegfried, writing in the London Times, has accused the Englishman of being lazy, and refusing to learn foreign languages.) It is high time that the relative baselessness of these charges was given some of the publicity to which the charges themselves have been exposed. Speaking as an Irish Colonial who has lived a little in four continents, I can say with absolutely no desire to work off a paradox or score by cheaply pretending black to be white, that the English are the finest linguists among the big nations of the world. . . . John Bull has more faults than he can afford in this world; but do let us remember his job of moving from his nineteenth-century pre-eminence to a new stability is more awkward than that of any other struggling nation. When he was making war, America, North and South, was making economic whoopee. When, afterwards, he was paying his debts, France was making economic whoopee. Poor old J.B.! The strain upon him has been terrific, and the only reason that he hasn't crocked is because he is the sturdiest and most resourceful fellow in the world.

Canada's Future

Sir Henry Thornton in the English Review (London): There is no reason for alarm concerning Canada. It has not been necessary to disrupt organizations in this country because of the slump, and when the recovery, which is certain to come, does get under way, Canada will be in a position to make the best of her opportunities. Her people have been fortunate in that they have suffered probably less than those of any other country during the recent depression; her resources are still awaiting development to a very large extent, and her sources of wealth are unimpaired. When the demand comes with recovery of the countries to which Canada looks for her markets that demand is likely to be on a larger scale, even, than that to which we have been accustomed.

Canadian Bird Sanctuaries

The total seabird population of the ten sanctuaries along the north shore of the gulf of St. Lawrence in 1930, according to the National Parks of Canada, Department of the Interior, not including young birds hatched in that year, was 100,836. The birds were of sixteen different species, mostly seabirds. Altogether Canada has now more than forty bird sanctuaries specially reserved for bird protection purposes.

A small and pugnacious man was arguing with a parson about certain incidents in the Bible. "Take the story of Daniel in the lions' den," he said. "I can explain that for you. It wasn't a miracle. What happened was that when Daniel's friends heard he was to be cast into the lions' den they had the lions gorged with food so that they had no appetite when Daniel was put beside them." "That's interesting," said the parson; "and now tell me this. Would you go into a den of lions even if you knew they had dined well?" "Well . . . er . . . yes, I would," said the man, a little uncomfortably. "And if you did," said the parson, measuring the little man, "I feel sure the lions would have one look at you and say to each other, 'Boys, we've forgotten the savoury.'"

Here's slimming lines for the woman of heavier figure.

And a smart dress that will answer many needs for the lovely spring days that are not so far away.

The bodice has a deep cross-over vest, one of the best means to conceal breadth. The softly falling jabots lend a pretty effect and contribute much toward its slenderness.

The yoke of the skirt is cut to the smartest depth to narrow the hipline. The seaming, tapering as it does to a deep point, is decidedly length giving.

Printed crepe silk in midnight blue combines with plain matching blue crepe, with white embroidered mousseline in this lovely model.

Style No. 3038 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust.

Size 36 requires 3¾ yards 39-inch, with ⅝ yard 39-inch contrasting and ¼ yard 39-inch all-over lace.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Enclose 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number, and address your order to Wilson Pattern Service, 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto.

Canning Industry Shows Increase

According to a recent report the pack of vegetables in Canada showed an increase of over 60 per cent. in 1930, while there was a decline of about 11 per cent. in the pack of fruits. These comparisons are based upon officially issued figures, which relate to quantities not to values. Other figures for an earlier year show that the Canadian industry supplied over 80 per cent. of the home market for these products. This comparison, which is for the year 1928, is for values, which provide the only common denominator between production and extended trade.

The outstanding feature of the report on the pack of fruits and vegetables in Canada is the large increase shown in the production of tomatoes, peas and corn. The pack of tomatoes increased over 1929 by nearly 104 per cent., peas by almost 165 per cent. and corn by 19.5 per cent. The increase in the total pack of canned vegetables was 3,646,352 cases, or 64.2 per cent. The total pack of canned vegetables, exclusive of canned soups, amounted to 9,272,480 cases, the figures being based on 24 No. 2 cans to a case. In 1929 the pack on the same basis was 5,626,098 cases. Tomatoes with 4,025,283 cases comprised the bulk of the 1930 pack. Peas were next in order with 2,553,988 cases, followed by baked beans with 1,096,042 cases and corn with 1,066,830 cases.

While vegetable canning showed great expansion in Canada last year, the pack of canned fruits in 1930 fell considerably below that of 1929, dropping from 1,101,188 cases that year to 973,570 cases in 1930, or slightly more than 11 per cent. This is accounted for by the large decrease in the apple pack, which fell from 331,691 cases in 1929 to 20,957 cases last year. Substantial increases, however, were noted in the pack of pears, peaches and cherries, pears being up by 101,723 cases to a total of 339, 106 cases, peaches an increase of 64,973 to 155,728 cases and cherries up by 51,131 cases to 146,286 cases canned last year.

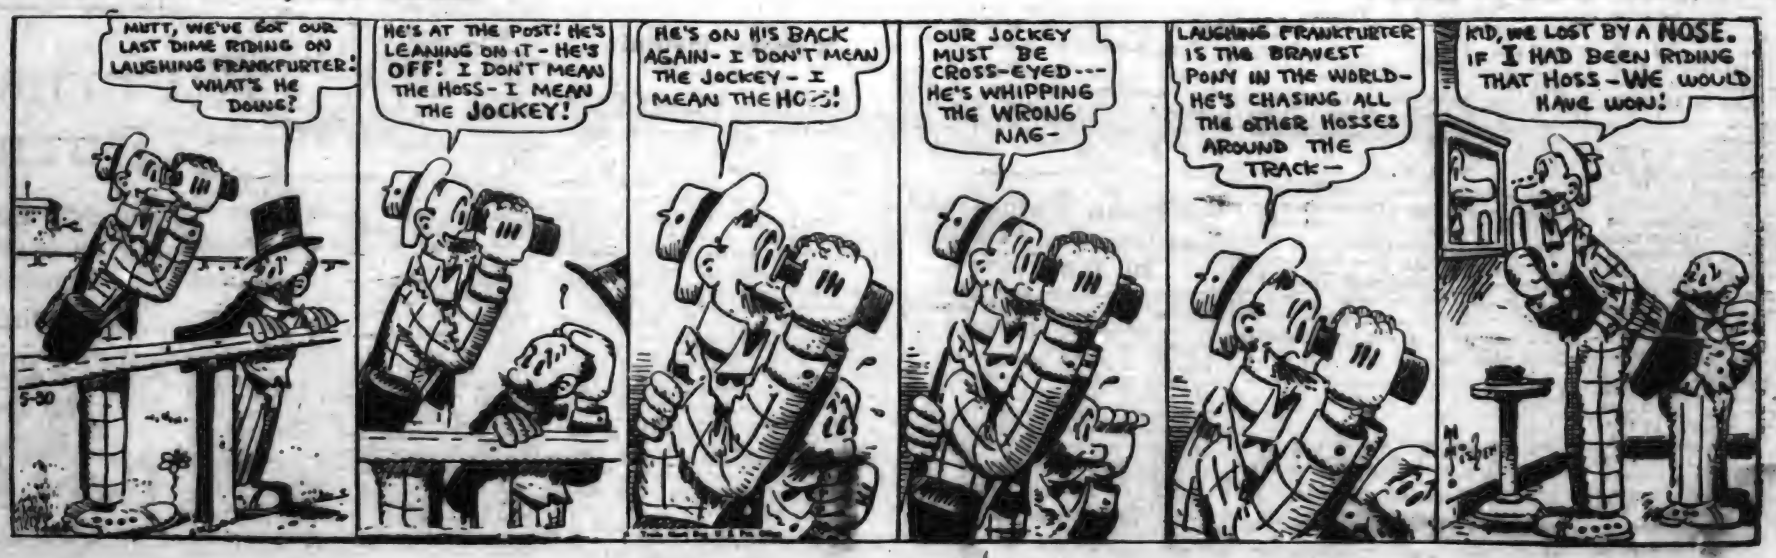
In 1928, when Canadian canners supplied 84 per cent. of the home market, the total pack of canned fruits and vegetables was valued at $14,822,295. The imports were $4,463,097 and the exports $1,687,258. In 1930 the imports of canned vegetables into Canada were valued at $1,461,185 and the imports of canned fruits at $2,954,415. Exports of canned vegetables in 1930 were valued at 5631,015 and of canned fruits at $250,271.

Skyscrapers

Philadelphia Ledger: The first skyscrapers were novelties. They were limited because they offered an opportunity to make small plots of ground pay large dividends in congested areas. But times are changing. Now the tendency in municipal planning — and in the larger architecture of designing cities for health, light and convenience—is away from the spire of offices grouped on top of each other around an elevator shaft. And despite the fact that the Chrysler Building, the Empire State Building and similar inhabited obelisks continue to rear their young heads high above America's streets, the time is coming when American architectural achievement will be devoted less to height and more to mass, line and stability.

Proof Against Bullets

Glass used for the "hull panes"—not portholes now—of a new liner is of a special kind that has withstood a pressure of twenty tons.



In one test of this glass, a piece of it weighing fifty-six pounds was dropped eighteen feet onto a steel plate. It came through this ordeal without showing even a crack.

But glass nowadays can be wonderfully resistant. In certain tests of a bullet-proof glass recently a .303 bullet was fired at it at a range of five yards. The glass plate under test was about an inch and a half thick and was made up of three layers. The bullet starred the first layer, but made no impression on the second.—Answers.

MATERNITY

Any normal healthy woman may expect to go through pregnancy with no greater risk than any of us take when walking down the street. In both cases there are possibilities of danger, but if reasonable care is taken, there is perfect safety.

Pregnancy is a normal condition, but it does mean that, for a period of time, nature is under a strain. The strain can be met without causing a breakdown, providing proper care is taken.

Accidents of pregnancy occur, but so do motor and other accidents. There are very few accidents which could not be prevented, and certainly there are very few accidents of pregnancy which cannot be prevented.

Every expectant mother should be under regular supervision during the whole of her pregnancy. By this we mean that she should have the necessary examination to make sure that conditions are normal, to detect any abnormal condition and to have it treated before harm results.

Serious conditions rarely develop suddenly. It may appear as though they did to the person concerned, but there are usually certain changes which the doctor would have noticed days or weeks before. He cannot detect these unless the woman has put herself under his care, and this is one reason why we believe she should do so as soon as possible.

The expectant mother also needs instruction so that she will have a minimum of discomfort. To meet the strain she needs to make some adjustments and she can be helped in doing this by proper advice. It is not a question of being fearful of making an unnecessary fuss. It is a matter of commonsense to make allowance for the special commands in order to be as comfortable as possible.

Nothing a mother sees, or any experience she may go through can cause the child to be marked or altered physically. There is no connection between the nervous system of the mother and the baby.

The baby does depend on the mother for its nourishment, but this does not mean that the mother should eat enough for two in the sense of eating twice as much as she did before.

The expectant mother should not eat more than a wholesome amount; she should not become over-stout. She should drink several glasses of water each day. Her diet should include milk, green leafy vegetables and fruits.

Advice as to diet and other phases of her life will be given her by her doctor as part of the prenatal supervision she should have during her pregnancy.

TRINITY CHURCH

Opening of Parish House and Installation of the new organ

Sunday and Monday, May the 3rd and 4th, will be days of gratitude and thoughtfulness to Almighty God for His great goodness and mercies vouchsafed to the congregation and friends of Trinity Church since they have been enabled to complete their hall which has been a vision of many of the older members and a number of those who have passed a life of higher service. This date will see the consumation not only of that vision and service, but of a winter of intense work on the part of the congregation and especially on the part of the committees under whose charge the work lay. As we write a dark cloud is passing over us and over a home and over the hearts of many of the citizens of unceasing care and wholehearted attention to the building of the hall thus procuring and giving the splendid workmanship for while he is so justly known, Mr. Joseph Phair, a man of integrity of life, unassuming and reliable in all his dealings and who would do anything for others who showed appreciation, is suddenly called away, leaving his desired works all but completed. It would have given much satisfaction to scores of people if he had been permitted to join in the opening ceremonies, but he was not to be, and we commit him to the care and keeping of the Great Architect in the faith that

"Surely He the Mighty Worker
He who slumbers not nor sleeps.
Heareth not in useless silence
Those He keeps."
"They who bravely toiled among us
We believe are working still
Where no disappointment hinders
No self will

It was made possible very recently through the untiring efforts of certain of our leaders, and of the generous donation of a former family to secure a new organ to replace the one which has for upwards of three-quarters of a century given splendid service, consequently the officials of the church made arrangements with Mr. Leonard Downey, the well known firm of London, who has had a great deal of experience in organ building to have one installed for the services of Sunday, May 3rd on which day at the morning service it will be dedicated.

The service will be as follows: Sunday, May the 3rd, 11 a.m. Holy Communion and Dedication of the organ. 7 p.m. evening prayer and sermon. The preacher on this happy occasion will be (D.V.) the Ven. Archdeacon Perry of the Counties of Lincoln and Welland and Rector of Welland. The offering that day will be on behalf of the building fund of the hall.

On Monday, May 4th at 8 p.m. the Hall will be formally opened. The Bishop of Toronto has signified his pleasure and intention of being present and many other leading clergymen and laymen of the district and town, together with many former parishioners are expected. A cordial invitation is extended to all to join with us in the dedicatory services.

JUNIOR GIRLS' CONFERENCE

First to be held in Peel, Saturday, April 25th

The town of Brampton will no doubt be a busy place on Saturday, April 25th, when the Junior Institute girls of the County and their friends gather at the Department of Agriculture for a one day's Conference. This is the first venture of its kind in the County and was a new idea introduced by the Home Demonstrator, Miss A. E. Wise. The girls will meet at the Department on Queen St. West, at 10 o'clock on the stated date and each girl will bring her own lunch and enjoy a social, informal hour at noon.

The chair will be taken by the County Junior Institute President, Miss Florence Elliott. Two outside speakers will be in attendance. Dr. Margaret Patterson from the Women's Court, Toronto, and Miss Florence Eadie from the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, who is an assistant to the Superintendent of Institutes. Other programs will be given by the County Juniors themselves consisting of talks and demonstrations. Every Junior Institute of the County will be represented in the program. Miss Lillian Rutherford, Bolton will give the address of welcome. The following girls will give demonstrations: Miss Annie Clark, Ebenezer, on "crepe paper articles." Mrs. Alex. McKinney, Jr., Brampton, "dry cleaning." Miss Wilma Boucher and Mrs. Douglas Dunton "tie dying." Miss Grace Whitehead, Trinity, "Needlework." Mrs. Joe Morrison, Tullamore, "Patch Quilts." Articles made on these lines will be on exhibit. Miss Reba Weylie of Streetsville, will give readings and short addresses will be given by Mrs. J. A. McBride, County President of Women's Institutes, and Mrs. J. M. Dolson.

This will no doubt prove to be an extremely interesting day and one of high educational value. It is hoped that every girl in the County will avail herself to the opportunity being put before her and that there will be representatives present from not only the centre but from all the outlying parts of the County.

LET US SMILE

The radio store telephone rang and the voice said, "Will you please send a man to fix my radio. I can't get anything on it."

"The reason for your trouble, madam, is that there is an SOS on the air."

"SOS? Why, what is that?"

"Ship in distress."

"Dear me, isn't that too bad Well, if I can be of any assistance, you'll let me know, won't you?"

Womens Institute

At the annual meeting of the local women's institute, held at the home of Mrs. I. J. Ardagh, Thursday, Mrs. J. Caslor was elected president. Other officers are: Hon. president, Mrs. A. Bruce; vice-presidents, Miss M. Graydon and Mrs. G. Bunt; secy.-Treas., Mrs. D. Lindsay; district director, Mrs. J. Caslor; conveners of committees, Mrs. F. Brown, Mrs. Reddick, Mrs. D. Lindsay, Mrs. D. McCaugherty, Mrs. O. R. Church, Mrs. S. H. Smith, Mrs. C H Falconer and Mrs. H. Cook. Mrs. J. McBride, county president, conducted the election.

Taking care of the needs of a child undergoing a plastic surgery operation, assisting with relief work in the community, and the raising of $25 for Peel Memorial Hospital, have occupied the local branch of the Women's Institute during the past year.

Lucky draws for three blankets resulted in proceeds of $41.70, which remains on hand.

BENEFIT PLAY BIG SUCCESS

The idea of giving a benefit entertainment on behalf of little Margaret Amos, was suggested, and local Oddfellows enlisted the interest of the dramatic club of the Young People's Society of the Presbyterian church. The result was that on Saturday night, in the Oddfellows' Hall, a repeat performance of "Climbing Roses" was given with great success. The hall was packed, and the committee, headed by S. S. Rice and Anson Pope, carried home a substantial sum, which will be increased when all the returns are in. Misses Cora Woodruff and Reba Weylie and Vic Johnston, as the "Climbing Roses," who essayed to get into aristocratic society, took the leading parts, with Tony Ironsides and Floyd Marlatt playing the part of the famous author and his friend. Others in the cast, all of whom did excellent work, were Mrs. F. Maas, Mrs. H. Couse, Miss Winnie Carter, Miss Leora Buck, Miss May Hollingshead, Allan Couse, Reg. Tucker. Interact music was provided by Andrew Young and Miss Lily Carr, Toronto. The committee from the lodge was composed of Anson Pope, N.G., Leonard Pope, V.G., S.S. Rice, R.S., and D.D.M. of District No 37, W C. Andrews. Medical treatment, free of charge, has been assured by Dr. P. F. Williams, D.D.G.M., District No. 35.

THREE CALF CLUBS FOR PEEL COUNTY

At a well attended, enthusiastic meeting of boys between the ages of 12 and 20 years, and their fathers, in the Agricultural Office, Brampton, on Saturday night, it was decided to organize three calf clubs in 1931. Clubs for Holsteins, Jerseys and Shorthorn heifer calves are being formed during the next two weeks. These calves are all Juniors or in other words are born after the first of January, 1931, and are the property of the members. The boys personally look after their animals and submit monthly feed records to the Agricultural office. The parents see in these clubs a means of interesting their sons in good livestock and acquainting them with sound feeding practices. Speakers at the meeting were: Chas. Lowe, Jas. Sharpe, Norman Cameron, Chas. Wardlaw, J. G. Dennis, Oscar Graham, Andrew Carter, Douglas Dunton and J. C. Shearer, Agricultural Representative for Peel County.

Officers of each club will be chosen from the members at meetings held before the 1st of May. It was decided to have both grade and purebred heifers in the clubs and also that the annual exhibition of animals to be held at the Brampton Fall Fair. Prizes will also be given for showmanship classes. Interested boys who were not at the meeting are advised to get in touch with the Agricultural Representative at an early date if they desire joining up with the clubs.

PEEL GIRLS WIN

Three Peel County Juniors have brought honors not only to themselves but to their county this past year and have been awarded as prizes a two weeks' Course at Macdonald Institute, Guelph. The girls are: Florence Elliott, Malton, Elsie Elliott, Malton and Ann Lindsay, Bolton. Florence Elliott won her trip through an essay contest which took place in the Province following the Trip given by the Ontario Government to the Royal Winter Fair. Elsie Elliott, sister of Florence, won first prize in the 1930 Garden and Canning Club, carried on in the County and Ann Lindsay obtained the highest marks at the Ebenezer Short Course which entitled her to the same trip.

These three fortunate girls will be taken to Guelph by the Home Demonstrator on April 27th and will remain there for two weeks.

The Home Economics Department aims to bring to the vocation of homemaking, the kind of help which the Ontario Agricultural College brings to the business of farming, by making for the improvement and the greater enjoyment of home life. Instruction is given in the fundamental sciences, in English, in the principles and practice of food preparation including the study of foods and dietetics, in the study of textiles and fabrics and in household management.

These girls will live in residence and will be given all student's privileges while at the college. They are to be highly congratulated on their excellent work which has given them this reward.

NOTES ON FARMING

Too Many Potatoes?

Before increasing their acreage, commercial potato growers should study the market outlook, advises J. A. Carroll of the Crops Co-operation and Markets Branch. He points out that the price of potatoes in Ontario is controlled almost entirely by the size of the North American crop, the larger proportion of which is contributed by the United States. The 1930 U.S. crop totalled about 361,000,000 bushels. Indications are that acreage will be increased to such an extent that an average yield of 118 bushels would result in a total of 434.0000,00 bushels in 1931, with average weather. Prospects are that the yield this year will be very little below that of 1928. The marketing of that crop was disastrous.

Growers should consider very carefully before increasing their acreage and concentrate their energy on getting a higher yield per acre. It is expected that only those with a low cost per bushel will have a profit this year. The surest way to decrease the cost per bushel is to increase the yield per acre.

New Marketing Board

The new Ontario Marketing Board, through which the province hopes to assist agriculture by scientific and modern practice, has been named by Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture. It will consist of W. B. Somerset, H. B. Clemes and Jas. B. Fairbairn, while John A. Carroll will act as secretary. No remuneration is attached to the offices with the exception of the secretary who will receive an honorarium. W. B. Somerset, the chairman, recently compiled a report on the fruit and vegetable situation in the province; H. B. Clemes is manager of the United Farmers' Co-operative; J. B. Fairbairn is Deputy Minister of Agriculture and Mr. Carroll is director of the Crops and Markets Branch. It is further announced that sales agents, appointed by the shippers, but maintained partly by the Government, will be located in Winnipeg, Montreal and the Maritimes. Acting as liaison officials, these agents are expected to prove invaluable in obtaining for the Ontario grower better markets and higher prices for their produce.

OBITUARY

Rev. A. B. Hames

For a number of years a minister in the Northwest, Rev. Arthur Benjamin Hames died Saturday at his home, 43 Belvidere Avenue, Fairbank. The late Mr. Hames, who was in his eighty-second year, was born at Bristol, England, and came to Canada with his family at the age of seven, settling in Hastings County. The last thirty years he spent in Ontario, where he had many cures, the last being at Beeton. He was superannuated twelve years ago. Surviving are his widow, the former Sarah Jane Powers, and three sons and four daughters: William A. W. of Courtney, B.C.; Albert S. of Glenboro', Man.; Dr. Clarence F. W. of Regina, Sask.; Mrs. Alfred Pitt, of Dryden; Mrs. Walter Madden of Coldwater; Mrs. Russell Walker of Myrtle Station, and Mrs. Fred Atkinson of Toronto. There are twenty-one grandchildren and two great grandchildren. Two sisters also survive, Mrs. J. B. Sloan of Toronto, and Mrs. J. B. Cowan of Streetsville. Interment took place at Park Lawn Cemetery.

Mrs. Henry Gilmore

Death occurred at Dixie of Mrs. Henry Gilmore, aged 71, following a prolonged illness. Born in Ireland and formerly Eleanor Malaugh, she came to Dixie when quite young, and resided here all her life. Her husband predeceased her 16 years ago. Surviving are two sons, William, of Dixie; Alexander, of Toronto; and one daughter, Mrs. Chas. Blake, of Toronto. A brother resides in Newcastle. Other brothers and sisters are in the Old Country. Mrs. Gilmore attended St. John's Anglican Church, Dixie.

BRAMPTON

Cecil Jeanette appeared before Magistrate Bull on a charge of obtaining money fraudulently from Miss J. Goldthorpe, Dixie. Miss Goldthorpe preferred the charge when Jeanette offered to return to her $50 which she had given him in connection with arrangements for securing music pupils, by means of a cheque. Miss Goldthorpe wished the money in cash. The charge against Jeanette was dismissed.

LET US SMILE

Tommy had handed in his home work and the teacher had examined it closely.

"Tommy," he said, "this looks very like your father's writing. What have you got to say?"

"Well, teacher," said Tommy after a considerable pause, "now I come to think of it, I used his fountain pen."

DEDICATION SERVICES

Trinity Church

Sunday next, services in connection with the opening of the Parish Hall, which has been under erection during the winter, will take place. The main feature of the morning service will be the dedication of the new organ installed by Mr. Leonard Downey, of London. The old organ, which has been use for upwards of three quarters of a century, has given splendid service and is dear to the hearts of the worshippers, especially those who have spent long years of worship in this church.

But when an opportunity was afforded through the generous contribution of a former family, who desired to give this tangible recognition of their love, it was gratefully received by the officials. A member of the congregation has made arrangement for the balance without any obligation to the congregation. But the rector and Wardens feel that if there are any who would like to share in this memorial, that an opportunity is afforded them to join with those already contributing, thus having a real part and live interest in this splendid gift.

The Venerable Archdeacon Perry, of Trinity Church, Welland, will be the special preacher for the occasion and will dedicate the organ at the morning service.

The opening of the Parish House will take place on Monday, May 4th, at 8 p.m. The Bishop of Toronto, will be present, together with other clergy and leading laymen, who will address us. Splendid musical numbers will also be given by the Brampton Quartette and by Mrs. Nichol of Hamilton.

All services on Daylight Saving Time.

The Best Little Town

There are fancier towns than our little town, there are towns that are bigger than this, and the people who live in the smaller towns don't know what excitement they miss. There are things you see in a wealthier town that you can't in a town that's small, and yet up and down, there is no other town like our little town after all. It may be that the streets aren't long, they're not wide, or maybe paved; but the neighbors you know in your own little town all welcome a fellow—it's great. In the glittering streets of the glittering town; with its palace and pavement and thrall, in the midst of the throng you will frequently long for your own little town after all. If you live and you work in your own little town in spite of the fact that it's small, you'll find it a fact that our little town is the best little town after all.

WEDDINGS

Roy—Ellingham

Miss Charlotte Jane Ellingham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel Ellingham, Cooksville, was married on Saturday afternoon to Mr. Robert Lionel Roy, son of Mrs. Roy and the late Robert Roy, Bowmanville. Rev. H. V. Thompson officiated in the presence of immediate relatives of the contracting parties, the bridal couple standing before a bank of flowers and ferns. Miss Lily Ellingham, sister of the bride, played the wedding music, and Mrs. D. Nicklin, cousin of the bride, sang during the signing of the register. The bride, who was unattended, was in white georgette and lace with large picture hat, and bouquet of roses and lily-of-the-valley. After the ceremony a reception was held, the house being decorated in pink and white, with masses of pink sweet peas. Mr. and Mrs. Roy left for a motor trip through Eastern Ontario, the bride travelling in an ensemble of blue georgette and shadow lace in the same tones, her hat and coat, trimmed with fur, matching. They will reside in Tyrone, Bowmanville.

PORT CREDIT

Knocked down by a car as she was walking east along the Lakeshore highway, Martha Fallon, aged 62, sustained minor cuts and bruises. She stated to the police that she lived here with her sister and was walking to Toronto at the time of the accident to look for work. Chief Telfer Wilson, of Port Credit, investigated. The driver of the car, George Bass, Picton street east, Hamilton, was not held.

Last Sunday the congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Port Credit, observed a dual anniversary. The first marked the forty-first of the church formation, while the other the third year of the newer edifice. Rev. Professor A. L. Morrow of Toronto who was the special preacher, dedicated memorial windows to two of the congregation's charter members, Mrs. John Gray and Mrs. J. McLelland.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willett, of Woodstock, will move here shortly. This is the third farm to change owners on the concession within a month. The buyer seems to be looking for a farm of less than 100 acres and off the highway—Oakville Star.

FOURTH ANNUAL PEEL MUSIC FESTIVAL

Entries Closed Total 282

282 entries have been received for the Peel County Music Festival, to be held at Clarke Memorial Hall, Port Credit, on May 8th and 9th. This is the fourth annual festival to be held in the county. Each year the total number of entries have increased until this year there is a total of 157 more than last year. This shows the growing interest in this annual event. 30 shields have been donated, 4 trophies, 17 medals and seven cash donations. Competition promises to be keen in all classes. In every class with six or more entries 3 prizes will be given. These prizes consist of shields, medals and trophies of all kinds.

Elimination contests will be held on Friday and Saturday with the final concert on Saturday evening. Prizes will be presented on this date and all winners are asked to be in attendance. All competitors will be admitted free. 35c admission will be charged to all spectators on the final evening.

Clarke Memorial Hall is a large building, but it is expected that it will be filled to capacity during the duration of this Festival. The committee in charge consisting of members from north, south and centre are working with untiring efforts and report splendid co-operation and general interest throughout the county.

STREETSVILLE EXCEPTIONALLY WELL PROVIDED WITH MAIL SERVICE

Under the new schedule which came into effect last Monday, Streetsville gets five outgoing, and four incoming mails daily.

This is good service. Better than many large towns are getting.

Incoming mails—From Toronto 8.00 a.m.; from Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa 10.00 a.m.; From Toronto 7.00 p.m.; from Owen Sound Branch (north) 8.00 p.m.

Outgoing Mails will close as follows —oronto-London (west) 7.30 a.m.; To--Toronto-London (north) 9.30.; a.m. Toronto and East 9.30 a.m.; Owen Sound (north) 6.30 p.m.; Toronto and East 7.30 p.m.

PEEL COUNTY GIRLS' CONFERENCE

First To Be Held

The first Junior Institute Conference to be held in Peel County took place last Saturday at the local Department of Agriculture. In spite of continuous rain over 130 girls came in from all parts of the county. They were comprised of officers, members and girls who were only just acquainted with Junior Institute work.

The department decorated with marigolds looked real home-like to the girls coming in from the rain. They were met by the Home Demonstrator, Alma E. Wise, who was in charge of the event. Miss Florence Elliott, County President, took the chair in a very efficient manner and introduced the various speakers of the day. Miss Jean Verner, in the absence of Lillian Rutherford, gave the address of welcome and Reba Weylie of Streetsville, entertained the girls with her readings.

Miss Florence Eadie of the Institutes Branch gave an interesting address on Junior work, and Dr. Margaret Patterson spoke on 'Girls' part in Nation Building." Mr. Geo. A. Putnam, Mrs. J. A. McBride, and Mrs. J. M. Dolson gave short addresses.

Most interesting and instructive addresses were given by members of the Junior Institutes, some of the work being done at the Conference, other examples being displayed as finished product. Miss Annie Clark, of Ebenezer, had making of crepe paper articles.

Mrs. A. McKinney, Jr., on dry cleaning of household and personal articles. Miss Wilma Boucher and Mrs. D. Dunton showed methods and results of tie-dying. Miss Grace Whitehead assisted by Miss Frances Parkinson showed some lovely needlework, and told how to do it, while Mrs. Jo. Morrison demonstrated home made quilts and Miss Edith Thomas on rag rugs. The displays were beautiful and were highly commented upon by the guests present from outside the county.

Community singing was led by Miss Wise and everyone enjoyed a social hour at noon.

This venture certainly proved to be a most successful one and it is expected that the Juniors will make this an annual event.

SONG OF THE OPTIMISTS

We are genial optimists,
Our hearts are light and free;
In times of storm or sunshine
We work on cheerfully.

We are hopeful optimists,
No time for gloom or doubt;
If old depression calls on us,
We swiftly turn him out.

We are smiling optimists,
Our course is straight and clear;
We think and act constructively,
For us good times are here.

—Grenville Kleiser.

Statistics Show Twenty Million Are Unemployed In World

Canada Looked On As Suffering Lightly; Germany Has Double Number Found in Great Britain; United States Heads List

Washington—Figures collected here and abroad indicate there are perhaps 20,000,000 persons in the world who are willing to work and have no jobs. Students of economics and politics believe this is by far the worst feature of the present depression. Mr. Magnusson of the International Labor Office says: "It is no exaggeration to say that unemployment has been the over-shadowing problem."

Canada is looked upon here as suffering lightly from this economic plague. On the whole new countries and countries which depend to a considerable degree upon agriculture, are happily situated in times of depression, one expert said. "There are always a few potatoes on a farm and there is undoubtedly not the actual want in Canada that may be found in highly industrialized countries," he added.

It came as a shock to the people of the United States when the official figure of 6,050,000 unemployed was recently announced, despite the fact previous unofficial estimates had run as high as 7,000,000. These figures place the United States well up in the international unemployment list. The enumeration of unemployed is made on different bases in different nations and as a consequence it is impossible to make accurate comparison.

Official Figures

The latest official statistics available for the principal countries are as follows:

United States	6,050,000
Germany	4,383,843
Great Britain	2,044,209
Italy	642,169
Japan	386,394
Austria	331,239
Australia	102,900
Netherlands	103,728
Sweden	80,578
Denmark	70,961
Belgium	63,540
France	28,536

These figures represent registered unemployed, wholly unemployed, and those receiving benefits. There is no doubt they do not reflect the situation in any adequate degree.

It is noted France, which is well balanced as between agriculture and manufacture, stands at the bottom of this list as the least affected country in Europe.

Canadian Boys Win Penn. Medley Relay Event

Brilliant Finish by Moore of Hamilton Quells Brooklyn Challenge — 26 Teams Complete

Franklin Field, Philadelphia—Hamilton, Ont., Central Collegiate Institute, for years a strong contender for interscholastic honors at the Pennsylvania Relay Carnival, scored a notable victory last Friday in the interscholastic medley championship race.

The quartet of Canadian boys triumphed in a field of 26 teams, one of the biggest in the history of the race, and did it impressively as they registered the sixth victory for Hamilton Collegiate since 1922.

The school won the high school one-mile championship three times, in 1922, 1928 and 1929, in addition to twice winning the interscholastic two-mile race, in 1922 and 1923.

With Shaver, Winfield, Pearson and Captain Moore running in order on relay legs of 880-yards, 440-yards, 220-yards and one mile, Hamilton took an early lead and set the pace most of the way. Shaver took the lead on the second lap of his half mile and when Captain Moore took the baton for the final mile, he had a lead of a good 30 yards over J. Didie of St. James Academy, Brooklyn, the outstanding contender all the way.

Didie closed this gap and passed Moore after going into the gun lap, but the Canadian boy had a good "kick" left. After running stride for stride with Didie on the back stretch, Moore shook off his rival with a good finish and won going away by fully forty yards.

The Canadians' time of 7.50 8-10 was only two seconds short of the record set by Lakewood High School, of Ohio, in 1929.

The second Canadian entry, Delta Collegiate, also of Hamilton, after a good early showing, finished tenth, with Downes, Woods, Dann and Hurst running in that order.

Britain's Railways To Be Electrified

London—The Daily Herald, semi-official organ of the Labor Government, said recently that a scheme "unparalleled in the industrial history of any country" would be outlined in the report of the special commission which has been considering railway electrification.

"The report of the special commission will recommend electrification of the entire 51,000 miles of British railways, at a cost of nearly $2,000,000,000," said the Daily Herald, adding that it was estimated that the development would mean an annual saving of $62,600,000.

The newspaper claimed that the scheme had received the approval of the railways, which, it said, had already prepared new time-tables.

Carrying out of the recommendations would mean employing another 60,000 men for the next 20 years, and thus it strongly appeals to the Government, the Herald concluded.

Airmen Fail to Make Non-refueling Mark

Jacksonville Beach, Fla. — Walter Lees and Frederic Brossy, Detroit airmen, seeking a world's nonrefueling endurance record in a Diesel-motored plane, were forced to land recently after flying 74 hours and 1 minute. They failed to equal the present record, held by Lucien Bossourot and Aime Rossie, French fliers, who set the mark of 75 hours and 23 minutes over Algiers early in March.

The present American record, held by Eddie Stinson and George Haldeman, went by the boards. It was 57 hours.

Famous Lawyer Dies In England

Sir Edward Clarke Had Figured in Many Sensational Cases

Staines, Eng.—Sir Edward Clarke, grand old man of the British Bar, died on Sunday last at the age of 90. He retired from active practice in 1914.

Sir Edward figured in some of the most sensational cases of the last century, including the famous Baccarat cheating case in which Edward VII, then Prince of Wales, gave evidence. He also defended Dr. Jameson of Jameson's Raid" Boer War fame when he was tried in 1896.

Sir Edward was knighted in 1886, when he became solicitor-general. He also was noted for his writings, which included works on legal, biographical and religious topics.

He was married twice. His first wife, the former Amy Mitchell, died in 1881. His second wife was Katherine Mathilda Bryant.

Entire Block Burns In Callender, Ont.

North Bay, Ont.—Within three hours, an entire block in the business area of the village of Callander, eight miles south of North Bay, was levelled to the ground by a fire which originated in a mysterious manner in the basement of the Pacific Hotel on the main corner. The hotel, the Canadian National Railway station and freight sheds, three business structures and adjoining buildings were left in embers. The net loss is placed at $60,000.

Outlook Is "Fair" In Drought Area

Washington. — Receiving just a "fair break," the wide sections of the country which suffered from last year's drought will get through 1931 all right.

J. C. Hoyt, expert on surface water for the geological survey, said average rains during the growing season and midsummer will be adequate, in view of the rainfall of the past six weeks, both for crops and for water supplies of communities.

Spectacular Parachute Drop Made by R.C.A.F. Men

Ottawa — As nonchalantly as bathers taking a morning plunge, 12 officers and non-commisioned officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force tumbled into space from a height of 2,000 feet here last Saturday in one of the most spectacular exhibitions of parachute jumping ever staged in Canada.

The display was remarkable in that every flier who went aloft completed what is probably the most hazardous part of the air force training with landings that were perfect or near perfect.

New Forest Fires In New York State

Albany, N.Y.—The forest fire hazard had conservation department officials worried last week. Thirty-eight new fires were reported during one day to bring a four-day total of 175 fires.

Most of the fires were relatively unimportant, being quickly controlled, but the steady run of new ones was considered an indication that the woods were drying out more and more and the danger therefore becoming greater. It is state-wide.

Meteor Falls in Nebraska

Herman, Neb.—A small meteor fell into a pasture near here recently and burned for two hours, flames at times leaping 40 feet in the air. The largest piece was found to be about 14 inches long and eight pounds in weight.

Argentina Plans Exhibit at C.N.E.

Floating Show of Products Reply to Trade Overtures

Buenos Aires.—Argentine commercial and industrial organizations are planning to send a floating exhibition of Argentine products to Canada next year in response to an invitation from the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

It is probable the arrival of the exhibition in Canada will be timed to coincide with the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto.

Canadians are making a strong bid for Argentina's trade. Their section of the Empire Trade Exhibition has been one of the most successful, and their invitation to Argentina is an effort to stimulate northbound trade, without which they feel they cannot successfully sell Canadian goods to Argentina in large volume.

New Plane Motor Proves Successful

Berlin.—The Junker Company's new Diesel airplane motor, whose builders claim for it a wide margin of advantage over the gasoline engine recently, drove a nine-passenger monoplane in a successful trial flight from the Tempelhof airport.

It had been built into a ship ordinarily powered by three gasoline motors. Officials of the Transport Ministry and the Lufthansa Airline were aboard for the test. The engine is to go into the Lufthansa freight service and after extensive tests will be mounted in passenger planes.

It has no spark plugs or other electrical ignition. Compressed air fed from a special tank starts the motor and in flight a small auxiliary Diesel re-charges the tank. Combustion in the cylinders takes place when a jet of fuel oil is sprayed into a temperature raised by high compression to 752 degrees Fahrenheit.

The motor weighs 1,700 pounds and its builders say it will increase the flying range by 40 per cent. and will double the payload.

Powder on Sealing Ships To Break Ice Packs

An explosion of powder caused the destruction of the sealer Viking, and it might be wondered what use a sealer had for such destructive substance. Every vessel which goes regularly into the ice carries powder or dynamite in her supplies, and it is frequently used to free the vessel from the ice.

Ships frequently get stuck in the ice when trying to penetrate the floes and cannot be backed out. When this occurs a few charges of powder or dynamite are placed under the ice near the ship and exploded. Then with engines going astern she can be freed. Also when a ship is being jammed by the pack it is sometimes possible to reduce the pressure by smashing the surrounding pack with explosives.

$1,500,000 Creamery

Windsor, Ont.—Essex county is to have a big creamery—the largest in the British Empire—with a capital of $1,500,000, following an agreement reached between the Minnesota Valley Canning Corporation of Lesueur, Minn., and John Wall and associates of Windsor. Mr. Wall is to be president and general manager.

CHAMPION COW

Halifax, Nova Scotia.—Colchester County has produced the latest Canadian champion cow, with a record of 11,949 pounds of milk, 552 pounds of fat, in the two year old class. The new Canadian champion is a product of the Beech Hill Farm, Princeport Road, Colchester County, and owned by F. W. Swindells.

Crossing Warning To Be Given Test

Windsor Invention Makes Loud Noise as Auto Nears Tracks

Windsor.—The Ontario Department of Highways will shortly test a device to warn motorists and other users of highways that they are approaching a railway crossing.

The device, invented by W. J. Hyatt of Windsor, is of steel plates and is built into the pavement, and is so arranged that occupants of a motor car will think that the car is falling to pieces when they cross the alarm. The noise is similar to, but much louder than that produced by the old plank bridges.

Mr. Hyatt has been advised by Premier George S. Henry, Minister of Highways, that a trial installation is to be made near Ridgetown. Patents in Canada and the United States have been secured by Mr. Hyatt, who is president of the Hyatt-Jumbo Roofing Company.

7 Passengers Killed in 1930; Lowest American Rail Record

Washington.—Fewer deaths of passengers in train accidents in 1930 than ever before in the history of American railroading were reported by the American Railway Association.

Carriers listed only seven killed, the Association said, three less than the previous record of ten in 1927 and twenty-nine below the figures for 1929.

For each 1930 fatality the railroads carried 101,571,000 passengers. Only 790 passengers were injured in 1930, against 1,742 in 1929 and 1,404 in 1928.

London. — Almost 3,500,000 radio sets are in operation in the British Isles, 3,411,910 licenses having been issued up to January 1.

The 1930 total of sets was 455,174 greater than in the preceding year. December issuances, due principally to Christmas gifts of licenses, were 85,012.

Radio Net Will Soon Span 'Darkest Africa'

London—It will not be long before the continent known only 50 years ago as "Darkest Africa" will be linked up from end to end by a chain of radio stations. Stations have been ordered by the administrations of Uganda, Kenya, Tanganyika, Northern and Southern Rhodesia and the Union of South Africa.

They will be used both for the new Cape-to-Cairo air route and, in many cases, for general communication. These stations will link up all the airdromes.

Georgia Schools Go On Farm Schedule

Millen, Ga.—There are thousands of Georgia children who can go to school all winter, but when Spring comes and the ground is ready for corn and cotton planting they have to stay at home. Work comes first, on many farms. So this year the principal of the Red Hill High School has worked out a schedule by which the children avoid losing all day at school. Accordingly school now opens at 8.30 a.m. and closes at 2 p.m. The children can then work until 7 o'clock, assisting in planting the crops.

Arizona Apricot Tree 3 Feet In Diameter, 52 Years Old

Washington.—Arizona's entry in the biggest fruit tree contest is an apricot tree planted by Scotch settlers on top of Natural Bridge near the village of Payson. The tree was planted fifty-two years ago. Charles E. Resser, curator of Stratigraphic paleontology at the National Museum here discovered it. He says:

"Its trunk is now more than three feet in diameter, with a spread of branches exceeding 100 feet and this summer the tree bore approximately 100 bushels of fruit."

Air Mail for Jamaica

London—Air mails from Great Britain are now accepted for Jamaica. These go by sea to New York and then by air to Kingston via Miami.

Fire Protection Association Plan Four-Day Conference

New methods of reducing the annual fire loss to Canada of hundreds of lives and millions of dollars in property, will form the basis for discussion at a four-day conference on problems of fire prevention and fire control by technical engineers and representatives from wide range of industrial activity at the 35th annual meeting of the National Fire Protection Association to be held at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, May 11 to 14, inclusive.

Right Hon. Sir Thomas White, K.C.M.G., vice-president of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and Franklin H. Wentworth, managing director of the Association, will speak at a dinner Wednesday evening. George F. Lewis, Canadian director of the Association, and Deputy Fire Marshal of Ontario, is chairman of the Toronto committee.

Revised standards and codes for the control of specific fire hazards and new methods of fire extinguishment, form the basis of over a score of technical reports to be presented. These reports, which apply to a wide field of commerce and industry, are prepared by expert members.

The work of these experts and their committees, carried on in co-operation with the industries affected, is reflected in the growing number of protective codes adopted as standard practice by the industries to which they apply.

Simplified English As World Tongue

Stockholm—English with a simplified spelling would make an ideal world language, according to R. E. Zachrissen, professor of English at Upsala University, who has conducted extensive tests with "Anglic," the simplified form he has prepared. Pupils studying under him have been able to read, write and converse fluently in Anglic after 20 lessons of 98 minutes each. The new tongue is not an artificial language, but pure English, boiled down with simplified spelling so that one method takes the place of several now in use.

Dogs Assist Detroit Police In Patrols of Outlying Areas

Dogs play an important part in anti-crime activities. Among the most efficient members of the Detroit Police Department, says "Popular Mechanics Magazine," are seven shepherd dogs which have a perfect record in stamping out crime in the lonely sections which they patrol. Every night each dog walks a beat with a policeman and so efficient have the animals become that not a single house prowler has been reported in their district.

Hamilton, Ont.—Building permits for the first three months of 1931 in Hamilton totalled $1,264,550, as compared with $1,362,450 for the similar quarter of 1930, which is considered a favorable showing in view of general world conditions.

How Fast and How Far Can Humans Fly

Our Future Airplane Speeds Will Be Almost Unlimited—But Man Must Train His Body and His Senses to Withstand the Strain, Says Noted Army Aviator

By Lieutenant Lester J. Maitland, in The New York Herald-Tribune.

Man will be able to fly great distances, at tremendous altitudes and with unheard-of speed, as soon as he can train his body, his nerves and his eyes to take advantage of the machinery engineering genius will put at his disposal.

This is my answer to the three questions of how fast?—how high?—how soon?—that are continually being asked by every person remotely interested in aviation.

How soon the human machine can be trained along these lines still remains to be seen. In the light of the achievements of our present-day flyers, I would say that the day is not far off.

Many records have been broken in recent years. Planes have climbed distances into the sky hitherto believed impossible. Over 40,000 feet above the earth, man-made machines piloted by human eagles have soared and come down safely.

A plane piloted by Squadron Leader Oriebar of the Royal Air Force has rushed through the air at a speed of more than 350 miles an hour. And the feat of remaining in the air for weeks at a time has passed into the realm of the usual.

And to the public asking just how such records affect commercial aviation, my answer is: The whole future of commercial flying is bound up in these experiments.

The machinery that has so lightened the work of the farmer was achieved through experimentation. The automobiles that now travel at so swift a pace over our roads came from the first uncertain "gasoline buggy" after years of hard, gruelling tests.

Just so the airplane of the future will emerge from its present adolescent stage into a thing of now undreamed perfection.

Nothing is impossible in connection with irplanes. Twenty-five years ago the thought of man flying in heavier-than-a craft was regarded as ridiculous. And yet, look what man has accomplished.

He has not only learned to keep himself aloft, but has been able to fly oceans, conquer all sorts of hazards and even carry on successful warfare from the clouds.

What, then, can we not accomplish in the same amount of time in the future?

We can only judge the possibility of future accomplishments in the light of past ones, and, taking the last twenty-five years of progress as a standard, the vista that opens out before students of aviation is practically unlimited in its scope of possibilities and probabilities.

Think of arising at a fairly early hour in New York, having breakfast and, due to the difference in time, arriving on the West Coast in time to carry on a day's work!

This is not idle dreaming. It is possible. The great strides aviation has made in the last few years bring nearer and nearer the possibility of man's being able to bend time and space to his will.

This fast time, according to scientists, will be made in the upper regions of the air.

The efforts made by flyers to-day to reach the ultimate ceiling are far more important than a mere desire to shatter a record.

It is up there, at a height incomprehensible to the ordinary person, that air lanes may be found over which the planes of the future will fly at lightning speed.

It is already known that in these upper regions there are winds that blow at hundreds of miles an hour. It requires no great stretch of the imagination to realize the desirability of a fast plane's taking advantage of a wind blowing 300 miles an hour.

We know from Lieutenant Orlebar's record that planes can be flown at more than 300 miles an hour. We also know that there are swift trade winds in the upper regions. Knowing these two things, the next step is to combine the two and thus increase the speed of our flying.

These upper regions lure every flyer on. They hold mysteries, and at the same time they hold the greatest possibilities.

Here again the flyer's physical ability is taxed to the utmost. Thin air, lack of oxygen and subzero weather are the great foes of flyers at the maximum "ceiling."

There are many menaces in altitude flying. But just now I want to say more about another part of flying that exacts its physical toll from the aviator—speed flying.

In the Pulitzer race in 1922, when I raced with Lieutenant Maughan, his plane reached a speed of more than 200 miles an hour.

He come down from the gruelling test completely exhausted, and said that at times when the plane was travelling at this then unprecedented speed he was absolutely lost in a haze. On every turn he said he was stunned almost into unconsciousness, and at one time he was completely "out." Were it not for that fact that he recovered almost instantly that race would have ended in tragedy.

I myself was thoroughly fagged out, and so I could understand his state of complete enervation.

After making sharp turns flying at fast speeds I have gone "blind." This condition is caused by the blood being drawn from the brain by the sudden turn in direction. While uncomfortable, it is only a temporary condition, for when the ship gets back on an even keel the head clears instantly. The sensation is somewhat like having a bright sun suddenly dispel a dark cloud.

At the present time the strain of fast flying is terrific. It is not only a physical strain but a nervous strain as well. When the upper air lanes are fathomed, however, there will be a great change in the status of flying.

Earth bound vehicles are restricted in their possibilities for speed. They travel now as fast as they can within the limits of safety. It is not because they are unable to go faster, but because it is not safe to do so.

The ground is covered with living things constantly crossing and recrossing each other's paths. Too great speed endangers not only the life of the speeder, but the rest of the world as well.

No such condition exists in the air. The speed limits of the airplane rest only on the ability of the pilot and the worth of his plane and motor.

My opinion is that the pilot is the chief one to be considered in the race for faster air travel. Engineers to-day can transfer from paper to reality faster planes than we are as yet able to fly.

When man is able to train his body to stand the strain, and his senses not to give way under the terrific pressure of tremendous speeds and great heights, he will find waiting for him, I am sure, the plane that will make it possible to eat up distance at a pace beside which the present 350 miles an hour will be but child's play.

As the airplane industry grows older, we are constantly finding out more and more about fuels. It is amazing, in the light of recent discoveries, how little we really knew at first about this most important part of flying.

Our main struggle now is to get an ideal fuel—one that will weigh less and furnish more power—and to find a means of lubricating the motor efficiently under all weather conditions.

As for the motors that are being made to-day—they are marvels of engineering construction. They stand up under hours of flying at terrific speeds. The motor of the future plane will undoubtedly be better, however, along with the rest of the machine.

No matter to what degree of efficiency the plane itself is developed, unless we find some way of successfully combating the lack of oxygen and the low temperature of the upper regions we cannot fly there.

The ordinary person cannot—and will not—travel by air unless it is made comfortable for him. It is our business as pilots and explorers of the air to undergo hardships to prove that fast flying is feasible. But we must offer comfort and safety before the world will fly with us.

Every one can use his imagination as to what the air liners of the future will be, what they will look like and whether they can in comfort span the continent in six hours. Science and the capacity of human beings for invention will bring these things to us.

But no matter whether the coming plane have a hermetically sealed cabin or something else, of one thing I am sure—all things are possible in the future of aviation.

About the best you can do is to go straight ahead, working all the time, minding your own business, drinking plenty of water, fighting for fresh air, dodging motor cars and hoping for the best.

Would You?

If I thought that a word of mine,
Perhaps unkind and untrue,
Would leave its trace on a loved one's face,
I'd never speak it—
Would you?

If I thought that a smile of mine
Might linger the whole day thru
And lighten some heart with a heavier part,
I'd not withhold it—
Would you?

When men in an older day jilted a girl she took it to heart, but now she takes it to court.

Wife No 999—"And do you love me, your majesty?"

King Solomon—"I certainly do, my dear. Why, you are one in a thousand."

Three days of Spring weather and some folks are already kicking about the heat. A young married couple have to pull together to make ends meet. Money isn't everything, but it's the only thing that keeps breaking from being a crime. The instant a man brings up the subject of thrift, his wife demands that he quit smoking cigars and playing golf. The objection to unemployment is that it affects the wrong people. Like father, like son—but like daughter and you don't give a darn for the rest of the family.

He—"Just as Burgess and the widow Jones started up the aisle to the altar, every light in the church went out."

She—"What did they do then?"

He—"Kept right on going. The widow knew the way."

Hew to the waistline, let the hips fall where they may.

Gladys—"After I'd sung my encore, I heard a gentleman from one of the papers call 'Fine! Fine!'"

Harry—"Goodness! And did you have to pay it?"

Why is a dog biting his tail a good manager? Because he makes both ends meet.

What is the difference between a butcher and a flapper? One dresses to kill and the other kills to dress.

Sometimes youngsters display an amazing grasp of popular ideas. Like the little boy who was asked by his mother recently:

Mother—"Were you a good little boy at school to-day?"

The Son—"Yes, mamma, I didn't get caught once."

Judge—"You stole eggs from this man's store. Have you any excuse?"

Accused—"Yes, I took them by mistake."

Judge—"How is that?"

Accused—"I thought they were fresh."

GAS relieved

WHAT most people call indigestion is usually excess acid in the stomach. Food has soured. The instant remedy is an alkali which neutralizes acids. But don't use crude helps. Use what your doctor would advise.
The best help is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. For the 50 years since its invention, it has remained standard with physicians. You will find nothing else so quick in its effect, so harmless, so efficient.
One tasteless spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in acid. The results are immediate with no harmful after-effects.
Once you learn this perfect way you'll never deal in any other manner with the headaches, gas, bloating, nausea, dizziness, indigestion, biliousness, etc., due to an over-acid stomach and bowels.
Be sure to get genuine Phillips'. Look for the name Phillips on the bottle. All druggists sell it—50c.

THERE are times when a baby is too fretful or feverish to be sung to sleep. There are some pains a mother cannot pat away. But there's no time when any baby can't have the quick comfort of Castoria! A few drops, and your little one is soon at ease—back to sleep almost before you can slip away.

Remember this harmless, pure vegetable preparation when children are ailing. Don't stop its use when Baby has been brought safely through the age of colic, diarrhea, and other infantile ills. Give good old Castoria until your children are in their teens! Whenever coated tongues tell of constipation; when there's any sign of sluggishness, just give them a more liberal dose. Castoria is so pleasant-tasting; all children love to take it.

Gyproc Says
"KEEP OUT"
to
Fire, Draughts, Rodents

GYPROC Wallboard that does not burn is the way of least expense when you desire to make alterations in your home, store, factory or on the farm. Use it for all walls, ceilings and partitions.

Gyproc is made from gypsum rock into sheets 4 to 10 feet long, 4 feet wide and ⅜ of an inch thick. It nails and cuts as easily as lumber with a minimum of waste or muss.

Gyproc is fire-resistant, easily and quickly erected, structurally strong and has insulation value. It is draught and vermin-proof as well as fire-safe.

Because it is ivory-coloured, it does not require decoration (when panelled) yet it is also a suitable base for Alabastine, Gyptex or wallpaper.

Consult your nearest dealer to-day. He will gladly supply you with a direction sheet on Gyproc. Or write for the interesting, free booklet, "Building and Remodelling with GYPROC". 373

MANITOBA LETTER

Winnipeg, April 17th.

Dear Editor:

We are still in Winnipeg, and enjoy the beautiful weather, and city very much.

I did enjoy being in the city, Easter; the churches were so beautifully decorated with flowers and the music was grand. I went to Young United in the morning. There must have been nearly one hundred joined the church.

In evening went to Grace United, and it was just the same there; flowers and music were lovely, and splendid sermons for the occasion; and such crowds, packed to the doors.

On Feb. 28th a friend and I went to see the new Sherbrooke swimming baths opened. Mayor Webb opened it with a few words. A little boy four years old, was the first to swim across the pool, it was wonderful to see the little fellow using his arms for all he was worth, he had a little life belt on. The instructor was on hand to help him out, as soon as he swam across. There were all kinds of stunts put on in the water. The water fairies were pretty.

March 3rd. Went to Trinity Hall, to hear a lecture by Mr. Springett, on British Israel; enjoyed it very much. One of the prettiest sights in the city is Eaton's delivery wagons. I saw sixteen, one after the other, their beautiful horses; the white wheels of their wagons, and red and black bodies, screened with wire. I would like to drive one of those horse's myself. The same day I saw twenty-two Hudson Bay delivery trucks, just leaving the store, painted green with gold lettering, not half so interesting as the horse's.

March 16th. Fire this morning just across the street—an old building that was to be taken down and new buildings to be erected right away. There are a lot of old buildings that need to be done away with; a large number of apartment buildings are going up.

April 1st. Had three granddaughters in to dinner tonight, as it was the birthday of Estelle Bailey, the eldest of the three; had a real nice time.

April 19th. A man in the Hudson Bay Store tried to steal a clock and put it under his coat. Some of the clerks saw him, and grabbed his coat, which came off. He lost his hat, and made for the door. A man just coming in, tried to trip him, but he did not fall, so got away—without coat, hat or clock. I have seen peaches, plums and pears from South Africa. They seem to have arrived in good condition.

April 29th. I went out for a short walk, and Portage was just jammed with cars. I asked a woman if there was a parade; she said no, just welcoming home the Elmwood Millionaires, the Junior Champions of Canada, Hockey Club. Winnipeg is very proud of her boys, also the seniors. The prizes were in Eaton's window; they sure are lovely.

Apl. 6th. Been attending the cooking school, in the Free Press building, put on by the Free Press and Electric Power Company. The electric appliances are very wonderful. Mrs. Stansfield and Miss Leslie gave lectures and demonstrations in cooking—quite a long way from the old brick ovens, but, of course, the baking was not a bit better; in fact, as I remember it, no bread has tasted like the bread baked in the old brick oven. Now everything can be done electrically—even to beat an egg. It was put on for two weeks. To pass away the time, for a little rest, a couple of dances were put on, and some singing.

Apl. 9th. There was a big dust storm today; got so dark, had to turn on the lights. I hear they are on the land in some places and have sown quite a lot of wheat.

Apl. 16th. The unemployed numbering over 6,000, put on a parade to the parliament buildings this afternoon. The police and some of the crowd came to blows. A few men are in hospital. One man was thrown against one of the Hudson Bay's big plate glass window, and went right through. He was badly cut about the head and bleeding profusely when I saw him, and he did not look as if he were one of the unemployed. A woman came up to me and asked me what the parade was all about, I said it was an unemployed demonstration, and I expected some of them had misbehaved and got into trouble. Well, she said, that will get them nowhere. She said they had just brought in a truck load of potatoes and received twelve cents a bushel. Whatever are we going to do? We cannot live on that. And so the cry goes on, farmers really don't know what to do. It is so dry, and if prices do not pick up, they would only be working for nothing.

They intend to put on another parade on Sunday—I hope nothing serious will happen—the city is doing all they can for them.

The other day a woman lost her purse; a man saw her drop it, picked it up, and went after her and gave it to her. Oh, she was so thankful. She asked him if he was one of the unemployed. He said, yes. Where are you staying? With the Salvation Army, he said. How wonderful, she said, I dropped twenty-five cents into their pot, Christmas. How wonderful it has come back to me so soon. There is twenty dollars in this purse. But she did not reward him for his honesty, perhaps next Xmas she will drop fifty cents into the pot.

BY-LAW NO. 698

A by-law to regulate the keeping and harbouring of dogs in the Village of Streetsville.

Whereas it is deemed expedient to regulate the keeping and harbouring of dogs in the Village of Streetsville.

Now therefore the Corporation of the Village of Streetsville by the Council theretof enacts as follows:

1. The assessors shall enter upon the assessment roll opposite the name of every person assessed the number of dogs, female dogs and spayed dogs respectively for which he is liable to be taxed.

2. The amounts hereinafter set forth as dog tax levies shall be entered upon the tax roll and shall be collected in the same manner as the Municipal taxes and said tax shall be due and collectable with the first instalment.

3. When the tax is demanded and is not paid, then person assessed may be summoned before a Police Magistrate who may direct the dog to be destroyed unless the tax and costs shall be paid within 10 days after the due date of the tax. For the purpose of carrying out such order the Constable may enter upon the premises of the owner and destroy the dog.

4. Any person when so required by the assessor shall forthwith deliver to him a statement in writing of the number of dogs owned by him or which are habitually kept upon the premises for which he is assessed by whomsoever owned.

5. Every person shall on or before the first day of February in each year procure from the Clerk or Treasurer or assessor, a tag for each dog owned or harboured by him and shall keep the tag securely fixed on the dog at all times during the year and until he procures a tag for the following year, provided, however, that the tag may be removed while the dog is being lawfully used for hunting in the bush. The fee for the said tag shall be 25c.

6. Every owner of a dog who neglects to obtain a tag and keep it securely fixed on his dog or who uses the tag upon a dog other than that for which it was issued shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding $10.00.

7. Every dog which is found off the premises upon which it is habitually kept without a tag and not under the control of any person by means of a leash may be killed.

8. Where an owner of a dog applies to the Clerk for a tag after the assessment roll has been returned and before the collector's roll has been delivered to the collector and the Clerk finds that such owner has not been assessed for the dog, the Clerk shall make the necessary entries in the roll, but when owner acquired ownership of the dog after the expiration of 6 months of the year he shall only be charged with one-half of the dog tax.

9. The owner or harbourer of any dog shall keep the said dog tied up on his premises during the months of April, May, June, July, August, September and October, provided however, that the dog may be taken upon the street by the owner or any person he may authorize, if under control by means of a leash.

10. The following levies are hereby imposed for the keeping and harbouring of dogs: male dogs $5.00; female $8.00; Spayed female $5.00.

10A. The owners of a kennel of pure bred dogs registered in the Canadian Kennel Club shall pay an annual tax of $10.00 to the Treasurer of the Municipality, and he shall not be liable for any further tax on such pure bred dogs.

11. It shall be the duty of the Chief Constable to enforce the clauses set forth in this By-law and where the Constable or his deputy or any person he may see fit to appoint, finds a dog running at large during the months of April, May, June, July, August, September and October either with or without a tag he shall take the dog or cause it to be taken in charge. He shall then make every endeavour to ascertain the owner of the dog and shall notify him and in case the dog is not removed within 96 hours it shall be the duty of the Chief Constable or his deputy or any person he may see fit to appoint to see that the dog is fed and watered during this period and to destroy the dog in a humane manner and the owner shall be required to pay any costs arising from the destroying of the dog provided, however that such costs shall not be more than $2.00. If the dog is released within the 96 hours a pound fee of $2.00 shall be charged.

12. Any person convicted of the breach of any of the provisions of this By-law shall be liable upon summary conviction before a Justice of Peace or a Magistrate to a fine not exceeding $50.00 for each offense exclusive of costs and in default of payment forthwith the said penalty and costs or the costs only may be levied by distress and sale of goods and chattels of the offender and in case there being no distress to be found, out of which such penalty can be levied the convicting Justice of Peace or Magistrate may commit the offender to the common jail of the County of Peel with or without hard labour for any period not exceeding 21 days unless the penalty and costs are sooner paid.

This By-law shall take full force and effect over any previous By-laws passed by any previous Council of the Village of Streetsville.

Passed in open Council this 8th day of April, 1931.

No woman is a machine

It is poor economy to try to wash rag rugs, bath mats, etc. at home. The average woman finds this work much too heavy to handle. The actual saving in money does not offset the risk involved. Send them to this laundry, where they will be washed by our special soft water process and returned to you in all their original brightness of color and softness of texture. We have six kinds of family wash service from which you may choose. The charges are very reasonable on all these. Phone and have a chat with one of our young ladies, who will assist you to make a selection—or stop any one of our courteous driver-salesmen.

OUR PRICES

1. Damp Wash—20 lbs. for $1.00—

Peel Junior Farmers Softball League

A Softball League for Peel County Junior Farmers has been organized with 4 teams competing, viz.
Bolton, O. Downey, manager
Ebenezer, N. Meyers, mgr.
Trinity, G. Howstrawser, mgr.
Streetsville, A. S. Arch, mgr.

Games will begin May 18 and end June 25th. They are for boys who are actively engaged in farming with the exception of three players. The last 3 players are not to compose the battery.

These rules and regulations were drawn up by the managers and Mr. J. C. Shearer Saturday night. The reason for the League is to keep the Junior Farmers interested in recreation in the summer. A suitable trophy will be provided, to be won three years before becoming the property of a club.

Here is the schedule of games—

May 18	Trinity vs Streetsville
21	Bolton vs Ebenezer
25	Ebenezer vs Trinity
28	Streetsville vs Bolton
June 1	Ebenezer vs Streetsville

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

Mary Kate O'Hara, in order to help Christopher Steynes escape the attentions of a Russian countess, agrees to go to Burlingame and act the part of his wife for a night. Her brother Martin sees her in Steynes' home and that night breaks in to protect his sister, as he thinks, from harm. He is taken for a burglar and shot. Police take Mary's name and address and she is in terror of her family finding out. Martin is released and returns home. Mary discovers that she loves Steynes and tells this to Cass Keating to whom she is engaged. Then Chris, fearing that Mary's good name will suffer, offers to marry her, but the offer is declined.

CHAPTER XXXIX.—(Cont'd.)

Chris turned to Tom.

"I know Throckmorton," he said.

"What!" Tom shouted.

"If you really want to go in for aviation, I'd be glad to give you a letter. Let me know, will you?"

"Oh, Ma!" Tom said, almost crying.

Chris shook hands with Cass.

"I don't have to tell you that I congratulate you," he said. "You have my best wishes. You're—" He paused. "You're very fortunate," he said simply.

"Thanks," Cass responded.

"Good-by, Mrs. O'Hara." Chris was bending over her, he had her hand. "I—I certainly admire your family," he said, with a brief laugh. They all laughed. "I think they're all—stars. They have the—the vitality of—of—"

"Anyway, they're all stars."

"You've seen us at our worst tonight," Mrs. O'Hara assured him. "Maybe you'd come out and have dinner with us some night, and we'd treat you a little better?"

"I'm sailing on Sunday."

"Well, good-bye and God bless you, then," Mary Kate's mother said, with a sudden penetrating glance that saw through all the layers of veneer to the lonely, little-boy heart of the child inside him. Her changed, lowered tone spoke only to that.

"Thank you," Chris said, stirred, clearing his throat. He blinked his eyes as he smiled at her, and bent his head suddenly over the fine work-worn, capable hand.

Then it was Mary Kate's turn. She stood by the door, and Chris took both her hands, and looked down at her, as he said, unexpectedly, incoherently:

"And you won't marry me?"

The girl looked very tall and very pale, and was oddly unsmiling as she answered, conventionally.

"No. But thank you for asking."

"Thank you." His face reddened and his voice thickened, and for a moment their hands held them united, and their bewildered eyes were fixed upon each other.

And it was as if both were asking the same question.

"What are we saying? What does all this mean! Is this good-bye?"

Suddenly Chris, laying aside hat and gloves with a quick gesture, gathered both her hands, against his heart, and bent over her, so that his browned, almost stern face was close to her own.

"There's one thing I left out, Mary," he said. "They may as well hear this, too.

"It's this," he went on, in a deadly silence. "I didn't count on this. But I love you very much. Did I say that?"

The ground began to sway gently beneath Mary Kate's feet. Waves—waves lifted her from the floor, and the drumming and rushing of many waters was in her ears.

"No," she whispered. "You did not say that!"

She turned to face the others in the kitchen; her shoulder almost touching Chris as she leaned back against him, his hand, that had been holding hers, still gripping her fingers, and his arm half about her. And it was as if, standing there, she measured two worlds—the one against the other.

On one side was only this protecting arm and this gripping hand. She knew little more of him.

And on the other were all the associations that she knew, were all her happy, adored, protected years. The kitchen, with its worn linoleum and familiar frying-pans and chairs and oilcloth-covered table. Mart, handsome and resolute and fiercely protecting; Tom, who was developing so rapidly now, who had come, just of late, so much more close to his older sister, who had seemed, just of late, to need her. Cass, clever and successful and devoted, planning a happy normal life with her—a forty-dollar flat, curtains, dishes, a wedding in the new Dominican church in a few weeks' time, years of love and labor shared, children, some day a country home.

And last, and first, and all the time, Mother. Mother, with whom she hurried, sleepy and chilly, to early church, and with whom she walked home, at peace, for her coffee and special Sunday roll. Mother, who had taught her, talked to her, scolded her, praised her, all her life long, even while she fumbled in her flat purse for movie money for "Mart and Mary Kate," or patiently thumped the heated iron that meant exquisite frills and blouses for the beloved eldest daughter.

To choose Chris meant no more kitchen, no more Cass, no more Tom—and in the dear home sense, at least, no more eager, ambitious, headstrong Marty.

It meant that she chose alienation, distance. It meant more—Mother.

CHAPTER XL.

"That's a strange thing to hear you say, Mr. Steynes," Mrs. O'Hara said, in the hush.

"I know it," Chris agreed, with a brief laugh.

Mary Kate continued to stand perfectly still, her bright eyes on the group in the kitchen, or watching Cass, and wondering Tom, and Mart in the big chair, with his arms bandaged, and her mother, puzzled and anxious and gentle, in the rocker. One of her hands had been locked in Chris' fingers, as she wheeled about, and their grip held, so that her arm was twisted behind her, and her bright head, with its rings of disordered coppery hair, was close to Chris's big shoulder.

"She's only a little girl—" Mrs. O'Hara said, troubled. "I don't know did you mean to say that to her—" she added, doubtfully.

"I didn't!" Chris admitted, unsmilingly. Mary Kate's eyes moved to his, and read what they saw there, and went back to the circle again.

"I never thought of this!" the mother murmured. "Maybe he only said it because your brother—" She paused.

Martin was looking at Chris with keenly suspicious eyes, now he said, uncomfortably.

"You didn't have to say that to Mary Kate, for all me."

"You didn't make me say it," Christopher answered promptly.

"If—if you felt that way," Martin pursued in the puzzled silence that held them all, "you could have told her herself. Not like this!"

"It never occurred to me to tell her, herself," Chis answered again, with a faint, frowning scowl.

"Then—then you wouldn't feel he meant it, would you, Mary Kate?" Martin appealed, uneasily, to his sister.

Again her eyes moved swiftly to Christopher's, and again she did not speak, continuing to measure the room with a bright, curious, little-girl look, rather tightening her hold upon Chris's hand, behind her, so that she was drawn even more closely toward his breast.

The light from the single lamp, the green-shaded lamp underneath which the children did their evening homework, wavered softly in the clean, homely kitchen. The clock above the sink ticked audibly, and the hot water faucet dripped a few intermittent drops upon the scoured zinc. Above the drainboard a window was opened to the soft warm night.

"She's promised to Cass, here," Mrs. O'Hara observed, with the little indicative gesture of a thumb.

"Mary is," Chris said dispassionately.

Cass had thrown away his cigarette, and was sitting back in his chair, with his arms crossed, and his shrewd, kind, half-smiling young eyes fixed upon the girl. Now he said, undisturbedly:

"But I'd never hold her. She knows that. She's as free now as if she had never known me."

At the sound of his voice Mary Kate disengaged herself from Christopher's hold, and crossed the kitchen to the chair she had occupied at the beginning of this incredible and dreamlike evening; the chair at the table, where she could cup her chin in her hands, and look at them all without moving a muscle.

The normalness, the generosity of Cass's words, his untroubled manner and confident glance appeared to waken her from a trance.

"I don't think you're going to throw me over, are you, Mary Kate?" he asked. A sudden smile lighted her eyes, and she answered, speaking for the first time since the strange, tense scene began.

"Ah, no; you know I'd never do that!"

"We're hunting houses, and we're talking about a wedding, aren't we?" Cass asked, affectionately, smilingly.

"Sure—sure we are," she admitted, hurriedly, nervously.

Chris was standing near the door, his hands in the square big side pockets of his big coat. His head had fallen a little forward, his eyes moved from one speaker's face to another.

"You know I wouldn't hold you, whatever promise you might have made me, don't you, Mary Kate?" Cass asked.

"Oh, no," she answered, in her clear, quick, troubled voice. "I know you'd want me to do what I wanted to do—what I had to do."

"She'd be happier with one that knew her own, sir," Mrs. O'Hara said to Chris, rather timidly, rather appealingly.

"I know she would!" Christopher admitted, not ceasing to frown faintly, not moving his eyes from Mary Kate.

"And isn't it happiness that counts with all of us?" the mother pursued.

Christopher glanced at her nodded. "Happiness counts with all of us," he echoed, in a decisive voice.

But still there was something unsaid, something unfinished.

Song

April, April,
Laugh thy girlish laughter;
Then, the moment after,
Weep thy girlish tears;
April, that mine ears
Like a lover greetest,
If I tell thee, sweetest,
All my hopes and fears
April, April,
Laugh thy golden laughter,
But, the moment after,
Weep thy golden tears!

Quiet Rooms

Montlucon, July.—I was looking for rooms in a hotel near the railway. As the landlady and I went along a corridor upstairs, I said I hoped the noise of trains could not be heard in the bedrooms. "One hears nothing," she answered positively. She opened the door of a room, and a tremendous engine-shriek met us, seeming to drive us both back from the threshold. She shut the door, and tried another one, and we were met instantly by another tremendous engine shriek. She burst out laughing. I laughed too. If she had not proved her sense of humor I might have walked straight out of the hotel. But her sense of humor kept a customer with a sense of humor. I got quiet rooms at the back.—Arnold Bennett, in "Journal of Things New and Old."

"THESE HARD TIMES"

"The hard times and scarcity of money makes it more important than ever to economize. One way I save on clothes is by renewing the color of faded or out-of-style dresses, coats, stockings, and underwear. For dyeing, or tinting, I always use Diamond Dyes. They are the most economical ones by far because they never fail to produce results that make you proud. Why, things look better than new when redyed with Diamond Dyes. They never spot, streak, or run. They go on smoothly and evenly, when in the hands of even a ten year old child. Another thing, Diamond Dyes never take the life out of cloth or leave it limp as some dyes do. They deserve to be called 'the world's finest dyes!'"

What New York Is Wearing

BY ANNABELLE WORTHINGTON

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern

Fashion: this model of brown and white printed crepe silk and you'll love it.

It has splenoid points so kind to the mature figure. Note how the applied front that extends to the waistline narrows its breadth. And how the dip in the hip seaming at the front gives the figure a lengthened line. The skirt plaits also help to carry out a vertical line.

The sleeve flounce and waist frill are a delicate pink shade crepe. White lace tucked in at the neckline is dainty and feminine.

Style No. 3076 that may be copied exactly at a substantial saving is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52 inches bust.

Navy blue flat crepe silk with tiny vest of white crepe is exceedingly modish and serviceable.

Size 36 requires 4¾ yards 39-inch, with 1 yard 5-inch lace.

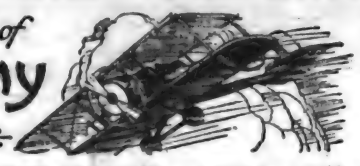
The Song of the Robin

By E. CHESTER ALLEN



The slender rowans are grey and bare,
But there's promise of May in the April air,
The grass grows green by the garden gate,
And a robin calls to his tardy mate,
From the highest peak of the rowan trees.
To his mate who is coming o'er southern seas—
"Come! Come! Dearie, dearie!
Come to me quick. I am weary, weary!
Come to me! Come to me!
Quick! Quick!"

A soft green covers the rowan trees;
There's a touch of June in the late May breeze;
And the turquoise eggs are snugly laid
In a nest 'neath the lilac's scented shade.
But the robin calls from the rowans high,
When the rain-clouds drift from the eastern sky—
"Quick! Quick! Cover them, cover them!
Close! Close! Hover them, Hover them!
Cover them! Cover them!
Quick! Quick!"

The rowans are decked with coral red;
And the lilac blooms are long, long dead.
The autumn skies are cool and clear;
But the clay-built nest is empty and drear;
And the robin's note is tender and low,
Tense with the fear of the frost and snow—
"Haste! Haste! Come with me, come with me!
South! South! Follow me, follow me!
Follow me! Follow me!
Quick! Quick!"

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

What came before: Captain Jimmy and Scottie are flying over China. They are lost in the darkness between the lines of two fighting armies, with men from both sides in their plane. Suddenly one of the Chinese attacks Captain Jimmy.

For a moment I was paralysed. My fierce attacker raised his weapon to strike. Then before I could move, a thin spare form hurled itself at my assailant, careless of the dangerous knife point. It was one of the three men we had rescued from the tree on the day before. I held my breath, amazed that the timid, shrinking Chinese should display such nerve. Springing to help him, I hit the big fellow on the chin with all my strength.

By this time the plane was in a spin, and we were so near the ground that there was no way but to land. I had lost all sense of direction for the moment, and had no way of telling whether we were over enemy territory or not.

Scarcely had the wheels stopped rolling before an excited Chinese sentry showed up and challenged us.

"Ask him where we are?" I directed the interpreter.

"Him say much bad Chinese bloy—him belong enemy!"

"Tell him I belong enemy, too." I said.

"He say, you clazy—you make muchee noise—wakee Colonel—getee velly mad—shootee bang—all done."

By which I gathered we were in the enemy camp, that the Colonel would hear the plane, get mad at being disturbed, and have us shot. Not a very encouraging prospect.

Then a Chinese sergeant and a squad of soldiers appeared out of the inky darkness. When he saw the three deserters from his camp he raised a terrible rumpus. First he accused us of stealing his men, then after a long pow-wow with the three, they evidently convinced him that they had been taken prisoner, and we had helped them to escape. Anyway he took them back—and probably they were far better off in their own army than among the enemy.

So much for the three captives, but our own position was extremely dangerous. Something had to be done quickly, or soon we would all be marched to headquarters.

"Tell the sergeant that I brought this plane to give General Ming." I said. "Tell him to march two soldiers ahead and keep the road clear."

Then I turned the searchlight on and taxied along the road behind the two soldiers. After a few minutes the road straightened out for a stretch of a quarter of a mile or so. Now was our chance!

In an instant I snapped on the searchlight and opened the throttle full. With a roar the plane fairly leaped forward and rushed down the road on the two soldiers who fled in panic.

Bang—Bang—went the rifles of the soldiers who followed us, and a few bullets ripped through the wings; but we were gathering speed rapidly. A moment more and we were in the air, free as a bird.

Gas was running low, however, so we headed back for our own lines, with the help of our searchlight we picked out a railway line. Spiraling down, we bumped to a stop on the rough ground and scrambled out. While the unknown Chinaman who had tried to knife me followed cautiously.

Guess who it was. The last person I ever expected to see—Colonel Tien of General Lu's Army. A fine chap—that Colonel Tien. Three times I had to knock him out to make him behave.

Then he explained that he thought I was trying to take him over to the enemy camp. In that case I could understand why he was so desperate, for it would have gone hard with Colonel Tien to be caught by the enemy.

Far to the north of us a locomotive whistled. A little clump of bushes grew beside the railway track, and toward these we pushed and tugged our plane, to get it out of sight. Another few minutes more and a freight train rounded the curve stopping not over two hundred yards from our hiding place.

Size of U.S. Dogs Reduced in Decade

Pure-Bred Ones Increasing in Number as Mongrels Decrease

Washington.—There is about one dog to every 26 human beings in the United States, the Department of Commerce has found out.

The movement of population from the country to the city during the past decade has not resulted in decreasing the dog population, but has changed its makeup by reducing the size of dogs and increasing the number of pure-bred animals to make up for the decrease in the number of just plain dogs.

The department has discovered that the well known fox terrier maintains a high degree of popularity, because it is small and does well in cities.

Men are not so keen for the Pekingese, Chow and Pomeranian, and they prefer the terrier as "a lot of dog in a small package."

POOR MOTHER—?

Mothers, mothers. Doesn't nearly half the world consist of mothers? Types and models countless in number pass across the changing scene of earthly life. There is the little old-fashioned mother who still toils and works night and day for her children. And there is the more sophisticated modern mother who sees she has time for the almost daily and much-coveted game of bridge. There is the careless mother and the goodemother, the universal mother.

But it does not matter in what station of life she walks, there is no one knows better than she herself what it means to raise a family of 2, 3, 4, and occasionally the "daily tea party of eleven or twelve children." The home is a factory and its machinery is made up of exceedingly delicate and complicated mechanism. If the work is well done or ill who knows better than the world that it owes all its progress or limitations to the type of home from which its individuals sprung.

How time flies! and there are only twenty-four hours in a day. What is left undone Monday must be done Tuesday, and, if Tuesday goes by with its tasks unfinished, the pile just grows higher, and some day there must be a reckoning. The little child so soft and sweet is nevertheless the most exacting and tyrannical of all in his wee commands. He sees neither sickness nor is sympathetic for that sometimes extremely tired mother feeling. No one knows better the rigid demands made upon her for the doing of endless little things which must be done.

Yet with every hour filled to overflowing while the family is growing she finds herself sometimes warned by those with more leisure, or perhaps sees in some newspaper article that it is most necessary for her to broaden out. She is told she should learn about the outside world and its doings or, when the family is grown, alack and alas, her own good husband will not be able to talk to her when they are old and alone again, for she'll wake up suddenly to find herself far behind him.

This is indeed disturbing, but the day is only twenty-four hours long and the babies' clothes are all dirty again, company is coming to-morrow, and there's not a thing in the house to eat. "What was that you said about Russia yesterday, John, the baby cried and I didn't just get it?"

Perhaps it is up to John to see that she does know about Russia and about politics and the newest thing in electricity. John works hard, but his working hours can be counted from eight to five, or from seven to six. He must have time to read his paper and does read it. What better way can he find to see what he has retained than to put into words what he has read to mother after the baby has stopped crying and there is quiet while the dishes are being washed and put away. John might even wipe the dishes. Oh, yes, there are ways and ways.

But as years pass and she sees the gradual consummation of her work in her growing family she goes on less dismayed. Well she knows that home daughter, the sunshine of the soul, the happiness of the heart and the companionship of years are ties that bind securely until the time for the great parting arrives.

Yes, mother reigns supreme in her kingdom of the home, and mixed up with her endless doing of little things is the boundless faith she has in me—her child.

Mother asks for few things, but what she wants she wants. She says, "If my children want to please me, write to me regularly. If you can't write a long letter write a short one, and even a few words is much better than nothing at all, for it shows that you think of me.

Another thing, do not think that you need get me a big present for Mother's Day when the struggle of living is hard. That is not the idea of Mother's Day. It makes it a burden which is the last thing a true mother wants, but the little kind thought of a loving card of remembrance, or the giving of a carefully raised flower or small gift is immeasurably dear to me, my children."

TWILIGHT HOUR STORY

"About Chicks and Other Little Friends"

Chapter 20.

Uncle Will and Aunt Kate were bringing Billy home in their big car after his two weeks' holiday in the big city and he could hardly wait till he got home. He kept thinking about Mamma and Daddy and all his good little animal friends. Of course, all along the way he enjoyed passing the green fields and the woods and he laughed out loud at so many things he saw on the way. Once he shouted, "Oh, look at that young colt in the field over there. Isn't he fine? I wish I had a colt." Sure enough there was a frisky little horse playing with its mother horse, jumping and kicking up his heels and shaking his head just as though he were laughing. You know Billy might have a colt some day, for who knows perhaps Betty, the other horse in the barn who works out in the field with George all day long might have a little colt next year.

Well, after a long nice drive in that big car Billy just couldn't help calling out after he kept looking and looking for something straight ahead that he expected to see any minute now, "Oh, look Uncle Will, there's our barn away over there and our house. I know it because it's got a white fence all around it."

Uncle Will smiled and just kept on driving and soon they turned in at the lane. Billy jumped out first, for he was so excited about getting home and he just got out of the door when something knocked him right over so that he fell smack on the ground and then felt a soft, wet tongue licking his cheek and he just couldn't get up, for there was Rover standing over him, holding him down for he was so glad to see him. Billy was awfully glad to see Rover, too, and he hugged him back. Well, after a while he did let Billy get up, and oh, when he got up, there was Mamma and Daddy looking just the same as ever and smiling with big smiles that were only for Billy. It's wonderful to be loved like that, isn't it, children? There's nothing like a mamma and daddy.

After all the noise was over and Billy was telling Mamma about all the fun he had when he was away, he felt something soft and warm rubbing around his feet. Well, well, here was Fluffy come to say "Hello" in her own way, for she was purring as hard as she could. You see when so much noise was going on Fluffy hid behind a chair until everything was quiet again. Kittens don't like a noise very much, so she thought she'd wait for a while. Cats and dogs are very different, aren't they? Billy picked her up and petted her and she put her paw on his cheek to see if it was really him.

Then he said, "But Mamma, how is Topsy and her little kittens?"

"You'll be surprised when you see them, dear, they've grown so big."

So they went out together to the barn. Here was Molly the cow, waiting to be milked. She called Billy when she saw him, "Moo-oo" in a low voice and, after he petted her, they walked on to George and Betty, the two big shiny black horses. They stamped their feet and threw up their heads for Billy to remember them. Horses have such nice silky noses to pet. Did you ever know that? All at once here was Topsy and, mind you, she made a big jump and landed right on his shoulder, for she was glad to see him, too, but when he went to her box where the kittens were, not one was to be seen. Do you know where they were? Well, they were afraid of Billy and were all hiding, you see, they forgot about him, they were so little when he went away.

"Mamma, where is Jimmy Chick and the other three little chicks that look so much alike?"

"Oh, they're alright, but you're going to have a surprise when you see them, Billy," said mother, "and that's what we'll tell you about next time."

Birds Scarce in Europe

Constance.—This year's northward migration of birds from Africa to sunny Italy resulted in disaster, as their climatic sense was insufficient to warn them of the unexpected snowfalls and cold waves which swept Central Europe in mid-March.

After negotiating the Alps and finding their familiar resting places in the South German Plains and the Black Forest covered deep with snow, the feathered tribes flew restlessly back and forth for days seeking food and resting places. Finally those not too exhausted conquered the instinct which drove them northward and flew back to sunnier climes, but swarms, weakened by the hard flight, perished of hunger and cold on the plateaus of Wurttemburg, Baden, Bavaria, and the Rhineland. Larks and snipe will be especially rare in Northern Europe this year as a result of the late snowfall.

Pride is at the bottom of all great mistakes.—John Ruskin.

Sunday School Lesson

May 10. Lesson VI—The Parable of the Pounds—Luke 19: 11-26. Golden Text—It is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful. —1 Corinthians 4: 2.

ANALYSIS.

I. TWO PARABLES OR ONE?
II. FAITHFUL STEWARDSHIP.
III. GROWTH THROUGH USE.

I. TWO PARABLES OR ONE?

It has often been noted that there is a very close connection between this parable of the "Pounds" in Luke and the parable of the "Talents" in Matt. 25: 14-30. The resemblances are as remarkable as the differences. This does not, of itself, create serious difficulty for us, for we might have simply two versions of the same parable (the parables must have been told and retold many times before they were written down), or there is no reason why Jesus himself should not have used two very similar parables or the same parable with variations. A much greater difficulty in the parable of the "Pounds" lies in this, that apparently we have two stories mixed together. One is a story of a nobleman who goes far away to be made king, as, for instance, nobles of Palestine not infrequently went to Rome to receive their title from the imperial city. In this story the nobleman's fellow-citizens do not want him to be made king, and send a deputation to protest. He, on his return, has to deal with the malcontents. In the second story a man goes away and leaves some of his capital with his servants that they may trade with, and on his return he deals with them according to their faithfulness to their trust. The two stories have really very little connection, and the careful reader will notice that vs. 13, 14 do not go together. One is about "servants," the other about "citizens." It is not possible to solve this difficulty with certainty. We may either suppose that two separate parables of Jesus have here been rather clumsily combined into one, or we may suppose that the original parable of Jesus, as in the case of the parable of the talents, was concerned with faithful stewardship.

II. FAITHFUL STEWARDSHIP.

In v. 13, there are ten servants, but we learn the fate of only three, as in the parable of the talents. This is not a matter of importance. It is important, however, that in this parable each servant receives the same sum. It is presumably the servants' capacity that the master wishes to test. The sum entrusted is a remarkably small one; the mina or pound was only worth some twenty dollars.

V. 16. We should remember that this is a parable or story taken from ordinary everyday life. One cannot argue from the story that Jesus approved of what we today call "Capitalism," or that Christians are justified in speculating in the stock market. We should have expected v. 17 to say, "because you have been faithful in little, you shall be entrusted with much." It seems strange that a man should be rewarded with ten cities for his faithfulness in respect of twenty dollars. Perhaps the reference to cities is connected with the other story of the nobleman (not the master) who goes away to get a kingdom.

V. 21. The servant tells his master that he is well known "or his sharp practices. To "take up what you did not lay down" was a proverbial expression for fraudulently appropriating the fruits of another man's labor. This verse, then, makes it very clear that the parable is not an allegory, and that neither God nor Christ correspond with the master. The story illustrates the duty of faithful stewardship, not the character of God, nor his attitude to his children.

III. GROWTH THROUGH USE.

V. 24. Perhaps the speakers here are the crowd who are listening to Jesus. They have been following the story with conviction, for they have known hard-headed, austere business men of this type, and the story rings true to them till Jesus says, "Take away his pound and give it to the man who has ten." At that point, Jesus' audience protests, "But surely that is absurd. Why the man has ten pounds already!" Jesus replies in effect, "No, I meant what I said, for there is a principle that to him that hath shall be given; and from him that hath not, shall be taken even that which he hath."

This principle in v. 26 is quoted also in Luke 8: 18 and may often have been on the lips of Jesus. In the parable, the principle applies to money, but that was not the sense in which Jesus meant it. The illustration is taken from the stewardship of money, but the application of it is to the use of the talents given us by God. For instance, the voice of conscience is a talent. We may develop it or we may deaden it. In Luke 8: 18, the application seems to be—we have a faculty of attention to the teaching of Jesus. If we exercise that faculty, we grow in grace; if we do not, we lose the faculty. "Take heed, therefore, how ye listen."

Women Journalists Have Benefited Papers and Magazines

Lork Luke Hopes for Daily Edited by Woman and Without Political Leaders—Tract Society Publishing Books in 200 Tongues

London—"I look forward with interest to the day when a national daily will be edited by a woman, and, I hope, have no political leaders at all," Lord Luke declared at a reception given in his home in Portman Square recently, to mark the appointment of Miss Anne Hepple as the new editor of the Woman's Magazine, published by the Religious Tract Society.

"A generation ago," he continued, "the arrival of the woman journalist was making something of a sensation in Fleet Street, though—perhaps owing to an oversight—the fact was not recorded as such—on the evening posters. The male journalist regarded her with a good deal of suspicion.

"But she came, and her influence has been profound. She has brought into the magazine pages of our newspapers and the lively columns of our magazines an attention to detail and make up and technique which was badly needed."

"During the last 35 years, I have come in contact with the question of advertising from many points of view and I have of recent years been struck by the growth of feminine interest in newspapers and magazines.

Miss Hepple said that until recently she had shared in the popular misconception that the Religious Tract Society's only function was the publication of its world-famous tracts. Actually, she added, it is publishing some of the finest books in English and 200 other languages.

Miss Hepple deplored the appeal made by some of the cheap literature and films offered to the young people to-day. She considered that one way of combating this was to divert the public mind to more agreeable topics. This is the self-imposed duty of the Religious Tract Society, she said, which is carrying out its purpose in this and every other country except Russia.—Special from The Christian Science Monitor Bureau.

"Isn't spring glorious? Don't you think it is the best time in the year?"

"I should say nod."

Spring Pools

These pools, that, though in forests, still reflect
The total sky almost without defect,
And like the flowers beside them, chill and shiver,
Will like the flowers beside them soon be gone,
And yet not out by any brook or river,
But up by roots to bring dark foliage on.

The trees that have it in their pent-up buds
To darken nature and be summer woods—
Let them think twice before they use their powers
To blot out and drink up and sweep away
These flowery waters and these watery flowers
From snow that only melted yesterday.

See Six Types of Nebulae

Mount Wilson, Calif.—Six different forms of spiral nebulae are seen at immense distances by the 100-inch telescope here. Their shapes range from a flattened spinning top to a circle with a bar across its center. They are described by Dr. Edwin Hubble, the foremost astronomer in the world actually studying very distant space.

THE HUMAN SOUL

God's greatest temple on this globe is the human soul; it was His first temple in Paradise, and it will be His last temple on earth—and to see it in ruins might well prevail to make the angels weep.

Vast Stone Tapestry Ready For Exposition in Paris

The most gigantic sculptural undertaking in history, the stone tapestry of the Permanent Colonial Museum at the International Colonial and Overseas Exposition in Paris, is now being completed for the opening.

This vast work, covering the walls of the great museum to a height of forty-two feet and a length of 325 feet, has occupied the time of twenty artists under A. Janniot, noted French sculptor, for the last two years. Its theme is the "running story" of France's growth as an empire. In technical conception the work closely parallels the authentic Flemish and French cloth tapestries of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries.

Relics of Primitive Man Discovered n Florida

Washington.—Scientific search is underway for the first citizen of Florida. Representatives of the National Museum believe they are on the ancient fellow's track, but have not encountered him in picking through the fossil remains discovered so far. But James W. Gidley, who conducted the 1930 expedition into Florida, has just reported a find of so-called artifacts. Gidley believes his find constitutes additional evidence of early man in Florida.

"The first of these," he says, "is a crudely formed arrow or spear point. It was lying directly under one of the large bones of a poorly preserved skeleton of a mastadon. The other artifact is a small bone awl."

Rural Health Training

Toronto.—Training doctors to take charge of County Health Units is now being undertaken at the University of Toronto. Dr. G. M. Little and Dr. W. G. Saunders are taking the post-graduate work in public health prior to taking charge of the newly-formed units at Red Deer and High River, Alberta. County Health Units are small full-time medical departments of health, serving rural areas in the same way that a medical department of Health protects a city from disease. Rural Quebec is now about 50 per cent. covered by these new units.

Gold Bullion Value Rises

The total value of crude gold bullion for the first two months of 1931 amounted to $6,517,254, as compared with $5,252,395 for the same period of 1930, or an increase of almost 23 per cent. Ontario's gold mills produced crude bullion to the value of $35,518,862 in 1930 and handled 2,946,623 tons of ore in the process.—Canada Week by Week.

Father of Ten In Hospital

When you have a small farm with a heavy mortgage and a family of ten children to look after, you don't feel like passing up any chances to earn a few extra dollars. This was Daniel A.'s position in Northern Ontario. He used to work in the evenings, cutting wood and doing chores for his neighbors, because the demands for food and clothes at home were so great. Daniel kept it up for several years but in time the strain told on him, and he developed tuberculosis. He was admitted to the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives, very ill indeed.

However, rest, good food and kindly care are performing their customary miracle for Daniel at this Institution, and there is every hope that he will soon be sent home, able to take care of his family again.

Your subscription in aid of this excellent work will be very welcome. Please send it to Mr. A. E. Ames, 223 College Street, Toronto.

Young Airman In Grave Difficulty

Little Ted is going to be an airman some day. He has a picture book full of airplane pictures, and also an airplane which he wistfully tells you is down in the basement, broken. Although he is only seven, he seems to know already that there is a big difference between him and other little boys he hears shouting and playing out on the lawn. And, indeed, there is a difference! Like the broken plane, there is damage to the little body that will take long to mend.

The patient nurses and the kindly doctors at the Queen Mary Hospital are doing their best, and hope to restore the wasted lungs to health and vigor. Children are very susceptible to consumption, but nine out of ten can be saved if taken in time. This work requires the co-operation of many, many friends if it is to grow in usefulness.

Your assistance is greatly needed. Will you kindly send a subscription? Please address it to Mr. A. E. Ames, 223 College Street, Toronto.

The Only Home She Knows

Little blue-eyed, auburn-haired Gracie, was born in the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives, where her mother, not yet in her twenties, is a patient. The only home Gracie has ever known, or is likely to know for some time to come, is the Queen Mary Hospital and Preventorium. No, she has not her mother's ailment, but constant care is needed that she may not develop the disease.

Sometimes she grows to see her mother, but can only talk with her at some distance, for it would be dangerous for mother to take her in her arms as she longs so to do.

Such are the dramas, the tragedies and the rescues daily enacted at these hospitals, in their never-ending, life-saving work.

Your help is urgently needed. Will you please send a contribution to W. A. Charlton and A. E. Ames, 223 College Street, Toronto 2.

PROTECTIVE FOODS

A properly balanced diet is needed by all, both old and young, in order that their bodies may be adequately includes regulalry in his diet each day nourished and that they may enjoy good health.

To secure a balanced diet, it is necessary to use a wide variety of foods. No normal person need worry about the lack of this or that particular substance in his diet if, in addition to using a wide variety of foods he include regularly in his diet each day, milk and the leafy vegetables.

The name "protective foods" has been given very aptly to milk and the leafy vegetables because of their ability to make good the deficiencies of other foods. This may be expressed more directly by saying that the use of these protective foods makes certain that the diet is properly balanced and that the person using them will not suffer the loss of health and strength which occurs if the diet is not so balanced.

Milk is the one food for which we have no satisfactory substitute. It is the most important food for young children. It is not, however, a food whose use should be limited to children. It is valuable throughout life and, therefore, milk and milk products should form a regular part of the diet at all ages.

Milk is food containing about twelve per cent. of solids. From one quart of milk is secured about half a cupful of butter fat, milk sugar and small amounts of different minerals.

We do not see these substances in milk as we use it because they are dissolved. They are there, however, and when we take milk into our bodies, we receive all the nourishment which comes from such food elements.

Milk gives us the food substances which build up the body and repair worn out tissues. Milk is rich in calcium (lime) and phosphorus. The green leafy vegetables are also a source of calcium. The use of milk assures the body of sufficient calcium which, if deficient early in life, results in the improper formation of the bones and teeth.

Vitamins are present in milk. Their importance in promoting growth and development in children and in keeping both children and adults well is recognized. Vitamins are essential in our diet, and we can safely rely upon milk, and green leafy vegetables for a large proportion of the vitamins we require.

One of the simplest and most effective ways of protecting health is through the regular use of the "protective foods"—milk and the green leafy vegetables.

DEVELOPING & PRINTING of the PRIZE-WINNING KIND

IN APPRECIATION OF A GREAT VICTORY

A thoughtful presentation took place Wednesday night at the banquet tendered in Montreal to the Canadiens Hockey Team, winners of the Stanley Cup for the second time in succession and which is emblematic of the Professional Hockey championship of the World.

In appreciation of retaining the trophy in Canada and for the splendid showing made by the individual players of the team, the Gillette Safety Razor Company of Canada, Limited, presented each member of the team with a beautiful Razor and complete shaving outfit. Each set was imprinted with the individual's name in gold leaf lettering.

The presentation was made by Mr. J. S. Lavene, Managing Director of the Company who said "I do not know of a better way to show our appreciation of the very fine performance of the Canadiens team this season — it is indeed a privilege and a pleasure to do our bit by presenting to each player a Gillette Safety Razor."

Photograph shows Mr. Lavene presenting gift to Howie Morenz, the great scintillating star, while Cecil Hart, manager of the successful team, looks on.

Dedication Services at Trinity Church

All Services Well Attended New Hall a Credit to the Church and Community

Within 13 years of the century mark, Trinity Anglican Church is showing a vigor that would be in keeping with its first quarter century and that demonstrates in a marked degree that the religious life of the congregation is growing and developing in a highly satisfactory degree. The most recent features in its long history, already marked by notable events, the installation of a new organ and the erection of a beautiful parish hall, bring the parish into the forefront of the history of the Diocese of Toronto, and set the parish in an enviable position as a live and progressive unit in the aggregation that makes up this great field of the Anglican Church in Canada.

It was with feelings of mingled pride and gratification that the congregation met on Sunday morning last to witness the dedication of the new organ, a very fine instrument, and one fitting to grace a church so hallowed with memories of a militant past as Trinity Church. The dedication was performed by Rev. Dean Horan of Wycliffe College, Toronto, in the unavoidable absence of Archdeacon Perry, brother of the incumbent of the parish, Rev. R. J. W. Perry, who was to have performed this very pleasant duty. Rev. Mr. Perry took part in a service that must have gladdened his heart, as the culmination of seven profitable and very useful years as rector of Trinity Church.

The choir, very fittingly, rendered special musical numbers, including a very fine anthem, suited to the occasion, in which the solos were taken by Mrs. H. Wright, Miss Bessie Adamson and Mr. George L. McClintock. Miss Madeline Roy of St. Clement's Church, Toronto, presided at the organ for this special occasion, and under her capable handling the congregation was enabled to learn what a valuable addition has been made to the aids to worship in the church.

In solemn and memorable words the organ was dedicated to the service of God and in memory of the late James Rogers, the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bailey and the late Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Carr, parents of Mrs. R. J. W. Perry.

In speaking to the large congregation that met on this occasion, the Dean reminded the members of Trinity Church that as the organ is formed of component pipes, each set with their particular part to play in producing sweet harmonies, so a congregation is composed of different sets of people and that congregation works to its own advantage and to the glory of God when the component parts cooperate and produce harmonious results in a church.

Holy Communion was celebrated at the close of the morning service, a very large number of the congregation joining in this sacred sacrament.

Monday night brought another service of deep importance, when Rt. Rev. J. F. Sweeney, Bishop of the Diocese of Toronto, opened and dedicated the new parish hall, in the presence of an audience that filled the hall and in which a large number of local and visiting clergy took part.

Fifty years and more ago Trinity Church added a chancel to the simple building that had served its needs in its earlier history. To the south of this chancel, the new parish hall has been added, and in so skilful a manner that complete harmony has been observed between the older building and the new. Not only in tone of material is the harmony noted, but in the very lines of church and of hall can be seen the master hand of the architect. Far from detracting from the appearance of the church, the new hall but adds to the dignity of the older structure, both forming an edifice that is a monument to the faith and loyalty of the congregation.

On behalf of the congregation the two wardens, J. E. Bailey and C. J. Crozier, asked that the Bishop open the hall and dedicate it to the service of God and of mankind. This His Lordship did very graciously, afterwards speaking on "Education," and pointing out what a valuable factor a hall such as Trinity Parish Hall can be made in a community.

Other speakers on the occasion were Rev. Dean Horan, Revs. H. Earle, Pt. Credit; C. W. Holdsworth, Islington; R. W. Allen, Brampton; H. V. Thompson, Erindale; T. C. Curliss, Toronto, a former rector; Archdeacon Warren, Toronto; F. Vipond, Toronto, formerly of Streetsville; Sparks, St. Olave's, Toronto; W. T. McCree; George Purchase, Streetsville. The rector acted as chairman and expressed in heartfelt manner his gratification at the splendid manner in which the congregation had come forward in this enterprise. John Rutledge, one of the oldest residents in the village and also one of the oldest members of the church, spoke briefly, while Mr. Bailey also voiced the gratification of the building committee of which he is a member as the splendid response of the congregation to all appeals made to them.

The new hall will be started off on its career of service to the parish and the community with only a debt of $300 on it. The canvassers collected $2,019, the Willing Workers had $1,223 in readiness for the erection of the hall, and other amounts were contributed, bringing the total amount raised up to $4,032. A very large amount of the labor on the hall was contributed, the late Joseph Phair, member of the building committee who unfortunately passed away just three weeks before the opening of the hall, being exceedingly generous in behalf of the edifice.

Not only have a very large number of cash donations been received, but individuals have provided equipment that massed together means some very generous gifts.

Among such gifts are the floor of the parish hall, the lighting system, a piano for the hall, a piano organ, and the new organ in the church.

Even the ladies of the congregation joined with the men in giving time and labor, assisting with necessary painting and work of a similar nature.

The new organ has two keyboards and a manual of foot pedals. There are fourteen stops, with couplers and swell. The organ, a Karn-Warren, was installed by Mr. Leonard Downey of London, Ont., and intense satisfaction with his work was expressed during the week-end.

The same feeling of intense satisfaction surrounds the new hall. With the main entrance on the west side, reached by a spreading flight of cement steps, flanked by a curving brick balustrade, capped by cement, and cathedral windows of soft green glass on either side, the main facade presents a very attractive appearance. The entrance doors are of wood, with half lights of bevelled plate glass and off the small vestibule are clothes closets fitted with hangers for clothing.

The stage is to the south end and when fitted with curtains, scenery, will afford not only for the Anglican young people but for others in the village, a very fine meeting place of smaller size, suitable for many of the smaller gatherings held in the village. With ease, 250 people can be accommodated in the auditorium.

In the lower storey will be located a kitchen, fitted for entertainments of various kinds and in the additional space can be found accommodation for classes or meetings of organizations.

The Review expresses congratulations on this latest achievement and wishes the congregation many years of usefulness in and enjoyment of the new hall.

W. DAVIS IS APPOINTED NEW CUSTOMS OFFICER

William Henry Davis, returned soldier, has received the appointment of Customs Officer of Streetsville, and was sworn in Tuesday. He was one of thirteen applicants, three of whom were war veterans. Mr. Davis is a native of England, and prior to the war, and after his return, was in charge of the cists department of the Ontario Wind Engine Company. On his resignation last week, he was presented with a handsome desk set of pen and pencil and holder, in mother o' pearl, William Watson, managing director, making the presentation on behalf of the staff.

He went overseas in 1915, with the 8th Army Brigade, C.E.F., and served as a gunner. He was wounded in the knee at Vimy, returning to the front, and getting up to Mons just prior to the Armistice. He is a married man with one young son. He is a Liberal in Politics.

COMMUNITY CLUB

The last meeting of the North Trafalgar Community Club was held at the home of Mrs. Robert Coulson, Tenth Line, Trafalgar, on Wednesday, April 29th. There was a good attendance. Mrs. D. Ross spoke during the afternoon on different topics. We also had a contest given by Mrs. Nat. McCracken, Mrs. Henry Campbell winning first prize. The meeting then closed with our song, after which the hostess served a dainty lunch. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. John A. Cook, on Wednesday, May 13th.

MOTHER O' MINE

If I were hanged on the highest hill,
Mother o' mine, O Mother o' mine!
I know whose love would follow me still,
Mother o' mine, O Mother o' mine!

If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
Mother o' mine, O Mother o' mine!
I know whose tears would come down to me,
Mother o' mine, O Mother o' mine!

If I were damned of body and soul,
I know whose prayers would make me whole,
Mother o' mine, O' Mother o' mine!

—Rudyard Kipling.

Mrs. John Ross spent last week at the McGregor homestead.

Mr. Frank McKinney will shortly change his place of residence from Streetsville to Collingwood.

Mrs. Cummings who has been spending a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Thompson, Streetsville, has returned to Toronto to live with her daughter, Mrs. Falconer.

Clayton Bulmer, aged 19, Postville, Trafalgar Township, was found dead in his father's barn one night last week. It is thought he came to his death by his own hand.

J. W. Wismer Hall, of Churchville, was taken to Peel Memorial Hospital on Saturday, where an operation for appendicitis was performed. His many friends are anxious about his condition and hope for his recovery.

Mr. Harold Beattie had the misfortune to have his new car damaged by a tree falling across the road, while it was standing at Mr. Herb Cantelon's gate, owing to the heavy wind. His little son was in the front seat, but escaped unhurt.

COOKSVILLE

Walter Burrell of the Centre Road, Toronto Township, at the age of 65 has developed the specialty of making things move. To be exact, he is an expert house mover.

Mr. Burrell's idea of a good move is to jack up a house, garage, or what have you, and tow it away to another location. Distance is nothing to him. He moved, not so long ago, a house from Oakville to Cooksville, a distance of 14 miles, making the trip all in one day.

Mr. Burrell has moved over two hundred buildings, and has never had an accident. He has been in the business for fourteen years, after twenty-one years' service with the C.P.R. His largest piece of work was the shifting of a 300-ton brick store building a distance of 200 feet. For this work his equipment was worth only $700, less than a tenth of the value of the building.

A thorough knoweldge of the construction of these buildings is needed to insure safe handling of his weighty loads. The buildings are jacked up with large mechanical jacks such as are used on the railroads, then rails are laid, with rollers and more rails beneath the buildings. Then a winch is used to pull the building, inches at a time, to its new site. With some of the smaller buildings, a truck may be used, but the greatest care is essential.

Mr. Burrell once moved a large brick dwelling in Port Credit that took two months of hard work to relocate. The owners were able to occupy their home during the operation, without discomfort or lack of convenience.

Mr. Burrell was born in Simcoe County, near Bond Head. He has a son, Jack, in the business with him. His other children are Archie, Saskatoon, Muriel, Toronto; Harold of the Hydro Electric Power Commission Sudbury; Douglas, who is with the Hydro at Ottawa; and Ruth, East Liverpool, Ohio. Both Muriel and Ruth are nurses. He also has four brothers, Bertram, Sarnia; William London; Richard, Toronto; Norman Toronto Township, and two sisters, Mrs. F. Johnson, Kamalachie, and Mrs. J. Newton of the Center Road.

PORT CREDIT

Rev. Samuel Lundie, of Port Credit, and Moderator of the Presbyterian Church, was the special speaker at the Islington Presbyterian Church Sunday night before a large congretion. Mr. Lundie was secured as speaker owing to the resignation of Rev Lamont as pastor following his call to Bonar Presbyterian Church in Toronto. The church choir sang special selections. At St. George's Anglican Church, Rev. W. H. H. Sparks, rector of St. Olave's Church, Swansea, preached at the morning service with Gerald Birch, student, of Wycliffe College, conducting the evening service.

ISLINGTON

A large audience attended the presentation of a three-act play entitled, "An Old-fashioned Mother," in the Islington Presbyterian Church Wednesday night. The play was put on by the Davenport United Church Dramatic Club, and was unnder the auspices of the local Ladies' Aid Society.

Thomas Sykes, Norval, paid $10 and costs on a charge of common assault before Magistrate L. J. C. Bull yesterday. The information was laid by Edward Greensword. Geo. Cooper, Glen Williams, pays $50 and costs and loses a motor operator's permit and a liquor permit as a sequel to a crash last Saturday night when the car he was driving collided with another motor.

Mrs. (Rev.) W. T. McCree and family are leaving this week on a trip to Scotland and Mr. McCree expects to join them some time later.

OFFICERS ELECTED FOR PEEL CALF CLUBS

Over 50 boys between the ages of 12 and 20 years and their parents attended the organization meeting of the Peel Calf Clubs in the Agricultural office, Brampton, on Saturday night, May 2nd. The meeting opened with moving pictures depicting Calf Club work in other Counties followed by educational reels on the Ontario Pulp Industry and the making of money at the Royal Mint, Ottawa.

J. C. Shearer, Agricultural Representative, acted as chairman and introduced the chief speaker, Harry Seymour, Peterboro, recently appointed Fieldman for the Province for the Holstein-Friesian Association. Mr. Seymour emphasized the importance of keeping feed records so that the boys would know at the end of each year the cost of feeding their animal. Calf Club work has progressed in Quebec where it started in 1922 with only 2 clubs and increased to 110 clubs in 1930. In Quebec the average milk production of the herds of parents of the boys entered in calf clubs has increased from 3673 lbs. per year in 1922, to 4769 lbs. in 1930, largely due to better feeding methods.

Club work for boys in the teen age creates greater interest in good livestock, the necessity of farm book-keeping, and provides revenue from prizes and returns from milk or cream when the heifer freshens. Boys who have been active in school fair work when attending public school have an outlet for their abilities and resourcefulness after passing entrance until they become old enough to join up with Junior Farmer organizations.

The people of Peel County have a chance this fall at the Brampton Fall Fair at seeing how well the club members have been formed, namely Shorthorn, Jersey and Holstein, and the officers elected who will bring in special speakers for future meetings to take up Feeding, Breeding and Management of Herds.

Peel Shorthorn Calf Club—President, Jim Pinkney, Cooksville; Vice-President, Gordon Robinson, Bolton, No. 1; Secretary-Treasurer, Dick Little, Brampton, No. 4.

Peel Holstein Calf Club—President, Art McKane, Georgetown, No. 4; Vice-President, Bob Shaw, Mono Road, No. 2; Secretary-Treasurer, Thompson Adamson, Erindale.

PEEL JUNIOR FARMER PUBLIC SPEAKING CONTEST

Streetsville, Bolton, Ebenezer and Trinity J. F. A. Clubs will be represented at the Boys' Public Speaking Contest being held the same evening of the J. W. I. Contest in the Brampton High School Auditorium, on Saturday night, May 16th. The speeches will be varied, being of national and local subjects so that the audience will have an enjoyable and worth-while evening. George Pulford, Mono Road, who will represent the recently formed Ebenezer J. F. A. will talk on the "Economic Position of Canada Today" and Harold Parkinson, Malton, who is a member of the Trinity Club has chosen "The County of Peel". Gordon Edwards, will uphold the fame of the Bolton Juniors and will be remembered as a contestant two years ago at the public speaking contest where he won a high place. The Streetsville Juniors have not sent in their representative's name but can be depended upon to have a strong contestant. Medals will be presented to the winners by the County Junior Farmer Association of which Jack Drennan, Streetsville, is President, and Bill Anderson, Derry West, is Secretary-Treasurer.

Reading Club

The last meeting for the season of the Reading Club was held at the home of Mrs. G. Bunt on Tuesday, April 25th, with a large attendance. Two short plays were read, "The Bishop's Candlesticks" and a humorous Scotch play was read by Mr. C. P. McArthur, Rev. W. T. and Mrs. McCree, in which they displayed great darmatic ability. After the plays were read, each one present contributed an important number which added greatly to the amusement of the evening. A delicious lunch was served, and everyone felt that they had enjoyed a very profitable season in the Reading Club.

R.C.M.P. Officer and Guide Drown

Word of Tragedy During Break-up in North Filters Through

The Pas., Man.—Royal Canadian Mounted Police Constable Donald R. McDonnel, 22, and his Indian guide, M. Masseau, were drowned on a little lake east of York Factory while on police patrol during April. News of their death was brought to Mile 356 on the Hudson Bay Railway and wired down to police officials here.

The drowning took place on April 19, when the two men went through rotten ice while travelling during the break-up in the North country 350 miles north-east of The Pas, near the mouth of the Nelson River.

This is the first tragedy reported in the north country as a result of the Spring break-up. It is believed he was travelling from Port Nelson towards Mile 310, when the accident took place.

His companion had been a member of the force as a guide, sworn in as a special constable, for a number of years. The bodies were brought in to the Hudson Bay railway station at Mile 356, and will be shipped to The Pas on Wednesday.

McDonnel trained at Regina in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police headquarters there. His father lives at Peace River in Northern Alberta.

Moisture Is Lacking For Crops In West

Winnipeg.—Wheat seeding, general across the prairie provinces, is 90 per cent. completed in Manitoba; 60 per cent. in Saskatchewan, and 45 to 50 per cent. in Alberta, according to a report published in the Manitoba Free Press on May 2nd.

The report, compiled from reports of 75 correspondents throughout the crops areas of the west, indicate seeding is slightly in advance of last year in Manitoba; at just about the same stage in Saskatchewan, and a week to 10 days behind the 1930 scredule in Alberta.

The report says: "Moisture is lacking generally over the west, with the exception of the territory across Northern Saskatchewan and extending into Alberta, where heavy rains and snow delayed work last Fall. Soil drifting has held up or delayed Spring work at a number of points in the last two weeks, but recently conditions have improved."

Gold Output Increases

Toronto.—Whatever dullness there may be in some lines of production throughout the world the reverse is the case in the gold production of Ontario, the principal source of supply of this precious metal in Canada. Every month the value of output is higher than its predecessor. The official statement for the first three months production in Ontario has just been issued by the Provincial Department of Mines and shows the value for the first quarter of this year was $9,919,492, an increase of $1,614,924 over the corresponding period last year. In the 12 months of 1930 the total value of gold produced in Ontario was $35,518,862. This year it is expected the value will be about $40,000,000. But gold is not the only valuable metal mined in Northern Ontario. Silver, nickel, copper, etc., are produced in large quantities. Between 80 and 90 per cent. of the world's nickel supply comes from the Sudbury district. In addition Northern Ontario has great water power and forest resources, extensive areas of fertile agricultural land and a variety of scenic attractions.

England Is Startled By Earthquake Shock

Manchester, Eng.—The peaceful countryside of East Lancashire was shocked early last Sunday by a sharp earth tremor, which was felt over a large area. No casualties were reported, but there was some property damage.

At Eccles, buildings were slightly damaged and a number of chimneys and flower pots were shaken down. A telephone operator at the exchange was hurled from her seat when the building shook.

People ran in alarm from their homes in Salford when the buildings were shaken and chimneys crashed down. The tremor also was felt at Old Trafford and Bolton.

Lancashiremen are not used to such manifestations of nature.

College Men Taught Problems of Etiquette

San Jose, Calif.—The San Jose Jose State Teachers College, under the direction of Harold P. Miller of the English Department, has introduced a course in social practice for men. It will deal with the problems of etiquette in all common social practices of the day.

The students will be carefully instructed not to eat peas with a knife, tuck a napkin under the chin or commit errors which are said to have resulted in broken friendships when the boy friend displayed such unpleasant manners.

While the new course was started as an experiment, it has caused such keen interest it is expected to prove one of the most popular subjects in the college.

Leaky Punt Lures Youth to Death

Toronto Lad Drowns Near Grafton—Host's Mother Passes

Cobourg—The first drowning accident of the season occurred near Grafton at about 11 o'clock Sunday morning, when Thomas Ashwell, aged 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ashwell of Toronto, was drowned when, unknown to his hosts, he took a leaking punt with a rotten cat sail out into Lake Ontario while a treacherous northeast wind was blowing.

The punt and sail have been recovered several miles apart, but no trace has yet been found of the victim. The boy was visiting the home of J. R. Nicholls, who had recently moved to Breezy Point, near Grafton, from Toronto. The young visitor was advised not to use the punt.

Nearly five hours were spent by Provincial Constable Carey and Charles B. Elliott, a Cobourg fisherman, in the latter's 35-foot cabin cruiser, searching the lake between Colborne and Cobourg. They discovered the sail about two miles from shore, and about four miles from where the boy set out.

The boy's host, J. R. Nicholls, received word from Toronto that his own mother had suddenly died as he learned the boy was missing.

41 Killed, Score Hurt In Egyptian Train Disaster

Cairo, Egypt.—Forty-one persons were killed and scores were injured last Friday night when the Cairo-Alexandria express caught fire from a hot box as the train sped along near the little station of Benha.

The wreck is believed to have been the greatest rail catastrophe in Egyptian history.

The hot box developed beneath one of the third-class coaches, and it was not noticed until the flames burst upward, spreading quickly along the train. A signalman at Benha, first to see the flames, flagged the train down, but the general alarm had spread before a stop could be made, and the frantic passengers leaped from windows in a wild scramble to escape.

At least 10 children were numbered among the dead. Only one foreigner, a Frenchwoman, was known to have been killed. The rest of the known dead were Egyptians. Many of the bodies were so charred as to be unrecognizable. It was expected several of the more seriously injured would not survive.

The flames were fanned by the high speed of the train and burned practically all the inflammable material in the coaches, leaving only the red hot iron undercarriages which, because of their heat, handicapped the rescue and relief work.

The engineer was arrested pending an official investigation and the inquests which will be held at Benha.

Great crowds of anxious relatives were massed outside the railway station here late last night waiting for the bodies of the dead to arrive from the scene of the tragedy. A deep gloom was cast over the city which had been preparing to celebrate the Bairam festival.

Prince Charles of Belgium Prefers to Walk

Washington.—An expensive automobile has been placed at the disposal of Prince Charles of Belgium during his visit here, but King's Albert's second son for the most part has left it standing.

Count Francois Buisseret, a close friend of the Prince, now attached to the Embassy, bought the automobile. It was one of several makes which the Prince tried out.

Prince Charles goes walking often and has visited most of the sights of the capital.

Several days ago, while reporters and photographers waited before the apartment house in which he was living, Prince Charles sauntered along the opposite sidewalk—unrecognized.

A piano has been moved into the Prince's rooms, and he spends much time playing.

Wins $500 for Slogan

Regina, Saskatchewan.—"Show what you grow and share what you know," was the slogan which won the $500 prize offered by the management of the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference to be held at Regina, July 25 to August 6, 1932. Many thousands of slogans were sent in from all parts of the world. It was laid down by the management that any slogan submitted in the competition should not be more than 10 words in length. No entry fee was charged and not more than three suggestions could be submitted by any one person. The competition closed on January 31st last and judges have just announced the winner, who is a Calgary man. A cheque for $500 has been sent to him.

Preparations for the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference are now well advanced. It is expected that about 50 countries will be represented.

Germans Find Rhinoceros Tooth

Eisenach.—The well preserved tooth of a rhinoceros has been found in a cave district of the Horselberg, near here. It dates from the early tertiary period.

Northern Fisheries Rapidly Expanding

2,175,000 Pounds Caught in 1930 Compared with 2,000,000 For 1929

Winnipeg.—Improved transportation facilities have substantially increased the commercial fishing area in the northern part of Manitoba, principally famous for its mining operations. Two years ago 18 inland lakes in the district of The Pas were being fished, compared with 38 at present. Last year over 2,175,000 pounds of fish were caught in these lakes, compared with 2,000,000 pounds in 1929 and 1,400,000 in 1928.

Moose Lake yielded the largest catch last year, accounting for 131,700 pounds of whitefish and over 96,000 pounds of trout and other fish. The yield from Lake Athapapuskow amounted to 118,000 pounds of whitefish, about 15,000 pounds of trout and over 18,000 pounds of other varieties of fish. The yield from Cormorant Lake was also heavy, amounting to 83,000 pounds of whitefish and 65,500 pounds of trout and other fish.

The northward penetration of the commercial fishing interests has also taken place in the other two prairie provinces—Saskatchewan and Alberta. Fish from Lake Athabaska, which lies partially in both of these provinces, are being regularly marketed in both Canada and the United States and the most modern method of transportation, the airplane, is being utilized to convey the fish to railway points and from there it is shipped in special cars to buyers in large cities.

The clear, fresh water of these northern lakes, which remain cold the year round, impart a firmness to the flesh which is seldom found in fish caught in warmer waters and this, together with the fine edible qualities of the fish, has resulted in a rapidly expanding market.

Historic City Becomes Village

Berlin.—After having been a city for more than 200 years, Lagow, eighty-five miles eastward from Berlin in the Province of Brandenburg, has surrendered its charter and become a village. With only about 500 inhabitants, it found the burdens resting on a city too great.

King George Paid $2,000 For Rare Stamp

Some interesting facts regarding the stamp collection of King George of England were revealed recently by Charles J. Phillips of the Collectors' Club at the annual dinner of the St. George's Society of Hamilton, Canada. Mr. Phillips, who as head of one of the largest stamp dealers in London for several years held the appointment as philatelist to the King, obtained many British and British Colonial varieties for the royal collection.

Mr. Phillips said that when the Dunveen collection was placed in his hands to sell he found that it contained an early one-shilling stamp of Great Britain coming from a plate imprint of which no other copy is known. King George paid $2,000 for it, and Mr. Phillips said it would doubtless sell for $3,000 to-day.

"The King's British stamps are matchless," said Mr. Phillips. "He has the original pencil sketch of the famous Mulready envelope and Rowland Hill's rough water-color sketches for the first 1 and 2-penny British Stamps issued in 1840 and many unique proofs of the issues during the reigns of Queen Victoria and King Edward. The King's collection is contained in 200 albums beautifully bound in royal blue.

DO-X Now Resumes Trip Over Atlantic

Las Palmas, Canary Islands—The German DO-X, which left here on the morning of May 1st, landed in the afternoon at Rio de Oro, in the Spanish Province of Rio de Oro on the west coast of Africa.

She is resuming the transatlantic flight to South America which was interrupted last November at Lisbon. She has been here since January and this is her first trial flight since last winter.

The distance from Las Palmas to Villa Cisneros, Rio de Oro, is about 200 miles. Villa Cisneros was one of the stops on the Italian flight to Brazil led by Gen. Italo Balbo.

The DO-X is the biggest flying boat in the world. When she first took the air at Altenrhein, Switz., on a projected flight to South America by easy stages, her appearance of tremendous power, with 12 motors, seemed ample ground for the claims of her builder that she would make the trip on schedule.

WITH THE LONE SCOUTS

This week I want to talk to you about a subject which every Lone Scout probably knows a great deal about—Trees.

In the district in which you live there may be a great number of trees of various sorts to make the landscape beautiful and to delight the eye of all who pass by.

Unfortunately, however, in years gone by, when men had greater hardships to face than we have today, the trees were frequently sacrificed by the old pioneers with a total disregard to the damage that they were doing to their property and to the scenic beauty of the countryside. All that they cared about was the fact that they required lumber, to build their houses and barns, that the land must be cleared for cultivation and that fences must be erected.

The consequence is that now, as we journey through our province, we frequently come across places which are practically devoid of trees, and which consequently are most depressing to look upon

For, after all, are not trees one of man's best friends?

They provide lumber, which we cannot do without, and if the matter is taken seriously they are a very profitable investment, they provide shade for man and beast on a hot day. They protect from the cold winds in winter, and they delight the eye with their beauty.

Also trees can turn otherwise barren land into beautiful and profitable country.

In quite a few parts of this country, the soil is very sandy and quite useless for ordinary cultivation. This sand, too has a bad habit of drifting over other good land and making that too worthless.

A small plantation of trees will stop this drift of sand, will prevent the ruination of good property, and will put to good use this sandy soil which otherwise is worthless. If the right trees are planted in a wise manner, in a very few years the trees themselves are large enough to turn into lumber, and so prove a profitable investment on land that otherwise would be a dead loss.

Have you many trees around your home. If not, do you know that the Ontario Government will give you trees for nothing or for a very little cost, so that you can easily start your own plantation? Write to Headquarters for details of this.

Do you know that every year at the week end of the 24th May a camp is held at the Government Forestry Station at Angus, Ontario, where about 200 Boy Scouts are the guests of the Government, and are shown all about the research work in Forestry which the Government is doing? These boys help to plant a few trees, and are given some to take home with them and they learn a great deal about this subject.

The camp costs them nothing at all, excepting the cost of their transportation to and from Angus, and you too can be one of that number if you wish. If you would like to attend this camp, write to your Scoutmaster and obtain fuller particulars.

Last year a number of Lone Scouts, members of the Buffalo Patrol at Vandorf, attended this camp and reported a wonderful time.

At Ebor Park, near Brantford, Ontario, is one of the finest collections of trees, growing naturally, in Ontario. This is where the Lone Scouts have held their Summer Camp for two years, and it is a very beautiful place. There is one Black Walnut tree which requires three Lone Scouts to stretch their arms around it's trunk, in order to touch hands all round.

Applications to join the Lone Scouts of Ontario, should be made to The Lone Scout Department, Boy Scouts Association, 330 Bay Street, Toronto 2, Ontario.

Only boys who cannot join a regular Troop are eligible to join the Lone Scouts.

Three Air Mail Services to Go

Montreal-Saint John-Moncton, Montreal-Ottawa, Toronto-Buffalo

Ottawa—Cancellation of three air mail services will take place on June 1, it was learned from postoffice officials over the week-end. The services are Montreal-Saint John-Moncton, Montreal-Ottawa, Toronto-Buffalo.

Motives of economy were stated to be the cause of the reduction of services. All three services have been regarded as more or less experimental and the volume of mail carried has not been large. The Montreal-to-Ottawa flights were carried out about once a week. The other two were daily, but proved too costly to be maintained in the face of low revenues.

For some time it has been predicted that air mail services would be curtailed. The Postoffice Department ended the fiscal year with a deficit in the neighborhood of $6,000,000, and the situation has been carefully canvassed in the hope of reducing expenses. As far as could be learned, no further cancellations of air services are in contemplation. The remaining routes are the lines from Rimouski, Que., in the east to Lethbridge in the west, with several junction points making contact with air mail services in the United States.

Happiness is a wayside flower that grows along the highway of usefulness.—Jean Paul Richter.

Rare Discoveries Reported In Arabia

New York.—Baron Max von Openheim, Counselor at the German Embassy in Washington in 1902-04, arrived to consult with American archaeologists about what he believes to be the oldest statues known to man.

Within the last four years he excavated in the ancient city of Tell Halaf and brought out statues dating back 5000 years, pottery antedating by centuries the hitherto known Egyptian and Babylonian earthenware and karyatids that were antiques long before the Acropolis at Athens was built.

"Excavation has long been my hobby, and I've wandered up and down Asia Minor for years," the baron said. "I speak Arabic like a native. I was told that at Tell Halaf, about halfway betwen Aleppo and Mossul, at the springs of the Chabur, there was buried an ancient city which nobody dared lay bare because of a curse lying upon it.

"With a caravan of assistants I set out for the place, and sought the hospitality of a local chieftain. He led me to the spot under which, he said, the city was buried. That was in 1911. Not until 1927 did I obtain the concession from the French Government to proceed with the excavation."

Drying Curtains

Take the full width of voile, grenadine or any soft curtain material, and after stitching hems at top and bottom, making a separate stitching for the rod, dampen and while damp instead of ironing or using a curtain stretcher, put them at once on rods, place a rod in the bottom hem and one in the top and hang them to dry by pushing the material tightly together. Let them dry in this fashion. When entirely dry, take out the bottom rod and the curtains will hang as though shirred and have a dainty and sheer appearance not obtained by other methods. The advantage over ironing the curtains or having them hang full is so great that it is impossible to realize the effect until one has tried this method.

ACID after meals

GET RID of your dread of pain after eating. Eat without fear of "indigestion," sour stomach, disagreeable gas or headaches.

When your food ferments "disagrees," lies like a lump in your stomach, it's a sign of too much acid. You need not resort to crude methods—take instead an anti-acid that will correct the condition. Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

A spoonful of this pleasant-tasting, soothing fluid neutralizes many times its volume in acid. It restores the proper alkaline balance to an acid-soaked stomach and bowels—assists these organs to function as they should.

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is what you need when a bad breath, coated tongue, headaches, nausea or biliousness indicates an over-acid condition. Take a spoonful today and for several days and see how it sweetens the system. You won't be nearly so liable to colds or sickness. All drugstores in the Dominion sell it in 50c bottles.

Look for the name Phillips on the bottle.

FASHION HINT

"How to make my old short skirts conform to the new length was a problem to me until I hit on this plan. I dropped the hems; and as the part that had been turned under was darker than the rest, I redyed the entire dress, after having bleached the goods, following directions in the Diamond Dyes package.

"I used Diamond Dyes for the redyeing, of course. I have dyed many things with these wonderful colors. They have saved me many dollars and have never failed to give perfect results—smooth, even colors—fast to wear and washing. Friends think my things are new when I redye or tint them with Diamond Dyes. They do give the most gorgeous colors!"

Mrs. Carney (rushing into the living room, panting for breath)—Oh, Walter, I dropped my diamond ring off my finger and I can't find it anywhere.

Mr. Carney (very calmly)—Its all right, Olive, I came across it in my trouser's pocket.

A friend complains about the increasing worries of dressing. "By the time I get my false teeth in place, my arch supports adjusted, my ear phone regulated and my wrist watch strapped on I am usualy exhausted," he confided.

THE DIFFERENCE

It take so many roses—
Such wealth of gorgeous bloom—
So many petals crushed, to make
One breath of faint perfume.
It take so many hours
Of labor and of tears
To give the world a lovely song
That will outlive the years.
But love is something quite apart,
Just one swift kiss can break a heart.

An old offender was found guilty of stealing a horse and received a stiff sentence on account of his previous record. The judge addressed him as folows.

The Judge—It is my intention to sentence you to eight years at least. Now, before sentence is formerly pronounced on you, I shall listen to anything you may have to say on your behalf.

The Old Offender (after waiting a minute or two)—I don't know ez I've got anything to say only this, it strikes me that you folks 'round here are purty toler'ble liberal with other people's time.

Susie—What are you knitting?

Lottie—Something to cheer up the boys.

Susie—Why, you silly thing, the war is over.

Lottie—This is a bathing suit for me, dear.

Rain is something we don't like while we are getting it, and kick like sin when we don't get it. A barking dog is almost as unpopular as one that bites. The chap who takes care of his own credit and collection department is most apt to collect the living that the world owes him. We don't know which makes for the duller evening—a woman telling about the removal of her appendix, or a man telling about his stock market operation. The advantage of one big worry is that it eliminates a multitude of little worries.

Give to the world
The best you have
And the best will
Come back to you.

Bride—Shall I have your lunch brought up to the deck, sweetheart?

Groom—No, darling; just throw it overboard—it'll save time and trouble.

"Overboard," shrieked the watch. A thousand men and women rushed to the rail to see a woman struggling in the green water.

"Sharks!" screamed the multitude as white flashed darted towards the body below.

For minutes before the rope was lowered, the multitude gazed in wonder, as the viscious would dart up to the body, then turn and dart away.

"They couldn't touch me," the lady said after they had brought her out. "They were all man-eating sharks."

The seven ages of women are: 7, 17, 27, 27, 27, 27, 27. Its the consumer's good luck that it pays the producer to be honest. Her doctor advised her to go skating to reduce, but she couldn't stand it.

French Morocco Leather Goods

The raw materials used in the manufacture of French morocco leather goods are sheepskins from which the wool is removed at Mazamet and which are dressed at Graulhet and Issoudun, according to the Index to French Production. These skins have an attractive grain and color and are able to withstand the rough handling and hard service met by travelers' bags. Paris is the chief market for these goods.

Truth is as impossible to be soiled by any outward touch as the sunbeam.—John Milton.

The Fire Menace in the Dominion

Summer has its perils as well as its pleasures, and one of the greatest perils is the forest fire. Until a few decades ago Canada was careless of her timber wealth; there seemed so much of it that exhaustion was a remote prospect. But prodigality always brings its own punishment; now it is realized that the wooded areas must be cared for, and reforestation has become an established undertaking.

In view of this situation, prevention of forest fires is a subject of prime importance. During 1929 6,000,000 acres of timbered land in the Dominion was burned over, with a total loss of $6,200,000; and this despite an elaborate and efficient preventive organization. Each of the Provincial Governments administering its own forests maintains a fire-protection body which co-operates with owners and lessees for the protection of timbered areas, the cost being distributed or covered by special taxes on such lands.

The aeroplane is established as an important factor in the detection of forest fires, and in this respect Ontario is particularly well equipped. While aircraft have to a large extent supplanted the old canoe, horseback and foot patrol for detection of fires, a large ground staff, with equipment stored at strategic points, always will be necessary for the fighting of larger fires and maintenance of systems of communication.

With the disappearance of winter conditions these flying firemen may be found all over the forests of Northern Ontario. This is a well trained and disciplined force, directed by skilled aviators, and plays a tremendously important part in the protection of the Province's timber wealth.

There is something picturesque and much that is of a hazardous nature about the work of these men who spend the summer in the clouds above the vast forest domain of this Province, watching eagle-eyed for the incipient fire that may mean disastrous material loss and perhaps death in its most terrible form. Their presence in these danger zones, and the conviction that they are animated by a keen sense of duty, justify public confidence that everything possible will be done to prevent the terrible forest conflagrations of former years.—The Mail and Empire (Toronto).

There is no preservative and antiseptic, nothing that keeps one's heart young like sympathy, like giving one's self with enthusiasm to some worthy thing or cause.—John Burroughs.

If baby has COLIC

A CRY in the night. Colic! No cause for alarm if Castoria is handy. This pure vegetable preparation brings quick comfort, and can never harm. It is the sensible thing when children are ailing. Whether it's the stomach, or the little bowels; colic or constipation; or diarrhea. When tiny tongues are coated, or the breath is bad. Whenever there's need of gentle regulation. Children love the taste of Castoria, and its mildness makes it safe for frequent use.

And a more liberal dose of Castoria is always better for growing children than strong medicine meant only for adult use.

Feel Young Again Enjoy Hard Work

Millions of men and women all over the world take Kruschen Salts daily—not because they are really sick, mind you—but because they know the little daily dose of Kruschen keeps them always fit, energetic and free from fat, and also keeps the system free from over-acidity

People who take Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning won't have headaches, and are always free from constipation, depression, dizziness, coated tongue and unpleasant breath.

They have no poisons in their system because the action of Kruschen Salts on the liver, kidneys and bowels causes perfect and regular elimination.

If you want joyous health and glorious vigor—if you want to work hard and enjoy your work—try taking Kruschen Salts every day—millions of people are enjoying their daily labours, thanks to the "little daily dose" of Kruschen.

Castoria corrects CHILDREN'S ailments

WHAT a relief and satisfaction it is for mothers to know that there is always Castoria to depend on when babies get fretful and uncomfortable! Whether it's teething, colic or other little upset, Castoria always brings quick comfort; and, with relief from pain, restful sleep.

And when older, fast-growing children get out of sorts and out of condition, you have only to give a more liberal dose of this pure vegetable preparation to right the disturbed condition quickly.

Because Castoria is made expressly for children, it has just the needed mildness of action. Yet you can always depend on it to be effective. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment and cannot possibly do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue, is fretful and out of sorts. Be sure to get the genuine; with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

Re-surface

old walls and ceilings

with Gyproc

HERE is a wallboard that does not burn, made from gypsum rock into sheets 4 to 10 feet long, 4 feet wide and ⅜ of an inch thick. It is used for interior walls, ceilings and partitions.

As well as being fire-resistant, it has structural strength, insulation value and is draught and vermin-proof. Use Gyproc Joint Filler for sealing the joints between the tall, broad sheets of wallboard.

When you are "doing over" any room in the house or adding new ones in the attic or basement, use Gyproc for walls and ceilings because you can nail it directly over the old surface. Gyproc is also an excellent base for Alabastine, Gyptex or wallpaper.

Gyproc is Canada's pioneer non-burning gypsum wallboard. Ask your nearest dealer for full details and a Gyproc direction sheet. Or write us for the FREE booklet, "Building and Remodelling with Gyproc". 374

Governing the Peel Junior Farmers' Softball League, 1931

Committee: Orland Downey, Bolton No. 2, Manager Bolton J.F.A.; Norman Meyers, Bolton No. 5, Manager Ebenezer J.F.A.; Geo. Hostrawser, Malton No. 1, Manager Trinity J.F.A.; Arthur Arch, Streetsville, Manager of Streetsvile J.F.A.

1. Players to be boys actively engaged in farming, with the exception of three players. These last three players not to compose the battery.

NOTE—Three players will be allowed on the field who are not actively engaged in farming. Therefore it will be possible to have a number of these subs with the above rating, who can replace them. However, at no time will more than three players not actively engaged in farming be allowed on the field at the same time.

2. A 12-inch inseam ball must be used.

3. Distance from pitching box to plate—36 feet.

4. All players must be members of their respective Clubs whom they represent when the schedule opens on May 18th. This rule to be strictly enforced by the members of the opposing team.

5. All games to start sharply at 7 p.m. Standard Time. However, it is understood that both teams should be on the field ready to play by 6.30. They will each be given 15 minutes for practice before the game.

6. Two capable umpires agreeable to both managers to be used in each game.

7. Regulation softball bat to be used.

8. Regulation fielding rules will be in force during the game.

9. Protests to be made to the Department of Agriculture, Brampton, within 24 hours of the game played. The committee in charge of protests to be composed of the Manager of each team, together with the Agricultural Representative.

10. A suitable Trophy will be donated to the winning club. This Trophy to be won three years before becoming the permanent possession of any one Club.

June 18—Bolton vs Streetsville.
June 22—Streetsville vs Ebenezer.
June 25—Trinity vs Bolton.

NOTE: 1—The last named team in each case to be the home team, or in other words, the place where the game will be played. For example, on May 18th, Trinity vs Streetsville. This game will be played at Streetsville.

NOTE 2—Finals will be decided upon later. However they will be run off early in July.

SOMETHING WRONG

The following article appeared in last week's issue of the Wiarton Echo.

I see the bunch of women teachers pass. The Public School marms are travelling north and the High School dames southward. I size them up. They all look alike. Still an anachronism exists there — something wrong. One bunch draws down from $800 to 01,000 a year, the other from $1,800 to $2,000. It can't be explained by any system of economics. Capitalise either time or money in the investment of education equipment and it will not produce fairness in the analogy. Even supply and demand will not explain it. It simply exists that is all. I'll grant you some difference is justifiable—but ours is too great. And it is costing far too much money. The High School is becoming a burden on our shoulders. Too much Mussolinism at the top of the system—and weak submission on downward. I'd like to see some School Board in the province with intestines enough, arise and tell Mussolinism to take a jump in the lake—we'll pay what we can afford—or do without. In towns throughout Ontario, the High School teachers—many, slips of girls—have become monied classes, the income tax payers. If the School Boards of the Counties of Bruce, Grey, Huron, Perth, Simcoe and Middlesex could arrange to hold a meeting in say, Birds' Eye Centre, far away from the menace of educational experts, they might be able to start something which would get them back control of things they are elected to control—but can't. Such difference between pay of the girls in the Public School and the teachers in the High School has no justification.

And before this economic depression is finished, stone me for a false prophet if our bills for education are not going to get back closer to the bread and butter menu which the working people and farmers of the province must of necessity sit down to three times a day.

WEDDINGS

Boocock—Turner

A pretty wedding took place on Friday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, 13 Division Street, Oakville, when Gertrude Evelyn, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Turner, was married to George Raymond Boocock, second son of Mrs. Boocock and the late Mr. Raymond Boocock, Oakville. Rev. E. O. Seymour officated. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a becoming gown of white satin and lace. Her bridal veil of tulle, arranged in cap effect, caught with orange blossoms, was worn by the bride's mother at her wedding. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and lily of the valley, Miss Charity Lamlier, of Hamilton was bridesmaid wearing a wedding gown of blue georgette, with matching lace hat, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. David Boocock. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Stanley Eves, cousin of the bride. Following the ceremony, receiving with the bridal couple were the bride's mother, wearing a gown of black silk lace, and georgette, and the groom's mother, wearing a gown of blue georgette. The groom's gift to the bride was a silver tea service. After a buffet luncheon, Mr. and Mrs. Boocock left on a motor trip to Philadelphia and Atlantic City, the bride travelling in a black dress of flat crepe, with touches of pale green; coat of fleck cloth, with g rey squirrel collar and matching accessories. On their return they will reside at 50 Randall Street, Oakville.

DRUMQUIN

The sower has gone forth and sown.

Nature and due time will bring forth a harvest, be it five fold or one hundred. But oh if we, who have been lucky to live in such a great country as Canada, would be as careful of the quality of deeds sown day by day as one is to the careful selection and quality of grain sown what a wonderful harvest would be gathered in at the other side of the great Veil, and a great lessening of crime and vice here and more peaceful and happier families.

The May meeting of the Ladies Aid of Bethel Church met Wednesday at the home of Mrs. James Ford Sixth Line, at which Mrs. Allen of Postville, gave an excellent address on 'Giving.' Mrs. Allen is a fluent speaker and very pointed in her points.

Mr. and Mrs. Featherston of Raynor visited many of their friends here over the week end.

The Bethel young folk will debate with Georgetown in Bethel Church Friday evening, This will be the last of the season.

We are pleased to know that Mr. P. D. Salter is slowly gaining in strength.

ERINDALE

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Kate O'Hara, in order that her brother Martin may get his opportunity, accepts the proposal of Christopher Steynes and acts the part of his wife at a house party. Martin, believing she is in danger, follows her and breaks into Steynes' house. Steynes shoots Martin and the police take Mary's name and address as a material witness. She is terrified for fear her mother and Martin will find out. She visits the wounded man in hospital and discovers it is Martin. Then Mary discovers that she is in love with Steynes. She tells Cass Keating, to whom she is engaged. Martin returns home from hospital and he, Cass, Steynes and Mary get together. Mrs. O'Hara comes in on the gathering and learns all. She says she believes Mary is innocent of any wrong-doing. Then Christopher proposes to Mary.

"If you know her longer, you might want to marry Mary Kate," Martin began, with a reasoning air. "But—but you'd never seen each other this time a week ago."

"As for that," Chris answered, grimly, "it never crossed my mind—even an hour ago, that—things are as they are!"

"Well, now you see?" Mrs. O'Hara concluded it, in satisfaction.

"But I'm afraid, Mrs. O'Hara," the visitor said, with a brief unhappy laugh, "that that doesn't help much."

"She'd surely have the right to tell you that she cared for someone else," Cass interposed, quietly.

"Certainly she would," Chris conceded.

"Whatever you'd have to offer her," Martin added, emboldened by Cass's courage, "it would be for her to decide. We—we have something to offer her, too!"

The girl made no attempt to speak. She was like a person who hears a stranger discussed, interested, not concerned. Her bright, serious eyes moved swiftly, her clean-cut chin was cupped in her two palms, her fingers resting lightly against her temples.

"We love her," Mrs. O'Hara said, looking at her, her tender Irish voice low.

It was half past nine o'clock. Mary Kate thought that in a few minutes Chris would be gone, and Mother would have changed her dress and returned to the vigil at Uncle Robert's, and Tom would have lumbered to bed. Then she and Cass and Mart would sit on here in the kitchen, talking the whole thing over. After that they would escort the invalid carefully upstairs to bed, and establish him comfortably with his pillows and book, and then she and Cass would come downstairs for a long talk, a sweetheart's talk, in the big chair—

And to her Christopher Steynes would soon be a dream, and to Christopher only a dream would be the memory of this hot small orderly kitchen, and these earnest, simple, amusing folk, and this red-headed girl. And long before another April Uncle Robert would be dead, and Aunt Julia in a widow's veil like Ma's, and Mart studying in Germany, and Tom the mainstay at home, and Mary Kate Keating expecting a baby—

She returned to the present. Chris, his hands in his side pockets, his head slightly hanging forward, was speaking to her mother.

"Believe me, I am as much surprised as you are, Mrs. O'Hara. I've liked girls before. But I've never felt—this way."

"What way?" Cass demanded, levelly, not sympathetically.

"That I couldn't help myself," Chris said simply. "I've been driven—" he began. "I've been driven like someone possessed all these days. I've not slept. I've not eaten.

"Do you think," he asked them all, "that I like it?"

"You couldn't blame Mary Kate for that," her mother defended her, in a slightly perplexed, a faintly hostile tone.

"Blame her!" he echoed. "Nobody blames her. But can you blame me?"

"You're a rich man, Mr. Steynes?" Mrs. O'Hara asked, considering him.

"I'm rich, yes."

"And your good father, your good mother—are they living?"

"My father lives in New York, he has an apartment there. My mother lives in Paris. They're divorced—they're both remarried. And now I think my mother is going to be divorced again."

"Oh, that's bad," Mrs. O'Hara commented, shaking her head, making a little clucking sound in her throat.

"I've got an apartment in the same building, with my father, I've got a little place down in Maryland," the man said.

"She'd never fit into that life, you must see that," the older woman reasoned sorrowfully. "She'd not be happy in any such places."

"I don't think she would!" Chris agreed, almost fiercely.

"And have you no faith at all?"

"Yes," he said. And he looked at her. "I have hers," he added, in a gentler tone. "I was brought up in it. It doesn't mean much to my people, but I think it might to me."

"You don't think money, and furs, and traveling places—be still, Mart!" Mrs. O'Hara began again. "You don't think all that would make up to her for what she has here? She was a happy girl, two weeks ago, with a good man lovin' her, and her future all safe. What could you give her that'd pay her for what she'd throw away?"

"Nothing!" Chris said.

"There's not a day here," the mother continued. "Don't interrupt me, Mart!" she rebuked the boy again, as he would have spoken. "There's not a day in her life that she doesn't see twenty of her friends," Mrs. O'Hara went on, "There's not a day that she isn't in a gale of laughin', so that you'd laugh to hear her, though you was lyin' dead. There isn't a day that she doesn't do a thousand favors for me, or Tom, or Mart here, or one of the little ones.

"Perhaps," the wise, troubled voice continued, "she'd bring me home a handful of flowers, or a little red wreath, come winter. And it'd be, 'Oh, Mother, will you make Miss White a little custard for her father, will you give me some of your soup for old Mrs. Bryan?'

"And then," said Mrs. O'Hara, in a dead silence, "perhaps she'll lean over one of them that's workin' on a weekly theme, or doing a Thanksgivin' poster. 'I've got a magazine in my room,' she'll say, 'that'll give you all the advertisements you'd use in a year!' 'I'll hear you your lessons!' she'll say.

"It's she takes them to the movies, if my feet go back on me. She and I have breakfast, on that same table there every mornin' there is in it—readin' the news, and pourin' the coffee—"

She stopped. There was no sound in the kitchen.

"It would pierce me that she'd be far away from me," the mother resumed, very simply, after a pause. "It would break my heart that she'd not be married here, where her own people are, brinin' her children—if the Lord sent them—back home to her mother—"

Still silence. Cass and Mart and Tom watched Chris; they knew the power of this quiet voice. Mary Kate gave a little dry sob, bit her lip, the delicate flanges of her nostrils moving with a quick indrawn breath.

CAPTER XLI.

"Mrs. O'Hara," Chris said, looking somehow lone and friendless, in his big coat, "I wouldn't want her to be as—as unhappy as all that would make her. I see what you say—I see what you mean.

"It was only," he recommenced, clearing his throat, "that I couldn't help letting her know that—well, that it's this way with me. It was not anything I planned to do, or planned to say! Not until I was standing here, not until ten minutes ago, did it come to me what all this meant! It's not anything you can argue about. I didn't want it to happen!"

There was a strange sound in the kitchen. It was as if Mary Kate had given a brief, exulting laugh. But it was so evanescent that when all their eyes turned toward her she betrayed no sign of mirth; her head was dropped, she had covered her face with her spread fingers.

"It might go as quick as it came," Mrs. O'Hara suggested tentatively.

"It might," Chris agreed.

"And then where would she be," the mother argued. "With a rich husband that was tired of her?"

"That—" Chris said simply, looking at the girl, who had taken down her hands, and whose wide, serious gaze was turned upon him, "that would be Mary's risk."

"Some risk!" Cass contributed, drily.

"No. Not much!" Christopher answered in the same tone.

Mary Kate crossed her arms on the table before her and stared into space.

"She's the one to say, after all," her mother summarized it.

The girl roused herself from her dream, with a brief laugh.

"Why, Mother, there's nothing to decide!" she said surprisedly. "It just—is, isn't it? Like a broken leg, like an earthquake. If you—well, if you had a baby, you could not decide to go back suddenly, could you, and not have one? If you were wrecked on a desert island, you couldn't just make up your mind to choose to be home again, safe and sound!"

"Mary—" Chris said.

She went over to him again, to take her old position, her shoulder against his, his arm half-way about her.

"It's just happened!" she told them. "I know that all that you say is true. I know that it isn't sensible. All the women of his world are the beauty-parlor, bridge-playing sort, who get divorces and drink cocktails and know all the restaurants in Paris. They'll despise me—his mother won't like me! But what of it?"

"Molly, Molly," Martin pleaded, "think what you're saying! You're crazy. Don't let his money—"

"Oh, Mart, hush up!" the girl commanded him, goodnaturedly. "You don't think it's his money? You know it's not! That'd be like saying that I'd sell you and the girls and Pat and Tom for money!"

"Mary," Chris said, hoarsely and gently, seeing nothing but the blue eyes that she raised to his, as he clasped her hands together, and lifted them to his heart, "Do you mean it? Will you take a chance?"

"I have to," she whispered.

"Living Stone" in Sculpture

"Living stone" and "living rock" are applied in sculpture to rock or stone in its native or original position as contrasted with marble or granite which has been quarried. The Lion of Luzerne in Switzerland, the Rushmore Memorial in South Dakota and the Confederate Memorial on Stone Mountain in Georgia were all carved from living rock.—The Pathfinder.

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

What came before: After many adventures flying over the war zone in China, Captain Jimmy and Scottie get lost in the dark and land in enemy territory. A freight train leaves supplies at a siding, and they are cautiously approaching, when interrupted.

Quietly we approached the freight train. The food and gasoline which we needed so badly would soon be ours. Then, right out of the ground leaped a dark form. A heavy blow landed on my head, and I knew no more.

Gradually I became conscious. Jolt — jolt — jolt! I tried to put my hands to my head but they were securely bound. Someone had tied me on the back of a burro, and just ahead the Colonel and Fu Hsu were securely bound on two more. Numberless other donkeys loaded with bundles and boxes moved in single file along a narrow rocky path, and leading each, strode a wicked looking ruffian, armed to the teeth. Chinese bandits had captured us.

Jolt—jolt—jolt! Through the hills we went, while a great blazing sun scorched us with stifling heat. The bandits had plenty of water, but for us, never a drop. Between drinks they would grin at us, and pat their stomachs, seeming to enjoy our misery. Of Scottie I knew nothing, and became very anxious as to his fate.

Everything must end sometime. Toward nightfall we came in sight of a rift in the mountains, where the sheer cliffs rose for hundreds of feet into the air. Here, indeed, was an ideal spot for a bandit camp. A few men could hold the defile against an army. Below stretched a beautiful valley, green and fresh as a mountain paradise.

The burros, scenting the sweet grass, rushed down toward the bandit camp in a regular stampede. As we approached, a miserable looking mob of men, women and children, swarmed out of the tents.

They were a hard-bitten crowd, every one of them. They jeered at us, and the children pelted us with soft mud. But finally my turn came. Suddenly I dug my toes into that burro and charged the mob. He bowled several over, and in a moment the camp was in an uproar. One fat fellow stood in my way, but that donkey just butted him in the belt, and he landed kerplunk on the side of a tent. After that we galloped off into the night before anyone could saddle a horse.

Up the valley, I found a cliff with sharp edged rocks. Working close to it, I began to rub the ropes which bound my wrists, on the rough surface. Then lights began to twinkle here and there in the valley, as the bandits set out to hunt for me with torches. Five minutes, ten, fifteen, I rubbed those tough ropes, while the lights came nearer, then, just as I had given up hope—they snapped and I was free!

My arms were so numb that I was almost as helpless as a baby. Up and down the valley bobbed the torches—and each torch was carried by a man-hunter. I edged close into the cliff, while the feeling gradually came back into my hands.

Fortunately for me, no one came near my hiding place. Whenever a bandit's torch went out, he would make a dash for camp, so as not to be left alone in the darkness. Probably he was afraid of a dragon jumping on his back, and flying away with him to its den. Anyhow, the torches went out one by one, and the search ended for the time. Soon the camp quieted down. Sentries paced to and fro, but as the night wore on, even these huddled close to the dying camp fires, and dozed in the fitful light.

Just the idea, time for a raid! No one would ever expect a prisoner to suddenly attack a camp full of armed men. Cautiously I set out toward the tents.

Air Parties to Hunt Gold In Sands of Arctic Rivers

Point Barrow, Alaska.—Gold lies in all the streams flowing into the Arctic from Alaska and Canada, declare Eskimos here who exhibit bits of the yellow metal. Few of these streams have been prospected by white men because of their inaccessibility. However, this summer several airplane parties will test the sands of the Kobuk, Anapikpuk, Colville and Maude Rivers.

The short season for placer mining begins in July and closes the middle of September. The Arctic streams yield an exceptionally yellow gold which is worth more than the darker metal for jewelry and dental work.

A BIT OF FUN

How to Tell Any Person's Age

There is a good deal of amusement in the following magic table of figures. It will enable you to tell how old the ladies may be which is pretty hard to guess sometimes. Just hand this table to a lady and ask her to tell you in which column her age is contained; then add together the figures at the top of the columns in which her age is found and you have a great secret. Thus, suppose the age is 17. You will find that number in the first and fifth columns, and the first figures of these two columns.

Here is the Magic Table

TWILIGHT HOUR STORY

Chapter 21

"How about seeing the four chicks now, Mamma?" asked Billy. "Isn't it great to come home after being away two whole weeks? It seemed an awful long time sometimes."

"Why you liked it in the city, didn't you, Billy?"

"Oh, yes it was great fun and I'll go again some day, only I got homesick to see you, mummy, and I often wondered how everything was getting along here without me around."

"Well, I do think all the animals missed you, Billy Boy, and it was pretty lonely and quiet around the house without our boy. It's nice to go away, but oh, it's so nice to come again, isn't it?" Billy laughed and squeezed his mother's hand.

"But what's all this? It all looks so different around the chicks' box."

"Well, you see, dear, they grew so fast we had to put them in a larger box. This is the surprise. How do you like the nice yard Daddy made for them so they could run outside onto the green grass? They look so funny when they run out of their little door after being shut in. I shut them in a little while ago so you could see them come out. You stand over there and I'll open the door." Well, say, as soon as they knew they could come out they all crowded around the little door, each one trying to get out first so that for awhile none could get out while they stood on each other and shoved and pushed. Who do you think got out first? Well, it was Jimmy Chick because he was the biggest and strongest. He wasn't very polite, was he, not to allow ladies to go first? Being bigger, he pushed out. He'll learn to do that soon, though. It really is very nice to see polite, well-bred little boys always touch their caps to older people and always let little girls go first, isn't it?"

Well out came Jimmy Chick, so glad to get out that he fluttered his wings and could run quite fast. But he looked so different, we certainly couldn't call him a baby any longer. All his fluffy baby dress was gone and in its place was a feather suit, but he didn't have it all on yet. It made him look so queer. He had feathers on his head and wings and back and on part of his legs and, what do you think?—the rest of his body was just his bare skin. But he didn't care as long as he'd have all his clothes by Sunday, for, of course, he'd want to be all dressed up for that day, wouldn't he?

First thing he did was to come right over to Mamma Lady and he hopped onto her hand to get some of the bread crumbs she had there. You see, he forgot about Billy, too. Just like the little kittens did. I guess it was time Billy came home, wasn't it?

By this time the other chick sisters were outside and they wanted some crumbs, too, and wasn't it strange they didn't look a bit alike any more. Each one was different since they had grown out of their baby dresses of fluff. One of them was short and fat with a little short bill for a nose. "Let's give her a name now, shall we, Mamma?" said Billy, all excited.

"I thought you'd like to do that, what will it be?" smiled Mamma.

Billy thought a while and then said, "Well, she's so short and fat, what about Squatty?"

Mamma Lady laughed and said, "Yes," I guess that will be all right."

Billy was thinking again and soon said, "Here's a rhyme, Mummy."

"Squatty was funny,
Squatty was fat,
Because Squatty ate too much dinner."

"Is that a good rhyme?"

"Oh, I guess it will suit Squatty all right. She won't know whether it is good or not, but I'm sure she's proud of having a rhyme all her own. But it is bedtime, dear, we'll see about naming the other two to-morrow, shall we?"

The Loyalty of Mothers

Ethel Mannin in the Woman's Journal: Perhaps even greater than the loyalty of wives and sweethearts to the men they love is the loyalty of mothers. The loyalty of mothers is quite simply terrific; it is one of the things in this queer world. It is not just maudlin sentiment which is expressed in that old song "Mother O' Mine," but quite literally true, that if a man should drown in the deepest sea, or hang on the highest hill, the love of one woman would follow him still, and that woman would be his mother. The loyalty which is part of the love of women in general, and of mothers in particular, is beyond all littleness of reasoning and logic. It is foolish, if you like, but magnificent in its pitiful folly as in its faith and courage. It has the epic grandeur of tragedy, and the infinite tenderness of the love that many waters cannot drown. It is as unquenchable as love, and must endure as long as love lasts.

Blind Flying Taught With Perfect Safety

Toronto—Blind flying can now be taught with perfect safety, it was demonstrated recently at a local airport when a cabin monoplane, driven by R.C.A.F. Pilot A. M. Glover, went successfully through an exhibition flight.

The plane used for blind flying is equipped with an adjustable board that can be pulled down, shutting off the view of the pupil pilot, who is then able to fly only by instrument. The instructor sits in front with a clear view. This invention is regarded as important to aviation as pilots will now be trained to fly under all weather conditions — the greatest menace to flying, fog and bad weather, thus being overcome.

Illustrated Dressmaking Lessons Furnished With Every Pattern

No wonder Dame Fashion has taken so kindly to this new cape collar. This neat moulded-to-the-dress collar keeps it place better, and is generally becoming. It offers splendid theme for the use of a contrasting color or fabric.

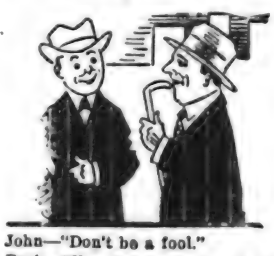
Today's model is an emerald green plaid flat crepe silk with white crepe. The new plaited skirt effect is decidedly smart. The pointed seaming narrows the hipline.

Style No. 3055 may be had in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 36 and 38 inches bust.

In plaided gingham, pique will be nice for the collar.

Shantung, linen, pastel jersey, pastel cotton mesh and flat crepe silk are lovely materials for its development.

Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards 35-inch or 2⅞ yards 39-inch.



HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Enclose 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number, and address your order to Wilson Pattern Service, 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto.

David Lloyd George May Go To Russia

London—Right Hon. David Lloyd George, the Liberal chieftain, may visit Russia in September. Mr. Lloyd George is said to be greatly interested in the Russian five-year plan and wants to make a first-hand investigation. Once before he proposed a Russian trip and the Soviet Government offered him every opportunity to make inquiries.

Sunday School Lesson

May 17. Lesson VII—Jesus Enters Jerusalem As King—Luke 19: 29-42, 45-48. Golden Text—He is Lord of lords, and King of kings.—Revelation 17: 14.

ANALYSIS.

I. THE TRIUMPHAL ENTRY, 19: 29-40.

II. JESUS WEEPS OVER JERUSALEM, 19: 41.

III. THE CLEANSING OF THE TEMPLE, 19: 45-48.

I. THE TRIUMPHAL ENTRY, 19: 29-40.

Jesus, entering the city, "meek and riding upon an ass," was indeed fulfilling the prophecy of Zechariah (9: 9); but it is exceedingly unlikely that at this moment the crowd recognized that Jesus himself was claiming to be the coming king. Among other reasons, we should consider two, first that at his later trial it was very difficult for his enemies to get any evidence against him which they could lay before Pilate (his public claim to be Messiah was just what they wished to prove and could not). Second, the time of the feast was always a very anxious time for the Roman authorities. They were afraid of riots and bloodshed, and if Jesus had approached the city publicly claiming to be the Messanic king, Pilate and "the police" would have arrested him at once without waiting for the Pharisees and Sadducees to act. We are, therefore, probably right to understand that the people accepted the teaching of Jesus that the kingdom of God is at hand, and that their shouts proclaim their expectation of some mighty act of God at the coming Feast. How much more mighty was the act of God than ever they anticipated!

II. JESUS WEEPS OVER JERUSALEM, 19: 41.

Forty years after the death of Jesus, Jerusalem was sacked and burned after one of the most ghastly sieges recorded in history. This appalling disaster overtook the Jews because they refused the way of Jesus, and preferred their narrow nationalism and hatred of the Romans. The only hope was that the people would rise to the new way of Jesus. It was as a patriot that Jesus wept over Jerusalem.

III. THE CLEANSING OF THE TEMPLE, 19: 45-48.

It is not unlikely that the Temple had been destroyed before any of our Gospels were written. In any case the Gospels were written in Greek, for the use of the Gentile Christians who had long since lost interest in the national hopes of the Jews and in the services of the Jewish Temple. Gentile readers were, therefore, not very much concerned with an act of Jesus which seemed to them to have little bearing upon their own needs and situation. They could picture Jesus riding in triumph into the city, but the cleansing of the Jewish Temple meant little to them. This seems to be the reason why, in our Gospels, comparatively little stress is laid upon the cleansing of the Temple. Yet, if we are to understand what Jesus was seeking to do in those last days, we shall probably find the key in this great prophetic act.

Jesus was condemned by Pilate on a political charge, that he claimed to be a king, Messiah; but to Jesus it is clear that Messiahship meant a religious, not a political, office. He was a religious revolutionary, not a political revolutionary. We best understand the tension of the last days in Jerusalem, if we bear in mind that his enemies were trying to trip up Jesus on a political charge, and that he was determined to make clear the purely religious nature of his purpose. The great prophets of the past had laid upon Israel the great task of bringing the knowledge of the one true God to all the world. Israel was to be a missionary nation, perhaps even, as one seems to have dreamed, a martyr missionary nation. From Jerusalem was to go forth to the whole earth the knowledge of the will of God. But of recent years, largely under the leadership of the Pharisees, the whole tendency of Judaism had been in the other direction, for they had attempted to cut off the Jews from the Gentile world and to make them a people apart. This proud separateness of the Jews was epitomized in the Temple publicly proclaimed, it was death for an uncircumcised Gentile to enter into the inner part of the sanctuary. Jesus came to Jerusalem to challenge the religious supremacy of the Pharisees and Sadducees and to call Israel back to its great God-given task. Jesus, therefore, planned what we should call a coup d'etat. In the name of God and of the great destiny of Israel he seized the Temple and proclaimed it as "a house of prayer for all nations." It was a great prophetic act which epitomized and made clear that which, in his ministry, he sought to do.

"Costs of Sickness"

By JOHN BURKE INGRAM

One Canadian out of every three dies ahead of his time, statistics show. One death out of every three deaths that bring sorrow to Canadian communities large and small could be postponed. We Canadians are letting our friends and relatives die because we do not know how many disease there are which could be prevented or because knowing, we will not take the trouble, the simple, trouble to prevent them. Why are these diseases not prevented.

That is the question which every thinking Canadian should want answered! For centuries disease was inevitable because mankind had not learned how to prevent it. Doctors existed to heal the sick, but it was nobody's business to attempt to prevent sickness from occurring because in those days it could not be done.

Then an English scientist named Edward Jenner discovered vaccination against smallpox. Doctors began to vaccinate people—which meant that doctors began to treat healthy people, in order to keep them from becoming ill by contracting smallpox. As a result this disease, at one time the greatest scourge of the race, has been beaten down till to-day it occupies a negligible place among the killers of civilized men.

The success of vaccination made medical scientists think along new lines. If a substance had been discovered which would prevent smallpox, why could not other substances be evolved to prevent other diseases? The idea was sound. To-day there is a substance which prevents diphtheria, another to prevent typhoid fever, another against scarlet fever, another to prevent lockjaw, another which, used in infantile paralysis, prevents crippling.

But though science is in a condition to prevent diseases by these and other means we are not taking advantage of the protection which is offered to us. For centuries we regarded disease as a kind of Act of God, and because it is hard to change the thinking habits of a people in one single generation we will, even most of our leaders, retain this medieval attitude.

And therefore to-day, Canada's lifeblood is flowing from wounds inflicted upon her by her enemies—disease germs. Not merely in dollars and cents alone—disease milks us annually—but also in our man-power. Canada needs population. Canada is constantly bringing foreign and other immigrants to our shore, yet she permits her own sons and daughters to die of diseases which could be, and should be, and some day shall be, prevented! Diphtheria and typhoid fever, both preventable, take respectively 1,200 and 1,111 lives annually, yet both diseases are preventable! The death rate from tuberculosis has been cut in two in the past 25 years and could be even with our present incomplete knowledge halved and halved again. Cancer kills almost 8,000 Canadians every year and, despite the fact that we don't know what causes cancer, this death rate could be cut in half if adult Canadians would cultivate the habit of having themselves periodically and thoroughly examined by a competent physician every birthday. And so all through the pitiful list of diseases which now rob us of our best and fairest—heart disease, maternal mortality—infant mortality, venereal diseases—all can be cut down if men and women will realize that they get just exactly the kind of health service that they want and are willing to pay for and that by backing their public official they may in some measure be held responsible for the health of a nation that is too indifferent to help itself.

Hamilton, Ont.—The new Hamilton city directory gives the population of the city as 162,372, this including a few people residing outside the city limits, and comparing with the city assessor's last summer estimate of 160,065. The Hamilton directory has increased on an average of 50 pages annually during the past ten years.

Where a Queen Once Strolled

There is something indestructible about a road. The stones may change and the surface be paved anew; but the track itself remains, be it straight or crooked, for it was made by the feet that trod it from century to century. The Roman roads that cut across England, this way and that, are still permanent ways. That, perhaps, is why Stoke Newington has been a place of great people since the days of Athelstan, when it was taken out of the wood edging the Roman highway called Ermine Street. Thinkers came along the ancient road to Stoke Newington, and made it a scholar's town. Did not John Bunyan preach on Newington Green Would we had been there to hear! Edgar Allan Poe had his first lessons in the school, and so had Daniel Defoe, whose school-fellow was John Wesley, father to two famous sons. John Rogers and Disraeli the elder come next, with Thomas Day and Isaac Watts—a strange mingling of geniuses. Who remembers Thomas Day? But he wrote "Sandford and Merton", the title of which, at least, everyone remembers; and Isaac Watts will never be forgotten, for he sings his way into our memories.

With all this atmosphere of learning, you may say that Stoke Newington cannot be romantic but you are wrong. Queen Elizabeth once walked there, and the road on which she laid her august and royal foot is Newington was country then, owned by the Dudleys, whose manor house was close at hand. Houses come and go; but this pathway of the glorious, much-traveling Gloriana still endures. It was a country walk within the manor pleasances, where Elizabeth would saunter with her "Sweet Robin," Earl of Leicester. Now it is edged with houses instead of flower-beds, lived in by the later citizens of no mean city. Let them remember sometimes, as they go along the road that was Elizabeth's, that it was once the highway of the Queen.

Polished Tables

A French-polished table can be kept in excellent order if a reliable furniture cream is applied once a week. Use only a small quantity, but rub it in well, polishing with a second soft cloth, finally rubbing it over with a silk duster. Rub daily.

White stains or water marks can be removed by wiping the surface of the table with raw linseed oil, after which it should be rubbed with a clean rag moistened with denatured alcohol. Apply the alcohol very lightly at first, exerting more pressure as it evaporates.

Wax-polished tables require polishing only occasionally, with a small quantity of wax polish. If too much wax is used the surface of the wood feels greasy and shows marks easily, while if a little wax is rubbed on well the surface will shine.

Marks may be removed by applying a paste made with salad oil and salt. Leave the paste on the marks for about an hour, then rub well with a soft cloth, and polish in the usual way.

To clean mahogany tables, wash them first with turpentine, which will remove any grease, and wipe the turpentine off well with soft cloths. Soak a cloth in linseed oil and rub it all over the table. Leave it for about 12 hours, then wipe it off with a piece of flannel, and when dry polish it with a clean cloth. In about three days' time repeat the process, omitting the washing with turpentine.

Should a very brilliant polish be desired, the oiling may be done two or three times, at intervals of three days. After the last application, when the oil has been rubbed off, wash the table with lukewarm water and dry well with two cloths. Rub carefully every day.

Girls' Public Speaking

At this particular time Peel girls are especially interested in Public Speaking. Brampton, Tullamore, Trinity, Bolton, Streetsville and Ebenezer Junior groups have entered a contestant. This year Peel boys and girls are holding a combined competition at the Brampton high school on Saturday evening, May 16th, commencing at 8.15 Daylight Saving Time.

Brampton Juniors are being represented by Miss Wilma Boucher, the County Secretary, who has chosen as her subject "99 Reasons for Living in Peel." Dorothy Shaw is speaking for Tullamore and taking as her subject "The Art of Gardening." Bolton Juniors are having Doris Allan, speaking for them on "Can We Make Life on the Farm More Attractive?" Miss Ruth Ross speaks for Streetsville and is well known to Peel Juniors as a reader. Ebenezer who is the baby organization, hold their elimination contest this week and it is expected that they will send in a strong contestant.

Trinity is being represented by Wilda McKecknie who will speak on "Canadian Poets." Mr. John Willis, County Warden is donating and presenting the first prize, and Mr. David Wilson, County Clerk, is donating and presenting the second prize. Three judges will be selected by the Dept. of Agriculture and 40% will be given for Subject Matter and 60% for delivery.

It is expected that the Juniors will come out in numbers to uphold their contestant at this event. Competition no doubt will be keen with every Junior organization sending in a representative. It will be worth your while to come early. Everyone will be out to hear this.

TRINITY CHURCH

On Sunday last, special services were held in connection with the dedication of the new organ and the opening and dedication of the Parish Hall. The Rev. Professor Horan, Dean of Wycliffe College, was the preacher, morning and evening, owing to the Ven.-Archdeacon Perry being absent through sudden illness. The services were well attended and helpful and inspiring in every way. The organ installed is a Karn-Warren, built when that well-known firm was doing its best work. The organ delighted all music lovers and the congregation in general, and will be a great help in the better rendering of the praises of God in His House. Miss Madeline Roy of St. Clements' Church, Riverdale, took charge of the organ for that day, while Mrs. H. Graydon assisted in the singing. The choir, under the leadership of Mrs. H. Wright, rendered the special anthem, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills." The Te Deum, as an act of special praise, was sung after the dedication of the organ.

On Monday evening, at 8 o'clock, the Parish Hall was officially opened and dedicated under particularly happy conditions. The Bishop of Toronto was present and dedicated the Hall for the purposes for which it was erected. The Rector and people were delighted with the splendid spirit of co-operation and interest manifested by the presence of many of the clergy, namely, Archdeacon Warren, of Toronto and Archdeacon Saddington, of Port Credit; Rev. Dr. McElheran, principal of Wycliffe College, Rev. H. V. Thompson, of Erindale; Rev. W. H. Sparks and Rev. Sextus Styles, of St. Olaves, Swansea; Rev. F. Vipond, St. Andrew's, Toronto; Rev. W. T. McCree, St. Andrew's, Streetsville; Rev. W. C. McKay, Weston; Rev. Geo. H. Purchase, United Church Streetsville; Rev. T. O. Curliss, of Toronto; Rev. H. P. Earle, Port Credit; Rev. C. W. Holdsworth, Islington and the Rural Dean of Peel, Rev. R. W. Allen, Brampton.

Letters conveying good wishes and regrets for not being able to be present were read from the Provost of Trinity College, Rev. Canon Brain, Mr. L. A. Hamilton, Lorne Park; Rev. J. H. Jones, Weston and Rev. Joseph Fletcher, now 87 years of age, former rector, and Rev. Canon Naftel, Milton.

All clergymen brought heartiest good wishes and congratulations, and their short addresses were much enjoyed. It was also a great pleasure to have Mrs. Nichol, of Hamilton, well-known in Streetsville, and the Brampton Quartette provided several splendid vocal numbers. There were many visitors from far and near, all voicing their great pleasure at the appearance of the Hall, the splendid workmanship and its ecclesiastical appearance, adding to the beauty and attractiveness of the old church of 87 years. The occasion also commemorated the seventh anniversary of the coming to Streetsville of the Rev. and Mrs. Perry and Miriam.

Mr. J. E. Bailey, on behalf of the Wardens and congregation, spoke of the hearty co-operation of all in the work of the building during the winter and exhorted all the young men and women to engage in the best of all works, the work of the church.

The Rector, in his address, paid tribute to the untiring efforts of the building and finance committees and the Willing Workers, who for years have had the vision of the Hall in view and have given faithfully of their time and talents to attain this objective.

The offerings on Sunday and Monday amounted to about $1,700.00.

Mr. Arthur Arch, on behalf of the Hockey Club, asked the Rector and Wardens to receive the challenge cup donated by the Reeve, Mr. Hope, to the winners, in the Hockey League, and have it deposited in the Hall for the year.

Feeling reference was made to the sudden call of Mr. Joseph Phair, who had all along taken such a deep interest and given the best of his time, thought and substance for the accomplishment of the work.

The donors of the memorial are as follows: Mrs. James Rogers and Mr. and Mrs. Pinnéy, in memory of the late Mr. James Rogers; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Bailey, in memory of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bailey; Rev. and Mrs. R. J. W. Perry, in memory of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm Parker, (parents of Mrs. Perry), in care of St. Paul's, Inniafil.

SUNSHINE AND BABIES

Out of doors, in the fresh air and sunshine, is the place where the baby should spend a great part of his life. In order that he may grow and have a strong, healthy body, the baby needs fresh air and sunshine just as much as he needs food.

Not only is sunshine pleasant, but it is actually health giving, and the rays of the sun acting upon the body are health forces which prevent rickets.

The baby should have his sun-baths regular each day. There is a right way to take sun-baths and this way must be followed or harm will result. The same attention should be paid to this part of the baby's life as is to his feeding and bathing.

Sun-baths may be taken in front of the open window. It is essential that the window be open, as ordinary window-glass keeps out certain rays which are desirable. As the weather grows warmer, the sun baths are taken out of doors.

On the first day, the hands and feet are exposed to the sunshine for five minutes only no longer. Next day, the time is ten minutes, and so five minutes are added each day until the bath is made to last for one hour.

As the time is lengthened, the surface of the body exposed to the sun is also increased. On the second day, the legs below the knees are exposed, then the whole leg; after that, the abdomen and, lastly, the chest, front and back.

On the day each part is first exposed, the time of exposure of that part should be limited to five minutes, and the exposure of each part increased by five minutes a day until the whole body is given an hour's sun-bath daily.

There must be no hurry with regard to the area exposed or the time of exposure as this causes trouble. The gradual increase is the only safe way.

The sun-bath should not come just before or after a meal. When the weather is really hot, the sun-bath should be given before eleven in the morning or after three in the afternoon as it is not desirable to expose the body to the mid-day sun during the excessive heat.

Not only do the sun's rays bring health to the baby, but the exposure of the body to the air—the air-bath—is also of benefit to the child.

The ancients worshipped the sun as a god. We to-day should recognize the sun as a giver of health.

Music Festival

Peel County Music Festival promises to be bigger and better than ever. Everyone is talking "festival" at the present time and well they might, for the committee have in their hands some 300 entries. It promises to be the second largest Music Festival in the Province of Ontario. Friday and Saturday, May 8th and 9th are the big days. Everyone will be at Clarke Memorial Hall, Port Credit, where the festival is to be held. Ladies in that district are serving lunches in the buildings at a very low rate so you can take your friends and stay all day.

Friday, the admission will be 25c. Saturday, 35c and children not competing will be charged 15c, while all those who have made entries will be admitted free. Saturday evening will be the climax of the event. A concert will be given by all first prize winners. At this time prizes will be presented. 30 shields have been donated, 4 trophies, 17 medals and 7 cash donations. In every class two prizes will be given out but where there are 6 or more contestants 3 prizes will be presented.

Schedules have been sent to the contestants but further copies may be obtained by writing or phoning the Secretary, Alma E. Wise, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Brampton. The festival will start at 9 a.m. Daylight Saving time on both Friday and Saturday and will run through until 11 at night with an hour off for both dinner and supper.

In nearly every case the children's numbers are being heard during the day and the adult entries on Friday evening and Saturday afternoon, namely choirs, choral, violin and piano and vocal numbers.

It promises to be a big event. Plan to go often and early. There will never be a dull moment. Recitations will be heard in a separate room. It will be a busy and interesting time. You can't afford to miss it. The President is J. W. Fleury, Brampton. The Vice-President, Lloyd C. Lynd, Port Credit. They have a splendid committee and everyone is on the job.

The Adjudicators are: C. D. Atkinson, Charles Peaker, Mus. Bac. F.R.C.O., Miss Jane Ferguson, and Miss Clarice Spencer, all of Toronto.

Essay Competitors Write Exam.

Five Peel girls won trips to the Royal Winter Fair last fall. On their return the girls submitted essays to the Institute branch telling of the benefits of such a trip. Now the T. Eaton Co. has offered a scholarship for the girl who writes an exam. dealing with things they saw and heard at the Royal. The papers will be marked at Head Office in Toronto and the girl obtaining the highest mark in the Province will receive a 2 year course at Macdonald Institute, Guelph. The exam. will be written by some 250 girls. The exam. papers sent to Peel County are now being held by the Home Demonstrator, A. E. Wise, and will be opened on Saturday afternoon when the contestants assemble. The Peel girls who are eligible are Misses Florence and Elsie Elliott, Mary Fraser, Jean Fraser and Wilma Hunter. The two Elliott girls are in Guelph at the present time taking a 2 weeks' Short Course at Macdonald Institute and will write their exam. under the supervision of Miss Olive Cruikshank, Miss Ann Lindsay, of Bolton, is also taking this course. She won the General Proficiency prize at Ebenezer Short Course this past winter.

This is the first exam. of its kind to be held and needless to say the girls are all wondering what kind of questions to expect. The winner will be a fortunate person. It is hoped that a Peel girl may win it.

TORONTO TP. COUNCIL

Toronto Township, through the insistence of the Lakeview ratepayers, will have another opportunity to bring gas into the township. A resolution presented by Deputy Reeves Bonham and Bryans on Saturday, gave first and second reading to a by-law which, if passed by the township, will give the Consumers Gas Company of Toronto perpetual franchise to supply gas to the township. The date set for the taking of the vote was Saturday, June 6, the voting to be from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m., standard time. F. Tucker, secretary of the gas company, was present, and reviewed to the council and to a considerable delegation of ratepayers from Lakeview the terms of the company. The chief cry of the Lakeview residents, aside from their desire for gas was the necessity of providing work for the unemployed of that district, which work would be forthcoming on the advent of the gas lines in the township.

Incidentally, all costs for the preparation and voting of the by-law will be paid by the Consumers Gas Company. The company will also co-operate with the township authorities in the advertising of the by-law.

Another by-law was passed for the borrowing of $20,000 to meet current expenses. Assessors appointed at the meeting were: District No. 1, C. J. Crozier; No. 2, P. G. Michell; No. 3, R. J. Tolan; No. 4, J. C. Bell. Instructions were given in council for a more thorough assessment than that taken during the past few years, and instances of mistakes in the assessment rolls were given by the Reeve, J. H. Pinchin.

Reports tendered council showed that during the past month, 42 cars were tested by S. M. Belford for brake conditions. William Shook, weed inspector of the township, stated that he had already received two complaints of noxious weeds. These reports, however, dealt with those left over from 1930, and had not already grown this spring.

Burnhamthorpe, by resolution of the council, will receive $1,200 for school purposes, spread over a period of months.

A coincidence was brought to light in council on Saturday. J. H. Pinchin, reeve, proclaimed that on the day of the vote on the gas by-law, he will have been married 25 years. This day is also one of the scheduled dates for meetings of council, which will make it a rather busy one for Mr. Pinchin.

DIXIE

Rev. W. N. Chantler, pastor of Dixie United Church, preached in two different places at the same hour. At 11 a.m. he was in the pulpit at Burnhamthorpe United Church and at 11 a.m. he was also preaching at Bethesda Church. The only difference of course, is the fact that at Burnhamthorpe it was 11 a.m. Standard time, whereas Dixie changed to Daylight Saving time last week.

LET US SMILE

He was to be married, and went to his tailor to be measured for the wedding outfit. When the agony was over the tailor coughed apologetically.

"I am sorry, Mr. Smith, but I must ask you to pay cash for these suits!"

"What! I've had an account with you for fourteen years and I've always settled half-yearly!"

"I know," said the tailor, "but up to now you've always had the handling of your own money!"

Mortgages arranged on Local City Properties.

Mother and Anne had always been very close to one another. When Anne married and moved to another city, each missed the other greatly.

But one thing more than any other has helped to keep them close — the telephone. Every Friday evening Anne calls her mother by Long Distance . . . after 8.30 p.m. when the low night rates are in effect. During the week they both keep memos of topics they wish to discuss. Then there is no time lost . . . and nothing forgotten.

What if they are 120 miles apart! The telephone connection is made in about a minute — nearly always while Anne holds the line. Their voices are just as clear as on local, and the cost, after 8.30 p.m., is only 40 cents.

Evening rates on "Anyone" (station-to-station) calls begin at 7 p.m. Night rates begin at 8.30 p.m.

DOMINION OF CANADA

1931 CONVERSION LOAN

Official announcement is made today of the terms of the Dominion of Canada 1931 Conversion Loan. This issue extends the oportunity to holders of Dominion of Canada War Loan and Victory Bonds now approaching maturity to convert their holdings into bonds extending over a further period of from 15 to 25 years, and marks what may eventually prove to be the greatest financial operation in the history of Canada—the refunding of the heavy volume of financial obligations incurred during the War period.

The offer does not involve the raising of any new money. Not a penny will be added to the national debt of Canada in consequence of the 1931 Conversion Loan. It is entirely a matter of exchanging existing bonds for other bonds of the Dominion. A total of more than one billion dollars of bonds reaches maturity within the next 3½ years. This total is made up of about $52,900,000 War Loan 5% Bonds due October 1, 1931; $73,300,000 Renewal Loan 5½% Bonds due November 1, 1932; $446,600,000 Victory Loan 5½% Bonds due November 1, 1933; and $512,000,000 Victory Loan 5½% Bonds due November 1, 1934.

Holders of bonds of these issues are being given the opportunity of continuing their investment over a longer term in the direct obligations of the Dominion Government. They will not lose anything in the way of interest payments or income tax exemption by exchanging for bonds of the 1931 Conversion Loan. It is explained that the new bonds will carry coupons enabling holders to recieve up to date of the maturity of their old bonds, the same interest payments and tax free privileges as they would enjoy if they held their War Loan or Victory Bonds until the actual date of maturity in each case. For the remainder of the term of the 1931 Conversion Loan Bonds, they will carry interest at the rate of 4½% per annum, which in the opinion of leading investment bankers, is a comparatively generous return in view of the interest rates now prevailing in the London and New York markets.

Conversion applications are now being invited up to a total of $250,000,000 of the new bonds. It is announced, however, that the Minster of Finance reserves the right to increase this amounts in his discretion. Subscription lists will open today and will close on or before the 23rd of May, as may be decided by the Government.

Holders of the War Loan 5% Bonds maturing 1st of October, 1931 may exchange their bonds for Dominion of Canada 1931 Conversion Loan Bonds maturing November 1, 1956. The new bonds will not be subject to redemption before November 1, 1946, but from that date until maturity they may be called by the Government on any interest date on 60 days' notice, at 100 and accrued interest. The first coupon on these bonds will be for six months' tax free interest at 5% per annum, payable May 1, 1932. All other coupons will carry interest at the rate of 4½% per annum payable half-yearly on the 1st of May and the 1st of November.

Holders of the Renewal Loan 5½% Bonds maturing 1st of November, 1932, may exchange their bonds for Dominion of Canada 1931 Conversion Loan Bonds, maturing November 1, 1957. The latter issue cannot be retired before November 1, 1947, but after that rate it may be redeemed by the Government on any interest date on 60 days' notice, at 100 and accrued interest. The new bonds will carry regular coupons covering interest at the rate of 4½% per annum payable half-yearly on the 1st of May and the 1st of November. In addition to the regular coupons, these bonds will carry three adjustment coupons payable, respectively, on the 1st of November 1931, the 1st of May 1932, and the 1st of November 1932, for additional interest at the rate of 1% per annum.

Holders of the Victory Loan 5½% Bonds maturing the 1st of November 1933 are being offered the opportunity to exchange their bonds for Dominion of Canada 1931 Conversion Loan Bonds maturing November 1, 1958. These new bonds will carry interest at the rate of 4½% per annum from May 1, 1931, payable half-yearly on May 1st and November 1st. The first five interest coupons—that is, those due to be paid each six months up to November 1, 1933, will be tax free. In addition to the regular coupons, these bonds will carry five tax free adjustment coupons for aditional interest at the rate of 1% per annum, payable, respectively, November 1, 1931; May 1, 1932; November 1, 1932. The 1, 1933; and November 1, 1933. The Conversion Loan Bonds maturing in 1958 will not be subject to redemption before November 1, 1948, but on or after that date they may be called at the option of the Government on any interest date on 60 days' notice, at 100 and accrued interest.

Holders of the Victory Loan 5½% Bonds maturing 1st November 1934 are being offered the opportunity to exchange their bonds for bonds of the Dominion of Canada 1931 Conversion Loan maturing November 1, 1959, which will carry coupons entitling the owner to interest at the rate of 4½% per annum, payable half-yearly May 1 and November 1, commencing May 1, 1931. In addition to the regular coupons these bonds will carry seven adjustment coupons for further interest at the rate of 1% per annum, payable, respectively, November 1, 1931; May 1, 1932; November 1, 1932; May 1, 1933; November 1, 1933; May 1, 1934, and November 1, 1934. The Conversion Loan Bonds due November 1, 1959 will not be redeemable before November 1, 1949, but after that date they may be redeemed by the Government on any interest date on 60 days' notice, at 100 and accrued interest.

The issue of bonds of the 1931 Conversion Loan is authorized by Act of Parliament, which provides that both principal and interest on all of the bonds is to be a charge on the consolidated revenue fund of Canada.

Principal and interest on the new bonds will be payable without charge in lawful money of Canada at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, Saint John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, or Victoria. Interest coupons will be payable without charge as they fall due at any branch in Canada of any of the Chartered Banks.

The Department of Finance announces that interim certificates in bearer form will be delivered in the first instance in exchange for all War Loan and Victory Bonds accepted for conversion. The interim certificates will be exchangeable at a later date for engraved definitive bonds. The Finance Department expects that the definitive bonds will be ready on or about the 15th of August 1931.

When the definitive bonds are ready it will be possible for holders to obtain delivery of coupon bonds in bearer form or of coupon bonds registrable as to principal. These bonds will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, and $1,000. Fully registered bonds, on which the interest will be paid direct to the owner by Government cheque, will also be obtainable in denominations of $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000 and $100,000.

Applications to convert bonds will be received and receipts issued by any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank and by recognized Canadian Bond Dealers and Stock Brokers, from whom application forms and copies of the prospectus containing complete details of the new bonds may be obtained. They will arrange for the conversion of bonds without expense to bond-holders.

TORONTO TP. COUNCIL

COOKSVILLE

Toronto township must hold an election to fill two vacancies on the township council, made by the appointment of Reeve J. H. Pinchin as municipal clerk, and by the resignation of Deputy Reeve Thomas Bryans, which was accepted at a special council meeting.

G. B. Jackson, who performed the duties of treasurer for some years, prior to the appointment of the late J. R. Kennedy, was re-appointed to the same office. A nomination meeting will be held on May 19th, and it is anticipated that the Reeveship will be conferred on Thomas Bryan.

J. H. Pinchin has served seven years in the township council, during two of which he occupied the reeve's chair. He was formerly assessor for the south end of the township and possesses a unique acquaintance with the municipality, as well as an intimate knowledge of municipal law. Mr. Pinchin carries on a cement tile business at Clarkson, in addition to being a successful fruit grower. He has for several years been secretary-treasurer of Clarkson Fruit Growers' Association.

PEEL MUSICAL FESTIVAL

This year Peel County had the second largest festival in the Province. The event was outstanding with 310 entries. All day Friday, May 8th, children competed in elimination contests. Saturday, adults school chorus and recitations which lead up to the final concert given by all first prize winners on Saturday evening. Clarke Memorial Hall at Port Credit was crowded with some 1,000 spectators filling the main auditorium, while the prize winners were housed in the basement. Some 1800 contestants passed over the stage during the two days and their work was heard by the adjudicators from Toronto, namely Mr. G. D. Atkinson, and Mrs. Chas. Peaker, F.R.C.O., who had charge of music, Miss Clarice Spencer, of elocution, and Miss Jane Ferguson, folk dancing. After each class was heard placings and criticism was given which should prove of benefit to the young contestants. The Fergus operatic choral club pleased the audience with their number and were asked to repeat it. Miss Elsie Rue of Toronto, who was the first prize winner in the open recitation, was the only one to receive a perfect score card. Her work was quite outstanding and delighted the audience.

Prizes were presented by the President, Mr. J. W. Fleury, Mr. Fydell, School Inspector for Peel, and Miss A. E. Wise. Staging was in charge of Mr. A. S. Thomas, Mr. L. G. Lynd, Mrs. A. H. McFadden, and Miss R. E. Goldthorpe. The committee composed of numbers from north, south and centre are to be congratulated on their splendid work Several Peel people donated medals and shields and in every class where there were six or more entries 3 prizes were presented. OBITUARY

Mrs. Alice McLeod

After a lengthy illness, Mrs. Alice McLeod passed away at the home of her sister, Mrs. W. G. Adamson, Streetsville, on Saturday, May 9th, having passed the age of three score and ten. She was a daughter of the late John Scruton. She married David McLeod, and they lived at Woodstock, Ont., and at St. John's, N.B. Her husband predeceased her some years ago, and [illegible] she came to make her home with her only surviving sister, Mrs. Adamson.

The funeral took place Monday afternoon and was largely attended. Service was conducted in the United Church by Rev. Geo. H. Purchase, and interment was made in Streetsville Cemetery. The floral tributes were very beautiful.

The pallbearers were Messrs. C. H. Falconer, J. K. Featherston, T. F. Gould, T. H. Goodison, F. A. Maas and Chas. Henney, of Toronto.

Pay Up

While a great many have responded to our request and renewed their subscription, there are still a large number owing us and we need the money. Our list has been corrected up to date. Look at the date on your label and if there is any mistake kindly notify us and we shall be pleased to correct same as we require a considerable amount of money to meet our obligations we must again request those in arrears to settle same.

THE GRIM REAPER

Mrs. Alice McLeod

The passing of Mrs. McLeod will be regretted by her many friends. She was the eldest daughter of the late John and Mrs. Scruton, a pioneer family of Streetsville. Mrs. McLeod was of a very cheerful disposition. She was a fine musician and always took a keen interest in musical entertainment of every kind. She was organist for many years in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Streetsville, later going to Woodstock, where for seventeen years she was organist in Knox Church, one of the largest churches in that city While in Woodstock she married D. A. McLeod, they moved to St. John, N.B., shortly after their marriage, where Mr. McLeod died. Mrs. McLeod has for sixteen yeasrs made her home with her sister, Mrs. W. G. Adamson. She is survived by one brother, A. W. Scruton, of Toronto and her sister, Mrs. Adamson.

Isaac Beattie

The sudden and unexpected death of Isaac Beattie has cast a gloom over the community where he spent his boyhood days and in his home in Toronto, and the deepest sympathy is felt for the deceased's widow and family.

About three weeks ago Mr. Beattie suffered a severe attack of pneumonia and was speedily recovering his usual health. Then suddenly on Saturday morning the heart weakened and death came. Besides his widow, who was formerly Miss Clara Dundas, of Brussells, three daughters and a son survive, Catharine, Mrs. John Morton, Chicago; Dorothy, Jean and Gerald, at home; three brothers, George, Churchville; James, Streetsville; John, Trafalgar; and one sister, Mrs. Swackhammer, Huttonville.

The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon to Park Lawn Cemetery and was largely attended. Service was conducted at the home by Rev. Harold Addison, of High Park United Church, where deceased was a faithful member, and Rev. Mr. Richardson, who united them in marriage 26 years ago.

Mr. Beattie was widely and favorably known, having gained the confidence of all he had conducted business with as a life insurance agent. His successful buiness life was proof he had chosen his rightful calling.

The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful, showing the high esteem in which he was held by friends, the church and many societies where he was an esteemed member.

Friends were present from Brampton, Hornby, Huttonville, Streetsville, Beachville, Ancaster, Seaforth, Port Credit, Erin and other places.

The pallbearers were nephews, Isaac Askin, Harold Beattie, Will Rutledge, Matt Beattie, Wilmer Scott and James Beamish.

When schoolmates and friends take their separate way,
Then the news will come, one has passed away,
Then we think of that friend we once used to meet,
Where his life-sheet is now at the great judgment seat,
What a comfort to think he stood
every test,
And knew what was right was always the best,
So dear friend, Isaac, all our dealings
with you,
In school days and business you always rang true.

SANDY

ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. Arthur G. Crysdale wishes to announce the engagement of his younger daughter, Ruby Mary, to Mr. Omar L. Turney, son of Mrs. H. B. Turney, Streetsville. The marriage will take place quietly at Bloor United Church on June 6th.

Collision at Curve Claims Two Lives

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Irwin of Sarnia Killed — Five Others in Hospital

Oakville.—A husband and wife lost their lives, while five others were rushed to a Toronto hospital, after a collision between a T.T.C. coach early Sunday afternoon, and an automobile on the Hamilton Highway at a dangerous curve known as "The Anchorage," near Milligan's Corners, about four miles east of Oakville.

KILLED

Harry Irwin, aged 58, 337 South Mitton Street, Sarnia.

Mrs. H. Irwin, aged 57, his wife, of the same address.

INJURED

Miss Margaret Garvin, 19 London Road, Sarnia; leg injuries.

Mrs. Dora McEwan, 99 Sparkhall Avenue, Toronto; cuts and bruises.

Fred Walker, 67 Cambridge Ave., Toronto; lacerations.

PAVEMENT SLIPPERY.

The accident occurred at 1.35, just after a heavy shower of rain, which made the pavement slippery. The car, which was driven by W. Irwin of 370 Cameron Street, Sarnia, was traveling east, and in it besides the driver were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Irwin, Sarnia, his father and mother; Miss Margaret Garvin, 19 London Road, Sarnia; and Mrs. Jessie Neilson, wife of the owner of the car, of 370 Cameron St., Sarnia.

Both vehicles at the time of the accident were on a sharp turn, the T.T.C. coach in charge of Joseph Berry, 18 Marigold Ave., Toronto, travelling west. Just what happened had not been definitely established at a late date, as the stories of the witnesses varied somewhat, but the vehicles collided with a terrific impact, and Mrs. Irwin, who, with her husband, was in the rear seat of the car, received the full impact, and was killed almost instantly.

HUSBAND IN HOSPITAL.

Her husband sustained critical internal injuries and was rushed to a Toronto hospital, after he had been attended by Dr. L. G. Brayley, Port Credit; Dr. A. B. Sutton, Port Credit and Dr. Wilkinson, Oakville. Later, however, he succumbed to his injuries, and the body was removed to the morgue in Toronto.

The accident is being investigated by Inspector Sydney Hunter and officers E. J. Purvis and Charles Hunter of the Provincial Police, and up to a late date no charge has been laid against either driver.

Plane Swoop Saves Deer Pursued by Ontario Wolf

Montreal.—Only the timely intervention of an airplane saved a deer from death as it vainly tried to outdistance a wolf in a life or death race on Lake Wahnapite, northern Ontario.

Pilot Herb Clegg, in a Moth airplane, noticed two objects racing over the ice, but could not identify them. Swooping for a closer observation, he found it to be a wolf in pursuit of a deer. The deer was weakening. Swiftly the gap was closing between it and its dreaded foe. Several times the airman swooped down without being able to alter the intent of the wolf. At last, after a perilously close dive at the wolf, he managed to make it give up the chase. The wolf scurried for the bush off the mainland and the deer continued its course in liberty.

Canadian Track Stars Invited to Europe

Winnipeg.—Cinder paths of Europe may be the stamping ground for three of Canada's oustanding track stars for a month this summer if Percy Williams, Jimmy Ball and Phil Edwards accept an invitation from sport authorities of Cologne, Germany. Edwards, it is understood here, will go if Williams and Ball accompany him. They would run at Cologne, Paris, London, Berlin and Stockholm.

Williams, Olympic sprint champion, and Ball, former Canadian quarter-mile champion, are undecided whether they will make the European tour.

Critical Low Levels in Great Lakes Feared

Ottawa.—The Canadian Hydrographic Service, Department of Marine, reporting on the April water levels of the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River, says that due to continued sub-normal precipitation over the drainage area, the lakes have not been gaining in ratio to the normal yearly cycle.

Unless excessive precipitation occurs during the summer months, the report adds, it is to be expected the lake levels will fall to a critical low stage during the late summer and autumn.

Ladybugs Released

Walla Walla, Wash.—Nine gunny sacks of ladybugs, literally millions of them, have been released in eastern Washington orchards and truck gardens to fight aphis and spitbugs. The ladybugs were gathered while dormant in the Cascade mountains and kept in cold storage in Seattle until needed.

Famous Scientist Called by Death

Albert Michelson, Discoverer of Speed of Light, Dies in California

Pasadena, Cal.—Dr. Albert Michelson, 78, noted physicist, died last Saturday afternoon. He had been unconscious since he suffered a cerebral hemorrhage last Thursday.

Dr. Michelson was the discoverer of the speed of light and one of the greatest scientists of modern times.

Death came quietly to the man whose work made it possible to know the distance of the stars.

It came on the eve of success of what he called his "last experiment," the most precise and extensive in physics, the exact determination of the speed of light.

Paralysis was the cause. The great scientist took to his bed here just after the last instruments were in place, and the first measurements started in his mile-long vacuum tube at Irvine ranch.

Too feeble to move, his lower limbs completely paralyzed almost to the abdomen, Dr. Michelson last week called Prof. Francis G. Pease to his bedside. Pease, of the Carnegie Institution of Washington staff, was carrying on the final work of the last Michelson experiment with the mile-long vacuum tube at Santa Ana. He had come to tell the great scientist that all experimental work was completed, and all that remained was the recheck of instruments and recheck of measurements to derive the final figure of the speed of light.

In a soft voice, barely audible in the quiet bedroom, with two watchful nurses nearby, Michelson started dictating. Pease bent over to catch the words. Page after page of lucid scientific analysis was set down.

Canadians Win Awards at Yale

Toronto, Niagara Falls, Paris and Kingston Students Are Victors

New Haven, Conn.—The complete list of awards at Yale University adds five Canadians to the list of honored students announced recently.

Kellogg fellowships in the classics were awarded Sidney F. Gould, Paris, Ont., and Harold Sissons Shurtleff, Kingston, Ont.

University fellowships were awarded David Bidney, Toronto, Ont., in philosophy, and Alorm C. Bray, Outremont, Que., in geology.

Norman E. Gibbons, Niagara Falls, Ont., received a university scholarship.

Pride In Work Needed In School

Glasgow—As long as a child was given power in character and ability and pride in work well done it did not matter what they taught him, was the opinion expressed by William Robb, inspector of schools, when he opened the primary school building at Auchinloch.

They could teach these things as well through one subject as another, he said. If he looked at a piece of beautiful Eastern carpet or Persian rug, he reflected, the person who made it could probably neither read nor write, and yet he had produced a piece of fine artistry.—The Christian Science Monitor.

Big Increase Shown In Canal Traffic

Ottawa—Even allowing for earlier opening dates this year on most Canadian ship canals, traffic during April was decidedly heavier than during the same month last year.

The largest single item among increases was wheat through the Canadian and United States locks at Sault Ste. Marie, which totalled 15,108,624 bushels, against 737,650 bushels a year ago. Other grains through the same locks amounted to 5,765,982 bushels, as against 366,000 bushels.

British Naval Ships To Visit Germany

London.—For the first time in 17 years a British naval unit will visit Germany this summer. The Admiralty recently announced that it had accepted an invitation from the German Government and that the H.M.S. Dorsetshire and the H.M.S. Norfolk would pay an unofficial call at Kiel from July 4 to July 11.

The last time such a thing happened was in June, 1914. Kaiser Wilhelm in the uniform of a German Admiral visited the British flagship King George V in Kiel Harbor and his flag was flown from the ship while he was abaord.

New Traffic Light in Britain

Some English cities are taking their traffic lights from posts beside street intersections and sinking them in a line across the roadway, flush with the surface, says "Popular Mechanics Magazine." When traffic is to be stopped these lights make a vivid red line across the highway. Those adopting this system say the sunken lights are more easily seen by motorists, who naturally have their eyes on the road ahead.

Pitches No-Hit, No-Run Game

Lone Scouts will be pleased to know that the new Governor General of Canada, His Excellency the Right Hon. The Earl of Bessborough, P.C., G.C.M.G., has accepted the appointment of Chief Scout for Canada. His Excellency has been a strong supporter of the movement in the British Isles, and we are glad to know that one of the very first things that he did on arrival in Canada was to accept this appointment. Canada has been fortunate in it's choice of Governor Generals in the past, and without exception these have all unhesitatingly accepted the office of Chief Scout for Canada, during the duration of their stay in this country. Such distinguished men as the Duke of Connaught, Lord Byng of Vimy, Earl Grey, Lord Willingdon, etc., have considered it an honor to be connected with the Scout Movement in this country.

There has been another distinguished Scout visitor to Canada recently in the personage of King Prajadhipok of Siam, who is the Chief Scout of that Country and who takes a very great interest in the activities of his boys.

During the month of May a special Artificial Respiration Campaign is being conducted by Scouts and Rovers throughout Ontario, and the Lone Scouts should be in on this activity also. It is intended to arouse interest in this very useful method of saving life, and to ensure that all Scouts are proficient in or have a practical knowledge of the Schafer Method, which is sometimes called the "Prone Pressure" method.

It is surprising how useful a knowledge of this subject may be, and it should be at once realized that it is not restricted to cases of drowning only, and therefore even if you do not live close to the water you should endeavor to know all about artificial respiration. In cases of severe electrical shock, life has frequently been restored by this method even after several hours hard work, and on one occasion I employed artificial respiration to a large prize steer, who had accidentally strangled itself with a headrope by which it was fastened to it's stall. After about three quarters of an hour of real strenuous work I was able to revive the animal and in a short time it was none the worse for it's experience.

If you do not know much about this subject, a Lone Scout should get into touch with the local Fire Chief, or a member of the St. John's Ambulance Brigade, or the Royal Humane Society, or even on official of the Hydro-Electric System, or the Bell Telephone System, explaining that you are a Lone Scout and that you wish to improve your knowledge in this subject. They will be glad to help you.

If you have a Boy Scouts Handbook for Canada you will find a very accurate and detailed description of the method on pages 431-434. Now-a-days, with so many automobiles in use, and with the possibility of gas poisoning from defective furnaces, a good knowledge of Artificial Respiration to combat Carbon-Monoxide gas poisoning becomes an obligation to every Scout.

Patrols are urged to make special arrangements to practice the Schafer Method at their Patrol Meetings during the next month, and individual Lones should also study the matter carefully.

News this week comes from Beeton, where Lone Scout Harvey Barnes has succeeded in organizing a Lone Patrol to be known as the Ravens. Harvey has been a keen Scout for some time, and we congratulate him on this good work.

From Markham, Stouffville and Unionville also comes the news of new Lone Patrols in the making, and we look forward to hearing further from them.

At Beamsville, recently, where the late "Fox Patrol" of the 2nd Ontario Lone Scout Troop have grown into a new Troop of their own, a special public meeting was held at which the new Troop Charter was officially presented by Mr. F. C. Irwin, M.A., the Assistant Provincial Commissioner for Ontario. The Scouts put on several interesting stunts, and Mr. Edgar Jones of Toronto showed his pictures and gave an interesting talk on Scouting. The 1st Beamsville Troop have adopted red neckerchiefs, with a mauve Fox's Head on the back peak. We wish them all good luck.

Falls Disappoint Royal Couple

"I Thought It Would Be Greater," Said Japanese Princess in English

Niagara Falls, N.Y.—Speaking for Prince Takamatsu and Princess Kikuko in an official interview Sunday afternoon, Commander Yakeo Yamagata, master of ceremonies, expressed disappointment in Niagara's grandeur for their Royal Highnesses.

The 19-year-old princess murmured in flawless English as she gazed for the first time on the cataract: "Why, this is not what I expected; I thought it would be greater."

Commander Yamagata: "There was a feeling in the Royal party that the illumination of the falls which we saw was somewhat gaudy. We are much impressed by the sublimity of this waterfall, but to light it in striking colors is like gilding the lily."

After a hearty breakfast of ham and eggs, the brother of Japan's Emperor and his bride, accompanied by Commander Yamagata, Commander Kyosuke Fidzuno, aide-de-camp; the Hon. C. H. Cahan, Secretary of State, and Larent B. Audrey, Dominion Counsellor of External Affairs, visited Table Rock and the Niagara Falls and Queenston plants of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission. A short drive along the Canadian side of the Gorge and a spin around Goat Island on the United States side occupied the morning. The party took lunch at the General Brock Hotel and immediately after entrained for Detroit.

The Snail that Builds a Raft

A number of our sea snails make interesting nurseries for their young. To examine such work closely gives us a new interest in the odd, shapeless creatures that live in shells.

The violet sea snail lives on the open seas of the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans. It has a small shell, only an inch and a half in diameter, which is very thin, delicate and beautifully colored in shades of violet, the upper part being a soft violet and the under and inner parts purple. Its spiral shell resembles in form that of our common land snail.

This small creature lacks the power to swim or to float; yet it lives on the surface of the water where it spends its lazy life floating from place to place, eating the small jellyfish, so plentiful and easy to obtain.

Schneider Trophy Winner Succumbs

Flight Lieut. H. R. D. Waghorn's Leap by Parachute Proves Fatal

Aldershot, England.—Flight Lieut. H. R. D. Waghorn, winner of the Schneider Cup Trophy for 1929, died at Cambridge Military Hospital on May 7th from injuries received when his 'plane recently crashed near Farnborough.

Lieut. Waghorn and a fellow-pilot, E. R. Alexander, took to their parachutes when their 'plane went out of control in a high gale. The former landed on the roof of a shed, suffering injuries to his head and limbs. Alexander was not seriously hurt.

The flier underwent an operation but gradually grew worse. His wife maintained a ceaseless vigil by his bedside until he died. He is also survived by a son.

Lieut. Waghorn attained a speed of 328.63 miles per hour in retaining the Schneider Cup for Great Britain two years ago. Starting to fly at the age of 18, he was early nicknamed "Daisy" in recognition of a descent into a daisy field and later was heralded as one of Great Britain's premier aerobatic aviators.

Lieut. Waghorn's death marks the 41st fatality in the Royal Air Force since January 1 and follows closely the tragic end of Lieut. Commander Glen Kidston, who crashed against a mountain in Natal, south Africa, last week.

Jugoslavia to Replace Huts in Quake Area

Belgrade.—Cottages that will withstand the earthquakes which frequently shake down the huts of peasants in South Serbia are being planned as a means of preventing devastation in that region.

King Alexander summoned architects from Italy to demonstrate a type of building already tried out in that country, and the government is to devote $100,000,000 to the work of rebuilding regions devastated by recent shocks.

This is a tremendous sum in Jugoslavian eyes, but it will give the peasants more pleasing and enduring homes than they have ever had before.

Ultra-Violet Rays Aid St. Bernards

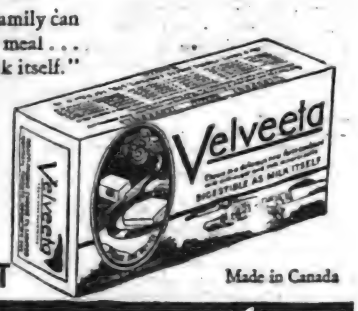
St. Bernard puppies wearing dark glasses disport themselves under ultra-violet ray lamps in New Jersey. When they grow up the ultra-violet dogs stand eight inches higher than an office desk. Why the ultra-violet ray treatment? Like babies, St. Bernard puppies are subject to rickets. And for rickets there is no better treatment than exposure to the ultra-violet rays of the sun or of arc lamps. The St. Bernard dogs are so heavy that rickety legs will not hold them up.

Chickens, too, are being raised by tens of thousands for the New York City market without ever seeing the sun.

A Flax Substitute

Safflower, which resembles a thistle without prickles and has been cultivated in Egypt and India as an oil-seed crop, is being tested in Western Canada as a partial substitute for flax. The seeds contains a drying oil valuable for use in the production of paints and varnishes and the oil cake is useful as stock feed. It is suggested by agricultural experts as a possible supplementary crop to flax in the prairie provinces.

Work on Dirigible Hangar is Started



New York—Construction of the first commercial dirigible hangar in the city began recently at Holmes Airport, Jackson Heights, when the Borough President drove the first pile before a crowd of approximately 1,000 persons. Among the spectators were Sir Hubert Wilkins and his technical aid, A. F. Beam.

Parachute to Land Planes

Milwaukee, Wis.—A parachute designed to land airplanes without injury has been invented by Rr. Robert J. Miller, of Milwaukee. The parachute can be opened by a device operated with the foot. When the ship lands, the "chute" is automatically detached. Dr. Miller believes the invention will eventually eliminate airplane casualties.

Britain Plans 5-Day Plane Service to India

London—A cut of two days from the present seven-day air journey between England and India is being planned as the result of agreements recently concluded by Britian, Italy and Greece. The newly opened central African air mail service will also be speeded up if the agreements are ratified.

It is hoped that beginning May 16 the present route across central Europe will be discontinued and passengers and mail will travel via Switzerland, Italy and Greece to Egypt, on three-engineed Armstrong Siddeley air liners carrying the combined Indian and African air mail.

At Basle, Switzerland, passengers and mail will be transferred to a new night train to Genoa where the trip will be continued by a four-engineed Short flying boat to Alexandria via Naples, Corfu and Athens. This leg of the journey will be completed two days, seven hours, after leaving London.

Health Protection In Old Quebec

By Hon. Athanese David
Provincial Secretary and Registrar, Province Quebec

(Condensed from the Montreal Gazette)

Some forty-three years ago the Provincial Bureau of Health was humbly started when the Prime Minister of the Province of Quebec placed the sum of $5,000 a year at the disposal of Dr. Persillier Lachapelle, so that he might do something to promote better knowledge of the elements of hygiene among our population.

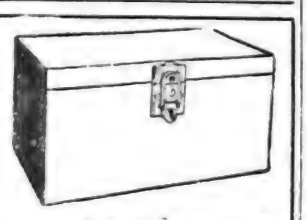
Along with the cash, went a recommendation. The good doctor was urged to make no noise about it and not to frighten people with too much publicity. This was a wise admonition. How often it has been—and still is—said: "Our forefathers did not take so much care, and yet they lived to old age." How often did those who carried on the work meet with what I have called, and still call, remains of paganism such as makes parents and others say at the death of a child: "One more little angel." All these and many other objections had to be appeased before the real work could be done.

Much real work, however, has been done. Public opinion has been awakened, which, realizing the importance of preventive measures in protecting lives and health, does not object to seeing large amounts devoted to these purposes. Year after year that original $5,000 was increased until by 1920 it had grown to $119,694, which was then considered to be quite a large amount for public health. Since 1920 more determined efforts to increase public health activities have been made in the Province. The former Board was replaced by a Department, and striking contrast is afforded in comparing the 1920 and 1930 budgets. For during the latter year, the amount devoted to public health work was $621,859. During these years of increasing public interest in public health, a tremendous campaign of education was first undertaken, directed principally against our two greatest scourges, tuberculosis and infantil mortality. Then actual institutions were opened to deal with these two problems. In 1923 but two Quebec cities had such organizations. That year monies were voted for the purpose and within three years, twenty-one clinics and dispensaries were at work.

In 1926 a departure was made in the Domain of public health with the creation throughout the Province of health centres. After the war, the Rockefeller Foundation in France created in Seine-Oise such a unit with great success. Having observed on the spot the work accomplished, I thought the experiment well worth being tried in this Province. A law was passed to promote the creation in the rural areas of these centres, with the result that the work has progressed with tremendous strides, and this is no exaggeration if anyone will compare the results with those in any other country. Inside four years twenty-nine rural counties consented to tax themselves at the rate of two, three or four cents per hundred dollars to collaborate with the Government in the establishment of these centres. This goodwill on the part of our people has had immediate results in the establishment of twenty-threee centres covering the twenty-nine counties.

These 23 units at present protect 767,062 county-dwellers — or 47 per cent. of that entire portion of our population eligible for organization under the Rural Sanitary Unit plan. Demands and requests before us lead us to believe that within the next five years every rural part of the Province will be completely organized. One fact in this connection will, I believe, interest the public. It is that the great majority of the heads of the County Councils, which are composed of agriculturists, not only accepted the principle of imposing upon themselves special taxation for the creation of these units, but went further, giving therein a splendid example of citizenship, by increasing when needed the rate of their taxation, and this has been done without, to our knowledge, any complaint being made in any part of the Province where the system exists. These organizations cost for the fiscal year of 1929-30 the sum of $246,951.07, and the results have been such that hygienists have come from Europe, from the United States and from all over Canada to inspect these units, and we should, I think, be proud in saying it. The most recent visitor was the Director of Public Health of Greece.

What have been the results, may be asked? Just a few figures will show them. In the County of Beauce in 1926 infantile mortality was 121.5; in 1929 it was 87.7. Mortality through contagious diseases in 1925 was 84.4 in 1929 it was 55.3. In Temiscouata in 1926 infantile mortality was 134.2; in 1929 it was 98.7. Mortality through contagious diseases in 1926 was 124.5, in 1929 it was 21.6. In Nicolet in 1926 infantile mortality was 167.6, in 1929 it was 177.2. Mortality through contagious diseases in 1926 was 59.0, in 1929 it was 19.8. One more point, while I am on the subject, is the gratitous distribution through these centres of serums and vaccine. For instances through our campaign for the immunization of childhood against diphtheria by means of anti-toxine our health centres immunized from the 1st of June, 1930, to the 1st of October last, 36,000 children, and this campaign will continue during 1931 with even greater intensity.



Something quite new, I believe in Canada was instituted in the Province of Quebec in 1928. There has been functioning in France a system known as "l'Oeuvre Grancher," which consists in placing with healthy families in the country children menaced by contact with tuberculosis when living in infected surroundings. Experience shows that if children remain in contact with tubercular-affected persons, 50 per cent. of them will become patients, and 40 per cent. of this 60 per cent. will die of the scourge. On the other hand, the proportion of victims of tuberculosis among children taken away from their unhealthful surroundings is one per cent. It is, therefore, logical to believe that the greater the number of these children taken away, with the consent of parents, from surroundings that are a danger to them, the sooner will be checked the spread of the worst disease that to-day affects the Province of Quebec. There are two purposes achieved by this work. First, we combat tuberculosis in its own entrenchments, secondly, children taken away from the city and kept on the farm realizing what they have received from country life, will remain attached to the soil. Already one hundred of such children are located with healthy and devoted rural families.

These facts will, I believe, convince the population of the Province of Quebec that the Government has acknowledged as a political truth, as well as an economic truth, the words of Disraeli—often repeated, yet never too often—that "The first care of public health." We shall, therefore, continue the work, and deserve from those whom we represent the acknowledgement that we are trying to do our duty. But let the people of Quebec, each and every one, understand that no work of this kind, and of its magnitude, can attain its goal without the sincere and intelligent collaboration of all citizens.

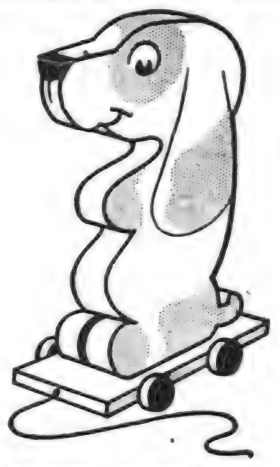
MOURNING WARDROBE



"A death occurred in our family and I had to go in mourning. I could hardly afford to buy all black clothes, so decided to dye what I had. I consulted our druggist and he advised using Diamond Dyes. Everything came out beautifully; coats, wool dresses, stockings and all. I have since learned to appreciate the excellence of the black Diamond Dyes. I tried another black dye and the results were impossible. I had to get Diamond Dyes and do the work over. Recently I have tinted my curtains a beautiful raspberry shade and dyed a rug a lovely garnet with Diamond Dyes. They are real money savers—the finest dyes money can buy—I truly believe."

Short "round tours" during stopovers in various countries will be available primarily for passengers not making regular cruises.

WHEN CHILDREN FRET

THERE are times when a child is too fretful or feverish to be sung to sleep. There are some pains a mother cannot pat away. But there's quick comfort in Castoria.

For diarrhea, and other infantile ills, give this pure vegetable preparation. Whenever coated tongues tell of constipation; whenever there's any sign of sluggishness. Castoria has a good taste: children love to take it. Buy the genuine—with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on wrapper.

MINARD'S "KING OF PAIN" LINIMENT

HAD TO GO TO SEA AGAIN

Rheumatism or No Rheumatism

BUT KRUSCHEN KEPT HIM FREE FROM PAIN

This skipper of a steam trawler was "up against it." He had Rheumatism, and his doctor said he must not go to sea. But times were hard, and he was forced to go afloat again. That was two years ago. Now see what he says:—

"I go to sea and two years ago I was laid up for six months with very much suffering from rheumatism and general breakdown, and was forbidden by my doctor to go to sea, or to touch water. But it was 'Hobson's Choice' with me. There was so much unemployment I was forced to get somewhere. So I am still here weathering the storms of the last two winters, and I can honestly say I have never felt the slightest pain from my old complaints, since I started two years ago to take Kruschen Salts. I wish Kruschen every success, and you may make whatever use you think fit of this letter."—Skipper J. J.

It is common knowledge that rheumatism is associated with an excess of uric acid in the system. Uric acid is composed of needle-like crystals, and the pain of rheumatism is caused by those "needles" settling down in the joints, muscles and tendons.

Kruschen is a powerful solvent of these torturing crystals. It swiftly dulls their sharp edges, then expels them from the system. Your pains ease; swellings subside, knotted joints become loose. Afterwards, the "little daily dose" so stimulates the liver and kidneys that regular and complete elimination is ensured. Your inside is kept clean. Mischievous uric acid never gets the chance to accumulate again.

Start on Kruschen to-morrow. Keep up "the little daily dose" and you'll soon joyfully agree with thousands of others that rheumatism meets its master in Kruschen.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 45c. and 75c. per bottle.

From Mother of Six

"I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is wonderful! I have had six children of which four are living and my youngest is a bonnie baby boy now eight months old who weighs 23 pounds. I have taken your medicine before each of them was born and have certainly received great benefit from it. I urge my friends to take it as I am sure they will receive the same help I did." —Mrs. Milton McMullen, Vaneva, Ontario

Castoria corrects CHILDREN'S ailments

WHAT a relief and satisfaction it is for mothers to know that there is always Castoria to depend on when babies get fretful and uncomfortable! Whether it's teething, colic or other little upset, Castoria always brings quick comfort; and, with relief from pain, restful sleep.

And when older, fast-growing children get out of sorts and out of condition, you have only to give a more liberal dose of this pure vegetable preparation to right the disturbed condition quickly.

Because Castoria is made expressly for children, it has just the needed mildness of action. Yet you can always depend on it to be effective. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment and cannot possibly do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue, is fretful and out of sorts. Be sure to get the genuine; with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

TRINITY CHURCH

The first entertainment to be given in the new parish hall of Trinity Anglican Church was held Monday night, when members of the Sunday School and Young People gave two plays and a musical program. Rev. R. J. W. Perry presided.

"Just Like a Woman" was staged by Miss Beatrice Quennell, Miss Hilda Haddon, Miss Dorothy Atkinson, Frank Haddon, Arthur Arch and Albert Quennell. The little folk presented "Looking After Susan," the leading character being taken by Miriam Perry. Jack Wright, Jack McClintock, Percy Lugg, Margaret Lugg, Pearl Lugg and Hazel Smith also took leading parts.

Mrs. Hector Wright, Miss Hilda Haddon, Jack Wright, Miriam Perry and Marian Switzer contributed musical numbers.

THE PARISH HALL

So often some writing seems all out of tune,
Just like winter weather in May or in June,
If this looks like that, please do not abuse me
For the following reason I know you'll excuse me,
Now this is my excuse and I just want to say,
We were delighted with the music and every play.

To report all the programme is not my intention,
Just a few of the acts I am going to mention,
That scene where the crows, on t old horse were so happy,
Then the boys with their cawing, made it so snappy,
And that good old song always applieth to me,
God bless you and keep you Mother McCree,
When two little girls to a poor mate was kind,
Their part was well acted, one a cripple, one blind,
The last play was excellent, for it had such a charm,
The way old folks felt when leaving the farm,
It was so real the final act in the play,
When the son came from the City and wanted to stay.

To the men and women who first heard the call,
That this church should erect Community Hall,
Then all the congregation saw the great need
And every one then followed the lead,
So both inside and outside this hall is a dandy,
Please accept congratulations and good wishes from Sandy.

Your first idea was a good one

When you bought your rag rugs and bath mats you chose colors that suited the surroundings—which is as it should be. If those colors are not as bright now as they should be, send them along to us and see what our soft water washing will do for them. Your pleasure will be our satisfaction. Of course, they can be done at home, but they are much too heavy for any woman to handle. Ask about our six different kinds of family wash service — all done in rain - soft water — at prices that please. Phone today—— or stop any one of our courteous driver salesmen

OUR PRICES

1. Damp Wash—20 lbs. for $1.00—

APRIL ESCAPADE

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Kate O'Hara, engaged to Cass Keating, agrees to play the part of Chris Steynes' wife and meet the Countess Marka at Burlingame. Then she goes to Steynes' home to sleep overnight. During the night her brother, Martin, not knowing the circumstances, breaks into Steynes' house and is shot as a burglar. Upon her return to her home, Mary finds she has fallen in love with Steynes. Then Mary, Martin, Cass and Chris meet at the O'Hara home and during the discussion the Widow O'Hara walks in and demands to know what the trouble is. She declares she believes Mary Kate innocent of any wrongdoing. Then Chris asks Mary to marry him.

"And you're not afraid, dear?" asked Chris.

"Yes," she said, with the first flash of natural laughter she had shown tonight. "I'm horribly afraid! I know I'll make mistakes, I'll be snubbed—

"And after a few years, you may not love me any more than lots and lots of men love their wives after a few years—" he added, suddenly grave.

"But this thing," she said, her fingers in a clutching pressure, over her heart, "this thing has got—to be quieted. It is like a pain!"

He dropped her hands, and turned toward her mother; he was on one knee, beside the older woman's chair.

"Mrs. O'Hara," he said, "may I have her?"

There was a long pause, and in it Cass Keating slipped quietly from the kitchen, without anyone noting his going.

"How would you know your own heart?" Mrs. O'Hara said then, slowly, dubiously. But she had laid one hand upon the big square shoulder of the coat, just the same. "How would she know hers, and you and she strangers this fortnight a-gone?" she asked.

"I'll be very good to her; she'll be the most spoiled—the most loved woman in the world," Chris promised humbly.

"You'd say that now—" the mother said, not unkindly.

"But I mean it," he persisted.

"You're rich," Mrs. O'Hara mused, studying his face, with her own plain face very sober. "You're very rich, but there's other things but riches. How do I know that you're fit for a little girl like my Molly?"

"I know what you think of me," Chris answered, looking straight into her eyes. "And some of it's true. But not—the worst things. I've never wanted—girls, much. I'm idle. I play cards, and polo, and tennis, and golf, and the tables at Monte Carlo— but the only woman who ever had a hold on me is—well, Mary met her! And she isn't afraid of the Countess Marka."

Suddenly Mrs. O'Hara's face quivered, and her eyes brimmed with tears.

"It'd be what Mary Kate wanted, in the long last!" she said, unsteadily. She got up and went into the bedroom that adjoined the kitchen.

Tom kissed his sister, laughed a raw, bewildered laugh, lumbered on his own way to bed.

"Don't you care, Molly!" he said.

"It's the darndest break I ever saw!" Martin commented, from his chair. He gripped the chair-arm with his right hand, got to his feet, balancing himself carefully, because of the wounded arm. "I'm going in to talk to Mother," he explained.

Mary Kate, her sapphire eyes starry, was standing by the sink, watching the emptying room as a child watches a Christmas Tree.

"Mother'll be all right!" Martin predicted.

"Oh, yes, she'll be all right!" Mary Kate whispered back.

"She's worried about Uncle Robert. Wouldn't you know he'd choose Holy Week to die in!" Martin commented.

"Wouldn't you know it?"

But in her aching heart she thought: "It doesn't matter what Uncle Robert does now, or whether Regina writes her composition, or Lennihan has a grocery sale. It doesn't matter whether the Geary Street car is crowded or not, on a week-day morning. The rents of the new apartments don't matter to me any more. And my best slippers with the loose heel I was going to have fixed, and mother's new meat-chopper, and being in the play of the Church Dramatic Club—all gone! All gone!"

She and Chris were alone in the kitchen.

"Do you think it's the darndest break you ever saw, too, Mary?" he asked.

"I'm a little—scared," she admitted, with a laugh.

He held her hands, and her bright hair fell back as she looked up at him.

"Are you scared, Chris?"

"I'm happy," he answered simply.

"Yes. I'm terribly happy, too. I'm—" Mary Kate turned away with a little shrug, despairing of expressing herself. "It had to be like this," she said.

From the pegs in the little passage she caught a loose brown coat. Tom's coat, as it happened, and slipped into it.

"Come out in the yard a minute," she said.

They went out into the narrow space between the shabby fences, where there were barrels, clotheslines, sheds, poles, and the children's scooters and coasters.

Chris put his arm about her, and they looked up at the the great block of apartment houses on Geary street, rising tiers of little squares of pale gold marking the lines of windows, higher and higher against the dark blue sky. The great electric light sign flashed and wheeled and dimmed untiringly, in the night. Motor cars honked in the street, whizzed, and were gone, and the feet of pedestrians chipped on the sidewalk, beyond the fence.

But millions of stars throbbed overhead, and the soft scarf of the Milky Way hung low and glittering, close to the warm spring world. The banksia rose by the kitchen doorway, the great gnarled lilac by the fence, the "mock-orange" that, covered with creamy blooms, stood close to the porch steps, all helped to scent and make magical the April dark.

Chris and Mary Kate stood silent, breathing it in, their hands locked, her upflung head resting against his shoulder, for a long while.

"What are we going to do next, Chris?"

"Get married, aren't we?"

"I suppose so." Her voice was dreamily confident, like the voice of a protected child.

"Tomorrow, don't you think?"

"Tomorrow!"

"Well, why not? You see the longer we delay, the more time there is for newspaper reporters, and fuss, and cablegrams and telegrams and what-not—"

"Oh, horrors!" Mary Kate shuddered.

"Ought you do anything about Keating?"

"About—?"

"Keating. Cass Keating."

"Oh—Oh, yes; I ought to write him. I'll write him tonight."

"And tomorrow night we'll go to—where? Where do people go, here in California? Shall we go in the car?"

"Ha! We have a car." It amused her.

"You'll have you rown car."

"I can drive it," she reflected aloud, simply.

"In summer you can. In winter you'll have to have a driver."

"Chris!"

"Don't you like that idea?"

It had silenced her. She was reflecting.

"Will I have to have a maid?"

"Oh, I think so, Mary."

"Ha!" she exclaimed again, this time with a sigh.

"What time do you think the City Hall opens?" Chris asked.

"Ten."

"Then I'll be here at quarter of ten. And if there's any special person you want to marry us—"

"There is."

"Then telephone him, and arrange it, will you?"

"Will your mother hate me?"

"She'll neither hate you nor like you. We'll visit her, and the Count, in Paris. He'll like you, never fear. He's fifteen years younger than my mother. She'll want to talk clothes with you, any gossip you can pick up about persons she knows, and they'll take us to the races, and to dinner at some Russian place."

"And your father?"

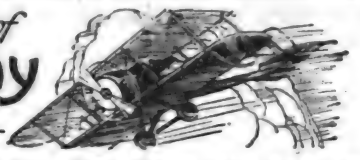
"Dad's absorbed in Madeleine. She's about twenty-six, and rather large, and blond—regular Swede blond, and she lisps. She's the girl who—but you wouldn't remember that. She's the girl who sang Wouldn't You Choose the Blues to Lose Your Heart To? two years ago. But you'll like Dad. He's very businesslike and square and all that.

"And I have a sweet old grandmother, who runs a cattle farm over in New Jersey," Chris went on with sudden enthusiasm. "You will love them all—I mean the people who work for her, and the calves and the horses and everything! Your little sisters—we ought to get them on there, sometime—"

For a long minute she was silent.

CHAPTER XLII.

"Chris, are we crazy?"



"I am," he admitted. "I intend to remain so. I feel as if I was born again! I start fresh tomorrow. I'm going to do different things, go after different things. There's something to work for—I tell you I'm different. And besides, what do we care if they all fuss and talk and get photographs and rant around?" he demanded, courageously. "And what do you care if my mother and aunts like you or not?"

"Oh, but I do care!" Mary Kate answered promptly. "That's going to be part of—the fun," she predicted, youthfully. "I'm going in for all this—tremendously, Chris. I'm going to dress smartly—but plainly, you know. I'm going to speak French and German like a native—"

"French like a German native and German like a French native—"

"Ah, well, you can be funny, but you wait and see! And I'm going to have a houseful of children—boys in linen suits, and girls in fuzzy hair, and smocks, and a fat baby with a colored nurse—"

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

What came before: Captain Jimmy and Scottie became lost in the darkness while flying over the Chinese war zone. On landing, they are captured by Chinese bandits. Captain Jimmy escapes and plans to set free the remainder of his party.

Cautiously I moved toward the camp. The fires had burned to embers and now and then flamed up fitfully. Certainly the outlaws wouldn't be looking for an escaped prisoner prowling around their tents at that hour.

Rolled near the largest of the fires, lay the figure of a man. Carefully I crawled nearer. A small twig broke under my knee and I stopped, motionless, not even breathing for a minute or two.

As I wiggled closer I could make out his features — Sure enough, it was poor old Fu Hsu (Foo Soo) the interpreter. He was cramped and so cold and scared. I held up a finger in a warning, and worked myself along to a point where I could cut his bonds with a jack knife.

"All asleep?" I whispered.

He nodded. Quietly we crept away toward the cool spring. The fresh, cold water revived him wonderfully. He drank as though he never intended to stop. Then I questioned him.

"What happened to Scottie? The dog. Bow-wow?"

"Blandit hit him on the head—dog he bite blandit. Tie dog to tree. No idea where doggie."

"And the Colonel?" I asked.

"Colonel, he blandit, now. He Cook," whispered the interpreter.

"He'll probably make a better bandit than a Colonel."

Meanwhile, a plan had been forming in my mind. Quietly we picked our way to where the Burros were hitched. We tied a dozen of them together so they would lead in a line. The other burros we cut loose, so it would take time for the bandits to catch them and get on our trail.

Taking the halter of the lead burro, I headed down the valley that led through the cleft in the mountains. Fu brought up the rear with two more burros—their lead ropes tied around his waist for fear he might drop it! He was the most hopeless Chinese I ever saw.

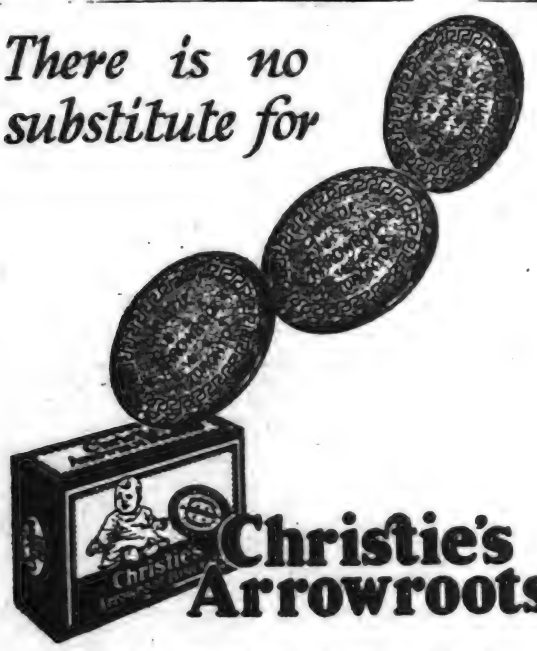
Loose stones began rolling, and the burros instead of walking on their tip toes, seemed to stamp along on their heels. You know how loud everything sounds when you want to be quiet, and it certainly seemed as if the noise we were making must wake the whole camp.

Finally we came to the narrow defile. Beyond that notch there was a bit of a plateau. It was here that the bandit guard would be.

The bandits had just risen to their feet at the sound of our burros coming through the pass. Plainly they were puzzled. Had we come riding out into them like a whirlwind, they would have understood, and started firing on us. But here was a string of burros peacefully wending their way into the light of their camp fire.

Leaning forward from the neck of my burro, I pricked the last of the string with my jack-knife. With a shrill cry he jumped against the next one ahead, who in turn rushed the next. In a moment they were in headlong flight.

They scattered right and left among the bandits, and when a burro failed to bowl one over, the rope caught his feet and tripped him. Then, in the midst of the uproar, we dashed out yelling. The rout was complete. We just waited long enough to grab a rifle and went on a mad scramble down the mountain side.



Mile after mile we rode at breakneck pace. Far back up the valley the whole bandit camp were in hot pursuit. When my burro showed signs of slackening speed, I thumped him in the ribs and off he went again amid a shower of dust and loose stones.

Rounding a corner we came suddenly to a railroad track, where five or six decrepit old freight cars stood, and a rickety old engine. We could hear the hoofs of the outlaws' burros pounding down the valley as we reached the cars. I leaned over and grabbed Fu by the slack of his pants. As I heaved to pull him in, a dark body came hurtling in, caught me amidships, and over we all went in a pile on the floor.

Sunday School Lesson

May 24—Lesson VIII: Jesus Preparing for the End. The Lesson: Luke 21: 1 to 22: 23. Print: Luke 22: 7-23. Golden Text—This do in remembrance of me.—Luke 22: 19.

ANALYSIS.

I. TRANSFORMING A JEWISH CUSTOM, 22: 7-13.

II. THE MEANING OF THE SYMBOL, 22: 14-23.

I. TRANSFORMING A JEWISH CUSTOM, 22: 7-13.

We are probably wrong to suppose that Jesus, on the occasion of his last evening with his disciples on earth, instituted a new rite, or gave his Church-to-be a new and hitherto unheard-of ceremony. It appears rather that Jesus, following a well-known Jewish custom which persists to this day, had been accustomed, at the evening meal, when he gathered his disciples about him to offer a prayer of thanksgiving to God, to pass around the loving-cup from which each drank, and the round, flat loaf from which each broke himself a fragment. We seem to find references to this common Jewish rite, the Quiddush, in other parts of the Gospels. The Last Supper was not an altogether new institution, but one of a series, the last of that series for Jesus on earth, and for the disciples with his visible presence. It would, therefore, in any case, have been a particularly memorable occasion, but it was made more memorable by the solemn, prophetic words which Jesus used. Henceforward they would, when they gathered for their simple, family sacred meal, give thanks to God, not only for his mercies to Israel and to mankind at large, but in particular for the sending of his Son, and for Jesus' death and resurrection for them. In future, the bread and the wine would be to them the symbols of Jesus' gift of himself unto death on their behalf. A simple Jewish rite of fellowship and thanksgiving thus became the Christian Eucharist, or great Thanksgiving for the gift of Jesus. The elements of bread and wine took on a new mysterious significance. The service came to have both a backward look to the Last Supper on the betrayal night, and a forward look to the spiritual banquet in the kingdom of heaven when the redeeming work shall be completed. It was natural that this service should become the central act of Christian worship.

II. THE MEANING OF THE SYMBOL, 22: 14-23.

It is easier to see how the service originated, and how it developed, then to know exactly what Jesus said at the Last Supper. We have accounts of that Supper in the first three Gospels, and in 1 Corinthians. In the fourth Gospel we are given a discourse of Jesus on that last evening, and the story of the foot-washing, but no account of the Supper, while the sacramental teaching of Jesus is connected with the Feeding of the Five Thousand. It is not possible quite satisfactorily to harmonize all these accounts. In particular it is probable (but not certain) that we should excise from Luke's account from the words "which is given for you" in v. 19 to the end of v. 20. There is important manuscript authority for this, and it is likely that these words were added, in very early days, to bring Luke's account into better harmony with the others.

But we are still left with the question as to what Jesus meant when he he said, "this is my body." It is important to remember that Jesus must have been saying something which was intelligible to the disciples at the time. He is not reported as saying, "this is my flesh," and quite certainly when he gave them the bread, he was not giving them his flesh or physical body to eat, for his physical body was still with them as he reclined at the table. We are bound, therefore, to take the words mystically or parabolically. We must not attempt to explain them away, we must explain them intelligibly. The Hebrew prophets had taught their contemporaries, not only by their glowing words, but also by their symbolic actions. Thus for months Isaiah had gone about the city in the dress of a captive, and Jeremiah had carried a yoke on his shoulders as a symbol of the doom that would overtake an unrepentable people. Similarly Jesus used the acted as well as the spoken parable. His seizing of the Temple was a case in point. "This is my body," must mean, "this represents my body." As Jesus was giving them the cup and the bread, so was he giving his very life for them.

The Church has rightly seen in the Lord's Supper a bond of Christian fellowship, a communion with Christ, a feeding upon him by faith, a foretaste of the triumphal feast of redemption in the future kingdom. Many historical details are uncertain, and we do wrong to think superstitiously of the rite, but we can hardly put too much meaning into it, for we cannot exhaust the infinite love and infinite significance of Jesus.

Still Largest Tree

Vancouver, B.C. — According to British Columbia lumbermen the record for the largest tree ever cut down still rests with the Lynn Valley Douglas fir which was 417 feet high, being 300 feet to the first limb. It was 25 feet in diameter and 77 feet in circumference, and was believed to be about 2,000 years old. "There is probably no other tree that will ever surpass in size this giant fir," says the "Canada Lumberman," "except as botanical specimens. No lumber corporation could afford to let a tree grow to such an age."

Latest Reports On Bee Science

Bees Converse By Various Foot Movements

According to the latest scientific bee knowledge the feet of the bees are their organs of communication, believes Dr. Karl Von Frisch, a German entomologist. In talking they do not touch one another, but deliver their message by what we would call a kind of dance.

The method used in his research is as interesting almost as the discovery itself. It appears that the doctor first built several hives entirely of glass, so that he could see exactly what was going on in them. He made small doors to these hives in order to let the bees in and out as he wished. He placed the hives on one side of the garden, on the opposite side of which was a small patch of clover in bloom. Then, between the hives and the clover patch he built a screen maze, or labyrinth, a place full of intricate passage ways which covered the entire garden.

This done, he lifted up a small door of one of the hives, letting one bee out. With some very bright red coloring material he painted a red cross upon the back of this bee, so that he would be able to distinguish it from the rest. He then released the marked bee to travel through the network of passages in search of food. It went on its journey, baffled at times by enclosures and blind alleys, but it kept on and on, retracing its steps time after time, until it finally succeeded in reaching the clover patch.

After it had gathered a load of nectar, it flew quickly back through the elaborate channels to the glass hive, where Dr. Frisch opened the little door and let the wanderer in. The scientist kept his eye on the marked bee in the glass hive by means of a large magnifying glass. It was then that the entomologist received the surprise of his life. The bee with the red cross moved its feet and wings up and down in a peculiar rhythmic fashion, and no sooner had it made this movement than all the other bees around it went through exactly the same antics.

Shortly afterward, Dr. Frisch opened the hive. The bee with the brilliant red cross on its back came out, followed by a host of other workers. The marked bee, continuing to lead the way, took the other bees to the clover patch without any difficulty. And from that time on all the bees could traverse the intricate maze without going into a blind alley or losing any time. Through further observation, Dr. Frisch learned that bees have different movements and act in different ways, according to the story they wish to tell. When angry, for instance, they move in a peculiar zigzag fashion.

Still further study and observation revealed that the bee does not work all the time, as was previously believed, but takes time for rest and play. So the bee, although it does not realize that all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, instinctively carries out that idea. Nevertheless, when it works, it works with all its might. Only in war times do humans come near approaching the strenuous activities of the bee.

The bee often works both day and night, gathering the pollen and nectar during the daytime and helping to fan the nectar with its wings during the night, to make the sweet fluid thicker by evaporation. One good authority says that it takes twenty thousand bees to make a single pound of honey. It also takes five pounds of the sweet and precious nectar from the flowers to make one pound of honey. So, although the bee does not always work, in accordance with the latest scientific investigations, the phrase "busy as a bee" still retains its full significance.

Sun's Rays Are Cool Compared With Stars

Mount Wilson, Cal.—If the glare of the springtime sun on the pavement irritates the eyes, don't be downhearted.

Things could be worse—the sun isn't so bright after all.

Dr. Walter S. Adams, director of the Carnegie Institution of Washington Observatory here, will tell you it has been measured and found to be 3,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 candle-power.

That's a lot of candlepower, and the brightest electric arc looks like a black spot when seen against the sun's disk. But there are millions of stars much brighter.

For instance, in the cool of the night one should look at Rigel, in the constellation of Orion and contemplate how beautiful it seems.

The sun goes into the shade in comparison with Rigel, for the brightest star in Orion is at least 10,000 times as bright as our sun.

Fortunately for the people on earth, Rigel is not where the sun is, a mere 93,000,000 miles from the earth, for there would be no living here then.

Rigel is so far away that it takes its light more than 300 years to reach the earth, while the light of the sun makes the journey in about eight and a half minutes.

And Canopus, famous star of Egypt, is still brighter.

Soil Erosion

Colombo Times of Ceylon: The problem of soil erosion is a world-wide one, but assumes most alarming proportions in countries where the rainfall is heavy, and the land steep. The rainfall in the Tropics, except in certain dry belts, is notoriously heavy, in its annual as well as seasonal incidence; and where, as in the Central and South-West regions of this island, the land is mountainous, the conditions for soil erosion may be described as ideal. This fact, and the loss resulting from the removal of the finest (which are also the most valuable) particles of the land, were scarcely realized by the enterprising pioneers who, in opening land for coffee and tea, blindly followed the system of clean-weeding in vogue in English agriculture, and largely depends—like all pioneers—on the virginal fertility of the land for their crops. Subsequent experience in tropical planting has made the planter wiser.

War and the Next Generation

New Statesman and Nation (London): Mr. Angus Roberts was perfectly right when he said in his presidential address to the National Union of Teachers that the danger of war still lies in its glamor—in "the indefinite form of admiration" which still clings to it. . . . In the days when war meant hand-to-hand fighting there was really something splendid about it. Even in the last war there were opportunities for chivalry; there was a genuine call for comradeship in arms. But we have heard complaints from regular soldiers that warfare nowadays is not war at all—"not war," they put it, "but bloody murder." . . . If war had become a scientific but indiscriminate slaughter involving civilians as well as armed men in 1918, what of the next war? . . . Lewisite, a poison gas which so burns its victims that they become scarcely recognizable, and another gas which first causes intense pain in the head and chest, a pain which is followed by such acute mental misery that it sometimes drives men to suicide—these came into use before the end of the last war. But men recover from doses of these gases, just as they often do from mustard gas and phosgene, and we may apparently expect more effective substitutes in the next war. It seems, too, that there is a good prospect of developing other forms of poison. . . . Where is the glamor, the high call of adventure in war of this kind? . . . We have written in all sincerity on our war memorials up and down the country: "Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori." Perhaps we shall do so again. But if we add "to kill for your country," which is, after all, what a soldier is asked to do, will that, too, seem a sweet and honorable thing in a war of the kind for which all nations even now are preparing?

Giant Ice Crystals Formed Only Once By Nature

Giant ice crystals, up to eighteen inches across, are found at only one place in the world, in the famous Kungur ice caves of the Ural mountains. Russian scientists recently returned from these caverns with striking photographs of the fantastic structures taken by water in these remote grottoes. Snowflakes are seen under the microscope as delicate six-pointed crystals, and hailstones, on rare occasions, have been found to consist of crystals visible without magnification, but the huge cave crystals are more beautiful than either. They are hollow and six-angled, with a curious spiral geometry, showing the intricate effects of window-pane frost projected into three dimensions. The ice is deposited like hoarfrost by the cooling of moist air as it passes outward through the caves.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Use for Dividing Rod

New hope for the rescue of avalanche victims and for the early recovery of bodies of the killed which often are not found until the Winter's snows have melted has been found in the divining rod. A mountaineer of Traunstein, upper Austria, deeply moved by some recent avalanche tragedies, has been making a series of experiments. Objects likely to be carried by every skier, such as a watch, ring, coins, ski knife and ski footplates, were buried very deep in the snow, and a "dowser" set out with the divining rod to search for them. In each case the rod revealed the location of the metallic objects. It is believed that the new discovery will save scores of lives in the Austrian Alps every year.

Why Swiss Lakes Are Blue

Travelers long have marveled at the beautiful azure color of the lakes in the Tyrolean Alps, and chemical compounds in the water were generally believed to cause the color. Recent analysis, however, shows the lakes to be free from coloring matter. Scientists therefore have decided that the hue is due to reflection and refraction of the azure sky in colorless water, particularly since the azure color changes to gray as the sun declines. Other localities do not have the deep-blue water coloring because they are not favored with clear blue skies.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Movie is Sent Through Tube For Patrons in Lounge

On a miniature screen in the lounge of a Los Angeles theatre, patrons may view and hear the identical talking picture being presented in the main auditorium. This enables those who wish, to retire to the lounging room without missing any of the continuity of the film. The picture is reflected from the film in the main projection room by means of a mirror and through a long tube to the glass screen, six feet wide, in the basement lounge.

STOMACH TROUBLE

Discomfort in any part of the abdomen is apt to be blamed on the stomach. Those who frequently suffer from such discomfort usually say that they have "stomach trouble."

When the stomach goes on the rampage, most persons place the blame on the last thing which they have eaten, and make up their minds that this or that food does not agree with them.

Whether or not we enjoy health does depend, to a considerable extent, upon the food we eat. We know that in order to have health, we should use a balanced diet, which includes milk and milk products, fresh green vegetables and fruits.

We know also that we should not eat to excess. It is not to be expected that the stomach can be abused by the excessive or indiscriminate use of foods or beverages without causing trouble. The abuse of any organ of the body leads to the breaking-down of that organ sooner or later. The whole body suffers as the result of such carelessness as trouble in one part affect the whole.

However, pain and discomfort in the abdomen are not, by any means, always traceable to the stomach or to the food taken.

The upset stomach may be due to worry, nervous strain or anxiety. The business man who rushes through his lunch, his mind occupied with office worries, and who does not take time to relax, will almost surely have his stomach "go back on him."

Loss of appetite, nausea and vomiting are the symptoms which usher in the onset of many of the acute diseases. In such cases, the stomach is affected by disease which are attacking the body, and the stomach as one part of the whole body reflects these conditions. This is particularly noticeable, when it is some other abdominal organ, such as the appendix or the gall-bladder, which is involved.

The stomach may be upset as the result of heart disease. In order to do its work properly, the stomach requires an adequate supply of blood. If this supply fails because of heart disease, digestion is interfered with, but the cause, in such cases, is to be found in the heart, not in the stomach.

These conditions are mentioned because they indicate that while we know that pain or discomfort in the abdomen means that there is something wrong somewhere, even if there is nausea or vomiting it does not necessarily imply that it is the stomach which is primarily at fault. It does mean that the real cause must be found and treated if the condition is to be corrected.

AN OPPORTUNITY TO HOLDERS OF EARLY MATURING

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT BONDS

TO EXTEND THE TERM OF THEIR INVESTMENT IN

THE PREMIER SECURITY IN CANADA

GOVERNMENT OF THE

DOMINION OF CANADA

1931 CONVERSION LOAN

The Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada offers to holders of the undernoted Dominion issues the privilege of exchanging their bonds into longer dated issues, in the following terms and under the following conditions:

This offer affords to holders of bonds eligible for conversion, the same interest payment and tax-free privileges, for the life of and as contained in the present bonds, and the opportunity of extending the term of the investment at 4½% per annum.

WAR LOAN 5% BONDS MATURING 1st OCTOBER, 1931—Holders of these bonds have the privilege of exchanging into bonds maturing 1st November, 1956, bearing interest from 1st April, 1931. The first coupon will be for six months' tax-free interest at the rate of 5% per annum payable 1st October, 1931; the second coupon will be for seven months' interest at the rate of 4½% per annum payable 1st May, 1932; thereafter to maturity interest will be payable half-yearly at 4½% per annum.

RENEWAL LOAN 5½% BONDS MATURING 1st NOVEMBER, 1932—Holders of these bonds have the privilege of exchanging into bonds maturing 1st November, 1957, bearing 4½% interest payable half-yearly from 1st May, 1931. There will also be attached to these bonds three adjustment-coupons payable respectively on 1st November, 1931, and 1st May and November, 1932, for additional interest at the rate of 1% per annum.

VICTORY LOAN 5½% BONDS MATURING 1st NOVEMBER, 1933—Holders of these bonds have the privilege of exchanging into bonds maturing 1st November, 1958, bearing 4½% interest payable half-yearly from 1st May, 1931. The first five interest coupons, being those to and including 1st November, 1933, will be tax-free. There will also be attached to these bonds five tax-free adjustment-coupons payable respectively on 1st November, 1931, and 1st May and November, 1932 and 1933, for additional interest at the rate of 1% per annum.

VICTORY LOAN 5½% BONDS MATURING 1st NOVEMBER, 1934—Holders of these bonds have the privilege of exchanging into bonds maturing 1st November, 1959, bearing 4½% interest payable half-yearly from 1st May, 1931. There will also be attached to these bonds seven adjustment-coupons payable respectively on 1st November, 1931, and 1st May and November, 1932, 1933 and 1934, for additional interest at the rate of 1% per annum.

Conversion applications in the terms of the foregoing are invited to a total of $250,000,000. The Minister of Finance reserves, however, the right to increase or decrease this amount at his discretion.

Subscriptions will be received and receipts issued by any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank and by recognized Canadian Bond Dealers and Stock Brokers, from whom may be obtained application forms and copies of the official prospectus containing complete details of the loan. Applications will not be valid on forms other than those printed by the King's Printer.

The subscription lists to the foregoing will open on 11th May, 1931, and will close on or before 23rd May, 1931, at the discretion of the Minister of Finance.

DOMINION OF CANADA

1931 CONVERSION LOAN

Premier Bennett has adopted a very practical and logical expedient for solving the problem of repaying the huge total of war and victory loans that mature before the end of 1934. A new loan of long term is being issued, and holders of maturing loans are being granted the opportunity of converting into the new loan on terms advantageous to themselves. The principle of the Conversion Loan is not new. It has been successfully applied by both the governments of the United States and Great Britain.

A total of $1,082,000,000 of Canadian war and victory loans mature within the next three and one-half years, the greater part falling due in 1933 and 1934.

The Government has arranged an equitable bargain with investors. In exchange for short-term war and victory loan maturities is offered a twenty-five year government obligation carrying a coupon rate of 4½ per cent. The present status of the holders of bonds now being replaced will remain unimpaired during the short span of life remaining for these maturities.

The operation, however, has a deeper significance than mere investment opportunity. It has a patriotic appeal, no less vital than existed in war time, to show to the world at large that Canadians have confidence in Canada, and that the Dominion's high credit rating ranks highest with her own people. Such a gesture of confidence and financial vitality has an economic implication of far-reaching influence.

The Government will secure no new money through this conversion program. It is a straight exchange of securities. Investors should welcome this unique opportunity. Ordinarily, the replacement of funds received from maturing investments is an operation of concern and expense. All this is eliminated, and investors can consolidate their position for another twenty-five years without effort on their part.

Government bonds represent our primary security. We have nothing finer to offer. The public has grown wearied with speculation. It is now seeking safe haven for its investment funds. No other medium has more proven attraction. Throughout this era of security deflation, government bonds have stood forth a tower of strength.

The overwhelming support of the Government's Conversion Loan will advertise to the world at large the faith of Canadians in Canada and the economic solidity of the country at large.

COMMUNITY CLUB

The last meeting of community Club was held at the home of Mrs. J. Co k, on May 13th. The meeting opened with our song and roll call. There was a large attendance. It was discussed during the afternoon about helping a family that was in need, but was left over until the next meeting. After the business part of the afternoon, we sang our closing song. Mrs. Richie gave us a contest, making water lilies out of serviettes. After everyone had finished making their lilies, she filled each one with candy.

The hostess then served a dainty lunch, assisted by her daughter and niece, Mrs. Hunter Arnott. The tables and house were beautifully decorated with spring flowers. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Morris Williamson on May 27th.

ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. C. Tier wish to announce the engagement of their third daughter, Doris A., to Albert E. Hockley of Calgary, Alberta, son of Rev. and Mrs. E. T. Hockley of Toronto, the marriage to take place quietly on Thursday, May 21st, 1931.

The new Hymnary, authorized by the United Church, will be used in the local United Church the first Sunday in June.

A large number of the congregation have been securing copies to be ready the Sunday they are first used. It is a collection of Hymns unsurpassed by any other and will add beauty and effectiveness to the services of the United Church. Mrs. Lundy, with her choir, is making due preparation for inspirational singing.

MEADOWVALE

Miss Gooderham's home was thrown open for the May meeting of the United Church W.M.S., a successful meeting being held.

Mrs. Langlois, president of the West Presbyterial, addressed the branch on the peace conference, and Mrs. D. Fish gave a talk on life membership. The devotional exercises and study book were taken by Mrs. H. Austin, Mrs. L. Davidson and Mrs. W. Lambe. Music was supplied by Mrs. C. H. Falconer, Streetsville, and Mrs. Burnett, Calvin Presbyterian choir, Toronto.

Presentation on behalf of the branch of a life membership to Miss Ida Davidson was made by Miss Jessie Gooderham. A party of young people from High Park United Church joined the group for supper.

PUBLIC SPEAKING CONTEST

Brampton High School Auditorium was filled with eager spectators on Saturday evening when the Peel Juniors held their public speaking contest. Every junior organization sent in a contestant. The speakers were in splendid form and their material went across in a fine manner. The winning girls were: First, Wilma Boucher, Brampton, who took as her subject "99 reasons for living in Peel". Second, Ruth Ross, Streetsville, who spoke on "India, in reference to her present problems as faced by the British Government". Third, Dorothy Farr, Ebenezer, who told the advantages of Gardening. The other three speakers were: Dorothy Shaw, Tullamore, Doris Allen, Bolton, and Wilda McKechnie, Trinity. The judges for the girls' section were: Mrs. J. A. Carroll, Mrs. J. A. McBride and Mrs. J. N. Harris. Mrs. Carroll gave a very fine constructive criticism which should be helpful to anyone appearing on the public platform.

The four boys who spoke were placed as follows: First, George Fulford, Ebenezer, who took as his subject "The Economic Position of Canada Today". Second, Wm. Lines, Streetsville, who told of "The Romance of Travels". Third, Harold Parkinson, Trinity, who gave a good description of "The County of Peel" and Fourth, Gordon Edwards, of Bolton, who talked on "The Trans-Canada Highway". The judges were: J. A. Carroll, Gordon Graydon and T. L. Martin. Criticism was given by Mr. Graydon and Mr. Jack Carroll presented the boys with the medals which had been donated by the Peel J.F.A.

The high girl was presented with a silver casserole, a gift of Mr. John Willis of Belfountain, while the second girl was presented by Mr. David Wilson with a silver cake basket.

Mr. Jack Brennan of Streetsville, County J.F.A. President took the chair. The Streetsville Orchestra and Miss Eileen Peacock provided music.

Mr. J. C. Shearer congratulated all the speakers on their work, which made the Peel Public Speaking Contest an outstanding event.

PEEL JUNIOR ANNUAL FIELD DAY

June 6th is the day set for the Peel J.F.A. and J.I. Field Day. It is to be held at Ferndale Park and all Peel Juniors will be on hand ready to start the sports at 1 p.m. Standard Time. The program has been mapped out. It looks interesting and already juniors are practising so that they may be well up in the 100 yard dash, ready for a nail driving contest or something of this kind. The special events are Tug-of-War, Coat Race and Softball to take place after the other events are over. The Athletic Shield won by Bolton in 1929 and Streetsville in 1930 will be competed for again this year. Medals will go to the first two high boys and girls. These will be presented by the County organization.

In the evening the annual field day dance will be held at the same place with the Cheerio Orchestra providing the music from 8.30 to 12.00 Standard Time. Everybody is welcome, so let us plan for a big event. And tell our neighbours to attend. The annual meeting of Peel Juniors to hear reports from the Sec.-Treas. and for the election of new officers for 1931-32 will be held immediately preceding the dance.

Plan to attend the big event of the year and come prepared to take part in the sports and uphold your organization.

HOME TOURS

Peel Junior Institute members are going visiting on Wednesday, May 27th. A Home Tour is being organized by the Home Demonstrator in order to give the girls new ideas and suggestions regarding making homes and surroundings more attractive. Boys visit barns and stock, why girls visit homes and gardens? This is what the Peel girls are working on. Five Junior organizations, namely, Bolton, Brampton, Ebenezer, Trinity and Tullamore have asked for home tours following the suggestion thrown out in the last news bulletin issued by the Department of Agriculture. The girls are asked to meet at the Dept. of Agriculture at 9.30 Standard Time on the stated date, and here they will be given details regarding the routes of trip.

The girls will be divided into groups all meeting at a central point at noon. They are asked to bring their own lunch for a picnic at 12.30. The following homes and gardens will be visited: Mrs. Harry Laidlaw, Mrs. Alex. McKinney, Mrs. J. M. Dolson, Mrs. Geo. Love and Misses Taylor of Brampton. Each place has its own individual charm and has certain outstanding points of interest. Miss Florence Eadie of Institute Branch assisted in lining up this group of homes, all within 6 miles of Brampton.

This is the first home tour to be held in Peel and already a great deal of interest is being shown. This tour is being organized for Juniors. Seniors wishing something of this kind may apply at a later date.

The girls taking this trip will be given valuable information regarding planting and caring for shrubs, flowers and perennials, refinishing furniture, house decoration and arrangements of furniture.

Already a great deal of interest is being shown in the tour and those who are loaning their homes may well count on having a number of young visitors out to learn by actually seeing what other folks are doing.

ERINDALE

The Erindale Women's Institute held an afternoon euchre at the home of Mrs. Will. Cooper on Saturday, May 16th, when they entertained a few Streetsville ladies. There were eleven tables of euchre played. The 1st prize for ladies was won by Mrs. Roy McMillan; the pink card was won by Mrs. Arthur Adamson, and the consolation prize, the white card, went to Mrs. Norman. The pink card was won by Mrs. Edgar Adamson. There was also a lucky number, which was 45, and was won by Mrs. Harold Beattie, Streetsville. After the euchre a dainty lunch was served by the ladies of the Institute.

ONTARIO

A Message from the Premier on the subject of

Highways and Highway Safety

Probably no single development in the history of our province has had more widespread influence upon the lives and habits of our citizens than the automobile.

Ontario was one of the first provinces to recognize the importance of this modern means of transportation, and first, also to adopt a progressive policy of road building and road maintenance.

Today, of Ontario's 72,000 miles of roads, more than 38,000 miles are improved gravel, 7,000 miles are paved, and 69 per cent of all roads are surfaced.

These roads are not only a remarkable convenience, but, as well, they are a responsibility. The seriousness of the responsibility is evidenced by the fact that in Ontario last year, 524 persons lost their lives through automobile accidents. All available statistics would seem to indicate that most of these accidents were avoidable—and were caused by either thoughtlessness or wilful violations of the common-sense rules of the road.

The Ontario Department of Highways is about to publish in the press of Ontario, a series of educational advertisements, in which an effort will be made to keep drivers and pedestrians alike, alive to the necessity for the continuous exercise of care, courtesy and common-sense in the use of our highways. Suggestions made in these announcements will be, in effect, a digest of all the information gathered from every section of the world which has been found to be of assistance to drivers and pedestrians in avoiding highway accidents and making these same highways of inestimably greater value and benefit to every citizen.

The first of the announcements referred to will be published at an early date. Your attention is invited thereto, and your co-operation in making our streets and highways safe is earnestly solicited.

Geo. Henry

Premier.

Col. T. A. Kidd, Grand Master of the Grand Orange Lodge of British America and other Grand Lodge officers attended a meeting of Cooksville Orange Lodge on May 13th. The visitors were welcomed to the Lodge by our own member of Parliament for Peel and Minister of Agriculture, Hon. T. L. Kennedy. A pleasant time was spent at the banquet table.

The teacher at School Section No. 10, Trafalgar, one day recently, hearing the honk of a motor car, looked out and was horrified to see a man standing on the running board of a truck perfectly nude. Several times was the visit repeated at irregular intervals. The people of the section, trustees and parents, are indignant because a young teacher and children should suffer such an insult. If this individual is caught he should be punished with the lash.

"SALADA" TEA

211

The Tea that comes to you,
"Fresh from the Gardens"

APRIL ESCAPADE

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Kate O'Hara, engaged to Cass Keating, agrees to play the part of Chris Steynes' wife and meet the Countess Marka at Burlingame. Then she goes to Steynes' home to sleep overnight. During the night her brother, Martin, not knowing the circumstances, breaks into Steynes' house and is shot as a burglar. Upon her return to her home, Mary finds she has fallen in love with Steynes. Then Mary, Martin, Cass and Chris meet at the O'Hara home and during the discussion the Widow O'Hara walks in and demands to know what the trouble is. She declares she believes Mary Kate innocent of any wrong-doing. Then Chris asks Mary to marry him.

CHAPTER XLII—(Cont'd.)

"Well," Mary Kate continued. "And I'll be the sort of—oh, well, plainly-dressed smart woman, you know, who knows all about books, and plays and German and Italian—"

"It was French a minute ago," retorted Chris.

"Oh, well, French, too. And I'll study the operas, too, Chris. Do you like the opera? Do you go to the opera?"

"Sometimes. I like some of them."

"At the Metropolitan?"

"At the Metropolitan. The old man has a box."

"A box!"

"Certainly."

"At the Metropolitan Opera House?"

"Why not?"

"Oh, Heavens!" Mary Kate said on a gasp. "Should I have to wear evening dress?"

"You would. You could wear that thing you wore Friday night and my Aunt Minnie's pearls."

"Oh, sure enough! Those pearls are yours, aren't they, Chris?"

"They are yours, now, I present them to you."

She gave a frightened laugh.

"Chris, we may have lots of fun!"

"We will have."

"We didn't think our adventure would turn out like this, did we?"

"Rather not! I didn't know," Chris added, "that there was ever a woman in the world like you."

"I have to go in," Mary Kate said. "My mother's going over to Aunt Julia's and Mart'll need me to help him getting to bed."

Chris tipped her head back, under the spring stars.

"I love you," he said. "I've never done anything to deserve you, and that country house full of kids, and those nights at the opera, and all the rest of it. But—"

He stopped, at a loss for words.

"I know you will!" she whispered, as if he had finished his thought.

Three minutes later, shaken and breathless and bewildered, she heard the side gate click after him. Mary Kate took one more look at the blue dark sky and the stars and the rising tiers of golden apartment-house windows and the powdery silver of the Milky Way and drew one more great breath of the lilac and syringa-scented night. Then she went into the kitchen.

It was just as she and Chris had left it: orderly dimly lighted, empty. Buttercups in a clean jelly glass on the table, curtains moving languidly to and fro over the sills of the open window. The nickel-plated alarm clock over the sink ticked steadily, rapidly, in the silence, and her own heart kept pace. Her mother, once again bonneted and veiled, stood in the doorway between the bedroom and kitchen.

"Mr. Steynes went, did he, dear?"

"Yes'm."

"And you're sure of yourself, Mary Kate?"

"Oh, Mother!"

A long pause. The older woman sighed.

"Well, that's all I could ask," she said at last. "But it seems a far cry from the little room you were born in, in Brooklyn!"

"I know," Mary Kate said.

"Sleep in my room with Pat, dear. He's apt to wake, and I'll be up with Uncle Robert all night," Mrs. O'Hara said. "But I'll stop in at church at seven on my home tomorrow."

"I'll set the alarm and meet you there, Mother. We'll have breakfast together."

She was alone again.

She sat on, at the red oilclothed kitchen table, staring into space, her arms crossed, her eyes narrowed, her lips bitte. The clock hands moved, the lamplight wavered, in the kitchen.

Then suddenly she stood up, and pushed her chair back into place. She took the alarm-clock, and busied herself with the little keys on its back, before locking the yard door, darkening the kitchen, and going to her mother's kitchen bedroom.

Little Pat, freckled and thin and tousled of hair, was sprawled half-covered, crosswise on the wide bed. Mary Kate straightened and covered him. The gas was turned down to a bead in here, and the one window that looked out upon the blank side wall of the neighboring house was open.

She went into the dining room, and opened Tom's forgotten window. Kneeling beside him, she put her arms about him, mother-fashion, and he half roused, in his first deep sleep, and murmured to her.

"Gee, I'm crazy about you, Molly!"

Mary Kate mounted the stairs, and sat for a long time, in the dark back bedroom, lighted only by the rise and fall of the cigarette advertisement a block away. Little tawny-headed Regina was sleeping like a baby saint, her hair shaken into a halo on the pillow about her unconscious head; Tess had doubled herself, her covers, and her own pillow into a great snarl, and had to be dragged and pushed and pulled into comfort against her own sleepy resistance.

"A spider-web party—" she whispered clearly, as Mary Kate kissed her. The little girls, their big sister remembered, had been promised a spider-web party. They wouldn't have it—now.

Last of all she went into Martin's room. He was propped in pillows, he slept in a sitting position, these nights. As he came in he closed his book, and smiled at her, and she sat down on the edge of his bed, and linked her hand in his free one.

So she had sat, with this friend and confidant, and confessor, many and many a time, in the days since her turbulent childhood. She remembered tears and laughter, rebellion, planning, argument—here in Mart's room at night. She remembered reading him her school compositions, here; discussing office affairs. It was here, one night not long after this same new year had begun, that, rosy and confused, she had talked to him about stunning Cass Keating, who was so clever and so successful, and who—well, certainly it looked that way anyway, was beginning to—well, to like, anyway, Mary Kate O'Hara.

"Hello, Sis."

"Hello, Mart."

"Put the lights out?"

"Yes. I'm sleeping downstairs with Pat."

"Happy, Molly?"

"I guess so, Mart."

"I know better than he does what he's getting," Mart said in a silence. The girl did not answer she was moving her thumb back and forth across his big hand.

"Nobody like you, Molly!"

"Don't—don't make me cry. I'm—cried out."

"It'll be funny here, without you."

"But you'll be in Germany, Mart."

"Yep. Got to keep up with my rich sister, now!"

"Ah, Marty, don't joke about it. It'll be good for Tom to be king-pin for a while, and we'll pull the whole gang of them up, Molly."

"But not together any more, Mart!"

"No. Not together any more."

There was silence. Then the girl asked:

"'Member playing Indians in the old coal box in Brooklyn, Mart?"

"Do you remember Mother used to take us to church, Saturday afternoons, and we used to play house in the pews?"

"Yes. And the day—but that was here—that I brought her home a plant, with my first money."

"A primrose."

"Yep."

"It's still growing in the front garden, Mart."

"I know it is."

"Remember the day the cop pretended to hit me, Mart, and you bit his hand?"

"I was five."

"You would have bitten an elephant, I think, if it had been mean to me!"

"I would have wanted to."

They were silent again, fingers linked. After a few moments, Martin felt something hot and wet fall on his hand.

ISSUE No. 21—'31

Is Wearing

BY ANNABELLE WORTHINGTON

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern.

3048

Paris sends a tri-color scheme in darling jumper dress for wee moderns of 2, 4 and 6 years.

It is pale blue ground gingham overplaided in navy blue fine stripings. Plain navy bindings give emphasis to the white batiste French guimpe.

It wears a belt that may be omitted if little daughter looks best in a dress that hangs free from the shoulders.

Inverted plaits at each side of the front and the back, give it a tailored air. At the same time they provide ample fulness to the hem for freedom.

Style No. 3049 may be copied exactly with 1⅝ yards of 39-inch material for dress with ⅞ yard of 35-inch material for blouse and 2½ yards of binding for the 4-year-old youngster.

Yellow dotted swiss with white dotted swiss guimpe and [illegible] brown bindings is cute.

Red and white batiste print, pink linen with white polka-dots, candy striped percale and green and white dimity are sturdy and smart.

The Golfing Trail

"The white moth to the closing vine;
The bee to the opened clover."
And the mashie pitch to the ghastly ditch
Ever the wide world over.

Ever the wide world over, lad;
Clear to the Arctic Zone;
From the glacial ice you can see the slice
And hear the duffer moan.
There are greens by the Guadalquivir;
Fairways in Old Cathay;
And a tough tenth hole that will rend your soul
On the road to Mandalay.

"The wild boar to the sun-dried swamp;
The red crane to her reed."
And an easy par at Kandahar
To lure the golfing breed.

There's a nine-hold course at Quito
With greens that fringe the sky.
And they cut the grass in the Khyber Pass
To furnish a brassie lie.

By the wash of the Parramatta
Is the golfing flag unfurled;
And the crack of the club in the hands of the dub
Is the shot heard 'round the world.

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

What came before: Captain Jimmy and his dog Scottie get lost in the darkness, while flying over the Chinese War Zone. They are captured by bandits and separated. Captain Jimmy makes his escape and plans to search for the faithful Scottie.

Yes, sir. Just as I crowded the old Chinese interpreter into the freight car to hide from those pursuing bandits, a black object came hurtling in and struck me square in the belt.

"Scottie!"

We untangled ourselves, and there was a grand reunion. But there wasn't any time to waste. The bandits were following closely on our trail. Some place must be found to hide.

In the corner of the car were piled a number of tea chests. These I shoved out so the three of us could hide in behind. Over the top I spread some old straw matting.

If only the train would move along before the bandits caught up, we would be all right, but it seemed to be waiting on the switch until a train coming the other way had passed.

Suddenly the sound of hoofs rang on the rocky railway siding, and a score of bandits began running up and down the train peeking into the cars. Things looked pretty serious, especially when a big Chinaman began rummaging around among the tea chests. Luckily he did not notice our hiding place.

Something had to be done quickly, however, or the outlaws would return and find us. Quietly I signalled Fu Hsu and Scottie to follow me. We dropped out of the car and crept softly along the side of the train away from the bandits, and groped our way in the dim early morning light toward the engine.

The engineer and fireman leaned out of their cab anxiously, wondering what was happening down along the track. I slipped in behind them and gave them a good shove. Off they went—end over end into the ditch.

Promptly I threw the reverse lever and opened the throttle. There was a violent spinning of drive wheels. The cars bumped and crashed against one another noisily, and at the same time I pulled the whistle valve wide open. The whistle fairly shrieked. It was a perfect bedlam let loose.

Panic stricken, the bandits rushed to the doors to escape. Some jumped out, some were pushed out, others simply fell out. But in less time than it takes to tell it, there was not a bandit on board.

Away we roared, gathering speed as we backed down the track for we dared not go forward in the face of the signals. The engine rocked and swayed. I took up the shovel to feed the boiler fire, when suddenly a heavy boot stuck out from under the coal and someone hollered.

What next. Even the coal was alive with Chinese bandits.

"Maybe I'm a bandit. Captain" said the owner of the boot. "But not Chinese anyway!"

Where had I heard that familiar voice before? I shoved him into the light. His face was like a black mask from the coal dust.

"By Golly! Jed Stone," I yelled.

And so it was. My old friend Jed Stone who I had not seen for many years. Our meeting was one of those odd co-incidences that you couldn't make happen in a lifetime if you tried to plan it.

Jed told me a startling story. He had a brother Guy, engaged in Chinese famine relief work. A bandit gang had passed through the country raiding and plundering the pitifully scant food supplies of the people. Guy followed the bandits for days, and tried to reason with the chief. Making no impression he finally lost control of himself, and before anyone could interfere, soundly thrashed the villain.

French Savings Pass $960,000,000 Total

Paris.—French savings institutions are holding more than $960,000,000 for "rainy days" in France.

The old woolen stocking, it would seem, has gone out of fashion in France and, despite recent bank scandals, the thrifty French public is increasing its savings deposits.

Savings deposited in 1930 showed an increase of 16 per cent. over 1929, while the number of new accounts was nearly 10 per cent. higher than in 1929.

It is estimated that every fourth person in France has a savings account, the public banks and postoffices alone reporting 10,000,000 accounts. The total savings deposits in 1930 was $960,000,000.

The per capita savings in France represent about $24 a person, not counting the investment in French rentes and government bonds, whose total value represents many times the saving deposits.

Asparagus Time

It wasn't so very long ago that asparagus was considered a luxury, but now nearly every gardener who boasts any kind of a garden has his little asparagus bed, from which such thick, juicy stalks spring as quickly as the mushroom.

The housekeeper is wise who uses seasonable vegetables when they are cheapest to bring down the high cost of living. They are always best when cheapest, too, because they are cheapest when they are the most plentiful. Of course, coming right from the garden to the table, they are their best and taste very different to the vegetables which have been standing in the air all day long.

One can prepare asparagus so many different ways that it can appear in some form each day throughout the season without monotony.

Cream of Asparagus

Here is a place where the tougher stalks can be used from which the tops have been removed. To make a delicious soup cut a bunch of asparagus stalks into one-inch pieces. Boil until tender and put through a sieve; add to it and the liquid that goes with it a quart of milk. Season with salt and pepper. Heat, then pour slowly into it two tablespoons of flour creamed with the same amount of butter, stirring constantly. Allow to come to boil and serve with croutons.

Asparagus and Peas

Cook canned peas and asparagus in separate saucepans, drain and use two cups of asparagus tips and the tender part of the stalks, cut in half-inch lengths, to this add one can of peas, a quarter cup thin cream and butter, pepper and salt.

Boiled Asparagus

Perhaps it is best served all by itself either with a white, rich sauce or a dressing of melted butter and seasoning after it is cooked tender in water. Never cook it longer than the required time to make it tender. Serve without breaking the stalks. A good way to cook it to avoid breaking the tips in to stand a bunch on end in a dish. Since the tips do not need much cooking fill the dish with water up to three-quarters of the way, and the steam will cook the tips. It should always be boiled in salted water. After it is carefully removed to a platter melt one tablespoon butter, to which add one cup bread crumbs. Stir over the fire until brown then cover asparagus on plate.

Asparagus With Eggs

Cut asparagus in 2-inch parts and boil in salted water till tender, drain, put in a casserole, sprinkle with melted butter, seasoning and add 3 well-beaten eggs, bake until brown in a hot oven.

TWILIGHT HOUR STORY

Chapter 22

About Wee Chicks and Other Little Friends

I'm sure you remember last week we named one of the little chicks. We called her Squatty, didn't we? Because she was so short and fat and had such funny short bill. Then, of course, we named Jimmie Chick a long time ago, didn't we?

Well, how about the other two? Since they had grown so much bigger they certainly did look very different for, do you know, one of the other two sisters left wasn't like Squatty one bit. She had a long neck and long legs and, instead of her beak being short like Squatty's, it was long and pointed. She was a little cross, too, and bossed all the others around. How would it be if we call her Bridget? She ate just as much, even more, sometimes than Squatty, who was so fat, but she just stayed thin. I wonder why that is, don't you? Are you fatter than your little sister? Or perhaps you are the thin kind. Well, anyway, we have only one chicky left, haven't we? We haven't said anything about it, but you know I wanted to leave the best till the last for Oh, she was a lovely chicken. She wasn't too fat or too thin. She was just right, and she had such a pretty head and then she had especially beautiful white feathers. I don't know where she got all that beauty, but there she was. Mamma Lady loved to show her off and now she picked her up and said to Billy, "Isn't she a beauty? and son, besides being so beautiful her body is made just right, so she will lay far more eggs than Bridget or Squatty, perhaps more than both of them put together. How is that for a chicken. In fact, Billy, she is such a fine chicken I believe we will show her too, along with Jimmie, at the show when she grows a little bigger."

Billy looked at her with admiring eyes, then said, "Well, we will need to have a pretty nice name for her. I tell you, Mammy, she's so white let us call her "Lily, white as a lily."

"That is a fine name, I'm sure she'll be a good chick with a name like that," smiled Mamma. "But now I'm sure I know a little boy who is very, very sleepy, for he has done so much to-day. How about your good old bed that has been wondering where you have been for such a long time?"

Sonnet for a Day Wasted Indoors

Lord, I have missed so many things today;
The birds' first splendid song across the dawn
Reaching to greet Thy rose-flushed joyous dawn
That crept soft-footed from night's fading grey;
I did not see the silver sunbeams play
On rippled water and on wind-swayed lawn,
Nor yet the tree-spun shadows, quietly drawn
Where dew-hung, wildflower-patterned carpets lay;
I did not see the sure returning tide
Stretch out to clutch again the pebbled sand
With those swift waves of jade which one by one
Came tumbling shorewards; and I missed the wide
Cloud-stippled sky above the day-green land.
And, Lord, I lost the setting of the sun.

French Births Exceed 1930 Deaths by 100,000

Paris.—There were 100,000 more births than deaths in France during 1930, government statistics published recently revealed. There were 842,698 marriages in 1930, against 333,841 in 1929, but there were 20,400 divorces last year, against 19,353 the year before.

The Paris press hailed the margin of births over deaths as indication that a long period of a declining French birth rate was past.

"I want a man with a higher calling."

"Then you'd better marry a chimney sweep."

What New York Is Wearing

BY ANNABELLE WORTHINGTON

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern.

Perhaps you'd like a youthful capelet one sees on so many of the smart frocks these days.

However be certain you choose the right capelet. This one is a beauty and suited to miss or matron. Fastening at the front as it does with a button, gives it a sportive air. Its scalloped bound edge furnishes a lovely theme for contrast. The buttoned belt and circular hem smartly agree with the scalloped cape. The hipline also favors scallops to narrow its breadth.

The frock was originally carried out in pale blue eyelet batiste with blue binding.

Style No. 3050 may be had in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 36 and 38 inches bust.

Peach-pink linen with brown binding, yellow shantung print with plain yellow, pale blue flat washable silk crepe with pale pink, red and white batiste print and green pique print with white pique collar and binding are charming suggestions.

Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards 35-inch or 39-inch.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.

Sunday School Lesson

May 31. Lesson IX—Jesus In Gethsemane—Luke 22: 39-54. Golden Text—Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me; nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done. —Luke 22: 42.

ANALYSIS.

I. The Agony on the Mount of Olives, 22: 39-46.

II. The Arrest, 22: 47-54.

I. The Agony on the Mount of Olives, 22: 39-46.

What is meant by saying that Jesus went, "as his custom was," to the Mount of Olives? It might be that he was wont to retreat thither for prayer and meditation, but more probably it was not safe for him to sleep in the city. Jesus did not refuse to die when the time came, but he refused to be assassinated before his hour. Whether he slept in the open air or with friends, perhaps at Bethany, is not quite certain.

The disciples are to pray that they enter not into "temptation." We are reminded of the conclusion of the Lord's Prayer. The word translated "temptation" seems to mean rather "fiery trial," such a searching test as Peter underwent when accused of being a disciple, or as many Christians underwent in times of persecution. How do we know the words of Jesus' prayer? The disciples, apparently were asleep. Who, then, overheard the prayer of Jesus? The only possible person seems to be the young man of Mark 15: 51, whom some have supposed to be Mark himself. This is interesting guess-work, but we cannot tell. The prayer itself is reminiscent of two other passages: First, the question, "Are ye able to drink of the cup that I drink?" Matt. 20: 22. Second, the petition in the Lord's Prayer, "Thy will be done."

Why should the disciples fall asleep through "grief"? v. 45. Grief tends to keep people awake. No doubt the disciples may have been more or less aware of the storm that was about to burst over their heads, but it looks as if "from grief" was put in by the Evangelist as some sort of excuse. It is, on the whole, more likely that the disciples, assuming that Jesus proposed to spend the night on the Mount of Olives and to sleep there himself, had simply lain down in the ordinary way, and fallen asleep. What was it that caused the great distress of Jesus? We are very much out of our depth when we attempt to define the thoughts and feelings of Jesus at this time.

We may not know, we cannot tell
What pains he had to bear.

We can but indicate some of the elements which may have entered into his desperate distress No doubt Jesus, who was but some thirty years old, may have shared man's natural shrinking from death, and the death to which he must look forward was one peculiarly painful and normally very slow. But others before and since have faced a painful death bravely and quietly, and we may be sure that this does not account for Jesus' "Agony." It may well have come to Jesus with overwhelming horror that he, a Jew, the lover of his people, was to be executed by the Romans. Better far, perhaps, that he might die like the prophets at the hands of his own people. Moreover, death by crucifixion, the "hanging upon a tree," seemed to bring with it the curse of the Law, and therefore of God, the Divine Author of the Law. Could he really be the Son of God, if God allowed this to befall him? Again, if he were handed over to the Romans, it would mean that he had failed. His religious revolution, symbolized by the cleansing of the Temple, would have collapsed, and he was to be done to death as another political fanatic, misunderstood, contemptuously removed.

In the dark, dark hour of Gethsemane we may see "desperate tides of the whole world's anguish" (and the whole world's sin "forced through the channels of a single heart." It was usual for men to linger two or three days upon the Cross. It has been said that Jesus died quickly because his heart was broken. Finally, it must be remembered that Jesus walked by faith, as we also are called to do. His arrest and death, just when he seemed to be succeeding, must have been utterly baffling to faith. It is easy for us after the event to see how, through his death, he triumphed, but we must not assume that this was easy for him to see. Jesus is set before us, in the epistle to the Hebrews, as the great example of faith; the leader of the faithful. His faith in God was tested to the uttermost, as alone he faced absolute disaster. We dare not think what it would have meant for the world if his faith had failed, but it held firm.

II. The Arrest, 22: 47-54.

Luke says that chief priests and elders came to arrest Jesus, but they would surely have recognized him, and there would have been no need for the traitor's kiss. The arrest was more probably effected, as Mark indicates, by servants. Exactly what happened is not clear. There seems to have been some sort of a scuffle, but Jesus did not attempt to escape arrest. It is rather surprising to find one at least of the disciples armed, but Jesus knew that "two swords" would be of no avail, once Pilate was invoked.

Wind-Whipping By Plane Believed Good For Alfalfa

The wind whipping given an alfalfa field in full bloom by an airplane flying low over it is thought to have resulted in an increased yield of 140 pounds of alfalfa seed an acre. This test was conducted on the farm of Jay Larkin, Cook County, Oregon.

In July when the alfalfa being left for seed was in full bloom the county agent arranged with Charles E. Hahn and Jonas Bass to demonstrate the effectiveness of the airplane propeller blast in tripping the alfalfa blossoms. A strip forty feet wide the entire length of the field was selected. The county agent and a group of farmers counted blossoms tripped and not tripped on marked areas previous to the airplane treatment. The aiplane was then flown over the strip at a low elevation almost clipping the top of the alfalfa with the landing gear. The blossoms were again counted and it was found that 30 per cent additional blooms were tripped as a result of the airblast from the ship.

Yields at harvest time proved that the strip thus treated yielded 200 pounds of seed an acre in comparison with the yield from the untreated portion of the field of only 60 pounds an acre.

New Combinations

Vegetable meals are becoming more and more popular. Although they have the drawback of demanding that several vegetables be cooked individually and served simultaneously, they can be managed, and there are many combinations besides the mound-of-spinach, mound-of-carrots and mound-of-mashed potatoes one.

These plates offer more variety and are but little more trouble to prepare.

1. Cauliflower with Hollandaise sauce, string beans, baked potatoes, buttered beets.

2. Fresh broiled muchrooms on toast, broccoli, creamed potatoes, grilled tomatoes.

3. Baked green pepper stuffed with tomato and rice, beets, creamed celery, green peas.

4. Spinach with cheese sauce, buttered onions, fried egg-plant slices, celery hearts.

America Inhabited Long Ages Ago

Early Man in Arizona Lived in Pleistocene Age — New Evidence

Cleveland, O.—Discovery in Arizona of a "butcher shop" more than 20,000 years old was reported at the recent meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science by Dr. Harold J. Cook, of the Cook Museum of Natural History, Agate, Nebraska.

Bones of the huge elephant-like mammoth that had been hacked with flint knives by the ancient butchers, and some of the knives themselves, have been found in Yuma County, Arizona, by Perry and Harold Anderson, Dr. Cook said. The knives buried with the bones show men must have lived there at the same time as the mammoths, Dr. Cook believes. Some of the mammoth bones showed evidence of having been hacked while still fresh, or tough and green. A bison bone evidently used in flaking off particles of flint in making the stone knives also was discovered.

"Some of the bison and mammoth bones found here also appear to have been gnawed," Dr. Cook said.

IN PLEISTOCENE AGE.

The dry Arizona plateau where the bones and knives were discovered was a well watered flood plain when the ancient butcher shop was in operation, Dr. Cook explained. Streams were flowing across it from the mountains toward the east. All evidence indicates the flood plain existed in the pleistocene age, which extended from about 1,000,000 years ago to within 20,000 years of the present. There is no probability that the flood basin is more recent than that, he declared.

The flint knives were similar to those found at Colorado, Texas and Torrington, Wyoming. They are well made indicating their makers were comparatively far advanced toward civilization.

"The constantly increasing evidence of this character makes it appear that early man not only existed at a much earlier date in America than has been, until recently commonly believed, but that he had reached a relatively high state of advancement, at least in certain directions, in pleistocene time in this country," Dr. Cook said.

Organ Industry Grows

The great number of motion picture theatres that have sprung up in Germany have furnished a welcome extension of one of the country's industries, though but a comparatively small one—that of organ building. The yearly output is about 400, almost double the number of pre-war time, but the greater part of these instruments are commissioned for the cinemas, writes the Berlin correspondent of "The Christian Science Monitor." An average-sized church organ takes four to five months to build while one for the picture theatre takes half that time. Although many organ building firms have amalgamated with large industrial concerns of late years, a goodly number of smaller firms have remained independent, the reason being that, while in the manufacture of the instrument and the tuner, this is not the case in the organ industry. The mechanism of an organ is so complicated and delicate that only one who has thoroughly learned the construction is able to tune that instrument.

Britain and India

Calcutta Englishman: A huge concession was made in 1917 on certain conditions. Since that date Great Britain has gone on giving one concession after another, although the original conditions were never observed by Indian politicians, and as time has passed have been totally jettisoned. Had the abandonment of the conditions laid down in the preamble of the Government of India Act been followed by political peace and prosperity, there would have been much to say in favor of abandonment, but the state of India during the last ten years and the alluring prospect of a "civil war for a little time" held out by Mr. Gandhi suggest that perhaps a mistake has been made in making so many advances without security.

Can't PLAY
Can't REST
—child needs Castoria

WHEN a child is fretful and irritable, seems distressed and uncomfortable, can't play, can't sleep, it is a pretty sure sign that something is wrong. Right here is where Castoria fits into a child's scheme—the very purpose for which it was formulated years ago! A few drops and the condition which caused the trouble is righted; comfort quickly brings restful sleep.

Nothing can take the place of Castoria for children; it's perfectly harmless, yet always effective. For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an every-day aid. Its gentle action will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. In more liberal doses it will effectively help to regulate sluggish bowels in an older child.

All druggists have Castoria; it's genuine if you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature and this name-plate:

SUMMER HOMES

should have this FIRE PROTECTION

FAR from every hope of aid if a blaze takes hold, the inflammable construction of the average summer home makes it a source of danger and anxiety.

Minimize the fire hazard by lining inside walls and ceilings with inexpensive Gyproc Wallboard that does not burn.

This building material is made from gypsum rock into sheets 4 to 10 feet long, 4 feet wide and ⅜ of an inch thick. It nails and cuts as easily as lumber and with minimum waste.

Find out from your dealer how inexpensive Gyproc is; how easy to erect. Ask him for full information about its application or request a direction sheet from him.

Besides being fire-resistant, Gyproc has structural strength and insulation value. It is also draught and vermin-proof.

By panelling, you can save the expense of decoration, yet Gyproc is an excellent base for Alabastine, Gyptex or wallpaper.

With the occasional rains and warm weather, vegetation is making rapid growth

Some fields of grain early sown have to be re sowed where ground was not as dry as it should have been ere the grain was put in, and with the cool weather which prevailed until recently, caused the seeds to decay.

Mr. and Mrs. P.D. Salter were host and hostess to a number of their friends Saturday evening.

Plans have been decided on to hold the Featherston re union in June.

Some people are losing young and full grown fowl. It appears to be four-leg raiders this time. The death sentence would be the only remedy for such.

From information recently received there seems to be some kind of a ground bug or insect destroying the pasture fields near Streetsville. We believe it does not attack the clovers, but the fodder after being infested turns brown. Representatives from the O. A. C, at Guelph are investigating.

We have had enquiries if there were any marriages about our burg lately. The reply was that there were none, but one might be at sea even if he judged from observation.

Miss Peddie, teacher at No. Nine is giving her large Entrance Class extra help as in the past. She means to put them through.

COOKSVILLE

There was a large attendance of the Women's Association at the May meetting, held at the parsonage, when Mrs. C. S. Jones entertained.

Mrs. M. Teasdale, for many years in charge of primary work in St. Paul's Anglican Sunday School, Toronto, gave an inspirational address on the obligation of mothers to their children.

A tea was planned by Mrs. L. D. Sanderson's and Mrs. C. Pickett's group for May 30th. Plans were discussed for holding a banquet for the Young Worshippers' League of the three circuits, Cooksville, Britannia and Meadowvale, on May 22nd, the date to be subject to convenience of all charges.

The league report showed attendance at church out of 28 Sundays was as follows: Cooksville, F. Copeland, 28; E. Jones 28; B. Tommy 28; H. Baker 25; E. Baker 24; A. Christie 22; Meadowvale, A. Varey 26; G. Shea 21.

The nominations at Cooksville on Tuesday were very quiet.

Clerk J. H. Pinchin, received the nominations at the noon-hour, which resulted as follows:

For Reeve—Thos. Bryans, L. H. Pallett, W. C. Copeland, and E. A. Orr.

For 1st Deputy—R. D. Salmond, W. Trenwith, R. S. Whaley and V. G. Hector.

There was quite a discussion whether a public meeting would be held or not, but at 2.30 the fifty people present gathered in the Town Hall, when Mr. Pinchin was chosen chairman and called the meeting to order.

Speeches were made by the candidates present, namely Messrs. Bryans, Pallett, Whaley, Salmond and Trenwith, with quite a lot of cross-firing, but no personalities were indulged in. Several questions were asked the candidates and satisfactorily answered.

A public meeting will be held at Cooksville Saturday night, when a lot more questions will be asked

Mr. Bryans has served over 6 years in the Council and never had a contest. Now he is asking the ratepayers to make him Reeve.

Mr. Pallett has also served many years in the Council, has been Reeve, also Warden of the County.

Mr. Whaley has been a member of the Council and tried three times for the Reeveship. Mr. Trenwith was a candidate as Councillor some years ago, but was a few votes short when the ballots were counted.

The candidates are all good men, and would, if elected, serve their township well. The contest is on, and it's up to the ratepayers to make their choice.

The names on the ballot paper are as follows:

For Reeve—Thomas Bryans and Leslie H. Pallett.

For 1st Deputy—Wm. D. Trenwith, and Robert S. Whaley.

Voting takes place on Tuesday, May 26th, from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Daylight Saving Time, at the twelve sub-divisions in the Township.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Lone Scouts throughout the province will be gratified to hear that, on the nomination of the Chief Scout for Canada (His Excellency the Earl of Bessborough), a very well-known and outstanding man has been elected to the Presidency of the Canadian General Council of the Boy Scouts Association. This is no other than E. W. Beatty, Esq., K.C., LL.D., etc., the President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who for many years has taken a great interest in Scouting activities in this country. The fact that such outstanding men as this are pleased to associate themselves with our movement is a further proof of public recognition of the value of Scout training, and we have every reason to be proud of the fact that we are members of the Great Brotherhood of Scouts.

Recently a very interesting Lone Scout meeting was held at Markham, when Scoutmaster Don Hutchison of the 2nd Troop, together with Mr. Edgar Jones, Provincial Field Secretary, visited the "Lonies" in that town. The local hotel proprietor kindly placed a room at the disposal of the Scouts, and the evening was occupied with the playing of games and instruction, and Mr. Jones had his lantern with him and entertained the boys with pictures of Scouting activities.

In the course of the evening a Patrol was formed and officially recognized, which is to be known as the Peewit Patrol, and Scout Muir North was elected Patrol Leader. It was tentatively arranged to organize a joint meeting, some time in the near future, of the Markham, Stouffville and Unionville Lonies. We congratulate the Peewit Patrol and wish them all good luck.

Last week we told you about the Artificial Respiration Campaign, which is being carried on by the Scouts all over Ontario during this month, and we told you how to go about obtaining instruction on this subject. Recently "The Globe" published an editoral about this matter, commending the Boy Scouts Association on their organization of this campaign, and for the benefit of those Lone Scouts who are unable to obtain the information elsewhere, we outline below the standard method of applying Schafer's Method of artificial respiration.

1. Lay the patient on his belly, one arm extended directly overhead, the other arm bent at elbow and with the face turned outward and resting on hand and forearm, so that the nose and mouth are free for breathing.

2. Kneel straddling the patient's thighs with your knees placed at such a distance from the hip bones as will allow you to assume the first position, which is as follows:

Knees on floor opposite the hips of patient. Body slightly bent forward, palms of hands on the small of back with fingers resting on the ribs, the little finger just touching the lowest rib, with the thumb and fingers in a natural position, and the tips of the fingers just out of sight. Arms rigid.

3. With arms held straight, swing forward slowly so that the weight of your body is gradually brought to bear upon the patient. The shoulder should be directly over the heel of the hand at the end of the forward swing. Do not bend your elbows. This operation should take about two seconds.

4. Now immediately swing backward so as to completely remove the pressure.

5. After two seconds swing forward again. Thus repeat deliberately twelve to fifteen times a minute the double movement of compression and release, a complete respiration in four or five seconds.

6. Continue artificial respiration without interruption until natural breathing is restored, if necessary, four hours or longer, or until a physician declares the patient is dead.

7. As soon as this artificial respiration has been started and while it is being continued, an assistant should loosen any tight clothing about the patient's neck, chest or waist. Keep the patient warm. Do not give any liquids whatever by mouth until the patient is fully conscious.

8. To avoid strain on the heart when the patient revives, he should be kept lying down and not allowed to stand or sit up. If the doctor has not arrived by the time the patient has revived, he should be given some stimulant, such as one teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in a small glass of water or a hot drink of coffee or tea, etc. The patient should be kept warm.

9. Resuscitation should be carried on at the nearest possible point to where the patient received his injuries. He should not be moved from this point until he is breathing normally of his own volition, and then moved only in a lying position. Should it be necessary, due to extreme weather condition, etc., to move the patient before he is breathing normally, resuscitation should be carried on during the time that he is being moved.

10. A brief return of natural respiration is not a certain indication for stopping the resuscitation. Not infrequently the patient after a temporary recovery of respiration, stops breathing again. The patient must be watched and, if natural breathing stops, artificial respiration should be resumed at once.

11. In carrying out resuscitation, it may be necessary to change the operator. This change must be made without losing the rhythm of respiration. By this procedure no confusion results at the time of change of operator and a regular rhythm is kept up.

Important Points

The most important points in connection with artificial respiration are:

1. Start artificial respiration as quickly as possible after the accident.
2. Know Prone Pressure Method perfectly.
3. Keep the patient warm.
4. Carry out artificial respiration until the patient breathes or there are definite signs of death.

(Success has been achieved after 8 hours of effort.)

5. Transport the patient to home or hospital in a lying-down position and put him to bed.

If the above method is carried out by trained persons after an accident, there is no doubt that many persons will be alive to enjoy next Christmas that but for the action of artificial respiration would have passed on.

European Lines Stress Faster, Quieter Travel

London.—Higher speed, new long-distance routes and greater silence and comfort in flights are combining to make the summer timetables of the airways of Europe something like "magic carpet" documents.

Transportation experts of twenty European air lines are putting finishing touches on timetables of super-speed holiday and business travel.

The main lines of Europe, through increasingly cordial co-operation, now dovetail at all important airway junctions. Transferring from one line to another this summer will be done without delay or inconvenience.

Thirty-seven passenger machines employed by Imperial Airways will permit the saving of a quarter of an hour between London and Paris. Trips to Malo, Sweden and Prague, Berlin and Zurich are now one-day affairs. A fast service will be opened this summer from London to Le Touquet and Switzerland, with connections to the Mediterranean.

Malta may be reached from London in thirty-five hours by a combined use of airplane, flying boat and train.

Oxygen in Oceans Studied

There is less free oxygen in the water of the Pacific Ocean than in that of the Atlantic, and there is more in the water of great deeps of both oceans than in that from moderate depths, says "Popular Mechanics Magazine." These discoveries were made by Dr. Erik G. Moberg, oceanographer, after a chemical study of thousands of samples. Since all plant and animal life in the ocean is dependent on oxygen, the results announced are of fundamental as well as theoretical importance.

Species of Fly Thrives on Oil

Despite the fact that oil is usually fatal to most insects, one strange species of fly spends its fancy at the bottom of oil pools, says "Popular Mechanics Magazine." It answers to the imposing name of "Psilopa petrolii," and is found in parts of the California oil field. Its larvel life is spent in shallow pools of waste oil, left after refinery processes have removed the more volatile materials. It comes to the surface to breathe, protruding a tube to obtain air, then submerges again, feeding on the remains of other insects in the oil.

A Constituent of Concrete

Portland cement is used as one of the constituents of concrete for the construction of foundations, dams, road surfaces, buildings, and building blocks, cement mortars, and for many other purposes. It is one of the most important of our structural materials. Materials suitable for the manufacture of Portland cement occur in all but one of the provinces of Canada.

Sleepless Canadian Muffles Whistles of Paris Trains

Paris.—Colonel Beckles Willson, Canadian author and resident of Paris, has succeeded in muffling railroad whistles within Paris.

Colonel Willson, who wrote a book on American Ambassadors to France, lives close to a railroad station in one of Paris's most exclusive quarters He was awakened at all hours of the night by the shrill shriek of engines.

Colonel Willson wrote a firm but polite letter to railroad officials and government authorities requesting the muffling of the whistles. He received many polite answers asking how could they control the whistles, the only language known to engine drivers and railroad employees.

But Colonel Willson was obdurate. He argued that the trains whistled too much and too loudly, insisting that the number and volume of the toots could be reduced to a minimum. Being of a scientific turn of mind he even demonstrated new types of whistles which would serve the same purpose but not awaken persons sleeping a short distance from the train tracks.

The officials experimented with the whistles and found them satisfactory. The Ministry of Public Works has issued orders that within two months all trains must be equipped with the muffled whistles.

A Spring Sonnet For Devon

The Lady April flings her purple cloak
About the patient shoulders of the down,
And with soft fingers spreads her flower gown
As carpet for the elm trees and the oak
A while ago the cuckoo's echo broke
The slumber of the orchards; and the brown
Frore rags of stingy winter's make were thrown
To rot, when Spring's so splendid sunshine woke—
But I am far away, I do not see
The Lenten lilies dancing by the Dart
That tumbles laughing past; nor where they shine,
Those hills and streams, those valleys of the free
Gorse-flaming moor; but in my exalted heart
They sing, and sing, and sing that they are mine.

French Police Put on Trail Of Truant School Children

Truant schoolchildren of France will tremble when they read a circular which has been addressed by the Minister of War to the National Gendarmerie. Henceforth, writes the Paris correspondent of "The London Daily Telegaph," it will be the duty of every member of that force as he goes on his rounds to look out, not only for housebreakers and poachers and motorists who are breaking the law, but also for boys and girls who ought to be at school and are not.

The circular, which would be regarded by any collector of literary efforts of this kind as a masterpiece, is explicit. "Gendarmes should display great tact and discretion," it is explained, "intervening only in cases of deliberate absenteeism and not in cases of brief accidental absences. Without going out of their way gendarmes will question children of school age whom they meet during school hours, asking them what their motives for absence are and reporting to the brigade commander."

When it has been established beyond all doubt that a genuine offender has been caught, the commander is to prepare a summons. Copies of this, and also of the relevant evidence, must be forwarded to the Prefect and the chief school inspector of the department.

Queen Mary Adds to Rare Collection

Fine Strings of Gems Acquired in Frequent Visits to London Antique Shops

London—Queen Mary not only is an expert at valuation and selection of jewels but she has one of the finest collections in the world. She is particularly interested in their history.

In addition to the crown jewels, she has a collection of her own which has taken many years to gather. She passes much of her time in searching antique shops, especially for jade and amber, and she has lately acquired some fine strings of these gems. These have been placed together on black satin beds in a cabinet in her boudoir.

Her collection is usually kept in a chippendale cabinet in the blue drawing room at Buckingham Palace, and it is a special favor to be asked to view them.

The most admired pieces are those of the rare "creamy" jade, several of which have been presents. There are also some beautiful sets of amber jewelry.

The Queen has some other rare treasures among her personal presents, including a magnificent diamond bracelet and drop pendant, a gift from the King.

The wearing of jewels is an art, and few women can display gems as well as Queen Mary. Her stately bearing adds to the dazzling splendor of her regalia when she is attending state affairs. Her jewels always seem particularly appropropriate to her dress. They are always carefully chosen and never does she appear twice successively with the same jewel scheme.

Emeralds are among the Queen's favorite stones. The royal set of these green, and usually regarded unlucky stones, have a romantic history. They were worn by the Queen's grandmother, the Duchess of Cambridge, in a lottery. Afterwards they were bequeathed to the Duchess of Teck, and then later were left by her to Prince Francis of Teck.

Since they have come into the Queen's possession she has added many other pieces, with the result that her collection of emeralds is now one of the finest in the world. Her favorite piece in the set is an exquisitely carved emerald pendant.

The Queen is also fond of pearls, and on unofficial occasions may often be seen wearing a double row of these gems with single pearl earrings. This partiality to pearls was also held by Queen Alexandra and Queen Victoria.

A Champion Needed

Manitoba Free Press (Lib): The question of the deportation of British citizens from Canada—ruthless, inconsiderate, brutal ejection of our own flesh and blood for the crime of economic failure—is again before the attention of the public both of Canada and Great Britain. Is there no voice to be raised in defence of these people who were invited and urged to come to this country, and who came with the hope and expectation of making homes for themselves?

Canadian Co-Pilot On Record Flight

Vancouver.—R. Chaplin, who will accompany Capt. T. Neville Stack, English airman, as co-pilot on an attempted round-trip flight from England to Australia in 21 days, is the son of Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. Reggie Chaplin, Vancouver.

Chaplin is well-known in Vancouver and Ottawa, having served as aide-de-camp to Lord Byng of Vimy while Governor-General of Canada. He served as an officer in the 10th Huzzars, his father's regiment.

A start was made on the flight, but bad weather over the Rhine Valley forced the flyers to return to their base to await more favorable conditions.

New Glider Record

Munich, Bavaria.—Pilot Groenhoff of the Rhoen Rossitten Glider Flying Society, recently set a new sail plane mark when he flew his motorless machine from here to Kaadn, Czechoslovakia, a distance of 165 miles.

The previous mark was 101 miles, held by Robert Kronfeld.

King George Begins 22nd Year of Reign

London.—King George V completed 21 years upon the British throne on May 6th and observed this anniversary with characteristic absence of formality at a quiet family reunion at Windsor Castle.

A royal salute fired in Hyde Park at noon was the chief notification to the people of London that anything out of the ordinary had occurred.

Ice Age Relics Found in Prussia

Various implements of bone and a bronze axe have been found in the Memel district, bordering on Lithuania. They probably date from the period 1400 to 1000 B.C. Much older, and of especial interest for geologists, are a number of pieces of amber unearthed in Neudorf, West Prussia, thirty miles inland from the Baltic.

"Empire First" Not "Canada First"

Sir Arthur Duckham, British Trade Envoy, Stresses Need of Co-operation

Montreal—With the world facing a crisis more dangerous than the Great War, co-operation between Great Britain and the other nations in the British Empire would solve the Empire's difficulties and be a potent force for peace, Sir Arthur Duckham, president-elect of the Federation of British Industries and a member of the British Trade Mission now in Canada under the presidency of Sir James Lithgow, declared recently, in addressing the Montreal Canadian Club.

The cry, he said, should not be Canada first, Australia first or Great Britain first, but Empire first.

A change of heart had been experienced by British industry, Sir Arthur said. He predicted industry was exploring the possibilities in Canada. Nations must buy if they want to sell, and Canada, if she wanted to sell her wheat, must buy in proportion to what she sells.

Canada, Sir Arthur added, would be a nation of little importance without the Empire; and her only hope, as it was the only hope of Great Britain and the other British nations, lay within the Empire.

Born a Liberal and a free trader Sir Arthur had changed. "World conditions have changed our minds," he commented. "I was a free trader so long as imports to our country meant more work for our people. To-day that is not so, and it is time some change should be made if the Old Country is to recover from the depression of the last 10 years."

Referring to the aims of the Trade Mission, Sir Arthur said, in part: "We know it is no good to come here and try to compete with home industries, but we feel that there is much Canada buys that might be bought in the home country, and that by co-operation we in Great Britain could complement and implement our manufactures so that the turn of trade may go east instead of south. That is the line that has been taken and it is possible to go along it."

Finds Russia Puzzling

Berlin.—"Russia today is either the most stupendously magnificent experiment or the most diabolical plot the world has ever seen," said Henry B. Sell, New York advertising man, upon his return here recently from Moscow, where he spent a week.

"What is more, I doubt whether any one can honestly say which it is," he continued, explaining that his opinion could go either way from the present point. He said it was the "first time any people ever seriously tried to spend 90 per cent. of their energies in building for future generations and only 10 per cent. on themselves," and that only time would tell whether Russia would live up to her plans or whether they would devolve into a Napoleonic means of aggrandizement.

The temptation must be great for the men in the Kremlin, he believes. He said he thought the tempo of the five-year plan was showing plans of flagging and that the people were beginning to fail to respond to the exhortations to do bigger and better things.

Black Opal Valued at $10,000

London.—Weighing twenty-five carats, a black opal, declared to be one of the finest in the world, has arrived in London from Nw South Wales. I. Atishuler, finder of the stone, estimates its value at $10,000. He calls it "Queen of the World."

Ontario Berry Crop

Northern Ontario has other sources of revenue than its farm lands and rich mineral deposits. One of these is the crop of blueberries, which grow bountifully in that part of the country. This year about 140,000 bushels were shipped from northern Ontario to Toronto and other centers. During the height of the season as many as 1,100 baskets were shipped daily from North Bay by express. While principally famous for mining, northern Ontario is also a very productive mixed farming area, and has great resources in forests and water power.—"Canada Week by Week."

20-Storey Building in Paris Has 10 Floors Under Ground

Paris has no skyscrapers and the Versailles authorities have recently banned a project for a building less than 100 feet high as being too lofty for its classic landscape. Yet Paris has a building twenty stories high, although few people know it, writes a correspondent of "The Christian Science Monitor." Half of its twenty stories, it is true, are underground and the rest have such low ceilings that the building does not loom very high against the horizon. Still, there is no denying it it is a twenty-storey building. It is the structure which houses the archives of the Cour des Comptes.

SWISS LIFT MOTOR SPEED LIMIT

Switzerland, of all European countries, is continually making things easy for the touring motorist. It has now abolished the speed limit in the open country, after three ineffectual attempts to prescribe what a safe speed might be. The motorist is in the future to be his own censor.—San Francisco Chronicle.

German Production of Paper Shows Heavy Decline in 1930

German production of paper in 1930 was adversely affected generally—newsprint production perhaps less than other lines, although the latter attained only 539,500 metric tons in 1930 as against 556,000 tons in 1929. This a 3 per cent. lorr, compared with a decrease estimated at between 15 and 20 per cent. in sales of refined paper.

The aggregate paper production in 1930 was 7 per cent. less than in 1929, while board output shows a loss of 6 per cent., according to figures compiled by the Central Paper and Pulp Industry in Berlin. Paper production totaled 1,961,394 tons, as against 2,112,500 in 1929, while the board output amounted to 401,487 tons, a loss of 25,513 tons.—U.S. Commerce Reports.

Young Swimmers Are Given Warning

Lifeguards are now preparing for their summer work at the various watering places and with the swimming season in the offing, parents are warned to see that their children are first acquainted with the depth of the water in which they intend to bathe or swim.

Children, these life-guards point out, often seek the first swimming place available when the weather becomes warm and plunge into the water without knowing its depth or currents.

"Be sure the children know the water first," these lifeguards warn. "Don't let your children take chances and now that warmer weather is on its way and the swimming season not far distant, parents should do all possible in seeing that the toll of life due to drownings is kept at a minimum."

DRAPERIES MADE NEW

"When we resumed housekeeping a month ago I found my draperies had become creased from packing. I hung them out on the line, hoping to remove the creases. Then I forgot them. The result was they became badly faded and sun-spotted.

"I was heartsick until the happy thought struck me to dye them. I just dyed them a deeper green, and as I used Diamond Dyes they look gorgeous and new. I have never seen easier dyes to use than Diamond Dyes. They give the most beautiful colors—when used either for tinting or dyeing—and never take the life out of cloth as other dyes do."

Geodetic Reconnaissance

During the field season of 1930, the Geodetic Survey of Canada, Department of the Interior, completed the reconnaissance for an extensive triangulation scheme covering Georgian bay and the North channel of Lake Huron together with adjoining lands including Manitoulin Island. The total area, extending from the southern of Georgian Bay to Sault Ste Marie, a distance of 230 miles, which be controlled by such a scheme, will have forty control points distributed over an area of approximately 12,000 square miles.

For Distinguished Service

"Heroes are born, not made," we are told. Perhaps this saying is true; at any rate the men pictured above performed heroic service to the public because they had, in their spare time, prepared themselves to render first aid to the injured and were ready when the emergency arose. Each man is a member of the staff of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada. The Bell Telephone Company provides instruction in first aid for all employees who desire it. Over eighty per cent. of the members of the Plant Department are qualified first aiders. The men pictured above have saved life, resuscitated the nearly drowned, bound up the wounded, or, by timely action and quick thinking, prevented serious accidents. In each case their services have been rendered not to fellow employees but to the public at large, often times at great sacrifice and personal danger. As a mark of appreciation, the Bell Telephone Company has made appropriate awards to its men.

More Poultry in Germany Now Than Prior to War

Washington.—Despite the usual destruction of farm crops and farm animals brought about by a great war, Germany now has more poultry, chickens, ducks and geese, than it had before the start of the World War, according to a census conducted last December and made public by the Commerce Department.

Steady increases are shown since 1925, resulting at the end of last year in 6,230,400 geese, 3,886,400 ducks, and 87,937,300 chickens. These figures represent a substantial gain over those obtained for 1913, when there were 5,850,800 geese, 2,086,300 ducks and 63,970,300 chickens.

Imports of eggs into Germany increased materially until 1928, when a decline began, the Commerce Department announced. The 1930 imports were 219,908,830 dozen, about 20,000,000 dozen less than in 1928.

A Fish Curiosity

A fish that shoots insects with a drop of water is among the ichthyological incredibilities assured as scientific facts by Dr. Hugh M. Smith, former United States Fish Commissioner, who recently returned to Washington from Bangkok, where he is adviser in fisheries to the Siamese Government. So accurately can the little fish hurl its liquid projectile that on at least two occasions Dr. Smith has seen lighted cigarettes extinguished in the mouths of smokers on a verandah a couple of yards above the surface of the pond where the fish were swimming.

When the shooting fish sights an insect that it considers a likely candidate for dinner, it quietly pokes its eyes and the tip of its snout above water, holding its body at an angle of about forty-five degrees. It opens its wide mouth just the slightest crack in the middle, and at the same instant suddenly squeezes its gill-covers. The speeding drops of water that shoots forth seldom fails to bring down its mark. Dr. Smith states that he has even seen these fish dislodge small lizards with their water bullets. —Science News Letter.

WHY FAT MEN STAY FAT

"The trouble with me, and I guess this applies to 99 out of every 100 men who are putting on weight, I didn't have the energy or "pep" to keep it off. Lost all interest in any healthy activity and just lazed around accumulating the old pounds, until I got that "Kruschen feeling."

Start taking Kruschen Salts—that's the common-sense way to reduce—but don't take them with the idea that they possess reducing qualities in themselves.

This is what they do—they clean out the impurities in your blood by keeping the bowels, kidneys and liver in splendid working shape, and fill you with vigor and tireless energy.

As a result, instead of planting yourself in an easy chair every free moment and letting flabby fat accumulate, you feel an urge for activity that keeps you moving around doing the things you've always wanted to do and needed to do to keep you in good condition.

Kruschen Salts are the up-to-date Fountain of Youth. Take one-half teaspoon in a glass of hot water to-morrow morning and every morning—be careful of the foods you eat—take regular moderate exercise—then watch the pounds slide off.

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—

CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.

Castoria is sold in every drugstore; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

BRAMPTON FALL FAIR TO BE FEATURED BY PEEL CALF CLUBS

During the morning of the last day of the Brampton Fall Fair, the people of Peel will have the opportunity of seeing teen age boys exhibit the calves they have tended and cared for all summer. The Directors of the Fair Board were quick to see the possibilities of the calf club work to emphasize livestock in this agricultural district. Encouragement to the boys now will mean breeders and exhibitors of high class cattle in later years. The Provincial and Federal Governments are offering two-thirds of the prize money with the remainder being raised locally.

Classes have been arranged where the calves will be judged and others for showmanship. Judging and demonstration contests will also be conducted. It is also suggested to have a parade around the track during the afternoon of all the calves for the benefit of the people in the grandstand. Approximately 55 teen age boys are entered already in the three clubs, Holsteins, Jerseys and Shorthorns are the three breeds which were the choice of the boys.

The Peel Holstein Breeders' Club, of which Thos. Lyons, Cheltenham, is President and J. M. Fraser, Streetsville, is Secretary, is backing the large Holstein calf club with around 30 members. These boys are scattered over the County all the way from Palgrave to Erindale. There will be two classes for Holsteins namely Senior and Junior calf classes for both grade and purebred heifers.

Peter Dick, Georgetown, No. 4, President, and Robt. Segsworth, Brampton, Secretary, of the Peel Jersey Breeders Club are sponsoring the boy enthusiasts of the Jersey breed. Cash prizes have been given in the past for Jersey calves at the School Fairs but this calf club work appeals to teen age boys who have graduated from public school so the directors were unanimous in offering substantial prizes to encourage the boys and promote the breed which is noted for the economical production of butterfat.

Boys in the Shorthorn Club are all on the East side of Centre Rd. from Mount Hope in Albion Township to Cooksville in the southern end. It is undecided yet whether the Shorthorns will be featured at Brampton or Bolton Fall Fairs. However the success of the calf clubs in Peel is assured by the large number of members and also by the support of the parents of the boys and by the breed organizations. Calf club work aims to promote better and more livestock.

WEB WORMS EATING GRASS AT STREETSVILLE

For the first time in 40 years an attack of web-worm, which eats the pasture and resembles the cornborer, has broken out in the district and is alarming the farmers. The worms have killed 25 acres of grass on the farm of George Bonham in two days and are spreading fast.

The farm of N. S. McCracken is attacked and if the disease continues to spread will boost the price of milk.

Prof. Lawson of Guelph Agricultural College and J. C. Shearer, district representative have started an investigation. The worm only attacks blue and timothy grass and does not touch alfalfa.

Bulletins will be issued immediately by the Agricultural department to the farmers telling how to detect the presence of the work to combat it.

MUST ANSWER

Ottawa, May 18.—All persons in Canada are called upon to answer the questions of the census-takers, who will start making their rounds next month, it is stated in a Royal proclamation issued today in the Canada Gazette. Attention is called to the fact that the information obtained in the census can be used for statistical purposes only, and not for taxation, military or jury services or the enforcement of any law, Provincial, Municipal or Federal. Persons refusing to give information to the census enumerators will be subject to a penalty. For the protection of persons furnishing information, every officer, agent or other person employed in the taking of the census is bound by oath and under a heavy penalty to keep secret all the information obtained.

AUTO SMASH AT CLARKSON

Twelve persons were injured shortly after 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, when an eastbound car driven by George F. Reese of 538 Victoria Park Avenue, Toronto, collided with another car going in the opposite direction and driven by Norman S. Moore of 10 Barrett Street, Port Hope.

The accident occurred about five miles east of Oakville on the Toronto-Hamilton Highway, and less than 500 yards from the scene of last Sunday's fatality at The Anchorage, when Mr. and Mrs. Harry Irwin of Sarnia were killed and five others injured.

In the eastbound car were George F. Reese, the driver, with Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Crosbie and their two children, Dorinne, aged 11, and Edward, aged 7, of 538 Victoria Park Avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. William Anderson and their son, Billie, aged 10, and their daughter, June, aged 8, of 176 Main Street. In the other car with Norman S. Moore were his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Moore of Port Hope, and Miss Lucy Simpson of Kingston.

The cars struck head-on with a terrific impact, and both machines were completely wrecked, as a result of which traffic was blocked for a considerable period.

Highway Traffic Officer Rogers, of Oakville who was soon on the scene was assisted by a number of willing motorists in placing the injured in a delivery truck which happened by, and they were taken to the office of Dr. E. G. Vernon, at Clarkson, where they received treatment.

Later the boy Edward Crosbie, the most seriously injured was rushed to the Hospital for Sick Children at Toronto, where it was found that he had sustained a fractured skull.

Mrs. Margaret Scruton

The death took place at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Adrian Smith(Scotland, Ont., of Mrs. Margaret Scruton, widow of Albert Scruton. Mrs. Scruton was in her eightieth year. She had spent several months with her son, Ira D. Scruton, Hamilton and had gone to her daughters home when she was stricken. She had resided in Brantford for 50 years .Mr. Scrton died some three years ago It was in her home that the first prayer meeting was held looking to the formation of Sydenham Street United Church. A Sunday School teacher for many years, she also been closely allied with the Womans' Missionary Society Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Adrain Smith, Scotland; two sons Wilfred Scruton, Brantford, and Ira D. Scruton, Hamilton.

DRUMQUIN

There was an animated debate in the Bethel church on Friday evening, When Georgetown young people motored here for the wordy conflict. The theme was the advisability of publishing details of crime. The visitors captured the decision, but the two Bethel debaters, Claude Pickett and Miss Isabel Stephens, defended their side creditably.

The euchre club met at P. D. Salter's on Saturday evening.

The June meeting of the Ladies' Aid will be held at the home of Mrs. Jos. Howes.

Thos. Featherstone, of Churchville, was visiting with friends here this week.

Wm. Alderson, of New Toronto, is working his farm here this year.

Miss Margaret Stephens has returned to the Guelph hospital, where she is in training, after a month's vacation.

To the Holders of
WAR LOAN AND VICTORY BONDS

A Statement by the Minister of Finance

IN THE dark days of the War, Canadians loaned to the Government of the Dominion many hundred millions of dollars to enable the operations of the Allies to be carried to a successful conclusion.

When Canadians loaned their money to the Government, they received bonds which were promises to repay them the sum loaned with interest at the rate of 5% or 5½% per annum. On the 1st of October next, $53,000,000 of these bonds become due; on the 1st of November, 1932, the maturity will be $73,000,000; on the 1st of November, 1933, $446,000,000; and, in 1934, $511,000,000 must be provided for.

It would not be prudent, either in the interest of the security holders or the country itself, to wait until these loans become due before providing for their payment or conversion. Action must be taken well in advance of the due dates to protect the credit of the country. The Government believes this an opportune time to afford Canadians the opportunity to exchange the bonds, which they own maturing in the next few years, for new bonds of the Dominion of Canada carrying interest at the rate of 4½% per annum, which is a very attractive return. Prior to the maturity date of the present bonds, those who accept this offer will, of course, continue to be paid interest at the rate as provided by the bonds they exchange.

Canadians who have always shown confidence in their country are earnestly invited to exchange the bonds they now own for bonds of the new issue. By so doing, they will render less difficult the task of providing for the future finances of the country, will enhance its credit and will greatly assist the Government in the present period of worldwide readjustments.

No money will be asked for and no new bonds will be sold at this time. It is proposed to limit the present conversion to $250,000,000, but the Government has the right at its discretion to increase the amount if Canadians indicate a general desire to continue their investments in the securities of their Dominion. The subscription books will close on the 23rd of May.

I earnestly seek the active support of my fellow Canadians in making this conversion, which is one of the largest financial operations our country has undertaken in recent years, creditable alike to Canada and its citizens.

R. B. Bennett

Minister of Finance.

PEEL COUNTY SPRAY SERVICE

Apples

All apples should be sprayed as soon as the blossoms have nearly all fallen. This spray must be applied before the blossom end, or calyx cup, closes. Use Lime Sulphur 1-40 and 1½ lbs. Arsenate of Lead to 40 gallons. If so desired, 3 lbs. Hydrated Lime may be added to each 40 gallons.

This spray and all subsequent sprays require very thorough application.

Pears

Soon after the blossoms have fallen, apply Bordeaux Mixture 2-4-40 adding 1½ lbs. Arsenate of Lead to each 40 gallons.

Sweet and Sour Cherries and Plums

When most of the shucks are off spray with Lime Sulphur 1-40 adding 3 lbs. Hydrated Lime and either 1½ lbs. Arsenate of Lead or 1 lb. Arsenate of Lime to each 40 gallons.

Currants and Gooseberries

Spray just after the fruit is set with Lime Sulphur 1-40 and 1½ lbs. Arsenate of Lead or 1 lb. Arsenate of Lime to each 40 gallons. The poison may be omitted when spraying Black Currants, and if no red spiders are present use Bordeaux Mixture 3-6-40 instead of the Lime Sulphur.

James C. Shearer, Agricultural Representative, Peel County.

S. H. S. LITERARY NOTES

Last Friday afternoon there was a special meeting of the Literary Society in order to celebrate Empire Day, which came on Sunday this year.

Our meeting was opened by singing "O Canada."

Business of the society was discussed and it was decided to hold our annual picnic at Eldorado Park on Wednesday, June 3rd. We all then joined in singing "The Land of the Maple."

Readings and recitations, which were appropriate for the occasion, were ably rendered by Hazel Ross, Ruth Haddon, John McGill, Thora Elderfield, Edna Stephens, Margaret Falconer and Unitt Bailey.

Then we sang "The Maple Leaf Forever."

Our "Guest of Honour" was Mr. Couse. He was called upon to speak and rendered a very interesting and instructive address. He told us of his travels to South America and showed us pictures of the beautiful cities which he saw. We closed our meeting by singing "God Save the King."

HELEN TURNER, Reporter.

Pay Up

While a great many have responded to our request and renewed their subscription, there are still a large number owing us and we need the money. Our list has been corrected up to date. Look at the date on your label and if there is any mistake kindly notify us and we shall be pleased to correct same as we require a considerable amount of money to meet our obligations we must again request those in arrears to settle same.

24th OF MAY

It was the 24th of May, the day everyone, old and young, looked forward to as one of the best annual holidays in their lives. It was the birthday of the Queen of the United Kingdom and Monarch of the whole British Empire. No wonder everyone loved Queen Victoria and would join in singing at every public meeting with the interest and loyalty.

"Send her victorious,
Happy and glorious,
Long to reign over us,
God save the Queen."

Apple blossoms, bulbs and all seasonable flowers made the Presbyterian Church look like the Garden of Eden on Sunday morning for the celebration of the anniversary of Queen Victoria's birthday.

In the choir there are still a few remaining to remind us of the past and there are many young new faces. After the song of praise, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." If we closed our eyes and listened we would almost have thought it was the same good old loyal choir that sang many years ago, that good old song to the same good old tune, "God Save Our Gracious Queen."

Last Sabbath morning when the choir sang:

"God save our gracious King
Long live our noble King
God save the King."

If we were allowed to pass judgment, we would say the singing was as good as it was in years gone by.

Then our memory went back into other years and we could see many there who were on the last lap of life, one Sunday, in particular, now they joined in the songs to honor their Queen and country and we will never forget how earnest they joined with the good old choir when they sang in honor at that birthday celebration this "Psalm of David."

"I to the hills will lift mine eyes
From whence doth come mine aid
My safety cometh from the Lord
Who heaven and earth hath made."

In Mr. McCree's address, he followed the working of the machinery of the Empire from Queen Victoria's reign, and to all outward appearance, under the new Monarch's rule, no noticeable change has taken place. But at the present time in some of the Dominion's rumours of discontent was heard. But what the future has in store at the gigantic Imperial Conferences, at present no one can tell. But it is reasonable to indulge in the belief that the Empire will long continue to be, what it is called today, one of the most important agencies for the advancement of human civilization, and much of the credit is due to the influence of our motherly Queen, whose memory we are paying a tribute of profound respect to, today.

Years have come and passed away
And every year had a 24th of May
As the curtain would drop on the 24th scene
We would join in that song "God save our Queen
Now when we look back on by-gone years
With so much joy, and sometimes tears
At the anniversarys with love we pay our debt
Lest we forget, lest we forget.

SANDY.

WEDDINGS

Hockley—Tier

The Church of the Epiphany, Parkdale, was the scene of a quiet wedding when Doris Aisdenne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. C. Tier, became the bride of Albert E. Hockley, son of Rev. and Mrs. E. F. Hockley. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked pretty in her frock of pale green flowered chiffon, with matching hat, shoes and gloves. Her bouquet was of talisman roses and valley lilies. Rev. Dyson Hague officiated. The bride and groom were unattended and shortly afterward left on a motor honeymoon for their home in Calgary, Alberta.

Morrison—McKinney

Miss Mable Jane McKinney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs W. J. McKinney "The Maples," First Line West Chinguacousy, was married on Saturday afternoon to Arthur H. E. Morrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morrison, Woodhill, by Rev. N. D. McKinnon, pastor of Norval United Church. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was in eggshell satin with draperies of silk lace. She wore a veil of silk tulle with coronet of orange blossoms and carried a shower of roses and lily-of-the-valley. Her only attendant was her little cousin, Hope McMeekin, who wore a frock of pale blue georgette over pink silk, a large tulle bow of pink tulle in her hair, and carried a basket of sweet peas. The wedding music was played by Miss Viola Morrison, sister of the groom, and during the signing of the register Miss Babe McMeekin, accompanied by Miss Mary McMeekin, sang. The house was decorated in pink and white, with masses of pink snapdragon. After luncheon Mr. and Mrs. Morrison left by motor for a trip to Montreal and Quebec, the bride traveling in grey and blue ensemble, with grey hat. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Morrison will reside in Brampton.

COOKSVILLE

May Scott, aged 21, of Cooksville, was crossing Yonge at Dundas Street, Toronto when she was struck down by an automobile driven by Jack Stone, 27 Hillcrest Avenue. The young woman suffered an injured right leg and was taken home.

BRAMPTON

Much as the farmers of Ontario desire good roads, W. E. Breckon, president of Toronto Milk Producers' Association, told Peel Milk and Cream Producers' Association the fine highways are warring against the milk producer.

Through improved roads, longer hauls of milk are possible, truck drivers are canvassing for the business of the small producers far from railway lines and helping cut down prices.

J. A. Carroll of the Ontario marketing branch gave a comprehensive address on crops and marketing, speaking optimistically of future prosperity.

Directors elected were Nelson Carter, H. A. Dolson, Norman Cameron, W. J. Fraser, T. L. Leslie and R. McCulloch.

PORT CREDIT

At the close of an inquest conducted by Coroner Dr. A. B. Sutton of Port Credit respecting the deaths of Harry Irwin and his wife of 337 South Mitton Street, Sarnia, who were killed in a motor crash on May 10 at Milligan's Corners, Joseph Berry of 18 Marigold Avenue, Toronto, was placed under arrest by Provincial Officer E. G. Purvis on a charge of criminal negligence. According to the verdict returned, Irwin succumbed to chest injuries, while Mrs. Irwin died after having sustained a fractured skull when their car was struck in the rear by a T.T.C. coach driven by Berry. Four others were injured in the accident and were taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, Toronto.

Charged with being drunk in a public place, John Kerr, of Long Branch, appeared before Magistrate W. Bull in the Police Court here. Given the option of $50 and costs or 60 days he took the latter.

Another epidemic of what looks to be deliberate dog poisoning has broken out throughout Toronto Township and in Port Credit during the past week. No less than five dogs, all splendid pets, have succumbed to strychnine poisoning. Provincial Police are investigating. One springer spaniel, "Jack", owned by W. H. Beatty, of the Centre Road, was saved only by the prompt work of Dr. F. Hopkins, of Cooksville, who was summoned.

In previous cases a pet dog, owned by Gordon Webster, died on his master's front lawn. J. S. Middleton, principal of the Middle Road School, recently lost a beautiful collie by the poison route. A great Dane owned by Miss B. Craig, of Port Credit, and two house dogs favourates with W. R. Wadsworth are the other victims.

Fire said to have originated from a chimney spark did considerable damage to the roof of the residence of L. J. Sheather of Middle Road. The Port Credit Fire Brigade, under Chief Nowman, who were forced to rely on the use of chemicals, owing to the district being outside the hydrant area, was further handicapped by a strong wind, which set the inside beams ablaze. It was finally overcome, however, with damage confined to the roof and estimated at about $400.

OBITUARY

James Pickett

At Peel Memorial Hospital, Brampton, last Sunday, May 24th, Mr. James Pickett of Streetsville, passed away in his 76th year, after a short illness.

Mr. Pickett was a gardener and had lived for many years just south of Creditvale (Barberton). His wife predeceased him a few years ago. He is survived by two sons, Melville and Harry, Creditvale; and two daughters, Josie, (Mrs. David Russell), Streetsville, and Margaret, at home. The funeral took place to Clarkson cemetary on Tuesday afternoon, and was conducted by Rev. Geo. H. Purchase of the United Church.

MOTORCYCLIST IS KILLED

Trafalgar, May 26—Augustus Stahal, aged 30, was killed almost instantly when his motorcycle swung out of the driveway of the farm where he worked and was struck by a motor car driven by a Woodstock woman school teacher. Dr. W. H. Wilkinson was called but the injured man was beyond aid. He came from Switzerland, and had been ten years in Canada.

ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Byers, of Oakville, Ontario, announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Dorothy Agnes, to Percy Croft Sutton, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Sutton, of Toronto, the marriage to take place the latter part of May.

SOFTBALL

The Streetsville Softball League got started Wednesday, May 20th; two games will be played each week on the Fair Grounds diamond, through the kindness of Mr. Andrews, the Lessee. The boys have done considerable work in improving the play grounds, by putting up some seats along the base lines, and placing a high screen behind the home plate; a score board will also be erected, which will be much appreciated by the spectators. In connection with these improvements, the day after the seats were put up, some person, or persons, with a perverted sense of humor, completely uprooted one of the benches; the management wish here to give warning that a repitition of any such acts of vandalism will result in the person, or persons, found so doing, taking a chance of their being denied the use of the grounds and will be taking a sure way of being given a chance to tell their story in Court. Prompt action will be taken. It will, therefore, be found advisable for anyone, who is overwhelmed with a desire to do damage, to procure for themselves a buck saw and attack the woodpile in the back yard. The bucksaw method of reducing their superfluous energy will be found to be much more profitable and decidely less inconvenient.

I. ARDAGH,
President.

Creditvale vs. Trinity Church

The opening of our big softball league was a huge success. Our town fathers starting the ball rolling for the season. Con. Johnston handled the ball with Reeve Hope at the bat. A big crowd turned out to see the game.

The vale boys were a bit too good and walked off with the opener 23 to 13. The boys are hardly in shape yet and as the season goes on we expect to see some real ball.

Friday night brought together the town boys vs. High School. The school boys have a real smart bunch and will take some beating. They appear to be in much better shape and know how the game should be played. The town team will improve with age. Score: High School 16; Town 7.

OUR BASEBALL LEAGUE

Bang! Bang! Our league is off to a very good start. Now all the teams have taken part. We find in the lead High School and Creditvale. The reason of course, the pill they can whale. There was quite a crowd to view the opening, with the best teams, I think, getting the jump, opinion. Well, we'll see what they say at the end of the season. Any team that can knock out twenty three runs in one game is a team I'm sure that will be hard to tame. Trinity seems to have a fair team, only poor hitters, but eleven runs in one inning shows they're not quitters. They were trailing by seven to twenty at the end of the fifth when on Pope's curves they began to get the drift the Creditvale bunch began to get pretty scared, so when the last man was out they said a heart failure to them had been spared. To make sure that victory was sure to be theirs they ran the bases like hunted hares, even Joe Rabbitt, I think, with all his speed would have looked on with envy and greed.

Bob Little's trusty bat was well to the fore and I think to him went the honour of first to score. Bob came back with a smile and the run, turned round to us and said, "Boys wasn't that a good ch-yin. All this happened on Wednesday night so turn out, everybody, Tuesdays and Thursdays to watch this old fight.

Show the teams you're with them to the limit and be at the flats half-past-seven, to the minute. For those who could not turn out to see the town play just get in touch with a player called Ray, he's on their team, and backs them to win the league, that is, of course, if the old gents don't get fatigued and he can sit out in the field smoking his corn pipe, while Russell puts over the occasional strike.

Well, don't forget to come to the old ball games even if you are suffering from ills and pains. A few minutes of watching this wonderful fun will make you feel like a two-yr.-old again on the run. One last little item I forgot to mention, is, when somebody comes around for the collection, don't turn away and try to be Scotch, just put your hand in your pocket and pull out lots, this is to help out the boys for new balls and bats. If you do this I'm sure they'd give you their sincerest congrats.

A SPORT.

LET US SMILE

The effect of listening to ultra fashionable parents is shown in the following conversation:

Father—"Doris, your mother has told me you have been misbehaving. I shall have to punish you to-night."

Doris (age nine)—"Not to-night, father. I shall be too busy with my dancing lessons; but speak to me again to-morrow regarding an appointment."

PEEL COUNTY CAMPS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

Starts June 29 for eight days for boys. Again on July 9 for girls.

Look at the calendar, boys, and girls. Good old summer time is coming round once more. And what comes with summer? Why holidays of course. And what could be better than a real, live holiday at Peel Camp? That's the place to enjoy life to the full. Every year our camp gets better and better. More equipment is added each year to make it more ideal. If you've never been before please make a special effort to attend this year and you'll never regret it.

The boys' camp starts on 29th of June and closes on July 8 and the girls' camp is from July 9 to July 18. The girls really can be glad the boys' camp is first because they'll do all the work of getting the camp straightened up and ship-shape for the girls to move in.

The boys' camp is for boys from twelve to sixteen years of age with room for a few older boys to act as tent leaders.

The girls' camp takes care of girls up to 17 years of age. But only a limited number of either boys or girls can attend because of equipment.

So take a tip from us, boys and girls, if you want to go to camp this year, get your application or registration in real early.

POOR BLOOD

Every cell of the body requires food and has waste products which it must get rid of. The blood serves this function for it is the blood stream which carries oxygen from the lungs and food from the digestive tract to every nook and corner of the body. It is into the blood stream that the body cells discharge their waste products, which are then carried by the blood to the eliminative organs through which they leave the body.

There are in the body certain important glands which produce secretions and which control, in large measure, many important functions of the body. It is in the blood stream that these internal secretions are circulated.

It is obvious that the blood, which forms about one-twentieth of the body weight, is a most important part of the body.

The blood itself is subject to certain diseases, such as the anaemias, which alter its composition and interfere with the carrying-out of its normal functions associated with the nutrition of the body and removal of wastes.

In the minds of many people, there is the idea that when they feel miserable or run-down, particularly if this occurs in the spring of the year, that it is due to their blood's being what they call poor, or bad, or thin.

There is no foundation for this belief. The composition of the blood does not change unless there is actual disease of the blood itself and it is not to such cases that we refer.

Pimples, boils or other skin conditions are not due to poor blood, nor are they the result of nature's trying to rid the blood of impurities. In many of these cases, there is a story of neglect of all those habits of life which must receive attention if the body is to be kept in a state of health.

It is much easier to blame the condition on poor blood than on lack of exercise, fresh air, cleanliness of the body, or overeating. It is because so many people neglect these important matters during the winter that we hear more complaints of poor blood in the spring than at other seasons of the year.

It is not through medicines that the body is kept healthy; it is through a proper manner of living. Exercise in the open air daily, sleeping in a room with the window open, keeping the body clean by regular bathing, moderate use of feed in a balanced diet, securing regular elimination by the formation of regular habits—these are the habits of life which make for health, physical fitness and freedom from ill effects which follow neglect of the body.

THE

TULE MARSH MURDER

STORY OF A MISSING ACTRESS AND THE TAXING OF WITS TO EXPLAIN HER FATE.

BY NANCY BARR MAVITY.

CHAPTER I.

The disappearance of Mrs. Don Ellsworth ("Sheila O'Shay")—it was always printed in this fashion, usually with the addendum that Miss O'Shay's song and dance hit, "Burn 'Em Up," had made half a million dollars in royalties for its composer—had already been front page stuff for three days.

To be sure, on the third day, as on the first, there was no further information than the stark fact that the ever-spectacular Sheila had spectacularly disappeared. But an essential factor in a big news story is continuity; the city editor's abhorrence of a vacuum far exceed's nature's. Therefore, in pursuance of tactics technically known as "nursing the story along," the newsboys were unintelligibly shouting "Huckstry!" to announce that the Ellsworth mystery still deserved the name.

One of them, at the moment, was roaming the street under Dr. Cavanaugh's window, hoarsely reiterating, "All about the Ellsworth mystery! Latest news of the missing actress! Her-ald! Her-ald!"

Dr. Cavanaugh, reclining on the chaise-longue with a smoking stand nicely adjusted at his elbow and the Journal of Abnormal Psychology propped with its lower edge resting on the curve of his rotund middle, glanced fleetingly from the page before him to the window. He even let the Journal flatten itself out on his waistcoated arc while he wondered at a human nature which rushes out to buy a paper, in order to find out that there are no further incidents to relate about people in whom the buyers have no personal interest whatever.

As he reached to pick up the magazine, the telephone on the flat-topped mahogany desk across the room set up a series of intermittent summonses insistent as an alarm clock.

"M-m. I thought so. About time," Dr. Cavanaugh grunted, heaving his large bulk from the chaise-longue. Before picking up the receiver, however, he drew a nickel out of his trousers pocket and laid it on the smoking stand. It was a habit of Dr. Cavanaugh's to bet with himself on his own judgment. When he lost, the coin was deposited in a small elephant-shaped box on the desk—but the coins in the box were few.

"Dr. Cavanaugh speaking."

"Dr. Cavanaugh, this is Don Ellsworth. I wondered—may I come over and talk to you?" The voice at the other end of the wire was embarrassed and yet urgent, speaking rapidly but with hesitations—the voice of a man who has held an impulse in check, only to act upon it suddenly in the end.

Dr. Cavanaugh reached out for the nickel and restored it to his trousers pocket. Then he leafed rapidly through the pages of the memorandum calendar that stood close to the telephone on the desk.

"Certainly. I'm rather full up for the balance of the week. Say Friday—at four?"

Dr. Cavanaugh viewed the mouthpiece of the telephone with a faint smile as he made this test of Ellsworth's patience. From what he knew of Don Ellsworth, Friday at four would not suit him at all. But he did permit a trace of that smile to color his tone.

"But—I simply can't wait till Friday." The voice was more sure of itself now. If the speaker had reached his decision to call Dr. Cavanaugh against inner opposition, his impulse, when balked from without, had gained singleness and strength. "It's urgent. Haven't you read the papers?"

"Only casually."

"It's about Sheila. I tell you, doctor, I'm almost wild. I'm at the end of my rope. Couldn't you let me come over now—tonight?"

Dr. Cavanaugh glanced mournfully around the room, its outlines faintly blurred in the gray haze of tobacco smoke. The students' lamp which he had brought from Germany in his university days and preferred to electricity as a reading light, beamed mellowly down on the comfortably dented pillows of the chaise-longue, on the sober gray and black covers of the Journal of Abnormal Psychology. He had had a hard day, delving persistently, delicately, indefatigably into the dark recesses of the mind of a patient afflicted with hysterical blindness. A hard and baffling day, with nothing to show for it in the way of results—yet.

"The surgeon of the mind—an operation that takes a year—and the need of as steady a hand as if one were extracting a bullet from the heart muscle," he thought as his gaze briefly circled the room.

His heavy shoulders heaved slightly in an inaudible sigh. But it was like Dr Cavanaugh that, once he had made his decision, he made no play of regret. He had scant patience with the form of self-aggrandizement which in granting a favor makes the recipient uncomfortable.

"All right, Don. Come along." The calm friendliness of his voice carried no hint of his relinquished evening's rest.

"I hate to impose on you like this. But Sheila—"

"If I hadn't been willing to see you, I'd have said so. I'll expect you in fifteen minutes."

And for fifteen minutes Dr. Cavanaugh was lost to the world, deep in an article on focal infection as a factor in dementia præcox.

Except for its outside entrance and separate doorbell, the room had none of the stigma of a doctor's office. It was furnished as a library, and the books which covered two walls with a mosaic of warm, variegated color by no means excluded fiction. The half-dozen pictures that marched in line above the bare tops of the book cases were non-committal etchings—only the student versed in this somewhat austere art would have recognized these gray and white criss-crossed lines of ships and harbors and fragmentary streets as extremely valuable (and, an artist would add, beautiful) possessions The chaise-longue, and the easy chairs were not too imposing to be comfortable. The only professional note on the wide desk with its worn green leather fittings was the unavoidable calendar pad—and even this was fitted with a cover and was usually kept closed.

But, for the matter of that, Dr. Cavanaugh was not an ordinary doctor. For his own purposes the room was as carefully equipped as an operating theatre for a surgeon. Besides, although unobstrusively, it expressed his own tastes, and Dr. Cavanaugh had reached a professional eminence which relieved him of the necessity of impressing patients. His treatments were as expensive and as hard to obtain as Freud's—and, he occasionally admitted with a humorous squint in his brown eyes which absolved the remark of conceit, being without Freud's terrific single-mindedness of genius, they were sometimes more successful.

He had now, in the late forties, reached the point where he could afford to take only the cases which interested him. Those cases were as likely as not to be undertaken for no fee at all—to be written up later in one of those terse, stylistic monographs which brought a blaze of light into the dark thickets of bejardoned medical journals. They were also likely to bring him into court as the last resort alienist of a harassed district attorney or a psychopathic millionaire. They had even brought him into the Sunday supplements and the front pages of metropolitan newspapers, where headline writers had been known to refer to him as the "criminal psychologist" and feature writers credited him with an astounding wizardry.

His solution of the Barnes-Hill double murder, three years after the police had given it up, had extended his reputation to the laity, and had made his massive figure, his canine head with its heavy features and surprisingly gentle brown eyes, fair game for the cartoonist. What the laity could scarcely appreciate—although the chief of police did—was the skill with which he contrived to put the explanation of that tortuous cats' cradle of facts into the hands of the authorities without making them appear to have been fools.

"I am not a criminologist," he insisted. "The study of human motives has been my professional concern for a good many years. What I've picked up on the side is just a hobby—a hobby that happens to fit in with my professional interests. Clues? Well, we can't afford to ignore clues, though I'm no expert in that line. But the most revealing clues cannot be put under the microscope—they are in the workings of the human mind."

The cries of the newsboy had died away down the street when footsteps sounded on the flagged path leading around the side of the house to the office entrance. Dr. Cavanaugh rose and opened the door before the young man on the stoop had lifted his hand to the bell.

"Come in, Don. Take off your coat and have a cigar."

"This is awful good of you, doctor. There's—nobody home?"

"Barbara is out for the evening. She will be sorry to have missed you. But if you wanted to talk to me professionally, it's probably just as well."

"Yes—I—" The broken sentences died out in a mumble as Ellsworth turned to lay his coat and hat across the back of a chair.

Don Ellsworth's face, as he turned to the light, was a curious blend of anxiety, embarrassment and the habitual self-assurance of one for whom money was accustomed to make all rough places smooth. The anxiety and the self-assurance remained, but it was impossible for embarrassment to linger in the impersonal, widely tolerant presence of Dr. Cavanaugh.

Don found himself relaxing in an easy chair. A good part of his life, smothered in wealth since he first became known as the "millionaire baby," had been spent in getting into and out of scrapes, but they had all been in the tradition of such misdemeanors. The present situation found him without a code to indicate which way to turn.

"You read about Sheila—that she's gone? Vanished a week ago, without a trace. I've got to find out what has become of her!"

"A week ago," Dr. Cavanaugh said meditatively, clipping the end off his cigar and pushing the smoking stand nearer his visitor. "And the newspapers—which, I suppose, means the police—have had it for three days. Isn't your agitation a trifle retarded?"

SAVED IMPORTED DRESS

"After a little wearing, a lovely green voile—an imported dress—lost color so completely that it was not wearable. A friend who had admired it asked me why I wasn't wearing it any more. On hearing the reason, she advised dyeing it and recommended Diamond Dyes. To make a long story short, it turned out beautifully. I have a lovely new dress that really cost just 15c—the price of one package of Diamond Dyes.

"I have since used Diamond Dyes for both tinting and dyeing. They do either equally well. I am not an expert dyer but I never have a failure with Diamond Dyes. They seem to be made so they always go on smoothly and evenly. They never spot, streak or run; and friends never know the things I dye with Diamond Dyes are redyed at all!"

Poland Is Land of Hospitality

After all, interesting as sightseeing and street-loitering are in Poland, my greatest joy was in knowing Poles. They are the most courteous people I've ever met, with the most beautiful manners. I don't mean that I noticed this among the aristocracy only; I don't mean that I myself met always with such politeness, from all classes of people. They're courteous to each other—the men take off their hats to other men, a woman shakes hands with a roomful of women guests at afternoon tea, a child of four or five speaks to all the children and all the nurses when he leaves a group in the park. And along with their courtesy they're hospitable to the nth degree. The slightest excuse and they invite you to dinner or tea, or to stay at their homes. I could have spent another fifteen months in Poland, if I'd accepted all my invitations. In one little town I expected to stay three or four hours, just between trains, but found my hostess had made plans for four days. When I spoke of leaving a country house on Thursday, the niece exclaimed, "Thursday! But you've just come! My aunt expects you to stay a fortnight, if not a month. I'm here for a month, and some of the guests for two." They've made hospitality a fine art; they thank you for coming till you half feel you're doing the favor instead of receiving it.

I think one reason they are model hosts is because Poles are modest. My introductions told, of course, something about me, but alas! they told me little or nothing about my hosts. Often and often I wished I didn't have to ask so many questions, that they'd voluntarily tell me more. Eight months after I'd been her guest, I happened to learn that my first hostess had been a pupil of Mme. Curie-Sklodowska in Paris, her most promising pupil, the discoverer of radium said; again that she'd done some notable work in mathematics; it was only because it came up in another connection that she casually referred to her translation of Shakespeare's sonnets (into Polish!). If you had such records and a foreign guest, would you keep absolutely still about your achievements?

Nor was she an exception to the rule. I arrived in Warsaw to find that a friend had arranged for me to live in a Polish household, Pani L.'s (Pani means Mrs. and Pan Mr. as nearly as I can put it in England.) I had a pleasant talk with her and answered her questions about my writing and my plans for Poland; of herself not a word. But when later in the day I gave this address at the bank and the American Embassy and to half a dozen persons, they asked, "Is it Suzanna L.? Are you living in the house of the Pani L., who writes poetry as well as novels?" And I was, though I had to ask her point-blank to confirm it.—Grace Humphrey, in "Poland the Unexplored."

Found... Started By Canadian Authors

Toronto.—At a meeting here of representatives of Canadian letters and the drama, as well as the sister arts of music, painting and sculpture, the Canadian Authors' Foundation has been established.

The object is to provide a perpetual fund for the benefit of any man or woman of distinction in Canadian letters, or their dependents." This was the intention of a small group who originated the scheme, who sought to commemorate the debt Canadian letters owe to Dr. Charles G. D. Roberts, whose literary jubilee since he published "Orion" 50 years ago has just been celebrated.

The board of governors will consist of the presidents of the Royal Society of Canada, the Canadian Authors' Association, the National Council of Women, the Association of Canadian Clubs, the secretary, and also Sir Andrew MacPhail, Justice Edouard Fabre Surveyer, Duncan Campbell Scott, Dr. George Wrong and Judge Emily Murphy.

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

What came before: As Captain Jimmy and his new found friend Jed Stone race away from the Chinese bandits in an old railway locomotive, Jed tells how his brother had been captured by outlaws, and of his vain search.

As Jed told me the story of how his brother had soundly thrashed the bandit chief and how they had carried him away into the hills in revenge, it suddenly occurred to me that these outlaws were the same band from which I had recently escaped.

We were so interested in our plans for getting him free, that I failed to notice another train rounding the curve until its whistle shrieked a warning. To make matters worse, we were backing up, instead of running forward and our string of freight cars would soon be reduced to matchwood between the heavy locomotives.

The brakes would never stop in time—I switched to full speed ahead, in hope that I could lessen the impact. The wheels spun and hissed, and it seemed that our locomotive must jump the track.

Too late! There was an ear-splitting crash and it just felt as if some big giant had kicked the locomotive right out from under us. It seemed as if she were going to turn right over, but somehow it held to the rails.

Looking back we saw a wreck indeed. The engine had plowed into the rear of our train of ten freight cars. The first three were a mass of splinters, the next two were cross ways on the track. The engine itself, after causing all that trouble had jumped the track, and now lay on its side in the ditch steaming and fussing at a great rate.

The tracks looked as if a cyclone had just passed by. Rails were torn up, and ties scattered around. The crew had luckily jumped, and, taking no further chances, promptly fled.

"I guess we had better get out of here before someone blames us for all this", chuckled Jed Stone. "First thing you'll know some one or other will want their old engine back"—let's go."

It seemed best to leave the freight cars right there. As quickly as I could, I uncoupled the engine, climbed into the cab and opened the throttle. After roaring along for a few miles an idea occurred to Jed Stone.

"How about cutting the telegraph wires?"

True enough, in a few minutes the crew might decide to return and telegraph ahead, and then there'll be a whole parcel of Chinese troops waiting for us, asking where we found the engine. We slowed down to a stop. In a moment I climbed out and cut the wires.

We were still in enemy territory, many, many, miles from Shanghai. Somehow we must get to our airplane and get going. Every moment's delay meant just that much less chance of rescuing Jed Stone's brother, Guy, alive. On and on I pushed the old engine, as fast as I dared.

The country was flat and uninteresting. Most of the timber had been cut away years before, and the ground almost barren of vegetation. Mile after mile passed by, and after a time we began to see an occasional soldier walking along the tracks. Then a large wood began to appear on our left, stretching away to the horizon.

Census for 13 States Indicates That Women Are Plentiful in Cities, Scarce in Country

Washington—Women who want to get married should go to the farms, and men looking for spouses should go to the cities.

Detailed census reports compiled for 12 states scattered over the union show that in proportion to the number of men, women are plentiful in cities and scarce in rural territory.

The report shows also that in the western states, once predominantly male to an extent where a little school teacher had the countryside at her feet, the sexes in recent decades are more nearly even in numbers.

Trends somewhat startling appear from some of the figures. The number of divorced women is listed as twice that of divorced men in several states—but indicating merely merely that a divorced woman has less chance, or desire, to remarry, than does a divorced man.

Widows similarly are more numerous than widowers. It is indicated that divorcees are relatively as numerous in rural sections as in the cities. Divorcees are shown also to be popular among negroes.

Around 60 per cent. of the population over 15 years of age is married.

More and More Wheat

Philadelphia Ledger: The wheat farmers of the world seem to be riding directly into enforced deflation. Lands laid idle by war have now begun to resume their wheat production of fifteen years ago. Lands taken over for wheat during and immediately after the war to fill the gap left by deserted fields are producing at the usual rate. The result is more wheat than the world can consume. Only two solutions are in sight. Either new markets for wheat must be opened up—new uses found for it or new consumers for it as foodstuff—or production must be curtailed. The new markets have not yet been found; they do not seem to be available over any of the visible horizons. Reduced production appears the one feasible remedy.

Wisdom

My heart has learned of shadowings,
The loveliness of little things,
And all the wisdom that I know
Is wisdom of the stars, the snow,
Of flowers and of winds that seek,
And tiny lives that do not speak.
A deeper speech there is than word,
A sweeter sound in sounds unheard.
And thoughts beyond the reach of art,
I find, and never can impart.
The swift, dim laughter of the brooks
Cannot be copied into books—
A butterfly that swerves and sways,
Lifts up my heart in secret ways;
And in the tremor of a leaf
And in the song, so far, so brief,
Of birds at twilight, dwells a tone
Beyond all octaves ever known.
Shadows that tremble, clouds that pass
Reflections in a broken glass.
These mould our lives. Reality
Begins and ends in mystery.

The "Old Hen" Is Not Tough If Properly Cooked

We often hear the expression "It's as tough as an old hen," and to many the old hen doe not make an attractive dish because very frequently it is not cooked properly. But it can be cooked to make a most tempting dinner for the family. Next time you intend to have a two-year-old chicken try steaming it a couple of hours instead of boiling it in a large quantity of water. If you have not a regular steamer put it on the rack in the roasting pan, all stuffed and ready, add about an inch of water and cover closely, or put the fowl in a colander and set in a kettle with water in the bottom, cover closely and allow to steam. After that, if it was not stuffed before, you can do so now. Then roast if desired, basting it frequently with the liquor it has been steamed in, browning it quickly, then cooking gently over a low heat until tender.

Another way to prepare it is to steam it, then cut the fowl into pieces, flour each piece and brown in some of the chicken fat in a frying pan. Cover with the water it has been steamed in, add seasoning and bake or cook gently on stove, till tender. The gravy can be varied by using in it tomatoes, green or red peppers, chopped fine, browned onions, celery seed or celery salt or mushrooms.

TWILIGHT HOUR STORY

"About Chicks and Other Little Friends"
Chapter 22

Billy had been back home from his holiday to the city for a long time now and he was pleased because the chicks all remembered him again. So did Topsy and the barn cat's kitties. Billy just stayed around their box very quietly in the barn for a long time the next morning and this is what they did.

Pretty soon one little black puss who looked just like his mother peaked out from behind a door, and as soon as it saw he was still there back it popped out of sight. It looked so cute, but he could not get a good look at it for it was gone so quickly. Billy thought, I'll get you, you little rascal," so he took a long straw and walked over to the door then ran the end of the straw over the floor where he knew the kitten could see it. Back and forth he ran it, back and forth, back and forth. Then all at once out popped a little black paw to grab it. But back it went again as quickly as could be to hide. However, Billy just kept on and soon out came the paw and part of his funny black head, and this time it got the straw from Billy, for he wasn't holding it very tight, and before he could grab that piece of straw back again the little black kitty had run off with it in its mouth. Oh, it looked so funny. But it didn't keep it very long, for it soon found the straw wouldn't move because there was no Billy to make it go. Well, first thing Billy knew it was back again and, just think, this time it was so near he could put his hand on it and wasn't it a dear, soft little thing? He picked it up so very carefully. I guess all at once it remembered who Billy was and when he picked it up he could feel and hear it purring. So they played there for a long time. I said "they" because all the others came out, too, as soon as they saw Blacky was having a good time, and it wasn't long before they were on his shoulder and biting his fingers with their little teeth which, of course, didn't hurt a bit, and doing all sorts of thi[illegible] then when they had played so ha[illegible]at they got pretty tired, all at once they cuddled up together in their box and in two winks they were sound asleep. That didn't take long, did it?

When he came in the house he told Mamma what a good time he had been having, and talking about kittens made him think of Fluffy, the house cat persian, whose cushion was empty on her old chair in the corner. "Do you know, Mamma, I haven't seen Fluffy for a long time, have you? I haven't seen her all day."

"No, now that you speak of it, dear I haven't seen her around either. Perh[illegible] you better call her and hunt aroun[illegible] to see where she is."

Billy called and called but Fluffy didn't come. I wonder where she is. Perhaps you might find ut next time if we can hunt her. I believe I know where she is.

Sunday School Lesson

June 7. Lesson X—Jesus Crucified—Luke 23: 33-44. Golden Text—He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.—Isaiah 53: 5.

I. JESUS CRUCIFIED, 23: 33.
II. A PRAYER FOR FORGIVENESS, 23: 34.
III. THE LOVE OF CHRIST, 23: 35-45.
IV. FAITH IN THE FATHER, 23: 46.

I. JESUS CRUCIFIED, 23: 33.

Regarded simply as a crucifixion, the death of Jesus did not differ from hundreds of other crucifixions in Palestine and elsewhere. That which makes the death of Jesus unique was the spirit in which he died and the consequent results of his death. The Evangelist here has a double task to perform; he has to tell us what happened, but, in so doing, he has also to make us feel the inwardness, the real meaning of the story. He has to make us feel that this was not only a crucifixion; it was Jesus who was crucified. This was something altogether different from the crucifixion of ordinary wrongdoers, as one of them himself recognized, vs. 40-42. We are to understand further that the malice of man reached the uttermost limits in the taunting of Jesus as he hung upon the Cross, vs. 35-38. Jesus himself was unchanged through it all; his love to man never failed (v. 34), nor his faith in God, v. 46. The scene is brought into relation with ancient prophecy and with the eternal purposes of God by clear references to the twenty-second psalm, v. 34f. The eternal or cosmic significance of Jesus' death is brought out by the assertion that when he was dying, the sun swooned in the sky and could give no light, and that at his death the Temple curtain was split in two.

II. A PRAYER FOR FORGIVENESS, 23: 34.

Strictly, it would seem, the Roman soldiers rather than the Jews are intended in the prayer, but that Jesus did "forgive" the Jews is plain from many sides. This indeed was his great victory that their changing attitude to him could not change his attitude to them; that not even treachery, repudiation, scorn, hatred and the worst that malice could do, could make him cease to love. The Cross is the supreme illustration and proof of a divine love that nothing can change. If sin abounds, grace yet more abounds. When people have "gloried" or "boasted" in the cross of Christ, we understand them to mean that through the death of Jesus, God has brought home to their hearts his love whic all their sin and shame had neither dimmed nor diminished.

III. THE LOVE OF CHRIST, 23: 35-45.

V. 351. These taunts may have been shallow and thoughtless, yet they present a real problem to thoughtful minds. Jesus had proclaimed the love and sovereign care of God for all his children. God numbers the very hairs of our heads; not a sparrow falls to the ground without his cognizance. How much more will be care for his children? He who feeds the ravens and clothes the lily may surely be trusted to provide for his children. This, then, was the God in whom Jesus had trusted, and with what result? He hung upon the Cross, helpless, deserted, mocked. Did not his fate contradict his teaching? But the care and Providence of God that watch over his children do not mean that he will keep them from all suffering and all painful experiences. The Christian must always trust utterly to God—even though God call him to "take up his Cross." The Christian must not ask to be saved from all suffering, but by faith to be made triumphant over all suffering. We are to be saved, not from the world, but in the midst of the worst the world can do.

V. 45. "The veil of the Temple" is the curtain that screened off the Holy of Holies. Only on one day in the year, the great Day of Atonement, did the High Priest enter the Holy of Holies—and alone. The effect of the death of Jesus was to throw open the way of access into the most holy presence of God to all who came to him through Jesus. The rending of the veil is, therefore, in all probability to be taken symbolically. It is a splendid picture or image of the gospel of Jesus. It corresponds with the [illegible]nging that the Temple should be "a house of prayer for all nations." Believers from all nations, even the simplest and humblest, have now [illegible]ss to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh," Heb. 10: 19, 20.

IV. FAITH IN THE FATHER, 23: 46.

V. 46. Jesus dies with the word "Father" and a quotation from Psalm 31: 5 upon his lips. The Cross has not alienated his love for man nor his utter faith in God. This was the victory whereby he overcame the world, even his faith.

"Truth and beauty are a hard quest, but what else is worth seeking?"—John Galsworthy.

"Don't you think [illegible]sure Smith, the poet, has an interestingly mournful expression?"

"Sure: I wonder if it is caused by dyspepsia due to over eating or anaemia due to lack of food."

What New York Is Wearing

BY ANNABELLE WORTHINGTON

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern.

3058

Many a little girl sighs for a bolero dress, such as her elder sister wears.

And here's her desire fulfilled. A dress with a separate bolero that is the cutest ever. The neckline finishes with a collar caught with a tab at the centrefront. Modish pleating trims the edge of the bolero, sleeves and skirt. In its place, if you like, a bias binding may be used in a contrasting color.

Isn't the skirt smart in box-plait effect at the front?

And it's so easily made and so inexpensive to copy it exactly.

It is cheery and practical in plaided gingham in yellow and brown with yellow pique collar.

Style No. 3058 is designed for girls of 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years.

Linen, pique, dimity, shantung, printed linen, rayons and plain, self-striped or printed broadcloth make up lovely in this model.

Size 8 requires 2⅞ yards 35-inch with ½ yard 35-inch contrasting.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Enclose 20c in patterns as you want. Enclose 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number, and address your order to Wilson Pattern Service, 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto.

Woods and Birds

The sky was clear—amazingly clear. The sun struck and splintered upon every mountain head and shoulder, but gathered into shimmering pools at the bottoms of the high valleys which swung between the crests, the thrilling light, unspeakably translucent, darkening the pine and cedar forests to a bronzy black against the snow.

These wooded areas were native forests, but they left you feeling that you were riding through the most beautifully kept of parks. The low bushy trees stood on plotted slopes that were constantly mowed by the scythe of the sun, and so raked by the winds that, where the snow had melted and left the bare ground free, you saw neither underbrush nor slashings, but only broken rock and boulders strewn about the clean-swept lawns. . . .

And here for the first time on the journey we had a warm day and signs of spring: patches of tender green close against the sun-touched boulders, spicy, resinous odors from the evergreens, and flocks of birds—juncos, stellar jays, and Rocky Mountain bluebirds. Only those who have seen the blue of this bluebird can conceive of it as belonging to the earth, so ethereal is it, so bodyless does it seem to float along. Had this been my first vision of the bird (I had seen him the winter before in the California desert), our trip for the day had ended where that little flock crossed our trail.—Dallas Lore Sharp, in "The Better Country."

Too Many Names

When an English child was born in Paris recently the parents were surprised to learn that its name had to be chosen from an official list of "permitted" Christian names, and that names outside the list were banned.

They protested—but there is a strong case for a censorship of names, as many unfortunates realise. Their parents had more enthusiasm than consideration, and gave them names like "Mafeking" or "Mesopotamia."

There might also be some limit to the number of Christian names. In one case, which was revealed at Somerset House a few months ago, a woman was named Ann Bertha Cecilia Diana Emily Fanny Gertrude Hypatia Ines Jane Kate Louisa Maud Nort Ophelia Quince Rebecca Starkey Teresa Ulysses Venus Winifred Xenophon Yetta Zenus Pepper—one name for each letter of the alphabet.—"Answers."

Observatory to Help Pilots

Tokyo.—On the summit of Mt. Fuji, Japan's most sacred mountain, a complete meteorological observatory will be constructed this summer, which will be of special value, it is said, in giving information to airplane pilots. During the last winter a small staff of natural scientists remained on the peak in a temporary observatory. Snowbound most of the time, they received fresh food and mail dropped from airplanes. As none of the present observatories are located more than 9840 feet above sea level, the one on Mt. Fuji will be the highest in Japan, 12,346 feet in altitude. Snow covers the mountain for almost ten months of the year.—The Christian Science Monitor.

WHAT IS A MARSUPIAL?

A marsupial is a species of mammal which carries its young in a pouch under its belly. The kangaroos are the leading members of this family. The opossum is the only North American marsupial.—Animal Life.

Metal salved from the wreck of the R 101 is being taken to Sheffield to be melted down and re-used, probably for domestic cutlery and household utensils.

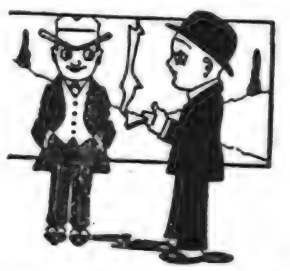
Fight Against V. D. Menace

Headway Has Been Made Against These Diseases, Doctor Says



Need for continued public education in the control of Venereal Disease and a review of the struggle against these diseases during the past eleven years is presented by Dr. Gordon Bates in an editorial in the Canadian Public Health Journal current issue.

That which has been accomplished is indicated, the doctor believes, by figures of survey conducted in Toronto and Winnipeg. "The incidence shown in these two cities is lower than that in any American city surveyed as yet. In addition we have a record of standard venereal disease control legislation on the statute books of every province except Quebec, which has a law in this regard peculiar to the province. Venereal Disease clinics, one hundred and two altogether, have been established in all of the provinces and several hundred thousands persons have been reported as having been brought under treatment. In addition a great deal of public education has been carried on by means of the lecturer, the moving picture, the pamphlet and last but not least the active venereal disease clinic.

It is extremely difficult in the absence of [illegible]per edic surveys to arrive at an opinion as to what effect this has been accomplished. The general opinion is that little has resulted so far as the control of gonorrhoea is concerned but that syphilis is decreasing. The annual report of the standing committee on veneral diseases of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council bears out this opinion. General paralysis of the insane which previously increased after all wars, since the Great War has decreased in incidence in our asylums. Routine Wasserman reports, where they are available, show a steady decrease in the incidence of hospitalized syphilis. One cannot but conjecture that in the absence of the co-ordinated plan which came into being immediately at the close of the war, conditions would have been much worse.

"There are gaps in the present scheme. For example, venereal disease in rural areas and some urban areas as well is not properly dealt with largely because of the lack of adequate general health machinery. The development of the County Health Unit program may be relied upon to correct this situation to a degree. The routine Wasserman test is not applied as generally as it should be either in hospital, in general practice or in the inspection of immigrants. The control of gonorrhoea, both in Canada and in other countries, seems to be as difficult as ever. The solution of this problem seems to lie largely in public education.

"While satisfactory progress has been made in dealing with the situation, we should continue to check our results from time to time with a view to constantly improving our methods. Toronto is arranging for another survey in May of this year. The lessons learned from such periodic investigations should be invaluable."

"Do you believe in the recall of judges?"

"You bet, after losing a horse race by a rank decision."

At last he had got a speaking part: when the tragedian uttered the words, "It is the end," he had to say in a hollow voice, "It is." He practised his part assiduously, until he could throw into it the utmost feeling. Then the night arrived, and everything was going fine; he heard the words, "It is the end," and took up his cue. "Is it?" he said.

A Synthetic Use for Wheat

Calgary Herald: Just as aniline dyes and different medicinal preparations have been secured from coal tar and fine rayon fabrics from wood pulp, so is it possible that wheat might produce equal surprises. Among those suggested are a non-intoxicating beverage, a new fuel element to improve the quality of gasoline, and a cross with some other grain to form a new product. The vigorous National Research Council in Ottawa might devote its attention to the suggestion.

Faithful Even in Death

For 18 years "Luck," a large black dog, was the constant companion of Victoria, Queen of Sweden. The queen and the big dog walking beside her became familiar figures in many European capitals. During the queen's last illness in Rome the faithful dog seemed to sense that the end of his mistress was near and he refused to leave the sick chamber. After the queen's death "Luck" refused to eat, became ill and soon died.

Static Forecasts Storms

One use of the radio which materially aids the farmer consists in listening to its static; for he has learned that he can tell more quickly and accurately of approaching storms by it than by any other means. Judging the volume and intervals of static on his set, he discovers whether storms are approaching or travelling in an opposite direction, and he plans accordingly.

Song

I have seen the cloud of fire where the eagle's eyes
Were lighted; I have seen its shadows on
The wild glades where the grasses lurched and swayed
In wind from the flight of the dawn.

I have seen the glade of molten moonlight where
The fawn's eyes joined the stars in a hidden pool—
When the cloud of fire was ashes and the wind
On the eagle's eyes was cool.
—Glenn Ward Dresbach, in "The Wind in the Cedars.

For TEETHING troubles

FUSSY, fretful . . . . of course babies are uncomfortable at teething time! And mothers are worried because of the little upsets which come so suddenly then. But there's one sure way to comfort a restless, teething child. Castoria — made especially for babies and children! It's perfectly harmless, as the formula on the wrapper tells you. It's mild in taste and action. Yet it rights little upsets with a never-failing effectiveness.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given to tiny infants—as often as there is need. In cases of colic and similar disturbances, it is invaluable. But it has every-day uses all mothers should understand. A coated tongue calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever older children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset, a more liberal dose of this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Doctors prescribe it.

GYPROC makes the change

A BIGGER HOUSE inside the same four walls sounds impossible of accomplishment—but it only sounds that way.

Gyproc is a fire-resistant wallboard made from gypsum rock. It comes in sheets 4 to 10 feet long, 4 feet wide and ⅜ of an inch thick. It nails and cuts just as easily as lumber and with a minimum of waste. It is used for making inside walls, ceilings and partitions.

It has structural strength, insulation value, is draught and vermin-proof and costs very little.

Gyproc that does not burn is exactly the material to use for it needs no decoration when panelled yet is an excellent base for Alabastine, Gyptex or wallpaper.

Get a Gyproc direction sheet from your dealer or write us for the FREE booklet, "Building and Remodelling with Gyproc". 376

We notice an odd dog running at large. Will somebody please tell he constable?

Mrs. Jane Waldie of Hamilton visited her grandson, Mr. Kenneth McIlwrick, Streetsville. She spent the whole day—Tuesday—with him and is in splendid health.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Broadbear Miss Elva and Reginald motored to London to visit their son, Percy, going on to Sarnia to visit their son Dennis, over the holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. PeterGreig, Carman and Donald Greig, of Arthur, and Miss Ruth Greig, of Toronto, spent the 24th with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Greig.

The town softball team defeated Trinity Church players on Tuesday evening. The score 26—15 showed the teams not very evenly matched but the Anglicans may turn the tables in the next game.

Mr. Joseph C. Thomas, Toronto has graduated with honours at the Faculty of Medicine, University of Toronto. He is a Streetsville boy. Mr. John Brannen has also passed his sixth year exam in medicine

Next Saturday it is expected that about three hundred people who spend the summer at Franklin Island on Georgian Bay, will hold a picnic at the farm of Mr. J. D. Steen, near Streetsville. They are friends of the Christie family.

Rev. P. T. Meek, B.A., of Long Branch, has been extended a call to the pastorate of Quaker Hill and Chalmers Presbyterian Church at Uxbridge, at $2000 a year and four weeks vacation, free manse & glebe The call will be dealt with at the next meeting of Toronto Presbytery at Streetsville on June 2nd.

July 4—10 has been set by John Willis, Warden, as Old Home Week for Peel County, when thousands of former residents of the County will return from the United States and other parts to spend a few days among the scenes of their childhood. Nearly every county in Ontario will have an Old Home Week some time this summer. The Streetsville people should bear this event in mind and prepare for visitors — and besides keep your premises looking at their best, so you will be proud of them when the visitors arrive.

Mr. E.J. Rutledge has again been appointed weed inspector for this district and would advise all property holders to cut their weeds before they go to seed. He has the power to go onto any property and cut the weeds where the owner or tenant neglects or refuses to do so—and the costs will be added to the taxes. Reeve hope and Mr. Rutledge were present at the meeting of the Weed Inspectors at Brampton last week.

Banting Receives Flavelle Medal

Royal Society Accords High Honor to Insulin Discoverer

Toronto.—Acclaimed by the highest circle of literary and scientific men in Canada assembled from coast to coast at the 50th meeting of the Royal Society of Canada (May 20-22), Dr. F. G. Banting, discoverer of insulin, received their greatest honor when he was awarded the Flavelle medal by the Royal Society of Canada.

The presentation to Dr. Banting by the president of the society, Dr. Charles Camsell, Canada's Deputy Minister of Mines, climaxed a day which stood out as momentous in educational progress.

Before groups of the elite of Canadian scientists and literateurs, history, physics, chemistry and allied subjects had been discussed. Men whose names are household words in the Dominion and who have attained international fame and brought to this, the 50th meeting of the society, their reports upon the progress they had made in their particular fields during the past year.

Subjects ranged from the history of American aborigines to the newly discovered method of aerial survey; from the first tiny bit of fossil to the eccentricities of yeast; from serums and anti-toxins, to the latest literary outpourings of well-known poets.

Briefly Dr. Camsell outlined Dr. Banting's career. He told of his war service, his winning of the Military Medal, and his rise from a private to captain; he outlined his first efforts in the field of research and his eventual discovery of insulin, the greatest individual effort to benefit mankind in the last half century.

Other Awards.

Dr. Adjutor Rivard, judge of the Quebec Court of Appeal, well known as a Canadian writer, was not present to receive the Lorne Pierce medal which goes annually to the Canadian "who shall have accomplished in imaginative or critical literature some achievement of special significance and conspicuous merit." His prize was accepted for him by M. l'abbe Yvanhoe Caron.

The third prize presented was the J. B. Tyrrell medal to Lawrence Burpee, editor of the Canadian Geographic Journal and contributor to many outstanding geographical and historical works. Mr. Burpee was the founder of the Canadian Historical Society and was an eminent authority on Canadian history, Dr. Camsell pointed out.

Urges Mineral Exchange.

Sir Robert Falconer, who as vice-president, will become the next president of the society, presided as Dr. Camsell gave his presidential address, in which he strongly advocated intra-Empire exchange of minerals as one of the greatest Empire bonds.

No nation had such vast areas of mineral-bearing territory as lie within the bounds of the Empire, Dr. Camsell pointed out, and a free exchange of minerals between Great Britain and the Dominions was necessary, in his opinion, for the industrial and economic security of the Empire.

Canada's contribution was of inestimable value from the imperial point of view inasmuch as it represented a greater variety of mineral resources than any other one section of the Empire.

He believed that the strength of the Empire as a whole, in mineral supplies, was not generally appreciated by the people of the Empire and was not as well known as it should be even to those concerned with the administration of Empire affairs.

"If this strength is contrasted with the weakness of each unit of the Empire, and were that unit to stand alone, there would be a greater appreciation of the value of Empire cohesion and of the encouragement of intra-imperial trade in minerals and mineral products," he said. "To my mind the mineral situation presents one of the strongest arguments, other than a sentimental one, for the working out and adoption of such policies as were proposed at the recent Imperial Conference."

Of the world's political units, the British Empire came nearer to being self-sufficient, he said, warning that no division of the Empire could stand alone, and that any attempt to interfere with the pooling of all-British mineral wealth must necessarily leave the United States in the most favorable position with regard to native supplies of necessary ores and metals.

While placing coal, iron ore and petroleum as the first important requirements for Canada, Dr. Camsell expressed the belief that in these Canada would in the distant future be able to fill her own requirements.

Fighting Disease

Toronto.—Striking proof of the value of public health departments and the preventability of much disease is found in the almost complete conquest of typhoid fever in large cities. This city for example has achieved an almost negligible typhoid death rate through the chlorination of water and the pasteurization of milk, while in rural Ontario, in the so-called "healthy" countryside, the death rate is many times as great from lack of these health conserving methods.

12c Duty Charge on Strawberries

Affords Protection for the Canadian Grower

Ottawa—The value of strawberries for duty purposes was fixed at 12c a pound when entered under the intermediate or general tariff, the weight of the package to be included in the weight for duty. Announcement to this effect was made on May 20th by Hon. C. H. Cahan, acting Minister of National Revenue.

The above value is to apply at the point of production, and where such a product is exported directly to Canada from a diversion or intermediate point, the value for duty shall be 12 cents a pound plus all charges thereon to such intermediate point from the point of production.

The same rate shall apply on strawberries shipped on consignment.

The fixing of this value to prevent dumping has been awaited with great interest by growers of strawberries in Canada whose goods will presently be on the market.

Girl, 16, Owes Life To Her Faithful Dog

Edmonton, Alta. — Lost in the treacherous swamp lands, near Grassland, Alberta, Frances Sutton, 16, owes her life to a faithful dog. Missing a trail, the young girl, accompanied by her dog, soon was hopelessly lost, and as night came plunged far into swamp country.

Exhausted, Frances three times fell into crook beds, and the dog, unnamed in a report to provincial police headquarters here, dragged her out, and when day light came guided her to a farm home on the edge of the bad lands.

"Only for my dog I would have been dead," she told attendants at the Athabaska Hospital where she was taken to recover from her hazardous experience.

2 Months' Butter Imports of Canada 2,147,494 lbs.

Ottawa—Total imports of butter from all countries into Canada from February 1 to April 30, 1931, were 2,147,494 pounds. The rates of duty collected were 8,462 lbs. at 14 cents per lb.; 57,176 lbs. at 12 cents per lb.; 398,440 lbs. at 8 cents per lb. (less 10 per cent.), and 1,683,416 lbs. at one cent per lb.

New Zealand butter was imported to the total of 286,440 lbs., and Australian 1,683,416 lbs.

Lancashire Seeking New Industries

Manchester, Eng.—A forward step toward Lancashire's economic recovery has been taken in the establishment of the Lancashire Industrial Development Council.

The objects of the council are to bring new industries to Lancashire and to extend those now existing. The council will collect information regarding sites, vacant industrial properties, power and transport facilities, labor supply, and the availability of raw materials and marketing, and it will seek to make improvements in all these directions.

Glider Being Built By Two Boy Scouts

Sudbury, Ont.—The first glider to be built in northern Ontario is under construction here by two Boy Scouts, John Haight and Gordon Bull. The boys hope to have the machine finished early in July. The glider is being built entirely by the boys, even the metal work will be their own handiwork. It is of the Farnham-Norcross standard glider plan, with a wing span of 31 feet, fuselage length of 17 feet six inches and cord of five feet six inches, with standard aerial controls.

Canada and U.S. Ratify Treaty on Halibut Fishing

Montreal—Canada and the United States have exchanged ratifications of the new halibut treaty which is now in force, and is a revision of the 1923 treaty governing halibut fishing on the Pacific Coast. The new treaty gives increased powers to the International Fisheries Commission to control halibut fishing in the North Pacific.

It also stipulates a two weeks' extension of the closed season, which will now run from November 1 to February 15.

The International Fisheries Commission is given powers to divide the waters covered by the treaty into areas, and to limit the catch in each area.

Rochester, N.Y.—Two reductions in the price of milk followed in quick succession last week, dropping it to the lowest level in 10 years, 8 cents a quart.

Personal Contact Vital Factor, Says Prince of Wales

Most Effective in Trade with People of Latin America

BRITAIN IS LAGGING

London—The Prince of Wales, in an address which was broadcast from London last Thursday in an international hook-up, declared that the cordial co-operation of British industry, salesmanship, shipping and finance was essential in furthering British trade with South America.

"It seems to me," he said, "that the most important point is to get as many entries as possible in our national order book, and to allocate the work to individual firms once that is done."

Reverting to the question of tariffs, to which he referred in an address last week, the Prince said:

"Where tariffs make importation impossible, the only course left open, as a last report, is the establishment of local assembly plant, which will at least contain a certain supply of machinery and raw materials from this country."

The Prince spoke for half an hour to a distinguished gathering of persons high in commercial and political life, at a dinner of the London executive committee of the British Empire Trade Exposition at Buenos Aires.

He also recommended "further industrial grouping and unification, particularly as regards salesmanship and representation."

"I would like the keyword of this evening to be 'co-operation,'" he said.

"With the people of Latin America, personal touch counts for even more than it does with the Anglo-Saxon. Wherever I went I found the greatest volume of the most valuable business was being done by those who had taken the trouble to establish a personal contact with their South American customers.

Supplying Yesterday's Goods

"Unfortunately, nowadays," he added, "the impression seems to exist, not only in Argentina, but in the whole of South America, that our manufacturing genius isn't entirely up-to-date; that we are supplying the goods of yesterday, while our foreign competitors are supplying the goods of to-day.

"From my own observation I have found that that impression is to some degree a correct one."

The exhibition, the Prince said, was a "fine effort in advertising," and it showed that "we have begun to realize its importance." To follow up, he suggested the establishment of a permanent British building in Buenos Aires.

"I am convinced," he said, "that by a closer study of these markets and by the exercise of more imagination we can go our competitors one better and supply the goods of to-morrow."

At the outset of his address the Prince assured the company that he was "not going to say unpalatable things.

"Before I go any further I'd like to reassure you by telling you I have no intention of spoiling this pleasant evening by disagreeable words," he said. "I have a reputation nowadays of saying unpalatable things. When I rise I see long faces and signs of consternation every time I get up to speak.

Salesmanship and Representation

"I am sure that anyone who has visited South America will endorse another thing which I have emphasized often, and that is the necesisty of further industrial grouping and unification, particularly as regards salesmanship and representation."

The Prince also called for closer co-operation between British bankers and British industry, and, referring to tariff walls abroad, suggested that manufacturers study these restrictions and, if necessary, modify their products, "in order to bring them under a more favorable classification."

"I am very glad to see," he said, "that Chambers of Commerce and other trade organizations are already taking steps in that direction.

"I often wonder," he added, "if we have the proper co-operation, and whether, in many ways, our efforts are not too individualistic and independent of one another.

"Isn't there room for a closer and more intimate contact between London finance and industry, in order that the bankers, on the one hand, may know fully the wishes and possibilities of the industrialists, and the manufacturers, on the other hand, may be quite clear as to the conditions under which the necessary finances will be available.

An Old Maxim

There is an old maxim which says that one hero makes a thousand, and it is an undeniable fact that the greatest number ever counted begins at the very beginning with ONE.

WITH THE LONE SCOUTS

This week brings news of a keen bunch of Lone Scouts who are well on the way to the formation of a Lone Patrol at St. Davids, and we believe that they have visions of a Troop of their own sometime in the future.

We are always glad to hear that the Scouting "infection" has taken hold of boys in various parts of the Province, because the more Scouts we have in this country the better it will be for the whole community in years to come.

It is with very great regret that we record the unfortunate death of one of our Lone Scout Comrades. One night, recently, Lone Scout Theodore Dixon of Unionville was riding down the main street of that town when the Hydro power failed and plunged the town in darkness. Theodore accidently collided with another boy cyclist and was thrown to the ground, suffering severe injuries, from which he died the next day. Although he had only recently become a member of the 2nd Ontario Lone Scout Troop, Theodore had shown much keenness, and the Staff of the Lone Scout Department very much regret his passing, and offer their very sincere sympathy to all his relatives and friends.

Sometimes we Lone Scouts are inclined to deplore the fact that we are not members of an ordinary Troop, taking part in the activities at Troop Headquarters and associating with lots of other Scouts in their weekly meetings.

Now that the Summer is with us again, however, we Lonies once again come into our own,—not that the Winter months are any less interesting from a Scouting point of view! For after all it is a regrettable fact that many of the city Scouts are "Scouts" only in name, being very far from experienced in real Scout Craft.

For instance, who ever heard of a real Scout working with a gang? No, Sir! a real Scout's job is a Lone job, on which he has to rely absolutely on himself and on his own knowledge and ability.

And who ever heard of a real Scout who tracked and trailed and trekked, and hunted and camped in a Troop Headquarters? No, Sir again! The natural environment of a true Scout is out of doors, and that's where we Lonies spend most of our time.

So you see, a good Lone Scout really is much better off than his brothers in the towns and cities, but much depends on the individual boy as to whether or not he IS a GOOD Lone Scout, and as such takes advantage of all the facilities, for training his mind and body, with which he is surrounded.

He must first of all make himself STRONG. In Body, so that he can endure the hardships of the Trail and be of use to others. (A weakling is never much help!). In Mind, so that he can remember the things that he observes; in order that he can control his body and so that he may have the will to do what otherwise may seem impossible. In Character, so that all with whom he comes in contact will trust him and so that he can live up to the high standard set by the wild things which are his constant companions.

And then he must be practical. A Scout is no good unless he can cook his own food, sew on buttons or patch his pants. Make a sleeping place or build a bridge. Bind up a wound or use an axe. (Incidently have you made your "LONE SCOUT LIVES HERE" sign yet?)

We want every Lone Scout in Ontario to come up to these standards, so that we can show Canada just what REAL Scouting is. Will you do your share? Do your best, and let us help you, we will be glad to if you will tell us your difficulties.

And if you are not a Scout, and cannot join an existing Troop of Scouts, perhaps you would like to be a Lone Scout? If so, write to The Lone Scout Department, Boy Scouts Association, 330 Bay St., Toronto, Ont., and ask them for particulars. They will be glad to hear from you.

Two Small Islands Are Large Buyers

Ottawa—On the map they appear as two dots at the mouth of the St. Lawrence River—the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, with a total area of 93 square miles and a combined population of 3,918.

During the last fiscal year they ranked ninth among Canada's export customers. They were ahead of seven nations and the whole continent of Australia. The total value of exports to the two small islands during the fiscal year, the Canadian Department of National Revenue announced recently was $11,004,479.

Radio Short-Waves Stop Food Decay
Dairyman's Invention Shows

Soest, Holland.—A discovery has been made, writes a special correspondent in The Christian Science Monitor, in the field of ultra short-wave radio research whereby decay in foodstuffs is obsolutely arrested, according to Robert Pape of Soest, Holland, who has been for many years active in the dairy industry.

The invention, put briefly, consists of an apparatus which generates ultra short waves in the region of 25 centimeters to 1 meter. The waves thus generated form, after about 10 days and within a radius of 20 meters from the machine, an electro-magnetic field, in which no organic product can decompose. The size of this electro-magnetic field is, practically speaking, a globe of about 30,000 cubic meters.

The preserving action of this field penetrates through everything: stone walls, iron, lead, wood, glass and so forth indoors and outdoors, in any atmosphere or temperature.

The cold storage field, which has developed to such a grade of perfection, is said to be highly interested in the new invention. For this new machine, which occupies a space of a few cubic meters and thereby forms a food preserving field of 30,000 cubic meters, uses up only as much electricity as an ordinary 200 candle power electric bulb and the results of this small device are declared to be far better than those of a modern equipped cold storage warehouse, with its expensive machinery, large special buildings and personnel.

The invention, which was received at first with incredulity, has lately caused a great deal of interest, natural scientists both from here and abroad pouring into Mr. Pape's bungalow here, where he is demonstrating the machine.

The correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor has seen food on plates in various parts of the house, in the garret and in the garden, perfectly odorless and undecayed, which had been there for months. There were new potatoes of June, 1930, a little bit discolored, but which could still easily be scraped. There were eggs, broken on a plate, several months ago, a little dried, but not a sign of decay. Eggs in the shell stored in the house on May 23, 1930, were opened and the yolk was beautifully yellow and without odor.

Reports of experiments by outsiders have been published, among them one of Dr. A. Van Raalte, chief of the Amsterdam Meat Inspection Service, on behalf of the Dutch Patent Council.

From these reports it appeared that the acid percentage of milk which had been kept for a fortnight in the electromagnetic field had not increased; that pears, after a number of months, had maintained all the qualities they possessed when placed in the field, and that shrimps, mixed with only 4 per cent. of salt, showed no ammonia development after a fortnight's exposure.

Shaw Says Pidgin English Will Be Future Language

Letchworth, England—"Pidgin English will be the classic English of the future," George Bernard Shaw said in a speech at the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Letchworth Library.

"An Englishman says: 'I am sorry I cannot oblige you.'" Shaw said, "but a Chinaman says: 'No can,' and expresses himself perfectly."

Shaw took exception, ironically, to the Biblical reference to the "blessedness" of the poor. "Until this country becomes determined that it shall never again have a poor man, woman or child in it," he said, "it won't be a country worth living in."

Speaking of libraries and books, Shaw said that it was the British Museum library that had made him a Communist. "And I'll live and die a Communist," he added.

"Books," he said, "had been valuable to him in the study of speech. 'If you made me king of England,' he said, 'I might fall short of the ideal in many ways, but you wouldn't object to me on the ground that my speech was disgraceful. If you made me Archbishop of Canterbury I could get away with the talking part. If you made me Lord Chief Justice I could sentence you to death in a way that would do honor to the occasion. But the most fluent person in his own language is often helpless if he crosses a frontier. I'm a great man here. But when I get on the other side of the Channel I'm less than any porter."

Three Mothers

Three mothers by your cradle stand:
One mother who has given birth,
And one of them is Motherland,
And one of them is Mother Earth;
price,
all,
And two are great and one is small.

Your Mother Earth is strong and dread;
Her shield your sure protection makes;
She spreads her law above your head,
But even while she gives she takes,
Her arm is strong, her word is true,
But she may ask your life of you.

From Mother Earth by toil you wring
Or feast or crust at her caprice,
The shelter for your journeying.
Though brief at best will be the lease.
And at the end she gives you bed
But cares not where your soul has sped.

The Mother who has borne your flesh
Through good or ill will hold you fast,
Will guide you through the world's dark mesh,
And so will save your soul at last,
Three mothers shall you have in all,
And one is great and two are small.

—McLandburgh Wilson.

"You're not listening to what I'm saying," she complained to her husband, who had the newspaper. "Of course I am, dear." "You're not! I asked if you could afford to buy me a $10 hat and you said, 'Certainly, darling.'"

When
are Upset

BABY ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready?

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. Its gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. Its mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria.

Autos Now Navigate Deepest Rivers

Floating automobiles that run on roads in the ordinary way, but are able when necessary to float across rivers, have been built and tested for use in a traveling exhibition of British industries proposed by Capt. Geoffrey Malins of London. Says Dr. E. E. Free in his Week's Science (New York):

"Attached to the side of each automobile are frames and brackets made of the new light metal called 'elektron,' an alloy of magnesium, less than one-half the weight of aluminum.

"Fastened to these brackets are eight air bags of rubberized fabric, four for each side of the car.

"When the expedition wishes to cross a bridgeless river, the elektron framework is put in place, the air bags are attached, and these are pumped up by a bellows arrangement operated by the engine. The car then may be driven into the water under its own power and float on the air bags, with its running-boards level with the water surface.

A TRINITY

From long years of observation and a widely varied experience I have learned much about one great trinity—Faith, Work and Patience. Faith we must have; Work we must do; and Patience we must exercise. Given these three a success fitting to our station is as certain to result as the sun to rise, because in them are all the elements from which the progress of mankind is fashioned.—R.E.H.

HER FAT IS MELTING FAST AWAY

All over the world Kruschen Salts is appealing to girls and women who strive for an attractive, free-from-fat figure that cannot fail to win admiration.

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one-half teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast.

Be sure and do this every morning for "It's the daily dose that takes off the fat." Don't miss a morning.

Kruschen daily means that every particle of poisonous waste matter and harmful acids and gases are expelled from the system.

At the same time the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are toned up and the pure, fresh blood containing Nature's six life-giving salts is carried to every organ, gland, nerve and fibre of the body, and this is followed by "that Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful vivacity and charming figure.

SOME DEFINITE

GAS PROMISES

The Consumers' Gas Co. of Toronto, in connection with the Gas By-Law to be voted on by the ratepayers of Port Credit and Toronto Township, has made certain definite promises, including the following:

1. Work will be started within a few days after the completion of the By-Law.

2. Gas will be supplied in ample quantities at no higher rate than paid by the citizens of Toronto.

3. Not one cent will need to be paid by the ratepayers for bringing gas into this area.

4. Location of Gas Mains will be submitted for approval to the Town and Township Engineers.

5. The streets will be left in as good condition as they were before the mains were laid.

6. Where practical, and where possible, local labor will be employed.

7. After the mains are laid, gas will be brought to individual homes as quickly as possible.

8. In all matters, the Company will endeavor to promote the best interests of the Town of Port Credit and the Township of Toronto.

In order that these progressive areas may have the advantages of a modern gas service---the only public utility not now available---ratepayers are urged not to neglect their duty but to turn out in large numbers and vote on the Gas By-Law, Saturday, June 6th.

The Census of Canada 1931

In the opening weeks of June every family and every home in Canada will be visited by a representative of the Government for the great national purpose of taking the seventh census of Canada.

The census is really a stocktaking. That is, it provides the information to enable the Government and others interested in the development of the country to formulate progressive policies for the happiness, comfort and prosperity of our people.

All the information supplied is strictly confidential, and the officers of the Government are subject to severe penalty if they disclose any of the information which is given to them by residents in the country, to any other than the Government.

Furthermore, it has nothing whatever to do with taxation, or military service, or compulsory school attendance, or immigration, or any such matter; and the government itself cannot use it except for statistical totals.

The Government representative will put the same questions to all, and it is your duty as a resident of this country to answer promptly and truthfully. The Government is very anxious to avoid forcing anyone to answer these questions, but it is empowered to do so in the few cases where individuals may refuse.

Jimmy had been ailing for a couple of days . . . but she didn't think it was serious — till this afternoon . . . she called the doctor . . . hospital tomorrow . . . just a minor operation, but it couldn't wait.

Whatever would she do? She must be with Jimmy . . . but there was the baby too. If mother were only there . . . but a letter couldn't reach mother till late tomorrow.

Then she thought of the telephone. In two minutes she was speaking to her mother. Yes, she could catch the evening train — would be there at 8 in the morning.

What a relief! Now she could go about her preparations for the morrow. The telephone had made everything easy. And the cost of the call had been less than a dollar.

Evening rates on "Anywhere" (station-to-station) calls begin at 7 p.m. Night rates begin at 8.30 p.m. Just give "Long Distance" the number you want — it speeds up the service.

TORONTO TP. COUNCIL

Reeve Leslie H. Pallett, who stepped into office by defeating Thos. Bryans in the poll held to fill the chair vacated by J. H. Pinchin, who accepted the clerkship of the council, followed up election promises of economy by calling for a complete survey of the salary and wage scale of the township employes, and a capitalization of the dutis of the clerk, treasurer, road overseer and tax collector, the information to be given to him in time for a perusal before the regular meeting of the township council, which takes place on June 6th.

Mr. Pallett also determinedly introduced a resolution for the issuing of the minutes of the council to local papers.

The rate of the township, for 1931, was struck at the meeting as 35.3 mills, on an assessment of $5,003,462. The schedule of assessments, as prepared by council, was as follows: General rate, 5 mills, $25,017.31; county rate, 17.5 mills $87,552.60, Public schools, general rate, $41,560; trustees rate, 4.6 mills, $23,015.92, Toronto-Hamilton Highway debentures, township levy, 8 mills, $6,510.59; area levy, 1.2 mills; Clarkson lights, $239.40, area levy, 6 mills, reconstruction and maintenance of highways, 4 mills, $20,013.84; Cooksville lights, $1,039.52, area levy, 3.2, Center road lights, $572.25, area levy 3.5; Lorne Park lights, $830.64, area levy, 2.1; Lakeview lights, $1,352.40, area levy, .23; school debentures, levied on respective areas, $32,179.35, Mississauga road lights, $301.50, area [illegible], 5 mills; Cawthra road lights, $71.56, area levy, 4.2 mills; High school rate, 3.4 mills, $17,010.41, Erindale community hall debentures, $249.78, levied on School Section No. 4; Stave Bank roads lights, $321.12, area levy, 5 mills; relief and unemployment levy, 3 mills, $15,010.38, bridge debentures, 4 mills, $2,000.

The road rate, four mills, is one mill lower than that of last year, whilst the relief levy of 3 mills is an addition to the budget of last year. The sum thus raised for relief, $15,010.38, is approximately within $1,000 of the entire sum spent for relief and unemployment expenses by the township during the past year, including the Government subsidy.

Thos. McCarthy, councillor, expressed himself against the issuing of debentures for unemployment relief, and was supported by the rest of the council in his attitude.

Mr. Pallett and R. S. Whaley were sworn in by J. H. Pinchin at the beginning of the meeting, both asking for the co-operation of the remainder of the council and the officials.

Three public hall permits were approved, and the clerk was instructed to secure tenders on oil for the township roads.

CAMP NOTICE

The Call of the Great Out-of-doors! Yes, boys and girls of Peel, old Mother Nature is urgently proclaiming that Camp Days are drawing nearer. Pinecrest! What a thrilling and symbolic name for the charming setting of Peel Boys and Girls Camp which is on the crest of the hill and surrounded by pines, just north-east of the Bridge at Norval. Think of the refreshing early morning breezes that will come winging across the hilltop, to say nothing of the fragrant pines that are already whispering of the joys to be had under their protecting shade.

Our Camp is greatly improved this year. The back part of the dining pavilion has been boarded up and made into sleeping quarters for 24 girls. No wet beds during storms now, boys and girls.

We are also very grateful to the Brampton Lions Club who are making plans to dig a well for us right on our own grounds. How we'll enjoy fresh cold water at any hour of the day or night!

The Boys' Camp begins on Monday, June 29th and extends to Wednesday, July 8th. Peel boys are requested to send their applications in before June 15th because a request has come from Halton County asking Peel Camp to allow a number of Halton boys to attend our camp this year.

The Girls' Camp is from Thursday, July 9th, to Saturday, July 18th.

Boys' Registrations may be sent to Mr. Albert Bolster, Brampton and Girls' Registrations go to Miss R. Ward, Brampton. The folders will soon be out. Registration fee is $2.00.

Start at once to make plans to go to a real camp this year, and that real camp is "Pinecrest."

LET US SMILE

It is stated of a Scotsman who lived in an out-of- the-way village in the north of Scotland that on the whole he enjoyed life in the evening of his days. He, however, confided to a sympathetic young lady visitor from the south that his greatest hardship was having to walk eight miles each day to the nearest town for "a glass of whusky."

"But," the young lady said, "why do you not buy a bottle o whiskey and keep it in the house?"

"Ah, Miss, whusky disna keep."

PRESBYTERIAN MINISTER HONORED

A splendid congregational meeting was held in the Presbyterian Sunday School Hall on Friday evening when the Ladies' Aid entertained in honor of the pastor, Rev. Geo. G. Treanor, who has just received his Diploma and degree, "Doctor of Theology, (Th. D.) by examination, and who has been minister in Dresden Church since February 1926.

Mrs. Ernest Sharpe and Mrs. Joseph Creamer were the hostesses and the Chairman of the evening was Rev. J. C. Herbison of St. James Presbyterian Church, Thamesville, Moderator of Chatham Presbytery, and an old friend of Dr. Treanor with whom he has again come in touch the past four years through having neighboring congregations. After opening with a hymn, the Moderator gave a very fine address, expressing his pleasure at being present, and thanks for the invitation to be chairman and extending personal congratulations to Rev. Dr. Treanor. He spoke of old College days together and of his warm personal friendship for Dr. Treanor. Continuing he said, "This honor comes as the result of many years of hard and diligent study and we know that it will be carried with becoming dignity by Dr. Treanor."

"I would also like to say that the Presbyterian Church the world over has always stood for a very high standard of education in her Ministers, and because of this has sometimes lost ground, but she refused to lower this standard. "During the last six years when the need was great and the temptation was strong to lower the standard, yet she has maintained it.

"In closing may I add to my own personal congratulations and good wishes those of my own congregation by whom Dr. Treanor is held in high esteem; and I think I can safely say as Moderator of the Chatham Presbytery that I bring also the congratulations and good wishes of his fellow Presbyters on this happy occasion. An honor bestowed on one of its members is also an honor to the Presbytery. I hope that this honor and extra knowledge gained in getting it will prove a source of inspiration and blessing to Dr. Treanor for many many years to come."

The program following included solos by Misses Dora Gammage, Catherine Burns, and Jean Slater, and by Mrs. P. Burns, who sang, "My Ain Folks" by request. The accompanists were Misses Edna Wells, Mary Burns and Cora Gibson and Mrs. Ernest Sharpe. A piano duet was given by Misses Ella Pattison and Naomi McLaughlin; and a vocal duet by Misses Margaret Law and Marion Campbell. A reading was contributed by Mrs. Noble Law.

Personal greetings were extended to the Minister by John McLachlin, Sr., John McLachlin, Jr., Thomas Laird and Mrs. J. I. Wiley, all members of the Church.

Rev. Dr. Scott Fulton of First Presbyterian Church, Chatham, gave an address and brought greetings; Wm. Foreman, elder in First Church and prominent Sabbath School worker extended greetings from a laymen's point of view.

John Francis read congratulatory messenger that had come to Dr. Treanor from the following: Mr. John Weylie, representative elder in Streetsville Presbyterian Church, where Dr. Treanor attended previous to college; Dr. George C. Pidgeon of Bloor St. Uninted Church of Toronto, who had much to do with Dr. Treanor entering the Ministry; from the sesion of Vernon Presbyterian Church, his first charge; Mr. H. J. Colwill of the Arthur Congregation, a former charge; Rev. Principal MacKenzie, D.D. Presbyterian College, Montreal, Dr. Treanor's college; Rev. Dr. Robert Johnston, St. Catherines, a close friend; Rev. S. D. Jamieson B.A. Clerk of Presbytery; Rev. T. D. McCullough, M.A., Kincardine, a former pastor here; Mr. and Mrs. Martin Treanor, Streetsville, brother, and Mr. and Mrs. William Taggart, Toronto, sister of Dr. Treanor.

A novel feature of the evening was the writing of each one present in a book in charge of Miss Jessie McVean, which will be kept as a Souvenir of this occasion.

After the program a social hour was spent and refreshments served Mrs. Andrew Dunlop, president of the Ladies Aid and Mrs. (Dr.) Treanor poured tea at a table beautifully appointed in silver and decorated with valley lilies in bud vases. The Hall was fragrant with lilacs, purple iris, tulips and daffodils and a very delightful hour was enjoyed.

The Dresden Times, May 28, 1931.

The Review extends congratulations to our old friend, Dr. Treanor.

Local Masons Banquet Friends

Grand Master Inspects River Park Lodge

Last Friday night, River Park Lodge No. 356, A.F. and A.M., Streetsville, held a "Red Letter night." It was one of the biggest events in their history. It's not often the Grand Master visits the country lodges, but through the persuasive powers of our District Deputy Grand Master, R. W. Bro. H. W. Gerhart, the Most Wor. Bro. R. B. Dargavel, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, in Ontario, consented to come and he was here, accompanied by many Past Grand Lodge officers, wearing gold braid and various emblems of Masonry.

Wor. Bro. Elmer Waites presided, and the Most Worshipful Grand Master was duly and properly introduced to the officers—and members of the Lodge. A large number of Ruling Masters and Past Masters were among the visitors, who came to do honor to River Park.

It is the custom for the District Deputy to inspect the Lodge, but in this case, the inspection was made by the Grand Master, River Park being the mother lodge of the District Deputy. The Grand Master was pleased with the manner in which the first degree was exemplified and congratulated the Master and officers on the thoroughness of their work.

A pleasant part of the evening was when Wor. Bro. Sam. Cordingly, on behalf of the officers and members of the Lodge, presented the Grand Master with a handsome walnut table, as a token of respect and appreciation. The Grand Master expressed his appreciation for their kindness and said he would be pleased to take the table home to his wife.

The Banquet

After lodge closed, the brethren, numbering nearly 200, sat down to a splendid banquet, with Wor. Bro. Elmer Waite, acting as toastmaster.

Following toasts were proposed and responded to: The King—God Save the King; The Craft, proposed by Wor. Bro. Wm. Couse; responded to by the Grand Master. Our Visitors, proposed by Wor. Bro. E. E. King; responded to by R. W. Bro. (Dr.) E. A. Peaker, P. D.D.G.M., Wor. Bro. Chas. W Robb, W.M., Mississauga Lodge, Port Credit; Wor. Bro. Col. J. E. L. Streight, Mimico Lodge, Lambton.

The candidate—proposed by Bro. J. K. Featherston, responded to Bro. Albert Quennell.

River Park Lodge—Proposed by Wor. Bro. W. J. Fenton, Ionic Lodge, Brampton, the oldest Past Master, in point of years, in the District; responded to by Wor. Bro. Elmer Waite.

Visitors were present from Port Credit, Brampton, Georgetown, Weston, Lambton and from several Toronto lodges.

R. W. Bro. Dr. Peaker paid a glowing tribute to R. W. Bro. Gerhart, D. D.G.M., Toronto District "A," when he said he was the most outstanding District Deputy of all the Toronto Districts.

After a few remarks by our District Deputy, who referred to his work of inspection during the past year, and said it had been one of the pleasantest years of his life, the very happy evening was brought to a close.

Among those present, was Very Wor. Bro. (Major) Grant of Georgetown, now in his 85th year, and still quite active and healthy, a former resident of Streetsville, who attended the Back Line School, then known as Sibbald's School, when he was 15 years old.

VILLAGE COUNCIL

The regular meeting of the Village Council was held Monday evening with all members present and Reeve Harry Hope presiding.

The following motions were passed:

Drennan—Hardy—That the assessment for the year 1931 be and is hereby confirmed.

Drennan—Bailey—That the fire and light committee be instructed to get estimates on water extension on Victoria Avenue, and, if the undertaking will guarantee ten per cent of the investment, to proceed with the work.

Bailey—Hardy—That the following accounts be paid: F. A. Mass, $14.54; Dom. Sash, $3.03; F. McClintock, $7.00; E. J. Rutledge, $5.73; Municipal World, $6.31; Canadian Lime, material, $16.21; Canadian Gen. Electric, $2.19.

The tax rate for 1931 was struck as follows:

	Mill R.	Amount
High School	7½	$ 2500.00
Public School	6	1980.00
County	10½	5494.00
Debentures	14	4675.00
Village	15	4500.00
Total	53	$19149.00

OUR BASEBALL LEAGUE

Well, folks, here we are again to give you something new,
On the baseball games that are attended by the faithful few,
We are very sorry not to see a bigger crowd
So everybody turn out and show them its not in a shrowd.
Just tell them they're missing the time of their lives
By staying home, and not bringing their sporty wives.

We are now in the second week of this very tight race,
With the High School bunch holding a slim lead on first place.
Next comes the Creditvale hot-dogs
and the Town,
While Trinity Church seems content to hold the cellar place down.
Perhaps, next week, when we look at the score log,
We'll find in the lead again the Creditvale hot-dogs.
Believe me, folks, its going to be a struggle from start to finish,
When High Schol say their hold on first place they'll never relinquish.

The Town and Trinity played on Tuesday eve,
Trinity being beat, by the Town's good catcher, Steve.
Boy, was he hot? I'll tell the world
he's to be feared.
When the ball comes over, he shouts,
'that nearly cut off your beard'.
And "Let's have them now, right here
he can't hit,"
Is it any wonder the batter nearly has a fit?

This is Trinity's second defeat in a row, the score being 15 to 3,
Is it any wonder it makes Manager
Lovatt say, "Dear Me,"
I wish my team would get in there and work,
It's because, I suppose, the practices
they shirk.
If something dosen't happen to wake
them up,
A fat chance we'll have of winning the cup.

And now this brings us to Friday's important game,
Creditvale are wondering why on the field they ever came.
"It was their bad night," some of them said,
I think it must have been for nearly all looked dead.
Gump and Scotty, with Joe and Red
We're the only ones to take out of their boots the heavy lead.
They played a "bank-up" game, all the way through,
Even if the boys did say to Joe, "Pig pig," "shoo, shoo."
They thought this would get his goat,
and make him mad
But, instead of that, he said, "It's the best game I ever had."

We all enjoyed seeing Big Red getting fanned,
By his little brother, who, he said,
would be tanned,
For making him swing like a fool,
At the high ones he couldn't hit even at school.
Little Red just smiled, and put the game well in hand;
When he hit the ball, and two feet from the creek did land.
Driving in four runs, and almost putting Popey to the showers,
Who was nearly ready, anyway, for the undertaker and flowers.
He couldn't just get the curve on the old ball,
And that is the reason of Creditvale's downfall.

BRAMPTON

Brampton Oddfellows, with representations from Georgetown and Streetsville, decorated some thirty graves of Oddfellows and Rebekahs in Brampton Cemetery Sunday afternoon, prior to attending the Baptist Church for their annual church parade. The ceremony was in charge of Thos. Hoole, N.G.; Wilbur Coates, D.D.G.M., and Past Grand William Haines. Clarence Wiggins, Past Grand, acted as chaplain. Rev. Norman McLeod preached the service at the Baptist Church.

Delegates from every branch of the Peel Women's Institute met in the Baptist church for the 27th annual convention. Mrs. Wm. McClure, secretary, reporting for the Peel Institute, stated receipts were $877.89 and expenditures $737.19. Of the expenses, $300 was donated to the nurses' home at the Peel Memorial hospital.

Total receipts for all branches were $6,848.71; expenditures, $5,366,99, leaving a favorable balance of $1,481.72. Eighteen senior branches and six junior institutes have enrolled a total of 1,029 members, an increase of 39 over the previous year. The aggregate attendance at 275 meetings held was 8,469, an increase of 1,837.

Derry West branch was declared the first prize winner of a program contest. Sixteen programs were judged on the basis of educational value and the winner scored 83 points. Snelgrove, with 82, and Cheltenham, with 81, were second and third prize winners, and Malton and Belfountain-Rockside were given honorable mention. Summer sessions have been arranged by 16 branches, commencing June 1.

Hon. G. W. Martin was guest speaker at the luncheon. Election of officers followed.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. S. Wilson, Mono Road; vice-presidents, Mrs. I. J. Ardagh, Mrs. J. M. Dolson, Mrs. T. H. McKee; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Wm. McClure; directors, Mrs. J. McConnell, Mrs. A. Smith, Mrs. J. G. Sharpe, Mrs. Robt. Watson, Mrs. J. B. Dingwall, Mrs. J. B. Eliott, Mrs. J. Cunningham, Mrs. E. Ramage, Mrs. J. H. McCracken, Mrs. A. Doerr, Mrs. Frank Clarke, Mrs. W. Patterson, Mrs. Hubert Page, Mrs. Fred Holder, Mrs. W. H. Green, Mrs. Fraser Smith, Mrs. T. H. McKee, Mrs. J. Caslor; auditors, Mrs. Howard McCracken and Mrs. Frank Vanderlip.

PORT CREDIT

Carl Peer, aged 26, son of J. C. Peer of John Street, here, was found dead in his bedroom, shot through the breast. At the time he had just returned from visiting friends and on arriving home had gone directly to his room. Hearing the shot his mother, who was alone in the house at the time, rushed upstairs, where she found the lifeless body of her son, with a double-barrelled rifle beside it on the floor. Chief Telford Smith and Coroner Dr. A. B. Sutton were immediately called, and after investigating decided that an inquest would not be necessary. The funeral took place to Clarkson Cemetery on Tuesday.

styled a "Camp", but which is really a collection of huts or buildings, permanently erected, and more resembling a hotel holiday resort or a wayside motorists overnight "Camp", than anything that the Chief Scout ever had in mind when he originated the Boy Scout Movement in that original Scout Camp at Brownsea Island in England.

The permanent camp business seems to have had its origin with our friends on the south of the International Line, and from the point of view of saving work and handling the largest number of boys with the least possible adult assistance, it perhaps has its advantages, but it is a

The lovely weather which we have been experiencing of late causes us to think of that fascinating subject, or at least it should be fascinating to every Lone Scout—Camp.

The tendency of recent years has been, unfortunately, as far as boys' camps are concerned, to get away from the original pioneering spirit of camp and to mass boys in a large ready-made habitation which has been very poor substitute for the joys of camping as known by those who have roughed it out in the open with only a small tent, and who have had to carry their own water and cook their own breakfast!

I don't think that any real scout could delude himself into thinking that he was really "Camping" if he stayed at one of these mass camps which are in reality a "Home from Home."

We who are Lone Scouts have probably already experienced the joy of going off into the wilds to make our own camp with the materials which have been to hand, and if you have not tried this you should not pass up the opportunities which this summer will bring to you.

Lone Patrols will no doubt this season find lots of fun camping together, either making their own sleeping shelters or taking along those jolly little "Pup-tents" which are so easily carried and are to be obtained so cheaply.

Those individual Lone Scouts who do not care to go alone should endeavor to link up with their nearest Lone Scout Neighbor, and plan expeditions with him, and they will be amply repaid by the fun and experience which they will gain.

For the past two years the Lone Scout Department in Ontario has organized a special Lone Scout Camp at a place near Brantford, and a number of Lonies from all over the province have each year attended this camp and happy times were spent together over a period of about two weeks.

Owing, however, to the very extraordinary growth of the Lone Scout Movement during the past year, it has been decided not to attempt to hold a large camp this year, as it would be too unwieldy, but rather to encourage the pioneering spirit in the Lonies and get them to organize camps by patrols, or as individual Scouts.

From a training point of view this will be invaluable, as only by experience can many things be learned, and the mistakes you make at your first camp will not be repeated when you go again.

So, Lonies, do not wait for a Lone Scout Department Camp this year, but go ahead and organize your own camp, and write to your Scoutmaster for any information you may want, and let him know just what you are doing.

Several Lone Scout Patrols have already received invitations to camp with other regular troops; for instance, the Silver Foxes at Pickering have been invited to go with the 5th Oshawa Troop, and this is a very nice arrangement indeed.

Any Lone Scout who would like to camp with some Regular Troop is asked to let us know, and we will inform him just where the most convenient camp will be held this summer. We have had quite a number of offers from troops to take Lone Scouts along with them.

If you are not a Lone Scout yet and would like to share in all the fun which we Lonies have, write for particulars to The Lone Scout Department, The Boy Scouts Association, 330 Bay Street, Toronto, 2.

British Insect Troubles

Canada is not the only country worried with fruit pests. The British Minister of Agriculture has recently made an order with the object of preventing the introduction into that country of the Cherry Fruit fly. This order regulates the importation of cherries into England and Wales during the 1931 season.

Cherries grown in France will be admitted without restriction until June 2nd, after which date importation will be prohibited, except of cherries grown within a small district around Honfleur. Similar regulations are applicable to other European countries.

The Tourist Trade

Saint John Times-Globe (Ind.):—Tourist trade is Canada's great invisible export. It is largely imponderable. Its magnitude and importance are admitted but little understood. It is almost impossible to gauge the full value of the tourist trade in all its implications. All profit by the coming of tourists; how much and how directly it is hard to assess. But while all are participants in what is brought in by tourists, hotel-keepers and retail merchants are unquestionably those who reap the most direct and visible benefit.

Snow in Mid-West Pacific Swelters

Chicago—Snow rain, wind and sand storms were reported in various sections of North America during the past week at the same time that a blistering heat wave was driving temperatures along the Pacific coast to the highest spring marks in 20 years.

Examples of the contrasting extremes were:

California — Temperatures as high as 92.

Chicago—2.08 inches of rainfall.

Missouri—Floods.

Southern California—Sand storms.

Winnipeg—Snow.

Trinidad, Colo.—Snow.

Ancient Psalter Brings $10,000

Vienna.—The Polish Government has acquired the Saint Florian Psalter from the monastery of that name in Upper Austria for 500,000 schillings, approximately $70,000, it is authentically reported here. The psalter is a parchment manuscript from the fourteenth century, consisting of 296 pages, in excellent condition, and written in Latin, Polish and German.

Polish scholars maintain this psalter is the oldest monument in Polish literature. It came to Saint Florian during one of the many visits of the Polish Queen Catherine in the sixteenth century.

Exile

Will you remember that when next you write me,
It is of little things I long to hear.
All the small happenings that you hold so lightly,
I hold so dear.

Are you still busy in your garden daily?
What are you reading now?
What do you sow?
And do you hum your little songs as gaily
As long ago?

Are the larks singing now at dawn's awaking,
In the green meadows where wild pansies grow
In clusters, free for any traveller's taking?
Tell me such things as these, my heart is breaking
Dear, just to know.

Declares Western Farmers Optimistic as to Future

Stratford.—"Wheat growing is a large and important business in the Dominion of Canada and will continue so," declared the Hon. Duncan Marshall, former Minister of Agriculture for Alberta, in a recent address before the Stratford Rotary Club. "Wheat was the foundation by means of which this province was transformed from a wilderness into its present fertile state. The farmer, like almost everyone else, makes one mistake and that is buying everything in sight when things are good, and trying to pay for them when things are bad. The Western farmer is not discouraged; he is not going out of the wheat-growing business because prices are low, and I would have no hesitancy in prophesying that 20 years from now Canada will be producing and exporting more wheat than she is today."

Censorship in Australia

Australia has a film censorship board which derives its authority from a section of the customs act which gives authority to prohibit the importation of goods. Under this section proclamations have been issued banning the importation of films and related advertising matter except under certain conditions and with the consent of the Minister. The conditions provide, among other things, that no film shall be registered which in the opinion of the censor is blasphemous, indecent or obscene; is likely to be injurious to morality or to encourage or incite to crime; is likely to be offensive to the people of any friendly nation; is likely to be offensive to the people of the British Empire, or depicts any matter of which the exhibition is undesirable in the public interest. Importers have the right of appeal. Regulations governing the exportation of Australian-made films are similar, with the addition that no film may be exported if, in the opinion of the censor, it is likely to prove detrimental or prejudicial to the Commonwealth of Australia.

Help to Relativity

Oxford, Eng.—Dr. Albert Einstein expressed his sorrow at the recent passing of Dr. Albert Michelson, whom he once characterized as the man who inspired in him the concept of the theory of relativity.

"Dr. Michelson was one of the greatest artists in the world of scientific experimentation," he said. "His investigations were of decided significance to the theory of relativity."

Dr. Einstein is here to deliver a series of Rhodes memorial lectures.

Printers Ink

Ottawa.—There were 22 establishments in Canada in 1929 engaged in the manufacture of ink, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Sixteen of the plants were chiefly engaged in making printing inks or rollers; the other six making writing inks as their main product.

The year saw a new high level attained by the whole industry, the output being valued at $3,038,049.

Cattle Shipments

Ottawa.—Following the revival last summer, after an absence of some years, of Canadian live cattle shipments to the British market, 3,581 cattle reached the port of Manchester from the Dominion between the initial shipment made in August and the end of 1930, writes Harry A. Rumors of War

Hong Kong Press: With spring comes the campaign season in China, and the embers of the old wars show signs of bursting into flames. No one, except the soothsayer, predicts the future in China, but it is good to know that the merchants of Peiping are acting on the assumption that there will be no war this summer. Elsewhere many rumors of strife are current, and this is inevitable in a country which has now experienced some fourteen years of civil war. If most of the big military adventurers have been crushed, their followers are by no means extirpated. China swarms with soldiers-of-fortune of all ranks, ready for any warlike enterprise, from a raid upon a Kwangtung village to a new movement for the overthrow of the "Nanking tyranny" and the "true interpreting" of the "three principles," or any other political slogan adopted by an adventurer who can guarantee pay, food and loot. This is the aftermath of war.

The Love of Common Things

The love for common things grew daily, things that cost nothing, and life was full of them. That is what the study of art will do. . . . I had no time for actual study, my hours were too broken up, but I stored up impressions at every turn. Impressions are like capital in the bank, bearing hourly interest. On the train twice every day, between Alexandria and Washington, an hour to look out of the window—a lot of landscape can be photographed upon the mental retina in an hour every day. Eyes tired with the black-and-white of charcoal drawings could rest on expanses of blue and green of swamp or snowy hill, an endless panorama.

In the winter, the anatomy of the trees, their naked limbs thrown in silhouette against the sky; the delitracery of last year's weeds, goldenrod and aster whose seeds were long since sown by friendly winds; the long sweeping lines of drifted snow, poems in themselves; and across the wintry landscape how full of meaning, as the darkness fell and the train sped on, was the yellow lamplight shining from the window of some poor man's home, taking the loneliness out of the whole world and the coldness out of the winter night. And the people's faces and hands portraits all painted by masters. —Marietta Minnigerode Andrews, in "Memoirs of a Poor Relation."

Wilkins Confident Submarine Trip Will Succeed

"Nautilus" Not An Ordinary Submarine — Has 38 New Devices

New York—Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins, recently expressed confidence that his submarine expedition under the ice cap at the north pole would be successful and declared that it might lead to important discoveries concerning the Gulf Stream and other marine conditions.

Sir Hubert said that if the Nautilus reaches Spitsbergen safely, he was sure the expedition would be successful.

"I think we can omit reference to danger," he said. "Every one of us experiences danger at one time or another. In exploration we estimate the hazards and prepare in advance to meet them. In preparing this expedition we went to men who had had years of experience and the greatest fund of knowledge to support us in the situation we shall face. If we are 50 per cent. successful, the expedition will have been worth while. If you ask what good the trip can accomplish, I can only point to the various scientific societies that have lent their names and their active assistance to us."

The Nautilus is equipped with 38 new devices which will make it possible for it to travel under the polar ice cap, while an ordinary submarine would be inadequate, he said. The party expects to travel no further than 50 miles at a time under the ice, he said, with stops at intervals to renew the air supply, recharge batteries, and conduct scientific work. Magnetic and gyroscopic compasses, a theodolite, and other apparatus will make it possible to navigate without any insurmountable obstacles, he added.

A special diving compartment will make it possible to record the temperature of the water along thousands of miles of the voyage and may serve to clear up the mystery of where the Gulf Stream ends, confirming or exploding theories that it sank or rose out of great holes in the ocean bed, he said.

Sir Hubert, said his ambition to study the weather in order to be able to predict it as much as two months in advance had made it necessary for him to become an explorer, so that he could study regions where meteorological conditions originated.

"Next best to seeing the ocean or the hills or the woods is enjoying a painting of them."—Maxfield Parrish.

Though ambition itself be a vice, it is often the cause of great virtue. Give me that with whom praise excites, glory puts on, or disgrace grieves; he is to be nourished with ambition, pricked forward with honour, checked with reprehension, and never to be suspected of sloth.—Ben Jonson.

Fever Germs Sleep In Insect Bodies

What becomes of the germs of the disease called Mediterranean fever in the winter so that they can live to start a new epidemic in the spring was described recently to the French Academy of Sciences, in Paris, by MM. Ch. Joyeux and J. Pieri. This fever usually breaks out in the summer, the investigators report, although occasional cases are met with in winter also. The germ of the disease is believed to be spread by the bites of bloodsucking ticks and perhaps of other insects. During the warm weather of summer these ticks are plentiful and many people are bitten, thus causing much fever. As cold weather comes on the ticks apparently vanish but by digging into cracks in the walls of houses, underneath wall paper and insimilar places M. Joyeux and M. Pieri were able to find over two hundred ticks, even in February. These insects were hibernating, much as bears and a few other animals do. The fever germs, it was found, were hibernating too. The insects found were killed by fumigation and then ground in water, but in such fashion that living germs inside the insects' bodies would not perish. Small amounts of this germ mixture then were injected into human beings, causing cases of typical fever. It is evident, the investigators believe, that the germs of the fever have learned the secret of hibernation also, perhaps from their insect hosts, and that they manage to stay alive all winter in the bodies of the insects although the germs can get but little fod or oxygen while the insects are in their winter sleep. It is probable, MM. Joyeux and Pieri believe, that this long winter sleep weakens the germs somewhat so that they are less virulent when they first emerge in the spring than they become later on in the summer.

Samples

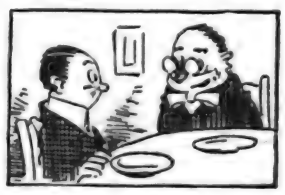
A clergyman was fond of a particularly hot brand of pickles, and, finding difficulty in procuring them at hotels when travelling, invariably carried a bottle with him

One day, when dining with his pickles in front of him, a stranger sat down at the same table. Soon he asked the clergyman to pass the pickles.

The latter did as he was requested, and in a few seconds noticed the stranger watering at the eyes and gasping for breath.

"I see by your dress," said the man when he had recovered, "that you are a parson."

"I am."



"I suppose you preach?"

"Yes, about twice a week."

"Do you ever preach about Hades?"

"Why, yes. Sometimes I deem it my duty to remind my congregation on that subject."

"I thought so," said the stranger: "but you are the first in our line I ever met who carried samples."

"Have you got a good cook?"

"Must be, she says she goes to church every night."

Photograph of model of statue being erected to Honorable Edward Cornwallis, founder of the City of Halifax, in front of the Canadian National Railways' hotel, "The Nova Scotian", in that city, which will be unveiled on the city's natal day, June 21st, this year. Cornwallis was born in London in 1713, the sixth son of Baron Cornwallis and Lady Charlotte Butler. He was sent by the Imperial Government to establish a settlement and military stronghold in Nova Scotia on the cite of the present city of Halifax and he arrived in the harbor with 1200 settlers, mostly disbanded soldiers and sailors, on June 21st, 1749. He immediately set about the task of founding the city and succeeded in doing so in the face of strong opposition from the Indians and the French. Sentries had to be posted on the outskirts and armed parties sent out with the pioneers to cut the timber for building the log huts. The table around which he formed the first provisional government in 1749 on board one of the warships which brought the settlers to Halifax, is located in the Legislative Building, Halifax, the oldest existing parliament building in the British Empire, and it was at this table that Canada's new Governor General, the Earl of Bessborough, was sworn in. In 1752, on account of his health giving out, Cornwallis resigned and, returned to England, afterwards becoming a member of Parliament for Westminster. He went to Gibraltar as Governor in 1762 and died there in 1776, being buried at Guilford Parish Church, near Bury, St. Edmunds. He served also as a member of Parliament before he was sent to found the City of Halifax. The monument was designed by the noted sculptor Massey Rhind.—Photo, Canadian National Railways.

Canada Recognizes 84 Breeds of Dogs

If you ask the average person to name the different breeds of dogs he knows he usually mentions about twelve. Canadian Kennel Club recognizes eighty-four varieties. Some of them, of course, are very scarce. They are seldom seen.

It is interesting to know that most of these varieties have been obtained by crossing the few original breeds, then crossing their progeny again and again. Here is a list of the breeds:

The following list comprises all breeds of dogs which are eligible for registration in the Canadian Kennel Club Stud Book and for which separate classes may be provided:

Outward Bound

I never set out from port
But that from somewhere I hear the sound of music,
Reiterative as the waves against the ship's sides,
A strumming almost lost in the noises of the sea.
Sometimes under its breath it suggests islands
To which we may come, and harbors
Laced with masts and riggings, where the women are selling oranges;
Or again peasants are dancing on barren hill-slopes
In their Easter dresses, and looking for him who is coming.
Sometimes it is a flute I hear mingling with the waves,
Faintly breathing the never-ending lament of separation,
And I remember that the stars are outcasts and wanderers,
And that each man follows the course of his weary star—
But whether the song be of parting or of meeting in strange places,
When the ropes are loosened, when the anchor is weighed,
When the land drops behind and the ship faces the sea,
Always from some place unseen comes the sound of singing.

Restless CHILDREN

CHILDREN will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper: mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than a more powerful medicine.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is need. In cases of colic, diarrhea or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. A coated tongue calls for just a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed.

Fletcher's CASTORIA

DIZZINESS
Caused by Blood pressure
Doctor ordered Kruschen

"Five years ago this month I had a serious attack of blood pressure, and my medical man ordered me to take Kruschen Salts daily. Evidently I am a stubborn subject, because I use every morning a small teaspoonful and a half in a glass of hot water, and this acts splendidly and keeps my head right. If I don't have the action mentioned, I feel cold, stupid and liable to fall from dizziness. Therefore I can't do without my Kruschen on any account. Some time ago I tried some other salts which were cheaper, but they pained me so much that I had to stop them. There is no pain with Kruschen. I have told hundreds of my little wonder-working bottle."—(E. C. Fergusson.)

Dizziness is a symptom of a deeper-seated disorder. It is one of Nature's danger signals—her urgent warning of an impure blood-stream which, if not attended to in time, may wreck the entire health with some dangerous, indeed lifelong, disease. The six salts in Kruschen keep the blood-stream pure and vigorous by ensuring the complete elimination of poisonous waste matter from the system every day.

Wakeful restless CHILD needs Castoria

WE can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Other times it's constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked promptly. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't you should call a physician.

All through babyhood, Castoria should be a mother's standby; and a wise mother continues it in more liberal doses as a child grows up.

Readily obtained at any drug-store, the genuine easily identified by the Chas. H. Fletcher signature and the name Castoria on the wrapper like this:

MUSICAL RECITAL BY THE PUPILS OF MISS M. HICKS

On Saturday afternoon last a musical recital was given by the pupils of Miss Mabel Hicks in the United Church. About thirty-five took part. A very few were unable to be present. To show their interest in the children and an appreciation of Miss Hick's ability to train the children in this beautiful art, parents and friends turned out in large numbers.

From the youngest pupil to the oldest, each number was well rendered. The technique showed not only that the pupils were under the tutorship of one well versed in music, but the ability to impart.

Judging from the numbers given, the way they were played, the future for music in this village and surrounding country is very bright. We are often a little uneasy that the effect of the radio may destroy the desire to become efficient in music and discourage an amateur, but as one who listened to the boys and girls on Saturday the writer of this article feels that there is no cause for alarm.

To add to the variety of the programme, Hazel Ross, who gave a musical number, also favoured the audience with a reading. As well as solos there were a few piano duets. Helen Reeve assisted Doris Waite in a beautiful duet. This duet won honourable mention in a singing contest for the county also bringing to these two young ladies the distinction of winning third place.

We congratulate Miss Hicks for this very fine recital, also the progress which is being made by her pupils. The Rev. Geo. H. Purchase spoke a few congratulating words to Miss Hicks and her pupils.

The following is the list of those who took part in the recital:

Barbara King, Mildred Stepheus, Billy and Russell Evans, Jeanette Couse, Norman Denny, Leona and Dorothy Durie, Ilale Featherston, Mossie Smith, Miriam Perry, Elmer and Norman Workman, Marie and Doreen Chamberlain, Verna Dowling, Muriel Mason, Marie Hillier, Mary Switzer, Maynard Redick, Lois Smith, Elma Sparling, Helen Dingwall, May Munro, Marion Lindsay, Elizabeth and Ema Bailey, Hazel Ross, Doris Waite, Margaret Falconer, Alexina Sinclair and Alfred Houlgrave.

LORNE PARK

A unique event took place on Saturday, May 23rd, when a birthday party was held to celebrate Mrs. E. Albertson's eighty-sixth birthday. The party was held at the home of Mrs. J. Wesley Peer and Mr. Peer and thirty guests were present. All Mrs. Albertson's family were present as well as all the grandchildren. She is enjoying the best of health and certainly got a lot of fun out of the party. A birthday cake nicely decorated graced the centre of the table and the room was adorned with tulips. Mrs. Albertson received many flowers and numerous gifts.

ERINDALE

The Ladies' Aid of Erindale United Church held a meeting in the church on Wednesday evening. A good attendance was present and the meeting was satisfactory. This is the last meeting until Fall. A very interesting talk on India was given by Rev. R. A. Spencer. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting by Mrs. D. Carpenter and Miss May McGill.

The June meeting of the Erindale Women's Institute will be held in the Erindale Community Hall on Wednesday afternoon, June 10th, at 2.30 Daylight Saving Time. Mrs. Sands, Government speaker, will address the meeting.

COMMUNITY CLUB

The North Trafalgar Community Club met at the home of Mrs. M. Williamson, on Wednesday, May 27th. The meeting opened by our song and roll call. There was a large attendance. A picnic was discussed. After the business part of the meeting, we sang our closing song.. Mrs. R. Coulson then conducted a contest, which was won by Mrs. Clifford May and Mrs. Harry Lee.

Mrs. Effie Buck also gave a contest which was won by Mrs. Wilmer Hamilton.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Jack Miller on Wednesday, June 10th.

PEEL JUNIORS ATHLETIC FIELD DAY

Saturday, June 6th, at Ferndale Park is the day when the Peel Juniors gather to compete in athletic events which vary from sprints to softball competitions.

Gold and silver medals donated by Peel County Juniors' Associations will be presented to the two high boys and girls. The Athletic Shield won by Bolton in 1929 and by Streetsville in 1930 will be presented to the Club securing the highest number of points. Lunch will be provided by the girls and served after the events are concluded.

All the young men and women in the County are invited to attend and see the members of the various clubs compete for the honour of their organization. Good sportsmanship among the contestants is real training to develop self-control and will power and also to appreciate the ability of the other competitors.

Owing to the long list of events to be run off, the executive have decided to start at 1 p.m., Standard time and thus leave time late in the afternoon for an inter-club Softball tourname

The annual Field Day dance will held in the Park Pavilion commencing at 8.30 p.m. with the Cheerio Orchestra of Brampton in attendance.

DAIRY FIELD DAY AT O.A.C. JUNE 9TH

Dairymen of Peel County are invited to attend the Dairy Cattle Field Day at the O.A.C. Guelph on June 9th. A full day's program based on the results of the past year's experimental work with dairy cattle has been arranged. Reports of these investigations will be presented and should prove helpful to those interested in dairy problems.

Commencing at 10 a.m. Daylight Saving Time, the forenoon will be spent looking over the college herds and flocks with particular attention to the dairy cattle and dairy farm equipment.

A picnic lunch will be provided by the college at noon in the gymnasium for the visitors.

The afternoon program will be opened in Memorial Hall with an address by Dr. G. I. Christie, President of the O.A.C. Important problems, such as influencing butterfat content of milk, milk substitutes in calf feeding, factors influencing butterfat content of milk, and other dairy husbandry topics will be discussed by members of the Animal Husbandry staff and Dr. R. A. McIntosh of the Ontario Veterinary College.

Information regarding the trip for the Peel County dairymen can be obtained from J. C. Shearer, Agricultural Representative, Brampton.

Absolutely extraordinary is the way our new idea of "re fluffing" blankets is being received. House wives in Toronto who have sent blankets are phoning and writing daily to compliment us on the genuine new appearance and feel of blankets done by our new process. They are first washed in soft water, then air-dried—then "re-fluffed" — then tied up with pretty colored silk ribbons ready to lay away for use next Fall. Phone and have us call for a trial pair—you may also wish to have your feather pillows and eiderdown comforters washed — or stop any one of our courteous driver salesmen

TRINITY CHURCH

The Church Army Crusaders, on their "Route March of Witness," will visit Streetsville at Trinity Church on Thursday, Friday and Saturday next. They will reach Streetsville between three and four o'clock. After tea, which will be provided for them in the hall, they will hold a service for boys and girls at 7 p.m. All boys and girls are asked to come. This will be followed by a service in the Church for all adults at 8.15 and a social hour in the Hall afterwards. The Crusaders will spend Friday calling on the citizens, with service on Friday evening, to be announced later.

These Crusaders are a band of young men and women upon an Evangelistic campaign throughout the Western part of Ontario from Toronto to Owen Sound. They are witnessing to the higher and truer values of life. Come and give them a welcome and profit from contact with this young life. "And they went forth and preached everywhere and confirmed the word with signs following.—Mark XVI—20.

Services on Sunday next will be at 11 a.m. and 7.30 p.m., D.S.T.

Holy Communion at 11 and a Choral Service at 7.30.

THE

TULE MARSH MURDER

STORY OF A MISSING ACTRESS AND THE TAXING OF WITS TO EXPLAIN HER FATE.

BY NANCY BARR MAVITY.

THE STORY THUS FAR:

Sheila O'Shay, formerly a popular actress, and now the wife of the young multi-millionaire, Don Ellsworth, disappears, leaving no trace behind her. Don visits Dr. Cavanaugh, the famous criminologist, and confesses that his married life has been very unhappy.

CHAPTER II.

"I wish to heaven the police could have been kept out of it altogether!" Don's heavy black brows drew together in a frown. He looked at the moment like a balked and sulky boy.

"Indeed?" The doctor's voice barely rose to make the non-committal word a question. He learned more from his patients by letting them talk than by quizzing them, and by applying the same technique to the normal, or even the criminal mind, he had listened to some remarkable confessions unattainable by "third degree" methods.

He waited, in a silence which lapped the room.

"I should have come to you in the first place!" Don burst out at last, tapping his cigar nervously against the ash tray. "Only—well, it's all been such a mess. I hoped it could be covered up. I might have known! It's rather a difficult matter to discuss."

"Take your time," Dr. Cavanaugh settled back in his chair with the air of a man who does not even have to be patient.

The effect of this advice was to plunge his visitor into hurried speech.

"It was a week ago—a week ago last night, to be exact. Dinner was as usual. We always kept up a rather good front, you know. And Sheila rather enjoyed playing the young matron. It was a new role for her—her other marriages, she said, had lacked the brownstone atmosphere. She was in high spirits, as usual. Even when we were alone she never admitted by word or manner that—oh, well!" Ellsworth hesitated, and then went on, leaving the sentence unfinished.

"Anyway, I'm sure that she wasn't worried or apprehensive or particularly excited about anything. Sheila isn't the worrying type, and as for apprehension—if she thought there was anything for her to be afraid of, she'd clap her hands together in that way she has and go after it as an added thrill. But there was absolutely no sign of anything in the wind. I remarked when we had had our coffee that I was going around to the club—though as a matter of fact I didn't go after all. I just took a long drive all by myself into the country, thinking about—things. When I left the house she was on her way upstairs; she said she was going to bed early and get a good night's sleep.

"That is the last I've seen of her. She left all the lights burning in her boudoir—they were still burning next morning. She didn't take anything with her, not even a suit-case. In the morning she just—wasn't there. You know Sheila?"

The doctor had listened without interrupting Don's recital by so much as a nod or a gesture.

"Not very well, unfortunately," he answered easily. "We haven't seen much of you since your marriage, you know."

"No," Don said abruptly and stopped.

"It was a mistake to be ashamed of your marriage," Dr. Cavanaugh observed impersonally. "It is always a mistake to be ashamed. It creates unnecessary difficulties. What you do, you do. Either don't do it, or stand by it. You always go on from where you are, you know—not back."

"I did stand by it, didn't I? God knows—" The young man's voice was harsh with emotion.

"Mrs. Ellsworth left, and you want me to find her?" the older man prompted imperturbably.

"I want anything rather than all this blare—the very thing I'd give my eye teeth to avoid."

"You did not report that your wife was missing, then?"

"I certainly didn't. If you knew Sheila—"

"I saw her several times before she left the stage—and of course, as you know, we met casually once or twice since. But that's an insufficient basis for determining what she would do."

"She's charming, of course—terribly charming." The savage tone took all compliment from the words. "She's—vital. When she wants a thing, she simply gets it. And scandal means absolutely nothing to her. It isn't in her world. She wouldn't so much as laugh at it—she'd ignore it. It's even an asset to her, not a liability. She might go like that simply because she knows there's nothing I could—or would be willing to—do about it. She might do anything!"

"Oh, no," the doctor protested mildly. "The number of things a given person might do are strictly limited—by the person. But in this case there's another person involved. If you didn't report her disappearance, who did?"

"Mrs. Kane." Don's animosty toward Mrs. Kane was patent.

"Mrs Kane?"

"She was Sheila's 'dresser,' I think they call it. A hard-boiled old customer. When Sheila left the stage—when we were married"—his lips twisted wryly on the word—"she brought Mrs. Kane with her as a personal maid. She doesn't fit in with the rest of the staff, of course. Her manners are atrocious. She's always resented me."

"Doubtless your manner to her was not exactly placating."

Don swept the comment aside with an impatient wave of his cigar.

"I don't know why Sheila kept her. She's not the devoted old retainer type at all. I've heard her speak to Sheila in a way that would cost any proper servant her place at once. Impudent and surly. It was she who found the lights burning in Sheila's boudoir the next morning. She had the nerve to come and ask me where 'Miss O'Shay' was. Nothing on earth can keep her from calling Sheila Miss O'Shay. She knows I don't like it." Despite the anxiety which wrinkled his forehead, Don's injured tone was comically that of a spoiled child who is not used to having people do what he doesn't like.

The briefest of smiles hovered at the corners of Dr. Cavanaugh's lips, and was gone.

"And then?" The calm voice was like a guiding hand, leading Don back from his disgruntled consideration of the failings of Mrs. Kane.

"Of course, when I found she was gone like that, I was upset. And she kept after me. I—I'm afraid I lost my temper." Don flushed uneasily. All who knew him at all well knew of the futile rages which seize him, often over trivial matters, and seemed so childish in retrospect.

Dr. Cavanaugh glanced at him obliquely under cover of applying a match to a fresh cigar. The child who destroys his toys—and afterwards cries to have them restored to him. The worst thing that could have happened to the "millionaire baby" was that they always had been restored, or replaced.

"Were you angry with Mrs. Ellsworth for leaving—or with Mrs. Kane for breaking the news to you, let us say, untactfully?"

"I don't know—both, I guess," Don floundered. "To tell the truth, I thought she might have done it just to create a stir. She loved to be the center of a sensation—it had been her life for so long. It might have been a sudden impulse, the idea that she could plague me into making a search for her, and then show up, laughing—with some fresh newspaper clippings to add to her collection. I wouldn't even be surprised if this Kane woman knew a good deal more than she is telling to me or to anyone!"

CHAPTER III.

"You must remember that your distrust of Mrs. Kane may be founded on nothing more objective than your personal dislike of her," the doctor suggested. "You are not particularly given to discounting your judgments in the light of your emotions, are you?"

Don accepted the mildly voiced criticism with sulky dignity.

"I should hardly say that my wife's personal maid was important enough for personal dislike,' he said.

"She may be very important indeed, for all we know. At any rate, if her object was to rouse you to a display of wrath, she evidently succeeded. Can you recall exactly what you said? I don't mean to be hard on you—your reaction was doubtless quite normal." This time the doctor's smile was definite, even genial. "Whatever it was I've in all probability heard a good many worse things. And I don't regard it as my job to indulge in moral judgment on my fellows. The most I'm likely to say to you is that you were unwise."

"Well—I—I finally told her I didn't know and didn't give a damn! She turned her back and left—and the next thing I knew the police were ringing the front doorbell and asking impertinent questions. I told them as little as I could." There was a certain satisfaction under Don's harassment.

"And did you?" the doctor asked.

Don looked up from a moody contemplation of his shoe.

"Did I what?"

"Give a damn?"

The young man leaped to his feet, his hands clenching and unclenching at his sides.

"Look here, you can't—" he began chokingly.

Dr. Cavanaugh did not move a muscle from his relaxed position in the big chair.

"Never mind," he said quietly. "I apologize. It was your own statement, you know. Now what, precisely, do you want me to do in the matter?"

"I want you to get me out of it with a minimum of publicity. Everything I've ever done—and it hasn't been much—has been razzed by the papers. If I got lit after a football game at college, or took a chorus girl to dinner, it was spread all over the country. I can't stand any more of it. I can't, and I won't. Just because I happen to have money, my wife can't even leave me without their getting out extras about it."

The Lilac-Bush

O see that lilac bush! The North wind blows—
She shivers and she turns herself away—
And, to his wooing, answers "Nay" and "Nay,
Too rough thou art, and clumsy in thy play!"

Then gentle South-West Wind comes courting, soft,
With hint of tears behind his laughter gay.
The lilac bush waves graceful arms aloft
And decks with tender green each tiny spray,
Swaying now this, now that, now every way.

But when the golden sun dries up the showers,
Piercing the mists with bright and glorious ray,
With purple pyramids of scented flowers
She crowns herself, her beauty to display,
And turns her face to him, and whispers "Stay!"

What New York Is Wearing

BY ANNABELLE WORTHINGTON

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern

A darling rig is offered today for the busy modern housewife.

It has dual smartness—practicality too. It may be worn for morning home wear and for active sports.

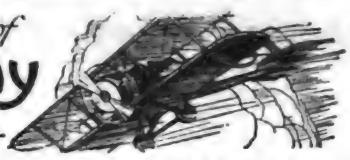
It is peach-pink linen with brown trim. In the miniature view, the long-waisted bodice is shown with the attached shorts. Imagine how quickly one may slip into this in the morning. It is topped by a matching skirt held at the normal waistline by a brown leather belt. The plaited arrangement is smart, sportive and provides necessary fulness.

Style No. 3057 is designed for sizes 16, 18 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust.

Cotton mesh with angora finish, pique, cotton broadcloth in dots or stripes, shantung and rayon novelties are suitable.

Size 36 requires 5⅝ yards 35-inch with ⅝ yard 35-inch contrasting.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS



Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Enclose 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number, and address your order to Wilson Pattern Service, 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto.

Veranda Serenaders

In the sultry stillness of evening a [illegible] trio of wan- settles stealthily on the lawn. The leader mops his flushed brow, waves the bow of his 'cello, then begins carelessly to weave the rich tone of his instrument in with the gentle strumming of his companions. Softly at first, and then the strains of "Old Black Joe" smother the steady droning of the locusts. One by one figures glide from the old house into the lace patterned moonlight on the veranda. A slight pause, and the lively notes of "Money Musk" start grandfather's foot to patting and grandmother's head to nodding over memories of her first Virginia reel. A wilted straw hat is passed from hand to hand; and if the coins chink reassuringly, the leader signals for "My Old Kentucky Home" before they steal away.

The Adventures of Captain Jimmy and his Dog Scottie

What came before—After many adventures flying over China, Captain Jimmy is captured by bandits. He escapes in a freight train and meets an old friend, Lieut. Stone, on board, seeking a brother who has also been captured by bandits.

After we had cut the freight engine free from the cars, we roared along the tracks at a great rate. Now and then we rushed by little groups of soldiers in the fields. Soon we would be near the enemy's headquarters.

"We're getting close up to the lines," I yelled above the infernal racket and clattering our engine was making. "Before long we must abandon ship and set out on foot. Otherwise some stupid Chinese General may have ties put on the track and stop us. And it's going to be just the least bit difficult to make him believe we didn't steal this old wagon. So I think we'd better swap this thing while we still own it."

"Too late. Here he is," Stone replied.

There, on the track, not half a mile away was piled an immense number of wooden ties. Around about were perhaps a hundred soldiers with eight or ten officers on horseback.

"Jump before we're hit, Jed," I hollered. "Get a horse somehow and ride for those woods. There will be plenty of vacant ponies when they hear us go into action with our brakes and whistle. You understand, Fu?" I added.

"Uh Huh — me savvy," Fu answered.

The group of soldiers stood near the obstruction on the track and waited for us to arrive. Quite apparently they expected us to set the brakes and come to a stop. But they didn't know our brakes.

Down we bore on them—not at any great speed—but I could see that we were going to hit with a sound thump.

Suddenly we jammed on the brakes, pulled the whistle valve wide open and skated into their midst like a shrieking, fire-eating dragon.

"Jump!"

And jump we all did. Scottie went into action with the rest of us, and, having the advantage of being on top of the tender, he quite naturally jumped higher and went further.

Out of the corner of my eye I saw him sail thru' the air. A Chinese officer was striving to quiet a frantic horse. Straight as a bullet sailed Scottie landing right on the back of that Chinaman's neck.

Off the horse they both went, and of all the blood curdling yells—whew!—that officer just knew the old dragon had got him at last.

Meanwhile I was doing a bit of sailing on my own account.

I jumped for a man on horseback but I miscalculated my speed and missed him entirely. Just behind him, however, was a second mounted Chinaman and I closed in on him like a football tackler and off he went.

There was no time to stop and palaver and argue about methods. I had to get a horse and get out—and so I did. It was a regular bedlam let loose. Our old locomotive had slid into those ties, kicked a few off the track and then rolled over on her back, wheels in the air, like a tired old horse.

When Poets Were a Race Apart

Occasion took me the other day to the British Museum Reading Room and to while away the rather long interval of waiting for books to be brought to me, I took down an old colume of the Annual Register out of an idle curiosity to see what was happening in the world of letters in the year of my nativity. . . . In poetry, Tennyson reigned in kingly loneliness, with Browning greatly respected but quite a small star to the moon of Tennyson's glory. It was mentioned that "Enoch Arden" had been received that year with immense enthusiasm, and, the recorder added, such was its vogue that it was not easy to go into a drawing-room where you would not find a copy of "Enoch Arden" lying on the table, and if you went on a railway journey you were almost sure to notice that at least one passenger in your carriage would bring the book out of his pocket and become absorbed in reading it.

Tennyson, in fact, shared the popularity of Dickens; he was as supreme in one art as Dickens was in another; but we have no poet nowadays who so towers above his fellows, none who has so subdued the public with his magic that the reading world, roused to excitement by the news that he has finished a new book, hurries out in thousands to spend money in buying it as soon as it is printed. This does not happen now; none of our poets has been able to take such miraculous hold on a vast multitude either by the power of his verse or the picturesque charm of his personality. There are several reasons for this. For one thing all our poets now cut their hair short, are clean shaven, dress like stockbrokers or city clerks, and mix with the crowd as if there were no difference between them and the next man. They are no longer wrapped in mystery as a race apart, like the Levites; they look commonplace and ordinary, and this discourages the public from believing they or their works are otherwise; and the portraits of them scattered freely through the press give them away even to people who have not seen them. I suppose it is difficult to go hero-worshipping unless the hero either looks the part or holds impressively aloof and keeps out of sight.

Another reason for the apathy of the general reader is, perhaps, that the poetry written to-day is not so great, or does not seem so great to him as the poetry of Tennyson seemed to our grandfathers. The only poet of our time who wakened such enthusiasm that his name was in the mouths of everybody, whether they had read him or not, so that the publication of a new poem or book of poems by him became an event of national interest was Kipling. But with the passing of years this glow of eager enthusiasm even for him has cooled and dwindled, until now the influence of his name merely warms the system of the general reader to a respectable ardour.

Probably the Victorians were more emotional, more generously impulsive, less hypercritical and sophisticated than we are; they still believed poets were inspired, but we have been so over-fed with all manner of wonders in these latter years that our poets have lost that halo, and we rank them indifferently with practitioners of other ingeniously mechanical, unsensational crafts.—St. John Adcock, in "The Glory That Was Grub Street."

For Your Hair

Suppose someone told you that actually at your own door, within your own home, was the greatest hair tonic that ever was discovered. That you simply needed to bow before it for a short time now and again; that it cost you nothing, in fact is as cheap as the air you breathe.

Of course you would be delighted. You would count it a fortunate day in the year when you found that out. It is sunshine, pure, unadulterated sunshine.

It may be because sunshine costs nothing that so many people are ignorant of its blessings and so slow to profit from its wonderful curative and strengthening qualities. To bring results, it is necessary to take two sun shampoos a week of between one and two hours' duration. Choose a bright clear day and let the sun's rays fall directly on your head without shining in your eyes. Let it hang loose and part it in as many different ways as possible so the rays will fall on every hair, brushing it well.

Although it is not injurious to dry it in sunlight after a wet shampoo, these by-weekly shampoos should be given without the use of water.

TWILIGHT HOUR STORY

Chicks and Other Little Friends

Before we find out where Fluffy, the persian house cat is, I want to tell you something about Topsy, the black barn cat. Of course, you remember Topsy had some very cute kitties, didn't she? They were big enough now to leave their Mamma, so they were up at the next farm.

Billy had lots of fun with the other three every day, and he used to write Uncle Will and Auntie Kate, whom he visited in the city, about them, so one day he got a letter from his Aunt Kate, saying, "Billy, I wonder if I could have one of those little kitties for a pet. You tell me such funny things about them you make me want to have one. Pick me out the one you think is the prettiest and we'll get it on Sunday when we come out to the farm."

Billy went out to see which was the nicest, but say, he had the worst time choosing the prettiest one. Sometimes he thought the all-black one was the cutest and then he'd have to change his mind because the little grey one all at once stood up on its hind legs while it cuffed Blackie over the ear when they were playing. Then the little black and white was so pretty. It had a white circle all around its neck like a necklace and a lovely white shirt all down its breast and a little white tip on the end of its tail.

Well now, what would you do? Do you know what Billy did? He just shut his eyes and took the first that came to play with a string that he pulled along the floor and that was the little grey one. Billy thought he'd tell his aunt about it standing on its hind legs so she would keep on coaxing it to stand up with a piece of dog biscuit or bit of liver until it could do it for a trick. Then one of Billy's little friends wanted one of the kitties and he gave him the black one. So now there was only one left for Topsy. Topsy wouldn't like it if they should take all the kitties, so Billy left her one.

But now what do you think happened About a week after the other kitties were gone that little kitten ran out in the lane and the baker turned in with his car just at the same minute and quicker than you can think the car ran over the little kitty. You see it was so little the baker didn't see it.

Well, well, that was just terrible. Mamma Lady picked it up and she couldn't help crying a little for, do you know, the kitty was dead, and the baker was so sorry because he did it, but then wasn't it a good thing the pussy didn't feel it at all because it happened so quickly. It happened just as fast as it did to the chicken when it was time for it to go when Daddy wanted a chicken roast for dinner. Do you remember when I told you about that? Just then Billy came along and Mamma Lady showed him the little dead kitty. Of course, you know Billy felt pretty bad about it. Yes, he nearly cried. You see because he was a boy he couldn't cry very well, for boys don't cry, do they? I know sometimes little girls do. However, he felt just awfully sorry. Well, Mamma Lady and Billy went in the house and found a nice white shoe box and they put green leaves and pretty flowers in it and laid the kitty in it and covered it over with the lid. Then Billy dug a whole in the nice soft ground under a shady tree and they put the box in it and marked a place on top with a pretty rose bush.

"Those horrid old cars," said Billy.

"Yes, dear," said Mammay Lady, "now you can see how quickly an accident may happen."

"You don't think Fluffy was run over, do you, Mamma?"

"Oh no, dear, I believe I know where she is. Just wait a bit."

Sunday School Lesson

June 14. Lesson XI—The Resurrection and the Ascension—Luke 24: 25-40, 50, 51. Golden Text—It is Christ Jesus that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us.—Romans 8: 34.

I. THE WALK TO EMMAUS, 24: 25-29.
II. THE BREAKING OF BREAD, 24: 30-35.
III. APPEARANCES IN JERUSALEM, 24: 36-40.

I. THE WALK TO EMMAUS, 24: 25-29.

In connection with earlier essons it was suggested that Jesus did not make public claim to be Messiah, and that it was difficult for his enemies to get evidence against him on this head which they might bring to the notice of Pilate. Here these two disciples on the road to Emmaus explain to the unknown stranger that this Jesus of Nazareth had hown himself indubitably a prophet alike by his deed and his words, and that they had hoped that he might have proved to be the Messiah, the Redeemer of Israel. This hope had been completely shattered by the death of Jesus. The unknown stranger, however, opens the Scriptures to them, expressing astonishment that they had read the Old Testament without perceiving the principle clearly laid down there that the Messiah must enter his glory through the gate of suffering, vs. 25-27. The Christians, after the teaching of Paul had been spread through the Church, began to glory in the Cross of Christ and to boast of it, but to the Church before Paul's day, it seems, the terrible death of Jesus was a great stumbling-block, something that must be explained or explained away, not an event in which Christians could rejoice. It was customary, therefore, for the early Church to try to show that the death of Christ had been foretold in Scripture. They based their argument upon such passages as Isaiah chap. 53 and Psalm 22. The Old Testament alone was the "Bible" of the Church until, many years later, the books of the New Testament were written and accepted gradually as "Scripture." In their arguments with the Jews the Christians largely based themselves upon their interpretation of the Old Testament.

V. 28. The exact site of Emmaus is uncertain, but it seems to have been only some four miles from Jerusalem.

II. THE BREAKING OF BREAD, 24: 30-35.

It is recognized that in the four Gospels and in Paul (1 Cor. 15 4ff) we get divergent accounts of the resurrection appearances of Jesus which it is very difficult or impossible completely to harmonize. Luke alone tells the story of the appearance to the disciples at Emmaus. The fact that it is difficult to fit this story in with others is not a sufficient reason for doubting it, but it is best to take the story as representing and typifying the sacramental experience of the early Church. Jesus was recognized in the breaking of the bread. It seems that, though he was the guest, he took the place of the host, and as he blest the bread, perhaps in the old familiar way, they recognized him. The language of v. 30, "he took . . and blest . . . and brake . . and gave" seems to be clearly sacramental language. We cannot by any means avoid all the difficulties of the story, nor can all our questions be answered, but we can say with much confidence that the story represents, not only the use the Christians made of the Old Testament in their thought and preaching, but their realization of the living presence of Jesus with them when they gathered for "the breaking of bread." If we are able to take the story in this way, it brings it very near to the experience of countless Christians throughout the centuries whose hearts have burned within them as they searched the Scriptures and who, at the table where Jesus is the host, have realized his presence and is resurrection from the dead.

III. APPEARANCES IN JERUSALEM, 24: 36-40.

The disciples return to Jerusalem and find the rest of the followers of Jesus gathered together and already convinced of the Resurrection because the Lord has appeared to Peter, v. 34. This implies that the first appearance of the Lord was to Peter, as Paul states, 1 Cor. 1: . One of our great puzzles is the question why our first three Gospels give no account of the appearance to Peter. For this we must turn to the Gospel of John, chap. 21, where the scene is laid in Galilee.

As the Resurrection is being discussed, Jesus himself appears in the midst of the disciples, and they are terrified, thinking that they are seeing a ghost, v. 37. It is not very profitable to discuss how the risen Jesus could have had "flesh and bones," for the point is simply that Jesus reassures them that it is himself in very truth, and not a ghost. Again, the Resurrection of Jesus is something very much more than the resuscitation of a dead body as in the story of Lazarus. Jesus was neither a ghost, nor had he come back to life again like Lazarus,

But warm, sweet, tender, even yet
A present help is he;
And faith hath still its Olivet
And love its Galilee.

The spiritual significance of the Resurrection is often lost in endless and inconclusive discussions as to the nature of his risen body. First and last the Resurrection was a great spiritual experience to all who saw him.

Scotland Plans Research In Dairy Industry

Ayr, Scotland—The rapid growth of facilities in post-war years for research into problems affecting the agricultural industry in Scotland was emphasized by William Adamson, Secretary of State for Scotland, when opening the Hannah Dairy Research Institute, at Auchencrieve, near Ayr, on April 25.

They were met, he said, for the purpose of inaugurating an institute equipped to investigate problems affecting the dairy industry, which was of such great importance in the agriculture of the southwest of Scotland.

When the last census of agricultural production was taken, Mr. Adamson said, it was shown that the value of milk and dairy produce in Scotland had risen from a total of $22,500,000 in 1908 to $44,500,000 in 1925. This, after making full allowance for increase in prices, showed considerable progress. The value of dairy produce ranked second only to that of livestock in the agricultural produce of Scotland.

Mr. Adamson pointed out that 51 per cent. of Scotland's dairy cows were situated in the western and southwestern counties, and that 59 per cent. of the total supply of milk came from that area.

The Hannah Institute was planned in accordance with a proposal to the Department of Agriculture of Auchencrieve estate by John M. Hannah of Girvan Mains, Girvan, Ayrshire, one of the leading growers of early potatoes on the Ayrshire coast.

Hudson Bay Port Opening in 1932

Ottawa—The official opening of the Port of Churchill on Hudson Bay will not take place until 1932. This was stated in the House of Commons recently by Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals during continued discussion, in committee of supply, of an item amounting to $6,000,000 for the Hudson Bay Railway and terminal construction. The item, which was under consideration for some hours, was passed by the committee.

Dr. Manion informed the committee about all that could be done this year would be to have some shipments out of Churchill. These were regarded as important, and the department was devoting its energies to getting the port into condition.

Dominion Grants License To Windsor Radio Station

Ottawa. — Because an ethereal "curtain" cuts Windsor off from the Toronto and other Canadian radio stations, the first broadcasting license to be issued in two years or more has been granted to a Windsor syndicate, Hon. Alfred Duranleau, Minister of Marine, recently confirmed in the House of Commons.

Growth

It is not growing like a tree
In bulk doth make man better be
Or standing long an oak, three hundred year,
To fall a log at last, dry, bald, and sere:
A lily of a day
Is fairer far in May,
Although it fall and die that night—
It was the plant and flower of light!
In small proportions we just beauties see;
And in short measures life may perfect be.

147,686 Canadians Receive Pensions

Northwest Rebellion Accounts For Sixty-eight

Ottawa.—Out of an estimated population of 9,934,500 during the year 1930 in Canada, 147,686 persons were receiving pensions of one kind or another. The total amount paid out in pensions during 1930 was $56,757,209. This information was tabled in the House of Commons recently in a return requested by Hon. Ian Mackenzie (Lib., Vancouver Centre). The estimate of population was made by the Bureau of Statistics for June 1, 1930.

The return reveals that 68 persons in 1930 were receiving pensions amounting to $24,756, arising out of the Northwest Rebellion, European was pensioners totalled 86,345 and the amount they received came to $44,234,232. In addition to this 2,229 veterans were in receipt of allowances totalling $318,029. Pensions arising out of militia service numbered 1,093 and the amount received was $865,176. One person was in receipt of a pension arising out of civil flying of $346.

Information supplied by the Department of Labor indicated 57,950 persons were in receipt of old age pensions amounting to $11,314,670 during 1930.

The Simple Things of Earth Are Loveliest

The simple things of earth are loveliest:
A fire on the hearth, the lamplight's glow;
The hour when the heart finds peace and rest,
A mother's lullaby crooned soft and low;

The wayside blossom, tiny woodland stream
That sings a happy, lilting roundelay;
Soft, billowy clouds that drift as in a dream,
The hush of dawn, the sun's last flaming ray;

The friendly trees that give of fruit and shade,
The tendrils of the grape-like clinging hands;
O there are scenes more gorgeously arrayed,
But these the heart has known and understands.

Mankind has reached the pinnacle of power,
Has conquered land and sky and ocean's crest,
And yet, when comes the heart's deep, prayerful hour,
He knows the simple things are loveliest.

The Newsprint Industry

Canada now manufactures 37 per cent. of the world's supply of newsprint paper, exceeding in 1929 the production of the United States by over 1,300,000 tons. Preliminary figures for 1930 show a lead of over 1,200,000 tons. Canada's exports of this commodity are almost 10 times as great as those of Germany, next in importance, and exceed the exports of the rest of the world combined. Canada's exports of newsprint are only exceeded in value by her exports of wheat. The manufacture of fine papers and paper other than newsprint in Canada is developing, and Canadian mills are now equipped to manufacture practically every variety of paper used in the country at the present time.

Big Liner's "Wash" Done In 24 Hours

Southampton, England—Demanding and receiving 24-hour laundry service, the United States liner Leviathan cleared for New York recently in what was probably a record turnaround for transatlantic shipping.

Sixty thousand pieces of linen were washed, ironed and returned during the 23 hours she was in port, the last batch coming aboard a few minutes before the gangplanks were lifted. She took on 2830 tons of oil and 1,000,000 gallons of water in the same period.

Total number of poultry on farms at end of 1930 in the Dominion was estimated at 60,795,000, of which 56,247,000 were hens and chickens. Value of this poultry was placed at $54,852,000.

Radio is to be used to aid in forest fire protection in Northern Saskatchewan. The provincial forestry department has decided to establish a system of look-out towers equipped with short wave radio sending and receiving sets.

A catch of 244 salmon by three anglers in nine days has been reported recently from the Cain's River, New Brunswick, by G. W. Scott, of Keene, New Hampshire, who was one of the party, and himself netted 111 of the fish.

More United States branch factories are established in Canada than in any other country outside of the United States itself. At the beginning of last year over 500 such factories were in the Dominion, representing investments of $540,590,000.

Shipping of all kinds entering and leaving Canadian ports has increased 60 per cent. in the last ten years. Total net tonnage, exclusive of coasting, for year to March 31, 1930, was 89,428,789 tons. To this must be added net tonnage of 87,734,773 tons for vessels entered and cleared coastwise.

A gold-headed cane was presented by the Montreal Harbor Commission to Captain A. Freer, master of Canadian Pacific Steamship Duchess of Richmond, on the occasion of the first arrival of the season at Montreal of a trans-Atlantic liner. The Duchess of Richmond reached port April 19.

Increased tourist traffic to Canada from the United States is foreshadowed by reports from Canadian Pacific passenger agents in the U. S., which show a much larger number of enquiries from would-be travellers than in former years, C. B. Foster, passenger traffic manager of the railway, stated recently in an interview at Saint John.

Canada said au revoir but not good-bye to Their Majesties the King and Queen of Siam at the border station of Portal, Saskatchewan, whither they had travelled by Canadian Pacific on their journey to New York. They were passengers by the Empress of Japan on that ship's record-breaking passage from Yokohama to Vancouver.

"It's not so much the captain as the chief engineer who makes speed records possible at sea," Captain Samuel Robinson, of the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Japan, told the Vancouver Board of Trade recently, at a luncheon in his honor, after his ship had clipped another seven hours from her previous speed record across the Pacific. She had averaged 22.27 knots over the 4800-mile course from Yokohama to Victoria, a speed hitherto unheard of.

Largest and most powerful locomotive of its kind in the world and unique on this continent, Canadian Pacific Railway "2000" type engine, product of Canadian brains and skill and composed largely of Canadian materials, has just been turned out by the Angus Shops of the company at Montreal, for use in the railway's Rocky Mountain territory. Engine and tender weigh together 292½ tons and it has a tractive effort of 80,000 lbs., sufficient to pull a mile-long freight train of 150 forty-ton trucks, weighing 6,000 tons, on a level track. ACTION IS NEEDED

The last fifty years have seen a tremendous decrease in the occurance of certain diseases. This has not happened by chance. It is the direct result of the application of the knowledge which has come to us concerning the cause and manner of spread of these diseases.

There is a simple explanation as to why we have been able to combat certain diseases sucessfully and why we have been unable to withstand the attacks of others. By means of research and investigation, we have learned enough about some diseases to enable us to deal with them. We remain in comparative ignorance, however, concerning certain others.

It is not to be supposed that knowledge in itself brings results—far from it. Results come only when the knowledge we have is applied. When an epidemic of typhoid fever occurs, it is not due to lack of knowledge as to how such an epidemic could have been preventeil. The epidemic occurs because the knowledge regarding the safeguarding of water and milk supplies was not put into practise.

We are apt to sit back and think what a fine thing it is that we know how to prevent diphtheria. We say to ourselves what a relief it must be to parents to know that they no longer have to live in dread lest their child fall a victim to ths disease.

To our surprise, some day, it is brought to our attention that many children still suffer and that not a few die from this disease—diphtheria—which we understood had become a thing of the past.

Why is this so? It is not because we were misinformed. It is quite true that diphtheria can be prevented. The explanation is that parents have not availed themselves of the means for prevention—they have not had their children protected; they left them defenceless.

What we wish to say to parents is simply this. It has been shown that, by the injection of diphtheria toxoid, your child can be immuniized or protected against diptheria. Whether or not you take advantage of this knowledge and have your child protected rests with you. No one else is responsible; on one is going to have it done for you. Your child cannot go and have it done for himself.

It is a simple, safe and effective way of protecting your child from a disease which not only takes the lives of several hundreds each year, but which damages the bodies of those who recover from its attacks.

Action is needed. It is only by the action of parents that their children will be protected and diphtheria be made a rare disease.

Summer Travel on the Great Lakes

The Canadian Pacific Railway announces that the company's three passenger ships, plying the Great Lakes from Port McNicoll to Fort William, will commence their summer sailing schedules on May 4 from Owen Sound and from Port McNicoll and Fort William on May 23. Thereafter, there will be three sailings weekly, one from Owen Sound to Fort William on Mondays, returning Thursdays and two each Port McNicoll to Fort William Wednesdays and Saturdays and eastbound Fort William to Port McNicoll same days. The announcement opens an alluring vista of attractive trips for the tourist who wishes to combine beauty of scenery with cool travelling under luxurious conditions in the sweltering summer days that are now approaching. These vessels, S.S. Assiniboia, Keewatin and Manitoba, are well appointed boats offering every comfort to travellers and their route is through the Georgian Bay, Lake Huron, the Sault Ste. Marie locks where there is a rise of about 20 feet to Lake Superior which they traverse, and up that vast inland sea to Fort William. The passenger travels about 600 miles, spending 39 hours on the waters of these lakes, often out of sight of land, and getting the beneficial effects of an ocean voyage. Dancing, plenty of space, strolls along promenade decks, cozy cabins, well-appointed dining-saloons, glimpses of ever-changing and beautiful scenes, fit every taste and combine to make up a trip that will linger long in the memory. Travellers who are thinking of a journey across the continent from east to west, or vice-versa will find the trip on the Great Lakes makes a most welcome change in the monotony of rail travel. Lay-out shows Canadian Pacific ship ready to sail from Port McNicoll with passenger train alongside; and passing Thunder Cape, impressive beauty spot on Lake Superior.

Juniors Visit County Homes

There was something far beyond the mere words "J.W.I. tour," in the term used to describe a trip made by Junior Institute members to homes in West Chinguacousy and Brampton last week. When the "tour" was over, 75 girls had had opened to them new vistas on home planning, new ideas on accomplishments achieved by creative brains guiding clever fingers, new suggestions as to adopting old furniture to modern uses. Above everything, the visitors were brought emphatically to realize that the finest achievements in home-making come from a combination of artistic taste and a tireless ambition to realize that taste, by personal effort.

At the home of Mrs. Harry Laidlaw, the first stop after the party, headed by Miss Alma Wise, Miss Ethel Chapman of the Ontario Farmer and Miss Florence Eadie, head of J.W.I. branches, left the Department of Agriculture, the young visitors were shown a plan by which a large rural home can be divided to accommodate two families, the young wife and her "in-laws." This commodious home, erected over 65 years ago, lends itself beautifully to such a division and gives two separate homes, preserving the individuality of either home, and making it possible for both to be thrown together as one large home if necessary.

What a busy, ambitious and inventive young lady, backed by the experience and knowledge gained from connection with a J.W.I. can accomplish was demonstrated here. The guests entered by the kitchen, where the color scheme was carried out in pale yellow. The same scheme went on into the little dining-room adjoining, and what struck the exploring guests was the simple dignity combined with beauty that can be achieved with everyday materials. The same thought was in every mind, as the keen young visitors took in the details of an improvised bathroom, that what a woman wants she will have though she be cast away on a desert island. Lovely color tones prevailed here, soft roses, delicate retiring blues, with just a hint of darker richer tones intermingled.

But, in the big room downstairs, part sittingroom, part dining room, with the division between the two sections, so artistically made by a big davenport, a rocking chair and a small table, the visitors took many and detailed notes. A lovely old set-in cupboard adds greatly to the impressiveness of the end used for a dining room, and a beautifully-framed console with, at either end, a cluster-bracket in dull orange tones, hung over a walnut buffet, wonderfully in keeping with the in-set cupboard.

The party was divided in admiration at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alec. McKinney, Jr., between the great sitting room with its huge fireplace of field stone, created by turning three smaller rooms into one, and the artistic treatment by this clever J.W.I. member, of some beautiful pioneer furniture. One room might have been lifted bodily from a pioneer home at Alloa, except that it showed modern treatment with paint and modern needlework in curtains and hangings. Everywhere in the house was a mingling of lovely pioneer things with modern ones just as lovely in their way and the complete harmony bespoke the artist mind and hand guiding the accomplishment.

While Mrs. McKinney was telling the details of her work in the home, Mr. McKinney was making a romance of a chicken breeding station. He has been in charge of this work for the past sixteen years, getting his start at the first school fair held in Peel, when he won four first prizes for chickens. Now he does everything according to Hoyle, which is according to the way it is done at the O.A.C.

Poultry producers among the ladies taking part in the tour hung on his words about feeding and brooding and litters and the other etcetra of the work. And although Miss Ethel Chapman's was the only notebook in evidence, one had only to watch the faces of the listeners to realize that much of what Mr. McKinney said is going home to be tried out there. Twelve hundred chicks he will have for the market this year, and the way he is doing this big job looks no harder than if he had a backyard flock of a dozen or so.

Watch hands were pointing towards the noon hour, and vigorous appetites were demanding recompense for a long and busy morning in the open, when the cars were turned towards the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Dolson, that lovely pioneer residence built away back in the early years of the 19th century.

Glad indeed were the travellers to rest in the shade of the fine old trees surrounding this lawn, with its outlook towards the great pasture in which some of the famous Jersey herd were on show. First they had their pictures taken, and by the way, these turned out very good indeed, and may be had by ordering them from the Department of Agriculture in Brampton.

A big pail of Jersey milk was added to the supply of lemonade, made to take with the luncheon, but good as the latter was, it was passed up by many a J.W.I. girl who had studied her nutrition and profited by it.

This home teems with articles of interest far beyond the scope of household science to describe. There were the handsome chairs won by the late Mrs. Dolson, mother of Mr. J. M. Dolson, fifty years ago, as an award for her skill in butter-making. There were tall and handsome cupboards made in a generation fond of solidity and usefulness combined with beauty of line and finish. Here was an olive-wood tray, made by a black boy in a far African Mission School, as a wedding present for the present chatelaine of the house, and sent by her aunt. Here is a lamp shade with its own special significance, the gift of a Chattanooga Indian. And blending all into the perspective of a welcoming and homey atmosphere, the touch of Peel's former Home Demonstrator.

Fed and rested, the girls resumed the tour, to reach the home of Mrs. George Love. Here, the gardens and perenniala, their treatment and cultivation, were the primary object of the visit, but Mrs. Love showed the visitors a water system easy to set up in any farm home, and a feature which she urged every girl to consider an absolutely necessary feature in her home.

Everyone declared Miss Wise and Miss Eadie, who made the itinerary of the trip had kept the best to the last This was the home of the Misses Taylor on David Street. From their large home on Victoria Crescent to their bijou residence on David Street, they have taken all the treasures of their former home, but they have adapted them so as to preserve their beauty and their aesthetic value, while making them fit the smaller quarters which they now occupy. This adaptation has been a work of love, and in that way most truly the work of artists, for the three sisters have each had a part in the delightful labor.

An so the tour ended, each girl who had taken part in it carrying home a sheaf of pictures in her memory from which to cull ideas. From these she, too, will gain the inspiration, and will enter that most delightful and precious of all occupations, home-making, equipped with the experience of her sister J.W.I. members, and the impetus they have given her own artistic and creative powers.

Annual value of forests products in Canada is placed around $500,000,000 by the Canadian Government Forestry Service, and over 200,000 persons are employed in this work.

Total value of crude bullion gold in Ontario for the first two months of 1931 is placed at $6,517,254 as compared with $5,352,395 for the same period of 1930, an increase of nearly 22%. If this continues, all previous records of gold output are likely to be exceeded this year.

Position of president of the Boy Scouts Association of Canada has been offered to and accepted by E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, whose interest in boy welfare has long been recognized all over the Dominion.

John Minard, section hand with the Canadian Pacific Railway for many years and pensioned at the age of 73, celebrated his 105th birthday April 2. He does not use glasses, eats well, sleeps well and enjoys life. He has no prescriptions for exceeding the century mark.

Sponsored by the Alberta Motorcycle Association, the Western Canada Motorcycle hill-climbing championships will be decided at Banff in the Canadian Rockies on May 24 and will be followed the same day by the Banff annual regatta.

A shipment of 800,000 salmon eggs has recently been forwarded to the Dominion Fish Hatchery at Flat Lands, Restigouche County to receive treatment prior to being deposited in the Nipisiguit River as a part of the 1931 programme for restocking New Brunswick fishing waters.

Canadians, from coast to coast, heard the voices of His Excellency the Governor-General and Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, prime Minister of the Dominion, May 11, in endorsation of the work of the Canadian Red Cross through stations linked by the radio broadcast transmission system of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's Telegraphs.

In the last analysis the railroad safety movement's success is traceable largely to teamwork. Each railroad worker is constantly reminded that safety is paramount. Safety practices have become habitual, therefore they do not lessen efficiency. Railroad passenger service is now more efficient as well as safer than ever before, says a prominent United States newspaper.

The new 6¼ hour service between Montreal and Toronto, both ways, which came into operation on Canadian Pacific lines end April, has proved highly popular with travellers, and heavy traffic on these trains is reported. Ottawa has also been brought half an hour closer to Montreal and passengers for Quebec have had 15 minutes clipped from the time of the journey.

Popularity of the reduced week-end fares which went into effect May 1 on all Canadian Pacific lines was assured from the start, according to reports from traffic officials of the railway. They represent a saving of approximately 25% to the travelling public with reduced fares available from noon Friday to noon Sunday and return portions up to midnight of the Monday following.

Presbytery Met Here June 2nd

Parades as a disquieting element in Sabbath observance were condemned in a resolution passed at a meeting of the Toronto Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, held at Streetsville on Tuesday, Rev. A. F. MacGregor, former clerk of the presbytery, sponsored the motion in which it was pointed out that the parades have a tendency to distract attention at service and Sunday School hours, and therefore interfere with the attendance at regular services of the church.

Mr. MacGregor claimed that while the parades could not be deemed a breach of the civil law, they did encroach on the rights and privileges of those who wished to keep the Sabbath day one of quiet, rest or worship. Ministers who participated in the services, members of the presbytery declared, were largely responsible for the increasing popularity of the Sunday parade. The resolution urged a general tightening up on the commercialized Sunday.

A call from Brampton to Rev. J. M. Anderson, of Australia, was laid on the table until Mr. Anderson is fully admitted to the ministry here, and a commission was appointed to clear the matter up as quickly as possible. Rev. C. T. Meek, of Long Branch, was granted a week's time to consider a call from Uxbridge and Quaker Hill Churches. A call to Rev. Wm. Allan, Peterboro, from Dovercourt Road Church, Toronto, was sustained and ordered transmitted to the presbytery of Peterboro.

MEADOWVALE

Meadowvale United W.M.S. entertained seventeen members of Cooksville branch, holding a joint meeting in the Presbytery. Mrs. W. J. Brett greeted the visitors. Miss Jessie Gooderham and Mrs. Broddy took devotional exercises, Mrs. Lorne Davidson reporting on the sectional conference at Toronto, and Mrs. Roy Ferguson taking the study hour. Mrs. C. S. Jones, Cooksville, gave a short address, and Miss Wayly sang.

WEDDINGS

Johnston—Taggart

At the parsonage of the Pearen Memorial United Church, Mount Dennis, on Wednesday evening, June 3, Vera Margaret, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs James Taggart Shelburne, was married to Victor C. A. Johnston of Streetsville, Rev. W. W. Wallace officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston will reside in Streetsville.

Turney—Crysdale

The marriage was solemnized at Bloor Street United Church, Toronto, of Ruby Mary, daughter of Mr. Arthur G. Crysdale, and Mr. Omar L. Turney, son of Mrs. H. B. Turney. Rev. Dr. George Pidgeon officiated. The church was lovely with lilacs, iris, snowballs and palms and ferns. Mrs. William Bouch presided at the organ. The bride wore a pretty gown of pale peach chiffon and lace with a Swiss made hat to match and carried Ophelia roses and lily-of-the-valley. Miss Gladys Crysdale was her maid of honor, wearing a green chiffon frock with hat to match, and carried Columbia roses. Little Joan Crysdale was flower girl in a peach crepe de chine frock with blue hat and socks and carried a nosegay of forget-me-nots. Mr. Norman Turney was best man and the usher, Mr. Gordon Crysdale. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's father, where the mother of the groom received in a flowered chiffon gown with black hat and corsage of roses and lily-of-the-valley. Later the couple left on an extended motor trip through northern Ontario, the bride travelling in a navy blue ensemble trimmed with gray squirrel, with matching accessories. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Turney will live in Streetsville.

OBITUARY

Catharine Brown

Mrs. Catharine Trimble, who passed away last week in Toronto, was born in Streetsville, the daughter of the late John and Catharine Brown. Her grandfather, Mr. Cummings, lived on the Ninth Line, Trafalgar, on the farm now occupied by Mr. W. G. Cooke. She attended S.S. No. 10, with her brother, Ephraim. Pretty Kitty Brown, as she was lovingly called at school, was a great favorite with the teacher and scholars, her bright, sunny temper winning her friends on all sides. Now that her sufferings are over, those of us who knew her in her bright girlhood days, know that her rest is sweet, and free from pain and suffering.

Pinecrest! that's our Camp!
And nothing can our spirits damp,
We sleep on the ground, the bunk and the hay,
And we laugh and sing the live-long day,
We're out for fun and we get it too,
Come along and see what we do,
Pinecrest! Pinecrest!

This is only one of the many songs, rounds, yells and calls, that may be heard around a camp fire when the sun has set. Can you think of anything nicer than to sit around the blazing fire wrapped in an Indian blanket, listening to famous Indian legends, singing camp songs or hymns to say nothing of the delights in watching an Indian tribe present a carefully and mysteriously prepared dramatization, the costumes of which are most fantastic.

Camp is the place where you learn many things. Swimming is taught to those who have never mastered the art. Proficiency tests and life-saving are given to those who can swim well enough to practise for these.

There are many other delightful things to do. Pinecrest camp is surely a place you can't afford to miss this year, boys and girls. So boys, send your registration fee of $2.00 to Mr. Albert Bolster, Brampton, and girls, send the same to Miss Robena Ward, Brampton. The Camp Pavilion is nice and fresh in a new coat of paint which will add greatly to its charm. Don't delay, decide right now to be a Camper.

DIXIE

Miss Anna McCarthy, daughter of Councillor Thomas McCarthy, has been awarded $25 cash prize for high standing in third-year work in St. Michael's hospital, where she is in training as a nurse.

CLARKSON

J. H. Pinchin, recently appointed clerk of Toronto township, and Mrs. Pinchin, together with their family, celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary at their home at Clarkson on Saturday. He is also secretary-treasurer of the Clarkson-Dixie Fruit Growers' Association and operates a fruit farm and tile business at Clarkson. For 14 years he was a township assessor.

Gas By-Laws Carry

Both Port Credit and Toronto Township voted on a by-law submitted to the electors, which sought to grant rights to the Consumers' Gas Company of Toronto to extend its mains into the two municipalities on the same terms as obtained in Toronto. In Port Credit the by-law was carried by 301 in favor and 85 against, while in Toronto Township it was sustained by 997 votes to 125. This is the first extension of the company's mains outside of York County, and with some twenty miles to be constructed, the outlay will be in the neighborhood of $100,000.

VICTOR JOHNSTON'S FAREWELL TO THE GANG

Good-bye, boys, at last I'm married,
All regrets are now in vain;
Do you wish that I had tarried
And were with you once again.

Bachelors often cause much sorrow,
For which comfort can it bring,
To promice, like Harry says, tomorrow
I will give you a Phone ring.

Now, I want to say to Harry,
Cut out promises so cold,
Be a man, no longer tarry,
Buy your girl a ring of gold.

To my friends who are united,
You know I'm no longer free,
But at present I'm delighted,
So please do not pity me.

Young men, my example follow,
Choose a mate for life's steep hill,
Wandering alone, life is so hollow,
Just look, at lonesome Harry Gill.

Annual Meeting of Peel Juniors

Financial reports from both the Junior Farmers and Junior Institute organizations of Peel County show them to be in a flourishing state. Jack Drennan, Streetsville, and Florence Elliott, Malton, retiring Presidents of the J.F.A. and J.I. reviewed the work done during the past year at the annual meetings at Ferndale Park, June 6th, and stated that the encouragement given the Juniors through the various projects developed the rural leadership abilities of the members. Livestock and Domestic Science Judging Competitions in October, Dramatic Series during the winter, Public Speaking Contest this spring, the new Softball Series and Calf Club work this summer, are all projects which are doing educational and recreational services. Short Courses in Agriculture and Home Economics teach the fundamentals of good farming and house-keeping to the young people of the community in which they are held. Boys' Home Garden and Girls' Canning Clubs encourage the cultivation and use of vegetables raised on the farm and also the beautification of the home buildings by the planting of flowers and shrubs.

The year 1930-31 was an outstanding one for Junior work in Peel. At present there are six active J.I. and four active J.F.A. in the County. Brampton, Cheltenham and Caledon rural young people are making plans to reorganize this fall.

The following officers were elected at the annual meetings for the year 1931-32:

Boys

President—Bill Bovaird, Brampton.
Vice-President — Bill Anderson, Trinity.
Secretary-Treasurer—George Hostrawser, Ebenezer.

Girls

President — Beatrice Quennell, Streetsville.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. J. Shaw, Ebenezer.
2nd Vice-Pres. — Miss Frances Parkinson, Trinity.
Secretary - Treasurer — Wilma Boucher, Brampton.
Asst. Secretary-Treasurer—Lillian South, Trinity.

OAT AND ALFALFA COMPETITIONS FOR PEEL

Have you read or heard of the Field Crop Competitions sponsored by the Peel Agricultural Society this year? If not, there is still time to make entry in one or both of the classes.

A standing Field Crop Competition in Oats has been decided upon by the Directors of the Society. Each field must have an area of five acres and will be scored during ripening time by departmental judges. It is suggested that the following varieties be selected or entered by the competitors in order to encourage the best varieties as determined by field experiments over a large range of years at the O.A.C., Guelph. Banner, O.A.C. 72, Alaska, O.A.C. 144, O.A.C. 3, Gold Rain, Victory and Abundance. All weeds should be hand pulled before they mature and fence bottoms cut out with a scythe to give the field a tidy appearance. Freedom from weeds, insect injury, rust and smut, vigour and uniformity of stand, and purity of variety will be considered by the judges for the placing of the awards.

A combined field crop and cleaned seed competition for the alfalfa growers is also being held. Five acres will constitute the minimum acreage and field inspection will be made at blossoming time to determine purity of variety and suitability of the crop to produce seed. In the alfalfa class it is necessary for the competitors to thoroughly clean and have ready for inspection by December 1st, 1931, 10 bushels of alfalfa seed. No prize money will be paid for any seed grading lower than No. 1. However, Peel County has a number of excellent small seed cleaners which turn out clean samples.

Substantial prizes are offered by the Ontario Dept. of Agriculture and the Peel Agricultural Society. If you have good fields of Oats and Alfalfa write T. W. Thomson, Secretary of the Brampton Fall Fair, or J. C. Shearer, Ag. Rep., and be eligible for the cash prizes.

MONEY

Money buys so many things,
But not always honor brings;
Men who clutch it soon grow cold,
Sacrifice too much for gold.

Hoarded riches often curse,
Peace destroying, sometimes worse,
Covet money if you will,
Ask if there be lacking still.

Happiness, content of mind,
Riches of a rarer kind.
Money? Thank you, not for me,
You may have my poem free.

LOCAL NEWS

Mr. A. S. Berrill has secured the contract for building an extension to Trinity Church, Port Credit.

Rev. W. T. McCree, M.A., is attending the Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Toronto this week.

Local representatives will attend the annual meeting of the Orange Grand Lodge at Hamilton on June 17th.

Mr. Christie, of Toronto, is relieving Mr. E. E. King, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, who is taking some holidays.

Watch for Eden Church annual garden party at Mr. D. Sinclair's on July 7th. Jamie Reid, assisted by other well-selected artists, will furnish the program.

Very proud indeed are St. Andrew's congregation of the honor conferred upon one of their number, and they congratulate Dr. George G. Treanor on his success in bringing honor to his family and Church.

Rev. Mr. Stewart, of Prince Edward Island, occupied the pulpit of St. Andrew's Church, Sunday morning, during the absence of Rev. Mr. McCree. He gave an excellent sermon. He was accompanied by Rev. Mr. Lynn of the same place.

Reeve Leslie Pallett and First Deputy-Reeve R. S. Whaley, recently elected to the Toronto township council, entertained upwards of 500 ratepayers at a dance in Pine Grove park Friday night. Old-time dancing featured the evening, with Russell Jamieson calling off.

The dead body of L. Tilson, of Spence Royson, near Burk's Falls, was found lying on the Dundas Street Highway, west of Erindale. The man had evidently been hit by a motorist, and upon investigation Charles Moyse, of Toronto, was arrested and placed in gaol.

Mrs. Biggar, Omagh, and Mrs. Armstrong, Toronto, visited with Mrs. J. and Mrs. D. Ross on Friday. Mrs. Armstrong, before her marriage, was Miss Jessie Urquhart. She formerly lived in the house now occupied by the Ross ladies. She has kindly thoughts of her old home, the village and the old Kirk, also of her friends of long ago.

Mr. John McClelland, accompanied by friends from Port Credit, attended service in St. Andrew's Church Sunday morning. The old Kirk has many tender memories for those who worshipped there in the long ago. Very sweet and tender are the memories of the long pews where the children sat beside their parents and listened to the words of the minister so attentively.

Several Streetsville Oddfellows went to Port Credit Sunday afternoon and joined the brethren there in their annual service, which was held in the lodge room. Rev. Samuel Lundie conducted the service, while Rev. Mr. McAffee, of Regina, delivered the sermon. Rev. McAffee is an old friend of Rev. Lundie, having been on adjoining charges out west for seven years. Mr. McAffee has been an Oddfellow 32 years.

On Monday afternoon a number of her friends from St. Andrew's congregation, Streetsville, visited Mrs. Jane Waldie at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Alex. Murphy, Port Credit. A very pleasant afternoon was spent. Mrs. Waldie was pleased to meet old friends again. We found her smiling and happy with her mind as clear as in the days of yore.

The afternoon passed quickly with pleasant chats and reminiscences. Mrs. Murphy served afternoon tea, after which the guests strolled around the beautifully kept lawn and flower beds. After bidding good-bye to our beloved friend, the party hit the trail for home, pleased with the afternoon.

CONGRATULATIONS TO VICTOR JOHNSTON

When a club of men sit smoking,
On each other they rely.
About their sweethearts one night joking,
Victor Johnston looked so shy.

Wondering why Vic. was so happy,
Heck said, "We'll investigate,"
Then they made their search so snappy
And found Vic. had found a mate.

Thus it is our friends will leave us
And with them we now rejoice,
Now, dear Victor, please believe us,
We are delighted with your choice.

Our good wishes we can't measure,
But they are not, for stores of wealth,
For we wish you greater treasure,
Love, contentment, peace and health.

TULE MARSH MURDER

STORY OF A MISSING ACTRESS AND THE TAXING OF WITS TO EXPLAIN HER FATE.

BY NANCY BARR MAVITY.

SYNOPSIS.

Sheila O'Shea, formerly a popular actress, and now the wife of the young multi-millionaire, Don Ellsworth, disappears, leaving no trace behind her. Don visits Dr. Cavanaugh, the famous criminologist, and confesses that his married life has been very unhappy.

CHAPTER III.—(Cont'd.)

"If she did leave you," Dr. Cavanaugh amended, so low that he might have been only thinking aloud.

"But—" Don's face was a study in angry bewilderment.

"There are other possibilities. I doubt, in fact, if the one you have mentioned would be the first to occur to most men in your position."

"Well, she couldn't very well be kidnapped from her own boudoir, in a house full of servants. And by the same token, she couldn't have met with an accident, or have been held up by bandits without leaving a trace. I did not mean to speak harshly of her just now, when I said she might have staged a vanishing act to plague me. She wouldn't set out deliberately to hurt anyone—she merely wouldn't notice whether they were getting hurt or not if they got in her way. And you must remember that Sheila was used to the most complete freedom of action. She wasn't the sort of person you could put in a bottle and keep there. Suppose she turned up in a week or two and announced that she had merely gone away to pay a sudden visit and that it was surely her own affair, not that of the police. A pretty fool I'd look!"

"Yes," Dr. Cavanaugh agreed softly, "but, you see, she hasn't turned up."

"No-o," Ellsworth admitted slowly. "But I still think Mrs. Kane may know where she is."

"My dear man, beware of obsessions!" The detor's tone was almost bantering. "However, you may be quite right, of course—she may."

"I've even thought every day that I might get a letter from Sheila, herself, with an explanation."

"And if she did leave you—you'll have to pardon me for being very personal—would she have any reason that you know of? If you let her see as plainly as you have let me see that you regarded your marriage as a failure, the knowledge could not have made her particularly happy, could it?"

"She'd never have left me just because I wasn't enthusiastic about our marriage," Don said with bitter emphasis. "She was getting very much what she wanted out of it—until she decided that she wanted something else. I did think of that, of course—that she had gone with another man. She could turn any man she wanted blind and crazy. I know, because she did it to me—and the names of some of the others have been public property. Only, unless it was some one out of the past, I don't know who it could be. Sheila had not the slightest desire to give me grounds for divorce. I really think, in a way, that she wanted to settle down—play the great lady. At any rate, there hasn't even been a shred of gossip about her in that respect—and when there isn't any gossip about Sheila you can depend upon it that gossip looked around pretty closely before giving it up."

"Your own opinion seems to be, then, that your wife must have left of her own free will because there was no way for her to be removed against it; and that, on the other hand, she did not leave either alone or in an elopement because she was satisfied with things as they were. That seems to be rather an impasse."

"It is. And it's just because, the more I think of it, the more impossible it all seems, that I've had to seek somebody else's advice on it."

"As I understand it, since Mrs. Ellsworth's departure is already in the public eye, the only way to turn that eye in some other direction is to find out what has become of her; and, if possible, to do it before the activities of the police stir up more publicity. Is that a fair statement of the situation?"

"If you put it that way—"

"I do. That's the bare bones of it, as I see them—and if you come to me at all, you musn't expect me to put the ruffles on them." Dr. Cavanaugh's manner, for the first time, was authoritative. The smile which warmed the sternness of his words did not mitigate the fact that he was laying down terms, to be taken or left. "And why, by the way, did you come to me?" he added.

"I hoped you'd be able to tell me what—what she'd be most likely to do," Don said meekly.

"I don't know enough about her to do that off hand. I'm no magician, you know. Any science, even such a muddled science as psychology, must have its laboratory material. I couldn't undertake the case professionally. There's too little to go on. But simply as an unofficial adviser, I'm willing to look into it—if you're sure you want me to."

"Of course I'm sure! Didn't I tell you—"

"Wait a moment." The limpid brown eyes took on the polished hardness of agate. "If I go into this at all, it is to find out the facts. Suppose the consequences prove more unpleasant than those you are now facing."

"They couldn't be much more unpleasant," Don looked suddenly tired and white. It is a severe handicap to be brought up to consider the world your tame kitten—and then to find that it has claws. "Any fee that you choose to name, of course—and I'll be glad to leave a retainer—"

"There'll be no fee about it; if for no other reason than because you and Barbara used to be pretty good friends."

"You know—about Barbara—I—"

"You did what you had to do—or thought you had to do, which amounts to the same thing. Besides, there is another reason. It is barely possible that this affair may become too big for our private handling. The police have been known to avail themselves of my services. I shall certainly do nothing to invite such a request, but if they should appeal to me, I must feel absolutely free. However, let's cross no bridges. We'll hope it won't come to that."

"I hope not," Don agreed fervently. "Meanwhile, what would you advise me to do?"

"This Mrs. Kane—is she still in the house?"

"Yes—we're on a plane of—armed neutrality, at present. But I couldn't very well ask her to go—"

"Don't. She knows your wife perhaps better than you do—certainly better than I do. That means that she may be useful, whether she wants to be or not."

"You think—"

"I have no reason to think anything—yet—"

Dr. Cavanaugh's leisurely emergence from the deep chair left Don no alternative but to rise also.

"I wish I knew more—" he said as they stood in the open doorway.

"Perhaps you know that old Elizabethan recipe for cooking hare. It begins, 'First, catch your hare.'"

And with this dubious reassurance, Don had to be content.

CHAPTER IV.

"Piper!" The city editor's raucous voice rose above the clack of typewriters and the murmured exchange of jokes in the "Herald" local room.

"Peter" Piper untangled his legs from the rounds of his chair, caught up a sheet of copy paper and a pencil, and ambled over to the city desk.

"I want to get a 'follow' story on the Ellsworth case."

"Anything new?"

"There isn't anything new. That's the trouble. We've got to nurse it along till there is. It may blow up any time, of course, but it's a great story while it lasts. And it's lasting."

The city editor, who on dull days was a man to avoid like a violent and insufficiently caged wild animal at the zoo, was content as a cat in a bed of catnip when a "big story" broke.

"Peter" Piper's long, mobile face, which had drooped disconsolately over his typewriter, was slit by a wide grin.

"What's the dope?" he asked, his bright, near-sighted eyes waking up from a bored contemplation of the bulletin board.

"Here are the clippings on the husband. We've used all that stuff, of course. But he'll bear watching. He's not telling all he knows, not by a damn sight. See if you can get anything on him. Meanwhile, you might go out and see if you can get an interview with Cavanaugh."

"Cavanaugh! I didn't know he was in on this."

"He isn't—not yet. But he's likely to be. When the police are in doubt—and they seem to be in quite considerable doubt this trip—they always play Cavanaugh. Besides, he's good stuff, any time. Get him on the psychology of why wives leave home, or something like that."

"Peter" blinked—an exaggerated blink which conveyed a decidedly adverse opinion of the reasonableness of city editors.

"Hells bells, Jimmy!" he protested. "Cavanaugh's about as easy to interview as the Dalai Lama. He charges forty dollars a look—by appointment only—and then if he doesn't like your looks, good night!" Peter Piper was a student of law in his off hours, and was entitled to wear—though he never did—a Phi Beta Kappa key, but his office vocabulary was strictly in the vernacular.

"Now don't go off thinking you can't get an interview with Cavanaugh. Because I know you will. Here, take these." The city editor thrust a sheaf of clippings from the office library, each one pasted on a strip of colored paper, in Peter's hands, and turned to the telephone.

"What an assignment!" Peter groaned aloud. The groan was entirely spurious, because the stimulus of doing difficult things was the wine of life to him. Like all reporters, he affected to be blase and cynical, and like many of them, though he would never commit the outsider's solecism of calling newspaper work a "game," it really was a game to him, played with immense and carefully concealed gusto.

Mr. Bachelor: "Horace, did you—aw—tell your sister that I was waiting?" Horace: "Rather! She said you ought to get a job like that in a restaurant."

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

What came before: After many adventures in China, Captain Jimmy meets an old friend, Lieut. Stone. The two escape from bandits in a freight train, which is wrecked in enemy territory. Eluding the soldiers, they set out to find a plane they had hidden in the woods.

By the time I had forced my horse through the mob, Scottie had got himself untangled from the officer and was in pursuit of Jed Stone who had a horse for himself and was busy getting Fu, our interpreter, on another.

Such yelling and such shrieking! Every man for himself. We were a hundred yards or more away before a single shot was fired and at that distance we might as well have been home in bed for all the danger of those soldiers hitting us.

Except for a lot of shooting, there was little attempt at pursuit. We circled through the woods, and after going a few miles, turned out again to the railway tracks. Turning the corner of a thicket, I was suddenly confronted with the most welcome sight of my life. Giving a great war whoop I started forward.

There, just as we had left it, stood our old plane. A hurried check up showed that it was just as we had left it—but no gas, no oil, no anything! A fine situation. There we were, with a perfectly good plane, powered with a tremendous engine that used so much fuel it called "Gas! Gas!" every time it went by a gasoline station. And we had just about enough in the tank to clean a grease spot in a suit of clothes.

"We'll borrow some from the soldiers," Jed Stone suggested.

"Ha, Ha, Ha," I laughed, "and while you're at it, just borrow a ten course dinner for each of us. My stomach is so empty it's digesting itself."

"Quite right," he said, "We'll just do that. Of course, it may not be a ten course dinner, but we will eat shortly—and fly soon after—just as soon as it is dark."

Our plan was perfectly simple. If it worked, it was grand. If it didn't, —we wouldn't need any more gas and oil. We settled down to wait for darkness; a long, hungry wait it was, too, till near midnight.

We were mounted, Lieutenant Stone, Fu Hsu (the interpreter) and I—Scottie trotted along on foot. With every possible precaution against making any unnecessary noises, we circled the place where the old engine lay on her back. About a mile below that spot we crossed the tracks and shaped our course for the sleeping camp—a couple of miles away.

Perhaps half a mile from the camp, we dismounted. Fu Hsu and Scottie stayed with the horses—Lieutenant Jed Stone and I went forward to reconnoiter. All was quiet in camp. Sentries pacing to and fro were all that seemed to be awake. We crept as close as we dared.

On our left, a large roomy tent stood out against the sky line.

Back at the horses once more we arranged our plan. Fu Hsu, on pain of death, agreed to stay alone with our horses.

Jed Stone mounted his horse, circled back and to the right so as to reach a point of the camp as nearly opposite the large tent we had seen, as possible. Under compulsion, Scottie went along with him. He much preferred to stay with me, but Jed Stone needed him to help him carry out his part of the plan. I crept quietly back towards the big tent.

Earlier Egg Plant — Produced In Canada

An egg plant which promises much of value to Canadians is referred to in the annual report of the Director of Dominion Experimental Farms. As the result of long continued studies the Dominion Horticulturist makes the following observation:

A Japanese egg plant called Negasaki, with fruit too small for the general market, having proved the only egg plant that would produce a satisfactory crop in many parts of Canada owing to its earliness, was crossed with the Black Beauty, one of the large but rather late varieties, with the result that an egg plant of good size was produced, which is much earlier than the Black Beauty. Experimental work in this connection is now being centred upon getting the type fixed. When this is accomplished an egg plant suitable for cultivation under Canadian conditions will be established, and it will probably become an important new factor in horticulture throughout Canada.

Unless the noises of cities decrease, their residents will have to depend upon artificial hearing by the next century, according to one expert.

Handicaps

It does us good to read biographies of successful men and women and learn there that they had to contend with great handicaps but conquered them. We find very often the handicap was the cause of their success.

Not one of us is free from handicaps which appear to impede progress. We struggle with disease, even sometimes deformity. We wrestle with doubts and fears, over-sensitiveness, feelings of inferiority and all sorts of disabilities.

For encouragement read about the man or woman who has achieved things. We find in every case the life was difficult, not always in keeping the wolf from the door, but in materializing his vision. Nothing is worth having that is easy of attainment.

To know this gives one courage to keep on and teaches us to overcome our handicaps.

Some years ago a man was a victim of a gasoline explosion which cost him his eyesight. Like men in the full vigor of life he did not anticipate any such handicap and had made no provision for the future. His blackness of despair was more intense than the blackness of his sight. The years stretched out impossible.

But in this day and generation there is a way out. Twenty years ago it would have been a real tragedy, but thanks to science, which has thrown a helping hand, no handicap need floor one now if he possesses the courage to face the future with confidence.

This patient overcame his despondency when attention was centred on this man's sense of touch. Within a few weeks he learned to distinguish between various degrees of smoothness of sand when rolled between the thumb and forefinger. He began to practice with flour and became an expert flour grader by sampling it through his sense of touch.

He regained his feet financially, paid his debts and earned five times what he had previously received. He felt proud of himself and happy in overcoming his handicap.

Why could he do this? Because of the principle of compensation. It came to his rescue. Take away one sense and others flourish.

We have Robert Schumman, the musician who, while practising on the piano permanently injured his right hand so he could make no more appearances in public. Again the law of compensation came in. It stimulated his creative faculties and he has composed many of our finest compositions.

As a lad, Theodore Roosevelt was handicapped by a frail body. Admiring physical strengah, he proceeded to develop it by living on a ranch. He rode, boxed, lived in the open, until eventually he became strong in body. He gained through perseverance, not only strength of body but strength of mind, will and character and accomplished great things in his day.

So it is not by any means just being a genius that has sent people far ahead of us on the road to achievement, but rather a dogged perseverance that would never allow them to give up.

TWILIGHT HOUR STORY

Chicks and Other Little Friends
NO. 23

Well, we haven't found Fluffy yet. Do you know, even Rover was beginning to feel lonely without Fluffy. Anyway, he went around poking his nose into corners and looking around everywhere for her. Perhaps you can hardly believe it, but really and truly, Rover was growing to like Fluffy. Anyway, she often walked right under his nose now, and all he would do was to prick up his ears and look at her and, mind you, I've even seen them touch noses sometimes. That's something like our kisses, I suppose.

You see they began to have pretty good times together. You remember, don't you, about the time Rover chased Fluffy up a tree when she was a little kitty? And Mamma Lady had to punish Rover for doing it. You remember about that, I'm sure. Well, Fluffy soon found out that she could climb trees almost as fast as a squirrel and she also found out that Rover couldn't climb at all, so she had lots of fun teasing him if she was feeling funny, for she'd run in front of him, real fast, right under his nose, to get him started, then dart up a tree. Then he'd stand under the tree and look at her and bark at her. But as soon as he looked away at something else she came down just far enough to reach him and then she'd stretch out and catch the fur on his back with her paw. He'd turn around quickly, but she was always too quick for him and back she'd run up the tree again. You see she was laughing at him. Yes, they began to have pretty good times together. Rover thought Fluffy a real nice kitty, worth taking care of.

Of course, you know neither Rover or Fluffy would have been nearly so nice if Mamma Lady and Billy hadn't loved them and given them such good care. You see if Mamma Lady didn't take such good care of Billy and laugh at his jokes and funny ways he wouldn't be nearly as nice a little boy as he is. Love and care made Billy a fine, beautiful boy, and it is just the same with our pets. If we love them and care for them they grow so very cute and make great playmates, don't you think so?

But where in the world has Fluffy gone? Topsy, too, is calling around for her kitties. Wasn't it too bad the little one left for her should get run over? Topsy even came in the house to Mamma Lady, hunting her baby. She stood up on her hind legs and caught a hold of her dress, so Mamma Lady would look at her, then anxiously said, "Meow, meow, where is my baby?"

Then she went to Billy and did the same thing. Oh, wasn't it too bad? Mamma Lady held her up and stroked her and then even let her sit in Fluffy's chair, which made her feel a little better and not so lonely.

"I guess Billy we'll have to find a little kitty for Topsy."

"But where will we get one, Mamma" asked Billy anxiously.

"I don't know, dear. We'll wait a day or so and perhaps something will turn up. We'll let Topsy stay here. She seems more contented, doesn't she? See she's curled herself up and has gone to sleep?"

New Measures To Catch Criminals

London.—Plain clothes mobile police are to be a new terror for the thief in the car.

This is to be the outcome of one of several conferences between Lord Byng and the "Big Five" at Scotland Yard to deal with the problem of the car thief.

For a fortnight in the near future about one-third of the uniform police on duty at night are to be on patrol in plain clothes.

Their duty will be chiefly to keep a close watch upon all the shop centres in each division.

Sunday School Lesson

June 21. Lesson XII—The Sin of Causing Others to Stumble (Temperance Lesson)—Romans 14: 13-23. Golden Text—It is good neither to eat flesh; nor to drink wine, nor to do anything whereby thy brother stumbleth.—Romans 14: 21.

ANALYSIS

I. PROBLEMS OF THE EARLY CHURCH, Romans 14: 13-15.

II. CHRISTIAN STANDARDS, Romans 14: 16-23.

I. PROBLEMS OF THE EARLY CHURCH, Romans 14: 13-15.

Many difficult food questions arose in the early Church, in particular the following two. The Christian who had been brought up a Jew had been taught from his childhood as the Law of God that he should only eat "kosher" meat, that is, meat from an animal which had been killed in a particular way. Gentile Christians naturally had no such scruples. What, then, was to be done at Church meals and at dinner parties to which Gentile Christians invited Jewish Christians? Was the Jewish Christian to be made to eat meat which he would instinctively regard as unclean and disgusting, or was the Gentile Christian to provide only "kosher" meat, and, if so, what became of Paul's principle that the Law was not binding on Christians?

The second problem arose in this way. In a heathen city, such as Rome or Corinth, much or most of the meat offered in the market place or in the butchers' shops was taken from beasts that had been sacrificed in heathen temples to heathen gods; certain parts had been retained in the temples and the rest was sent out to be sold. Much of the meat publicly sold, then, had been dedicated to some heathen god, and some Christians felt that it was, therefore, contaminated by heathenism, and no Christian should touch it. Were Christians, then, to refuse to buy meat in the market and to refuse all invitations to dinner unless they were given satisfactory assurance that the meat set before them had never had the faintest connection with a heathen rite? Or, again, if a Christian was invited to dinner at the house of a non-Christian friend, and if the non-Christian host were to pour out the first glass of wine as a libation or offering to his god (much as a Christian host might "say grace"), was the Christian guest to refuse to touch it

II. CHRISTIAN STANDARDS, Romans 14: 16-23.

Such practical problems as these Paul often has in mind in his these Paul often has in mind in his correspondence. With respect to all these scruples, Paul has been laying down the fundamental principle of Christian freedom. A Christian should be free from petty scruples and superstitious fears. But there are "weak" brethren, very dear to Christ, though they seemed rather contemptible to some of their fellow-Christians, who could not, with a good conscience, eat meat or drink wine, unless they were assured about it. Paul tells the stronger brethren that they are not to despise the weaker nor to laugh at them. Their scruples may be foolish, but still it is, after all, a matter of conscience with them, and men must, at all costs, be loyal to conscience.

On the principle of the Christian man's freedom in respect of food and drink, Paul is clear (v. 14), but we are not to despise or laugh at those who differ from us, v. 13. It is good to be free, but it is much more important not to make things harder for your brother, not to make him sin (v. 15), for, feeling as he does, these things would be sin to him, v. 14. It is good to be free (v. 16), but, after all, matters of eating and drinking are of very secondary importance. It is the Christian character and the Christian fellowship which really matter. You can surely compromise for the sake of the weaker brother in these affairs of the table, v. 17. Yet, unimportant as these matters really are, you may be destroying the work of God if you insist on your freedom without respect for other men's consciences, v. 20. Better never to eat meat or drink wine at all, than to hurt your brother's conscience. It is not likely that there were actually any vegetarians or total abstainers in the Roman Church, but Paul is taking an extreme instance, v. 21. Happy is the man who is able to follow the dictates of his reason with a good conscience (v. 22), but remember that for the scrupulous, weaker brethren these things which you can do with a good conscience are really sin, for anything is sin which we do without having a happy conscience about it.

In this passage, then, Paul is not directly dealing with what is called today the "Temperance Problem," but he lays down principles of Christian conduct which have their application to problems altogether beyond his horizon. Three important principles seem to arise from the present discussion: first, the Christian man is free to eat or drink what he likes. Second, that he is bound to respect the consciences of any fellow-Christians who differ from him in this matter, and, third, that our object in life must be, not to flaunt our freedom, but to do whatever is "edifying" to our brethren or, as we might say, socially serviceable.

Imaginary Zeppelins Fly North Atlantic 500 Times

Ithaca, N.Y.—The logs of two imaginary Zeppelins which have flown the north Atlantic "successfully" nearly 500 times in a Dayton, Ohio, laboratory, were recently described to the Cornell University College of Engineering.

The flights have been made weekly the five years and the charts show that there has not been a single week in that period when a lighter-than-air ship could not have made the passage.

The records were presented by Colonel Edward A. Deeds, of Dayton, chairman of the board of the National Cash Register Company, who spoke as a non-resident lecturer in engineering. He said the flights were plotted in the laboratory of the International Zeppelin Transportation Company.

Each week end a Zeppelin took off theoretically from Paris and New York, their respective destinations the other end of the Lindbergh trail. Their chances of getting through were pitted against the government weather reports and their courses shifted to find the loopholes through storm belts. No ship ever was delayed more than twenty-four hours in reaching either metropolis.

"The studies show," said Colonel Deeds, "that the flights are entirely feasible from an engineering standpoint."

The value of animals on the 999 farms last year was estimated at $5,450,000 of which silver foxes alone accounted for over $3,437,000. An interesting feature of the report is that the value of the muskrat population on the 108 farms increased in one year from $113,710 to $629,212, or over 450 per cent.

Napoleon's Chess Set is On View

Prague.—A remarkable set of chessmen which nearly changed the course of history is to be shown at a Napoleonic exhibition at Austerlitz, in Czechoslovakia.

The chessmen are hollow and contain detailed directions for Napoleon's escape from St. Helena.

Napoleon's friends sent them in charge of a British officer who was killed by a falling spar during a storm at sea on the way, so that the ex-Emperor never knew the secret contained in the chess pieces with which he was playing.

After his death the Empress Marie Louise attempted many times to send these chessmen as a souvenir to Napoleon's son, the Duke of Reichstadt (Rostand's L'Aiglon), who had been brought up at the Imperial Court in Vienna in calculated ignorance of his father's place in history.

When at last a reliable messenger was found he arrived in Vienna just after L'Aiglon's death. The set finally passed into the possession of Princess Paleologue who has lent it to the exhibition.

"I believe I shall have to give up bridge."

"Really? Wasn't the game worth the scandal?"

Artificial eyes are now so perfect that the pupils even contract and dilate as the natural eye would.

"Oh, John," sobbed the young wife, "I had baked a lovely cake, and I put it on the back porch for the frosting to cool, and the d-d-dog a-a-ate it." "Well, don't cry about it, sweetheart," he consoled, patting the pretty flushed cheek. "I know a man who will give us another dog."—Powerfax.

Handicaps

It does us good to read biographies of successful men and women and learn there that they had to contend with great handicaps but conquered them. We find very often the handicap was the cause of their success.

Not one of us is free from handicaps which appear to impede progress. We struggle with disease, even sometimes deformity. We wrestle with doubts and fears, over-sensitiveness, feelings of inferiority and all sorts of disabilities.

For encouragement read about the man or woman who has achieved things. We find in every case the life was difficult, not always in keeping the wolf from the door, but in materializing his vision. Nothing is worth having that is easy of attainment.

To know this gives one courage to keep on and teaches us to overcome our handicaps.

Some years ago a man was a victim of a gasoline explosion which cost him his eyesight. Like men in the full vigor of life he did not anticipate any such handicap and had made no provision for the future. His blackness of despair was more intense than the blackness of his sight. The years stretched out impossible.

But in this day and generation there is a way out. Twenty years ago it would have been a real tragedy, but thanks to science, which has thrown a helping hand, no handicap need floor one now if he possesses the courage to face the future with confidence.

This patient overcame his despondency when attention was centred on this man's sense of touch. Within a few weeks he learned to distinguish between various degrees of smoothness of sand when rolled between the thumb and forefinger. He began to practice with flour and became an expert flour grader by sampling it through his sense of touch.

He regained his feet financially, paid his debts and earned five times what he had previously received. He felt proud of himself and happy in overcoming his handicap.

Why could he do this? Because of the principle of compensation. It came to his rescue. Take away one sense and others flourish.

We have Robert Schumman, the musician who, while practising on the piano permanently injured his right hand so he could make no more appearances in public. Again the law of compensation came in. It stimulated his creative faculties and he has composed many of our finest compositions.

As a lad, Theodore Roosevelt was handicapped by a frail body. Admiring physical strengah, he proceeded to develop it by living on a ranch. He rode, boxed, lived in the open, until eventually he became strong in body. He gained through perseverance, not only strength of body but strength of mind, will and character and accomplished great things in his day.

So it is not by any means just being a genius that has sent people far ahead of us on the road to achievement, but rather a dogged perseverance that would never allow them to give up.

TWILIGHT HOUR STORY

Chicks and Other Little Friends
NO. 23

Well, we haven't found Fluffy yet. Do you know, even Rover was beginning to feel lonely without Fluffy. Anyway, he went around poking his nose into corners and looking around everywhere for her. Perhaps you can hardly believe it, but really and truly, Rover was growing to like Fluffy. Anyway, she often walked right under his nose now, and all he would do was to prick up his ears and look at her and, mind you, I've even seen them touch noses sometimes. That's something like our kisses, I suppose.

You see they began to have pretty good times together. You remember, don't you, about the time Rover chased Fluffy up a tree when she was a little kitty? And Mamma Lady had to punish Rover for doing it. You remember about that, I'm sure. Well, Fluffy soon found out that she could climb trees almost as fast as a squirrel and she also found out that Rover couldn't climb at all, so she had lots of fun teasing him if she was feeling funny, for she'd run in front of him, real fast, right under his nose, to get him started, then dart up a tree. Then he'd stand under the tree and look at her and bark at her. But as soon as he looked away at something else she came down just far enough to reach him and then she'd stretch out and catch the fur on his back with her paw. He'd turn around quickly, but she was always too quick for him and back she'd run up the tree again. You see she was laughing at him. Yes, they began to have pretty good times together. Rover thought Fluffy a real nice kitty, worth taking care of.

Of course, you know neither Rover or Fluffy would have been nearly so nice if Mamma Lady and Billy hadn't loved them and given them such good care. You see if Mamma Lady didn't take such good care of Billy and laugh at his jokes and funny ways he wouldn't be nearly as nice a little boy as he is. Love and care made Billy a fine, beautiful boy, and it is just the same with our pets. If we love them and care for them they grow so very cute and make great playmates, don't you think so?

But where in the world has Fluffy gone? Topsy, too, is calling around for her kitties. Wasn't it too bad the little one left for her should get run over? Topsy even came in the house to Mamma Lady, hunting her baby. She stood up on her hind legs and caught a hold of her dress, so Mamma Lady would look at her, then anxiously said, "Meow, meow, where is my baby?"

Then she went to Billy and did the same thing. Oh, wasn't it too bad? Mamma Lady held her up and stroked her and then even let her sit in Fluffy's chair, which made her feel a little better and not so lonely.

"'I guess Billy we'll have to find a little kitty for Topsy."

"But where will we get one, Mamma " asked Billy anxiously.

"I don't know, dear. We'll wait a day or so and perhaps something will turn up. We'll let Topsy stay here. She seems more contented, doesn't she? See she's curled herself up and has gone to sleep?"

New Measures To Catch Criminals

London.—Plain clothes mobile police are to be a new terror for the thief in the car.

This is to be the outcome of one of several conferences between Lord Byng and the "Big Five" at Scotland Yard to deal with the problem of the car thief.

For a fortnight in the near future about one-third of the uniform police on duty at night are to be on patrol in plain clothes.

Their duty will be chiefly to keep a close watch upon all the shop centres in each division.

Some will also be detailed to watch bridges and narrow portions of the highway in order to put a barricade across the road as soon as a raid has been signalled.

Twenty-five per cent. of the mobile police will be disguised as ordinary motorists and they are not to deal with motoring offences but with criminals.

If the scheme proves to be successful during its period of trial it will be made a permanent routine.

Castoria... for CHILDREN'S ailments

ARE you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or for the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish spell, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so.

You can tell from the formula on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.

Gyproc Says "KEEP OUT" to Fire, Draughts, Rodents

GYPROC Wallboard that does not burn is the way of least expense when you desire to make alterations in your home, store, factory or on the farm. Use it for all walls, ceilings and partitions.

Gyproc is made from gypsum rock into sheets 4 to 10 feet long, 4 feet wide and ⅜ of an inch thick. It nails and cuts as easily as lumber with a minimum of waste or muss.

Gyproc is fire-resistant, easily and quickly erected, structurally strong and has insulation value. It is draught and vermin-proof as well as fire-safe.

Because it is ivory-coloured, it does not require decoration (when panelled) yet it is also a suitable base for Alabastine, Gyptex or wallpaper.

Consult your nearest dealer to-day. He will gladly supply you with a direction sheet on Gyproc. Or write for the interesting, free booklet, "Building and Remodelling with GYPROC". 373

THE CHURCH ARMY CRUSADE

On Thursday and Friday of last week a party of Church Army Cadets, under Capt. H. Gibson, paid a visit to Trinity Church in the course of their Route March of Witness through Western Ontario.

These young fellows left their headquarters in Toronto on Monday morning after receiving the Holy Communion from the Bishop of Toronto in the St. Alban's Chapel and made their first stop at St. Margaret's Church, New Toronto. On Tuesday, they were at St. Nicholas Church, Lakeview; on Wednesday at Trinity Church, Port Credit. They arrived in our midst shortly after noon on Thursday, dragging their trek-cart, which contains all their kit, to find a hearty dinner awaiting them at the Rectory.

In the afternoon a reception was held in the Parish Hall when the Rector extended to the Crusaders a hearty welcome to this parish and called to mind the three previous visits of the Church Army to Streetsville. Capt. Gibson and Cadet Netey, in replying, expressed their thanks at the warmth of the welcome and said how deeply honoured they were to be the first to enjoy a sit-down meal in the new hall.

At 7.00 p.m. there was a service for children and at 8.15 p.m. a service for adults, both of which were well attended.

On Friday the Crusaders were entertained by various parishioners for breakfast and dinner and in the afternoon they visited the homes of our people, inviting them to join in the evening services.

The services of Thursday night were repeated on Friday with an additional open-air service near the War Memorial. The indoor services were again well attended and both the messages and singing of the Crusaders were really appreciated.

On Saturday morning after enjoying breakfast at the home of the Messrs. McClintock, the Crusaders left for Oakville in and behind Mr. Jas. E. Bailey's car and truck.

PEEL COUNTY DAY DURING FARMERS' WEEK AT O.A.C. JUNE 17TH

"What is so rare as a day in June." Ontario, with the most promising crop prospects at the present time, invites the city and country folk to motor trips through the agricultural districts to appreciate the views and scenery.

Our Agricultural College at Guelph is host to the farmers and their families during the middle week of June. Peel County is especially invited to attend on Wednesday, June 17th.

A worthwhile program has been drafted by the officials of the institution to appeal to both the men and women. Beginning at 10.30 a.m., Standard Time, the men will be conducted by Prof. W. J. Squirrel and his staff over the experimental plots to view the new varieties of grain, the different rates of seeding, the hardest alfalfa, soybeans, marrow-stemmed kale, different kinds of grasses for permanent pastures and roots.

The ladies will be taken by Miss Olive Cruikshank through the class-rooms, laboratories, and kitchens of Macdonald Institute. Lunch will be served in cafeteria style by the O.A.C. in the gymnasium from 11.30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

During the afternoon the men will make a tour of the barns and paddocks to view the livestock kept for breeding, experimental and demonstration purposes. Those interested in flowers will be conducted by the Horticulture Dept. over the campus and especially to the rose garden which is reputed to be the foremost experimental rose garden on the continent. The campus and grounds will be at their best during this period and the sight will be well worth the trip.

Prof. W. R. Graham will be at home to the poultrymen and women to guide them through the poultry houses and flocks. Recent experiments on the feed influencing the hatchability of the eggs will be explained along with other up-to-date information on chickens.

Special exhibits will be on display at many of the buildings. An Old Reaper exhibit featuring an exact replica of the first mechanical reaper built in America by Cyrus McCormick of Virginia in 1831. The famous Wax fruit exhibit in the museum of the Biology building, a farm water supply exhibit showing how a septic tank can be built cheaply on the farm in the Physics Bldg. See exhibit in the Agriculture Bldg., etc.

A moving picture, Romance of the Reaper, will be shown in the Memorial Hall at 3.15 p.m. Depicting the successive steps in the change improvement of reapers from year to year. A thrilling romance of reality in Agricultural progress.

Prof. John Buchanan, Director of Extension, and Prof. J. C. Steckley, head of the Animal Husbandry, are two men who are behind the program, planning the day so that the farmers and their families will have an instructive and worthwhile visit. The people of Peel who are planning to take advantage of this trip are requested to get in touch with J. C. Shearer, Ag. Rep., who will send out badges to each carload so that the delegation from this county will be distinctive and outstanding at the O.A.C. on June 17th.

Quake Rocks Britain and Part of Europe

Frightened Populace In Night Attire Rush From Homes to Fields As Chimneys Tumble and Crockery Crashes

London.—The most severe earth shocks recorded in England shook most of the British Isles, part of Northern Europe and the Scandinavian Peninsula early last Sunday and so alarmed Britons that thousands refused to return to their homes for many hours.

The epicentre of the quake appeared to have been near Hull, probably in the North Sea off the eastern coast of England, and considerable damage was done in Yorkshire and the Midlands, where the population, clad in nightclothes, rushed from their homes with the first shock at 1.25 a.m. and remained in the open fields until continued quiet reassured them.

The shocks continued about 30 minutes from the northern coast of Scotland to the English Channel.

Across the Channel light quakes were felt in the regions of Cherbourg, Dunkirk, Calais and at Heilles, near Beauvais.

All Belgium was momentarily frightened by shocks which the Brussels Observatory said were the strongest ever recorded there. The observatory estimated that the epicentre was in the North Sea, some 30 miles off the Suffolk coast of England, probably deep in the lower rocks so that damage was comparatively slight.

The quakes also were felt in Southern Norway, where meteorologists at the town of Lister observed them.

The most damage appeared to have occurred in Yorkshire and Eastern England, where two houses collapsed at the holiday resort of Bridlington. Extra police were drafted to patrol the streets. Rescue groups were prepared for action in case of further collapses or panic.

Many persons living in high buildings at Diss, in Norfolk, were thrown out of their beds, and at Hull the population was terror stricken by underground rumblings and quakes. The inhabitants rushed into the streets. One house was wrecked and several others cracked. A dozen automobiles were turned over by the shocks. At Flamborough the population ran to the cliff tops and huddled among the rocks in a driving rain.

Britain, Germany To Collaborate

World Depression Needs International Co-operation Declares Britain's Ministers

Chequers, Buckinghamshire, Eng.—Promising each other to "deal with the present crisis in close collaboration," Germany's and Great Britain's Foreign Ministers and Premiers on Sunday finished their two-day conference at the country home of Premier Ramsay MacDonald here.

Every phase of the world's economic situation was discussed thoroughly during the week-end with the greatest frankness and openness.

After Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and Foreign Minister Julius Curtius departed for London, a laconic communique was issued to the press. It did not mention the question of reparations, although Herr Bruening is understood to have asked Mr. MacDonald's assistance in sounding out Germany's creditors, including the United States, regarding postponement of some of the heavy reparations payments.

Official Announcement

The communique read:

"During the week-end German Chancellor Bruening and German Foreign Minister Dr. Curtius, visited Chequers. British Ministers present were the Prime Minister, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and the President of the Board of Trade.

"On Sunday the Prime Minister and Miss MacDonald gave a luncheon, at which were present the German Ambassador and Baroness von Neurath, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Alexander, the Governor of the Bank of England, Mr. and Mrs. George Bernard Shaw, Sir Robert van Sittart, Sir Clive and Lady Wigram, Miss Sheila MacDonald, Miss Oyvoets, Count Bernstorff, Sir Frederick Leith Ross and Malcolm MacDonald.

"The visit was arranged several months ago as a means of establishing personal contacts. The opportunity of these former meetings was taken for friendly talks on the position in which the German Reich and other industrial States now find themselves.

Effects of Depression

"Special stress was laid by the German Ministers on difficulties of the existing position of Germany and the need for alleviation. The British Ministers, for their part, called attention to the world-wide character of the present depression and its special influence on their own country.

"Both parties were agreed that, in addition to efforts and measures of a national character, a revival of confidence and of prosperity depended upon international co-operation.

"In this spirit both Governments will endeavor to deal with the present crisis in close collaboration with the other Governments of the World."

From one of those present during the discussion the Associated Press correspondent learned that the world's economic and political troubles were discussed, not only in their special relation to Germany, but also on a broader international basis, especially as affected by the Young plan, armaments, reparations, tariff walls, custom barriers, unemployment and industrial depression.

"There was no hurry," the Associated Press informant said. "There was none of that tense atmosphere often prevailing during international conferences when a specific job must be done within a specific time.

"At Chequers everything was discussed in a spirit of utmost friendship and cordiality. There was give and take on both sides and no angle was untouched. In that way, the meeting more than justified itself."

Ball Started Rolling

Asked whether anything concrete was likely to result from the conference, he replied:

"We feel that the ball has been started rolling on the whole international economic question, especially reparations.

"Naturally, Great Britain and Germany alone cannot solve the problem, but it is important that parties to the Chequers conference went on record before the whole world in urging international co-operation and in promising each other to collaborate closely with the other Governments concerned."

The discussions continued Saturday night until long after midnight and were resumed at an early hour Sunday.

DO-X Crosses South Atlantic

Huge Flying Boat Completes Trip From Cape Verde in 13 Hours

Fernando Noronha, Brazil.—The German flying boat DO-X landed here at 12.10 a.m. (10.10 p.m. E.D.T. last Thursday), after a flight across the South Atlantic from the Cape Verde Islands.

The DO-X left the Cape Verde Islands at 12.52 p.m. Thursday (7.52 a.m. E.DT.).

The world's largest flying boat landed easily on the water off the rocky little Fernando Noronha Islands, 125 miles off the Brazilian coast, and taxied to shore.

The flight from Porto Praia, Cape Verde, was made in 13 hours 18 minutes, a comparatively short and extremely successful climax to a venture which started November 5 last, at Alternrhein, Switzerland. The trip was beset with misfortunes which caused delay after delay.

The flight across the South Atlantic was made in good weather and in excellent time. The arrival here was practicaly as anticipated.

New Diving Record Claimed By Australian

Melbourne, Vic.—According to a correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor a new world's record for deep-sea diving was made by J. Le Noury, who recently descended 42 fathoms (252 feet) in a "free" diving suit, outside Port Phillip Heads. A "free" diving suit is one in which the diver has freedom of movement, in contrast to the cumbersome steel suits in which great depths can be attained.

The diving dress, invented by an Australian, consists of two suits—inner and outer. The space between forms a compressed air cushion which carries the pressure of the water. While the outer suit is inflated to withstand the water pressure, the air within the inner suit can be kept at a comfortable pressure.

It took Le Noury nine minutes to reach the sea bed.

Network Extended Into North

Canadian mounted police, prospectors, traders, settlers and missionaries at far northern outposts will shortly be served by four more short wave radiotelegraph stations to be established by the Dominion Interior Department at Norman on the Mackenzie River, Coppermine on Coronation Gulf, Chesterfield Inlet on Hudson Bay and Herschel Island off the western Arctic coast. The stations will be added to the communications network maintained by the Government, which already includes stations at Edmonton, Fort Smith, Resolution, Simpson, Aklavik, Dawson and Mayo.

Pulp Mills Plan To Reopen Shortly

Toronto.—Several of the closed pulp mills in Northern Ontario will commence part-time operations in the very near future, Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests, forecast recently. He declined, however, to name those which would assist in relieving the conditions existing in many towns through the complete shut-down of the pulp mills.

Province Sells Bonds At 94.15

Toronto—Indication that the credit of the province is at a high point was shown when an issue of $30,000,000 40-year 4 per cent. instalment bonds was sold to a syndicate headed by the Bank of Montreal at a price of 94.19 which is the cheapest long-term money the province has obtained since the war. It represents a cost basis of 4.409 per cent.

In making the announcement of the sale, Hon. E. A. Dunlop, provincial treasurer, expressed gratification at the high price obtained. The province has not been in the long-term market since January, 1931, when a $30,000,000 issue was sold on a cost basis of 4.598 per cent.

The proceeds of the issue sold are to be used for the funding of treasury bills for capital expenditures, Hon. Mr. Dunlop said.

"Considering the state of the bond market, the sale of Province of Ontario bonds at this price is very satisfactory," added Mr. Dunlop. "It shows beyond doubt that the credit of the province stands high in the estimation of the financial world, and it reflects the basic soundness of Ontario."

Guides and Scouts Praised by Judge

Winnipeg—No more effective work is being done in Canada than through the Girl Guides and Boy Scouts, Judge A. E. Hamilton, of the Winnipeg Juvenile Court, told delegates to the annual meeting of the Girl Guides Association here recently. Speaking at a banquet tendered visiting delegates by the Manitoba branch of the association, Judge Hamilton said he felt the future of the Dominion's citizenship was in safe hands.

Santiago, Chile.—An American importing firm tried a few chain stores on the United States model here. They made such a hit that the system is being extended to all parts of the republic.

France Favors Lighter Battleships

Paris—Charles Dumont, Minister of Marine, told the Finance Committee of the Chamber of Deputies that he advocates construction of three 23,333-ton ships of the line during 1931-36, instead of two battleships of 35,000 tons each.

The bigger vessels, he said, are out of action 120 days a year but with three of the lighter ships there always would be at least one ready for use.

M. Dumont indicated the general total of construction credits would be about $42,000,000 for 70,000 tons of big ships. Added to this is about $800,000 left over from the previous budget.

He emphasized that his department contemplated building only one 23,333-ton ship in 1931-32, leaving consideration of the other two for the period 1933-36. The Finance Committee approved his proposals.

Cambridge Scientist Welcomes Earthquake

Cambridge, England.—While a number of persons were being badly frightened by the severe week-end earth tremors, there was at least one man in England who enjoyed them immensely. He was Dr. Harold Jeffery, reader in geological physics at Cambridge University and a distinguished seismologist.

"It was almost a perfect earthquake," he exclaimed enthusiastically.

"The most remarkable thing, to me, about it was that it occurred exactly in the theoretical way. On these occasions the seismograph usually shows a series of short, sharp shocks and then longer ones until it dies away. That was exactly what happened."

High Cost of Living Again Takes Tumble

Ottawa.—Further decrease in the index number of wholesale prices was reported by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics last week. Taking 1926 as a base of 100, the May figure was 73.0 compared with 74.5 in April. Fifty-six quotations were higher during the month, 121 lower, and 325 remained unchanged.

Duke of York Gives Welcome

The Duke of York (right) welcomes Gen. Gouraud, military commander of Paris, to London, during the recent annual conference of the British Legion in London.

News this week comes from Western Ontario, where Lone Scout Boosters have been at work in Lucan and Drumbo, with the result that several new members have joined our ranks in those places, and appearances seem to indicate the speedy formation of Lone Patrols in those two centres. All Lonies in this province will wish them "Good Scouting."

Things continue to boom at Fenelon Falls, where the Lonies have been under the keen leadership of Patrol Leader Doug. Warren. Now we hear that in order to accommodate more members, the Beaver Patrol has split into two sections, making a new Patrol to be called the "Foxes," under Ken Menzies, who will be the Patrol Leader of that section.

Last week quite a lot was said in this column about Camp, which is always of interest to Scouts.

This week I want to pass on a little information on this subject which all Lonies should know and which should be carefully followed when a camping expedition is being planned.

First of all comes the task of preparing the necessary equipment and deciding what to take and what to leave behind. As this depends largely upon the duration of the Camp and the method of transport I do not propose to discuss this matter in this article, but will save it for a future occasion.

This week I will confine my remarks to generalities which would apply to any camp, irrespective of its length, or type.

Choosing the Site.—This is an important matter, as a camp can be made or marred by its location. There are several things to take into consideration. Chief amongst them is what soldiers call "The Lay of the Land." It is always advisable to keep on high ground and avoid hollows. Hollows hold moisture, from rain, dew, mists, etc., and in the event of a rain storm the camper stands the risk of being quickly flooded out. Therefore, keep to the higher ground, preferably a gentle slope, but not so high as to be exposed to all the elements in the event of a storm.

Camp in the open, and not under trees, if you can avoid doing so. Place your tent where lots of sunshine and air can get at it. Be careful, however, to be near to some shelter from wind, and shade from sun.

Always consider the question of water before you locate. It is always a nuisance to have to carry water from a great distance, so have this very necessary commodity in mind when picking your site.

Water.—Be careful that your water is not contaminated and that it is fit to drink. Slow, stagnant streams are usually harborers of disease germs. Avoid them. A clear spring with a clean source, or a quickly running stream with a good gravelly bottom is very much more safe. When in doubt, do not drink any water which has not been boiled.

Cooking Places.—These should be located where the prevailing wind will blow the smoke away from your camp, and not into it. Keep your fires away from the tents. Small fires are better to cook on than large ones, and be careful not to start a forest fire. Make sure that your fire is quite out before leaving, and find out if permission has to be obtained before you ever light one.

Cleanliness.—Keep your camp clean. Never throw rubbish about, but dig a hole and put all refuse into it, and see that it is neatly covered in before you go away. Scouts always make a special point of leaving their camp site cleaner than when they arrived on it. In that way the owner of the property is glad to permit Scouts to camp on his land, and will welcome you back.

Swimming.—Take care that your swimming place is safe. Don't swim in strong currents, or where there are weeds. And don't stay in longer than fifteen minutes at a time."—"Lone E."

Death Car Driver Himself A Victim

Montreal.—Lorenzo Godin, 25, whose car struck the motorcycle of Chief of Police B. Lunt, of Baie D'Urfe, on May 6, killing the officer, died on Sunday from injuries sustained when he was thrown from an automobile driven by Pete Lepine, star centre ice player for the Montreal Canadiens hockey team.

Godin was injured last Friday when Lepine's car, swerving to avoid collision with another machine, catapulted him from his seat. Lepine managed to get his car back on the road before it turned over and none of the other occupants were hurt. Godin was rushed to hospital where it was known at once that he was critically hurt. He died in the hospital to which Lunt was taken after his fatal accident three weeks earlier.

Dean of Australian Papers 100 Years Old

Sydney, N.S.W.—The Sydney Morning Herald, oldest newspaper in Australia, recently celebrated its centenary. It was founded in 1831, at a time when Sydney had only between 15,000 and 20,000 people (as against 1,100,000 today). Since the famous publicist, John Fairfax, became its part proprietor in 1841, it has remained with the Fairfax family unto the fourth generation. Its managing director today is Warwick O. Fairfax.

For 40 years John Fairfax was the mainspring of the Herald activities. The Herald, both under his regime and since, has maintained a reputation for conservatism, while keeping abreast of the times in make-up, typography and improved ways of presenting the news.

Dust Storms Cause Damage to Crops

Regina, Sask. — Dust storms in southern sections of Saskatchewan during the past week have caused heavy damage to crops, according to reports received here. Some points have reported as much as 75 per cent. damage.

Crops which a short time ago were making excellent progress have been blown about and cut off. Moisture is lacking at many points.

The districts suffering most severely are northwest of Swift Current, the west section of Gravelbourg through to Assiniboia and along the Arcola line of the C.P.R.

Huge Orders Placed For Canadian Timber

Victoria.—British Columbia's lumber industry, backbone of its whole business life, started to swing back towards prosperity last Saturday with the placing of orders for 4,000,000 feet of mining timber for Australia and of 1,500,000 railway crossing timbers for England.

Many Diamonds Used In Industrial Ways

Diamonds are almost invariably classified as a luxury, but almost never as an important factor in industry. Yet, approximately, 15 to 20 per cent. of the value of diamonds mined yearly are of industrial use.

They are at times called "industrial diamonds," and so named because of some flaw of color or constitution that prevented their being cut and polished for decorative use.

Some of these stones are used as cutters and polishers of more precious diamonds. The "industrial diamond" is changed to powder form and mixed with olive oil. It is then smeared upon a soft iron disc revolving at 2,500 revolutions per minute. The diamond to be cut and polished is held and weighted down and the wearing action of the diamond dust eventually creates a gleaming facet upon it.

By means of diamond draw-plates or dies, all types of metal, including the tungsten filament of the electric lamp, can be drawn finer than human hair. Mining engineers employ the diamond drill. This is a circular tube, steel bit or crown, set with diamonds. Such drills are of great service in cutting out a clean core which can be brought to the surface for determination of the nature of the strata. These drills can be forced to a depth of more than 4,000 feet and it is said there is no rock or stratum which the diamond has failed to penetrate.

Chinese Cave Dwellings Found

Peiping.—Possible habitations of Chinese cave dwellers have been uncovered by a Chinese expedition at Changteh, in Honan Province, according to reports received here. Several deep pits containing bones and earthenware were excavated. The find confirms the statement of Mencius, the Chinese philosopher, that early Chinese peoples "made nests for themselves in the highlands and in the lowlands they made caves."

Owl Laffs

The best of women make mistakes, but it's too bad that we husbands should be required to eat them. A statistician says that we have enough coal to last 7,000 years. What does he mean by "we?" A great many animals laugh, says a scientist; and, of course, a great many people give them good cause to. Conscience gets a lot of credit for good morals that belongs to the fear of getting caught. We are learning to have faith in machinery because it has furnished a foundation for human progress. The man who thinks and is silent usually has more friends than the one who speaks and thinks afterward.

Looker On (to man who had just rescued a drowning girl)—"It was grand of you to drive from that height, fully clothed, to effect such a magnificent rescue."

The Hero (snarling madly)—"That's all very well, but what I want to know is who pushed me in?"

Harrison—"I hear your daughter Edith married a struggling young man."

Thompson—"Well, he did struggle, but he couldn't get away."

Here's some riddles. We simply got to get them off our system. Are you a riddle fan?: 1, Why did the hen go across the road. 2, What goes all day and comes in at night and sits with its tongue out? 3, Why did the man put his garage on the other side of the road from his house? 4, When was milk the highest? 5, Who wore the biggest hat in the war 6, Why did the cow go over the hill? Answers—1, To get on the other side; 2, Wagon; 3, To put his car in; 4, When the cow jumped over the moon; 5, The man that had the largest head; 6, Because she couldn't go under.

Wrong Label: "A spoonful of water contains 270,000 potential horsepower," says a scientist. That isn't water.

Claude—"I'm groping for words."

Alma—""Well, you don't expect to find them around my neck, do you?"

"Well, at any rate," an old married man told the writer, "it is better to have loved and been bossed than never to have been loved at all."

Summer is a time when people try to keep out of the sunshine they wished they were able to afford last winter. Who remembers the old fashioned love-songs that didn't sound like the wail of a lost soul? The devil isn't so smart; think of him trying Job's patience with boils when he might have tried taxes. You can't always tell who is hurt the worst by who yells the loudest. A bob-tail bull in fly time is in no worse fix than a bald-headed man in the same time. It's queer, a little heat on the feet may cure a little cold in the head. Late hours end in early morning. The girl who uses a lot of lipstick often leaves a good impression when she kisses. Some hotels rate high and others have high rates. The last thing in the world a man wants is a manicure. Now is the time to buy good farms from pessimists. The easiest person for a man to fool is himself, and the hardest is his wife. The girl who elopes may be letting her emotions run away with her. The hottest days at the beach are the first ten days. Stolen Kisses are the sweetest, but the other kind taste pretty good, too. A typical American is one who yearns to be rich without working, thin without dieting, and wise without studying.

Business has so far improved that it is now able to take nourishment.

Patient (angrily)—"The size of your bill makes my blood boil."

Doctor (calmly)—"That will be $20 more for sterilizing your system."

A man boasts that he raises a lot more flowers than his wife does, yet devotes less time to the job. He grows dandelions.

Dad—"When I was a little boy your age I didn't tell lies."

His Son—"How old were you when you started, Dad?"

Find Healing Springs Under Cologne City

Cologne.—Boring here for coal have uncovered flowing gold—not oil, but medicinal waters. Experts report that springs found directly under the city contain water of a higher medicinal value than those of some of the world's best known spas, being particularly rich in carbonic salts.

The curative springs, which were located 1,200 feet beneath layers of coal, are flowing at such a rate that they could be used to supply the city's water needs. Th emunicipality plans the erection of luxurious baths in the hope of attracting tourists and health seekers.

Curiously enough, the first announcement of the discovery was made on April 1, and as Cologne is noted as a city of practical jokers no credence whatever was attached to it. Consequently the city authorities had the greatest difficulty in convincing the press and public that the curative springs really do exist.

The Little Old Woman

There was a little woman whose hands were worn and red,
And long ago the beauty of her youthful days had fled,
For she had suffered sorrow, and she had suffered pain,
But after these had left her she learned to smile again,
And out she'd come with dainties for the children in the street
Till it seemed where'er she wandered there were young ones round her feet.

She hadn't any money; she was never gaily dressed;
She had a shawl and bonnet which she called her Sunday best.
Aid if you gave her something, in a little while you'd see
Some other person strutting in that bit of finery,
And she'd give this explanation if you asked the reason why:
"I thought she ought to have it. She's so much worse off than I."

No one ever seemed to notice that her hands were coarse and red,
That she wasn't good to look at no one ever heard it said,
And the smartest of her neighbours who appeared to know it all
Never spoke a word in censure of her bonnet or her shawl.
So take this truth for granted: that a sweet and tender smile
And a heart so brave and kindly never do go out of style.

—Edgar A. Guest.

Airships

London Morning Post: There is only one respect in which these cumbersome machines have so far proved superior to the aeroplane, and that is in the radius of flight. But this factor is of little importance for inter-Imperial communications, since the aeroplane can overcome this disadvantage by means of relays. In no other respect has the airship shown the least promise of competing effectively with the heavier-than-air machine. The best policy for this country, therefore, is to sell the R-100 for what it will fetch, to scrap the rest of the equipment, and spend our money on more profitable departments of aeronautical research.

In discussing a question mor reliance ought to be placed on the influence of reason than on the weight of authority.

"No operation is so insignificant that a man can refuse to give it less than his best."—Bruce Barton.

FATHER GETS UP FIRST

Tells How He Keeps the Family Fit

"I have a family of six—four boys, two girls—ranging from 23 to 12 years of age, and a delicate wife, and four years ago it was owing to a sickly household that I took matters in my own hands. Their foods were not relished, and to take medicine was like administering punishment. For four years now I have regularly used Kruschen Salts about four or five times a week, unknown to any of my family or wife to this day. I get up first always, and I put half a teaspoonful of Kruschen in the teapot or coffee-pot, and they all have their first cup therefrom. So what was a sickly household four years ago, I am glad to see now a healthy and robust family.

"They are always ready for and clear up their meals. Always alert, quick, and active, and never seem tired, all due to my secret way of using about half a teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in the morning tea or coffee."—C. D.

If only more parents were as careful about their children's internal cleanliness as about their external cleanliness, there would be fewer sick headaches, fewer finicky appetites, fewer fits of the sulks and fewer sallow faces. Kruschen keeps the system regular in its most important daily duty. Its gentle aperient action ensures proper activity of the liver and kidneys so that these organs of elimination cleanse the inside of all clogging waste matter. Kruschen thus ensures a clear blood-stream, carrying health and vigour to the whole body and brain. Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 45c. and 75c. per bottle.

SUMMER CARE OF THE BABY

There are conditions which occur during the hot weather, which are apt to cause upsets and disease among the babies. For this reason, it is necessary that special attention be given to certain points in order to keep the baby healthy and comfortable, and to protect him from disease during the summer months.

When the weather is hot, a bath, morning and night, is desirable. In addition, the very hot day is made more comfortable for the baby if he is given a cool sponge in the middle of the day.

Many babies have a very uncomfortable time during the warm weather because they are overclothed. Not only are they made uncomfortable, but their sleep is disturbed, they perspire and then they may become chilled. The baby should be dressed according to the temperature, not to the time of the year. A diaper alone, or a diaper and a thin, sleeveless shirt, are sufficient clothing on a really hot summer day.

During the summer, the baby becomes thirsty more often, and so wants more water. Unsweetened boiled water should be offered to him at least once between each feeding. Thirst is very distressing, and as the baby cannot ask for a drink, he depends upon you to offer it to him. Just because he refuses it once, do not forget that he may become thirsty later on.

Hundreds of babies die every summer from what is popularly known as "summer complaint"—summer diarrhoea. The best way to prevent this loss of life is to prevent the diarrhoea.

Breast-fed babies very seldom contract this disease, and breast-feeding is, therefore, the first and most important point in prevention. Raw milk should not be given to children. Pasteurized milk should be bought, or the milk should be pasteurized in the home. Failing either of these, the milk should be boiled. Young children cannot resist the effects of milk containing large numbers of germs from barnyard contamination.

If diarrhoea does occur, parents should never forget that it is a very serious and often fatal condition unless properly treated. There are those who think they know how to treat this condition although they have had no training, and the results of what they do are seen in the number of babies they bury.

If the child has diarrhoea, all feedings should be stopped. Let the child have as much unsweetened water as he will take, and give no medicine. Place the child under your doctor's care.

To some, this may seem an unnecessary fuss about what is a fairly common disease. To their objections, we would answer that the hundreds of babies who now die of summer diarrhoea do so because the necessary attention was not given them. Deaths from this cause can be prevented by following the advice given in this article.

Empire Day, held this year on a Monday, made a long week-end holiday. In every part of the Dominion, holiday-makers took advantage of the new low week-end fares, recently inaugurated by the Canadian Pacific Railway, charging fare and a quarter for return trips to any point in the country. This reduction is in force everywhere in Canada every week-end. (739)

Representative French railway experts touring this country and the United States recently made a thorough inspection of Canadian Pacific transportation facilities, steamships, hotels and terminals, gathering a considerable body of information with a view to renewal of material and equipment on the Chemin de Fer du Nord, in France.

John Willis, Esq., Warden of Peel County, will tender a picnic to his friends at Ferndale Park, on Friday, June 19th.

DRUMQUIN

Well, Mr. Editor, I see a note in your press, "Let us Smile.' ' Very good. Many folks always have a smile; some once and a while, and others; one would be led to believe that others never had one on their face. Yet the recent rains should create a smile on every face.

Mr. A. R. Hassard, K.C., of Toronto occupied the pulpits on Hornby Circuit last Sunday in the absence of Mr. Neil, who was attending conference. The speaker's subject was "Temperance", which he delivered ably, referring to the ravages the liquor had on body and soul, the loss of life and the vast sums of money spent for it.

If weather is favourable, Bethel Church folk expect to have their yearly picnic to Blue Springs, Saturday next.

Much sympathy is extended to the Bentley family in their recent bereavement.

Congratulations to Miss Estel Ford, who recently graduated at Brantford Hospital. Many of her friends attended the ceremony.

SUMMER IN THE MARITIMES

The pictures show: above: the new Lakeside Inn, the C.P.R. hotel at Yarmouth, N.S.: centre: the bathing pool in the grounds of the Pines Hotel, Digby, N.S.: and below: the Algonquin Hotel at St. Andrews-by-the-Sea. Inset: a typical satisfied junior patron of Maritime sea, sand and sunshine.

Sunshine and gleaming sands! The laughter of scampering childhood mingled with the organ-swell of the Atlantic breakers as the cream onto the shores of the Bay of Fundy! Here is holiday; health and happiness. All along the beautiful coast of Nova Scotia are countless watering places, whose names have become household words among lovers of the seaside. Excellent hotels are at the disposal of visitors and the shoreward scene is no less lovely than its marine companion. The Annapolis Valley needs no introduction to Canadians or to its countless American visitors. It has been rightly called Canada's Devon, with its flourishing orchards and pasture lands and its countless picturesque farms and hamlets. A few hours journey by palatial steamer from Saint John, N.B., Digby, with its Pines Hotel as the hub of activity, rivals Kentville with its Cornwallis Inn, and Yarmouth with its new Lakeside Inn, in extending hospitality to the holiday-seeker. Golf, tennis, bathing, fishing, yachting and innumerable beautiful motor drives are only a few of the recreations available. On the New Brunswick mainland, father, as it were, to this stalwart family, the Algonquin Hotel, at St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, sets a standard of summering unrivalled anywhere on the continent. Rita plans her vacation in a hurry

Rita had to arrange her vacation trip in a hurry. A sudden turn of events at the office made it a matter of now or never . . . and Rita chose "now".

After seven o'clock that evening (when evening rates over Long Distance were in force) she called her old school chum Helen to ask her suggestion as to the best place to go.

"Wonderful", said the happy voice at the other end of the line after she had explained everything. "We are all going to Seabeach for two weeks tomorrow. Now you will be able to come with us."

And so Rita spent the most enjoyable vacation she ever had, thanks to her call over Long Distance.

And the cost of that call was less than the tip she gave to the colored porter.

Evening rates on "Anyone" (station-to-station) calls begin at 7 p.m. (local time). Just give "Long Distance" the number you want — it speeds up the service. If you don't know the distant number, "Information" will look it up for you.

ANNOUNCING

The purchase of the Sterling Milling Co. of Streetsville by W. H. McCarthy and associates. The present owners of the property are all thoroughly experienced, up to the minute millers and business men, well known to the trade as being upright and dependable. Their sole idea being to use the equipment and their knowledge to give their customers quality, satisfaction and service at the lowest possible cost. It is generally recognized that there is no mill in Canada better equipped than this mill to produce bread and pastry flours of quality.

The Streetsville mill of the McCarthy Milling Co., located on the old water power site, represents nearly one hundred years of milling progress. This modern mill of 700 barrel capacity still operates under a twenty-two foot head and is the largest mill in Ontario operated by water alone. However the site has more than gained in scenic beauty, the sound of falling waters, the sweet, fresh air coming from the deep ravine of the Credit river; the century old elms, all lend an atmosphere of peace and serenity linking the legendary and typical mill of years gone by to the ever active modern mill of to-day. Nevertheless further improvements will be made in connection with the local or domestic department. It is our intention to so power and equip the chopping end of the business that no inconvenience or delay will result in the grinding or handling of farmers' grains.

Eighty or ninety years ago power had to be utilized at the place of its development, little was then known of er electric wires to distant industries. transmitting water or steam power ov- Water power sites for mills were, therefore very desirable, as a low power cost was as essential then to a mill's success as it is to-day.

Wheat, oats and barley will be purchased in the ordinary way, thus creating an additional outlet for local grains.

The past history of this mill has not been such as to establish confidence locally, little or no effort had been made to cater to the local market. We hope that citizens generally will give the company an opportunity of testing their ability to serve their requirements in such a way that confidence may be restored.

A further announcement will be made later at which time a local service will be inaugurated.

LET US SMILE

The latest from Scotland concerns one Andrew, who, being very popular with the village folk, was requested by the minister to canvass for subscriptions to charity.

Andrew accepted the task. A few days later he was seen jazzing along the road in a suspicious manner.

"Andrew," said the minister, "It grieves me to see you in this condition."

"Ah, well," replied Andrew, "It's a' for the guid of the cause. You see, meenister, I'm a' because of the subscriptions. Else how could I go into they make me have a wee drappie."

"Every house," protested the minister, "but surely, Andrew, there are some members of the kirk who are good teetotallers?"

"Aye, aye, there be, meenister; I wrote tae three."

OUR BASEBALL LEAGUE

Well, fans, here we are again, after a nice week's holiday.
I am very sorry you had to miss the scores of last week's play,
But I will give you the low down of the games to date and you'll be happy
To find changes in the league that will make you feel batty.

Well, the first thing I'll tell you will be the league standing.
After the first half of the schedule is over, we find in first place all four teams banding.
You talk about your tight races, well, think this over—
Which team at the end of the season do you think will be in the clover?
It's more than I can guess, but I still pull for Creditvale;
The reason of course as I've told you before—the pill they can whale.

The day of miracles, let me tell you, is not over yet;
Trinity beat High School so bad that they looked all wet.
What has come over these kids is more than I can say,
For in other games, like world champions did they play.
The finale score to my recollection was eight to fourteen;
It looks like McCarther will have to get them back to the old routine.

Not satisfied with losing that one, they then lost to the Town,
Who, before winning this game, were holding the cellar place down.
But this puts them tied with the other three teams for first;
If they go much faster, a blood-vessel I'm afraid they'll burst.
Fritzie, with his slow ball, had the kids wondering what was coming next;
If you don't believe me, ask Stoggie and Pat, they were quite vexed
Because he wouldn't let them hit outside the infield at all,
And had them saying, "If I could only connect with the ball!"

Now we come to the biggest surprise of the season
When Trinity beat Creditvale for practically no good reason.
Of course I can tell you simply how this miracle was done;
Buck says to yours truly, "As a baseball player you're dumb."
He was quite right. After yours truly had fielded a bad little grounder
He held on to the ball to see whose wisdom was the sounder;
For some were yelling, "Hold her; others, "Thow it, you cheese";
And while deliberating to make up his mind, Stoggie and Arch over the plate did breeze.

Outside of that last inning Creditvale played as though inspired,
But I bet after that game somebody will sure to be fired.
A mistake like that has never before been seen in history;
Why he hung on to that ball so long will always be a mystery.
But, as Manager Pickett says, we'll have to dig in, by thunder,
And just count it as a bad break, not a blunder.
So we'll win every ggame from now to the end of the season
To show them that we never get beat without a good reason.

Well, folks, this brings us right up to the end of the week;
If you want more news in next week's Review you'll have to seek
So why wait? Just come right down to Nib's ground;
But be sure to be there when Heck makes his rounds,
For the managers and players like a big crowd there;
If you go I'm sure you'll be treated fair.
There is even benches to rest your tired limbs
And make you comfortable while your team wins.

A SPORT.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Mashinter

The funeral of Mrs. Thomas Mashinter took place Monday morning from St. Mary's R.C. Church, Port Credit, where funeral mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Sheridan, to St. Mary's Cemetery. Deceased had been in poor health for over a year, passing away in her 73rd year. She was born in Proton township, daughter of the late Jeremiah Phalen, a pioneer of that section. She resided in Toronto prior to her marriage, coming to Erindale 20 years ago. Surviving are her husband, five sisters, Mrs. J. Donnelly and Mrs. B. Lavin, North Dakota; Mrs. M. Whalen, Buffalo; Mrs. J. P. Keating, Guelph; Mrs. S. Kelly, Colfax, Iowa, and four brothers, John, North Dakota; Frank, Mount Forest; Pierre, Guelph, and Joseph on the homestead.

Oliver Steen, who was successful in his third year medical examinations, is spending his summer at Franklin Camp, near Parry Sound. This Camp is under the management of the Christie Brothers, who are brothers-in-law of J. D. Steen. Oliver attends to first aid work and other duties.

BRITANNIA

Six persons were injured and removed to Peel Memorial Hospital at Brampton, as the result of an accident which occurred at 8.45 Saturday night on the Centre Road, near Britannia. According to the police a southbound car proceeding at high speed, and alleged to have been cutting out of the line of traffic, driven by Harold Wallace of 14 Edwin Street, Guelph, who had with him four other passengers, crashed into a car coming in the opposite direction, driven by Philip Garbutt, of 117 Humbercrest Boulevard, Toronto, who had his wife and 7-year-old son with him.

The Garbutt car was turned over into the ditch and was badly wrecked, while the other car was also much damaged.

The injured were: Harold Wallace, driver of the southbound car, who sustained a broken rib and face lacerations; Mrs. Violet Wilson, of 114 London Road, Guelph, chest and face injuries; Patricia Mizotte, sister of Mrs. Wilson, leg injuries, and Mac McGinnis, concussion of the brain, all being in the Wallace car, and of 114 London Road, Guelph.

Woodrow Wilson, aged 4, son of Mrs. Wilson, although he was thrown through the top of the car, escaped unhurt.

Garbutt received facial cuts, while Mrs. Garbutt was found to be suffering from a broken ankle, their son escaping injury. The six patients were given attention by Dr. W. H. Godfrey of Cooksville and Dr. W. H. Brydon, of Brampton, prior to their being taken to the hospital. Wallace was placed under arrest at the hospital by Provincial Officer C. Hefferon, on a charge of criminal negligence, being later allowed bail in $5,000.

NOTES

More than 200 descendants of Isaac Devins gathered for a family reunion Saturday at the Thistletown Community Park, at which the memory of their forbear was honored. Isaac Devins came to York at the close of the eighteenth century from Pennsylvania, and was the first foreman appointed when Yonge Street was laid out by Governor Simcoe, who also detailed the pioneer to erect the first mill on the Humber River at Lambton Mills. Two years after his arrival Devins took up farming on Lot 20, Concession 6, in York, near Thistletown, and his daughter, Elizabeth, was the first white child to be born in the old town of York.

Officers of the family association for 1931 were elected as follows: President, W. E. Duncan, Weston; Vice-Presidents, W. H. Devins, Toronto; Albert Devins, Kleinburg; and T. R. Lawrence, Toronto; Secretaries, Mrs. M. Fletcher, Woodbridge, and Mrs. A. Haines, Kleinburg; Treasurer, Roy Devins, Weston.

THE IDEAL HOSTESS

She greets you with a gracious word;
She never does a thing absurd.
She likes to hear what you may say;
She does not overplan the day.
She serves the food that you like best;
She gives you ample time for rest.
She does not gossip or complain;
She hasn't any selfish strain.
She does not argue or insist;
She aims your best self to enlist.
She gleans how long you wish to stay;
She lets you go without delay.

—Grenville Kleiser.

PINECREST CAMP

If I had the wings of an aeroplane,
Back to Camp Pinecrest I'd fly,
There in the marquee I'd long remain,
There would I live till I die.

Remember the well-loved aeroplane song, boys and girls. Don't you long to sing it again? Well, come to Camp and it and many more new ones will thrill you with joy.

New sleeping quarters and new tents will add greatly to your comfort this year. And just picture what that dear old pavilion will look like in a new coat of paint. And oh yes; we mustn't forget to just mention the new equipment for sports that will be there this year. Oh, camp will be the best ever this year.

Brampton's New and Energetic Lions Club are taking an interest in us and are going to dig a well on our own camp grounds so we'll have fresh cold water all the day long.

Peel boys between the ages of 12 and 16, get busy and fill that application form in and send it and $2.00 registration fee to Mr. Albert Bolster, Brampton. This is your last week. Remember after June 15, the Camp Committee are going to accept 25 applications from Halton boys who are extremely anxious to attend our Camp. They have heard about our wonderful camp and have requested that they be allowed to come to it. But up to June 15 Peel boys get first chance. Don't delay a minute. Girls send your registration fee of $2.00 to Miss Robena Ward, Brampton.

We're anxious for holidays now aren't we, boys and girls?

COOKSVILLE

James Wright, of Summerhill Ave., narrowly escaped certain death Saturday morning, when the front of his truck was struck by an eastbound train on the Canadian Pacific Railway crossing at Cooksville.

According to the police, Wright, was at the time driving West, had stopped his truck to allow a westbound train to pass. Pulling out from behind the train, he suddenly noticed that another train was coming from the opposite direction. Applying his brakes immediately, he was struck broadside by the second locomotive, which had slowed up. Although his truck was thrown into the ditch, Wright escaped unhurt, and was later able to proceed home in his truck.

Turning their June meeting into a lawn party, held at the home of Mrs. L. D. Sanderson on Friday, the Women's Association of the United Church combined business and pleasure. Plans were made for improving the basement of the church, and through the kindness of two market garden booths one on either highway, frequent sales of baking will be held to raise the funds. Following the business, races for the children, games and contests, and a croquet tournament were held, winners in the latter being: Mrs. Jim Smith, and Mrs. E. D. Laughton. Tea was served on small tables on the lawn.

PORT CREDIT

Alleged to have cut across the Toronto-Hamilton Highway while driving east near Lakeview after midnight Saturday, W. Pickering, of Grafton Avenue, Toronto, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving by Provincial Officer E. Purvis, after his car had collided with a car driven by Norman Hilton, of Parkdale Avenue, Hamilton. Pickering's car, in which there was a lady passenger, was thrown completely into an eight-foot ditch, but neither driver nor passenger was hurt. In the Hilton car were H. Humphreys, of 18 Borden Street, Hamilton, and two lady friends. Although the rear wheel of their car was knocked off and the car damaged, not one of the four passengers were injured.

Bert Peer, aged 21, of Port Credit, Sunday afternoon effected his sixth rescue of a drowning person in the Credit River. It appears that, with her father and mother looking on, a young girl who had gone in swimming got into difficulties and was sinking for a third time, when a man who did not leave his name dived in after her. He reached her in time, but soon found himself being pulled under, when a second unknown man plunged in and managed to pull the rescuer ashore. Hearing shouts for help, Peer, who was about to start home after his afternoon swim, soon took in the situation, and made a fast swim to the sinking girl and brought her ashore safely. The parents hurried their child into a car and drove away without making their identity known.

Lyle Murphy, of 91 Eighth Street, New Toronto, was drowned when he plunged into the Credit River in an attempt to rescue his 9-year-old son, Roy, who got into difficulties while swimming.

The tragedy occurred near the centre of the village, with a large number of onlookers lining the banks, including Mrs. Murphy, who, realizing what was happening, was only restrained with difficulty from plunging in after her husband and son.

The three had come down from New Toronto, where Murphy was employed in the factory of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. Father and mother sat on the west bank of the river, while their son was enjoying a swim in the shallow water. In some way the boy went out into the river, and reached a point where the basin takes a steep drop to a depth of about 15 feet.

Hearing his cries for help the father made a rush for the water and without casting off any of his clothes, plunged in. Unable to swim, he was noticed to sink, and before aid could reach him went down for the third time. Kenneth Cross, who was working on his boat some distance away, heard frantic cries for help, and immediately rowed to the direction of the calls.

Quickly realizing that the boy was in distress, Cross dived in and grabbed the lad as he was about to disappear, and brought him safely to shore to his already prostrate mother. Learning that the lad's father had gone under, Cross hurried back to the water, and made six attempts to recover the body. He was assisted by Russell Farrow and Gerald Block, two local residents, who later secured the aid of James O'Connor of Long Branch, who was working a short distance down the river. After dragging for a short time with poles and hooks from the Life Saving Station, O'Connor brought the body ashore. Dr. L. G. Brayley, of Port Credit, along with Albert E. Thompson, worked for fully half an hour in an effort to bring about resuscitation, but without success. When life was found to be extinct, Coroner Dr. A. R. Barton was summoned, and after investigating, decided that an inquest would not be necessary.

LAKEVIEW

Six occupants of two cars escaped serious injuries by inches in a collision on the highway. W. Pickering, Grafton avenue, Toronto, was arrested by Traffic Officer E. G. Purves charged with reckless driving and later released on $1,000 bail. Both cars were badly damaged, one of them being turned over.

BRITANNIA

Conducted during the past months as a Bible study class, the Y.P.S. of the United church has fulfilled a double purpose, including from very young to adult members in the organization. They held their closing during the week-end in the form of a banquet in the school room, at which W. E. Elliott acted as toastmaster. The toast to the King was proposed by Charles Johnson; to the church, Miss Mary Dunton, Rev. C. S. Jones, Cooksville; Y.P.S., P. G. Dunton, Rev. W. J. Watt, Long Branch, guest speaker. Mrs. W. Fewster moved a vote of thanks to those who assisted in the affair.

SOME SOFTBALL SCORES

The Town League defeated Trinity Church 13 to 4 Monday evening. The batteries for the town were: Fritz and Farrell, and for the Church team, Adams and Crozier.

On Friday evening the Town beat the High Schools by 8 to 2.

Last Thursday evening the Calverts ball team came down from Brampton and were defeated by Streetsville 12-6. This was a benefit game for George Klinck, softball and hockey player who is going back to the west for the benefit of his health. The hat was passed around, with the result that the ball club was enabled to present George with $100.

Annual picnic of the Streetsville United Church was held on Saturday afternoon at Huttonville Park, over 300 motoring up for the event. Committee in charge consisted of Raymond Stewart, Jim Dick, Ilah Featherstone, Mildred Stevens, Beth Evans, Elmer Workman. Rev. George Purchase, Kenneth Featherstone, Sunday school superintendent, J. B. Ross, assistant, looked after general arrangements, Miss Edna Falconer headed the lunch committee, and enjoyed the affair with the rest of the very little picnickers were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sibbald, long time members of the church. H. W. Gerhart acted as starter for the races.

LOCAL NEWS

The Twelfth of July will be celebrated in Milton on a large scale.

Mrs. McArthur spent a few days with friends at Bridgeburg.

Dr. and Mrs. Cook of Toronto visited with Mr. and Mrs. I. J. Ardagh this week.

Mr. H. Gerhart is supervising examinations at Bolton this week and part of next.

What this country is suffering from today is too much rather than too little credit. Easy credit is a curse. People who can do it should pay cash.

A number of our villagers attended the Convocation of Toronto University last Friday to witness the conferrings of the B.A. degree on Re; Bruce and Ted Cook.

Miss Bertha Cliff, B.A., of the village High school, has left to spend her holidays at her home in Kingston.

Miss Ballanger, who has spent a couple of weeks with Mrs. Robinson, has returned to her home near Chatham.

Mrs. J. A. Workman has returned home after a couple of weeks spent at Trenton; She reports splendid prospects for crops in that district.

Mr. and Mrs. Omar Turney are visiting with Mr. Turney's sister in Ottawa; He and his bride expect to be home the end of this week.

We are glad to hear that Mrs. Jim McLelland, who has been confined to her home through sickness for the last three months, is making an encouraging recovery and expects to be out within the next few weeks.

Over in Milton there is a dog by-law in force. The champion complains that some dogs are kept shut up, while others are allowed their freedom. We suppose the latter belong to members of the Town Council, or some of their friends.

Peel Chapter No. 96, Order Eastern Star, Streetsville, entertained a number of guests from other chapters Monday night, when they celebrated their ninth birthday. A birthday cake, bearing nine candles, graced the centre of the table. Mrs. Ena Atkinson gave a report of the meeting of the Grand Chapter, at Fort William. The local chapter has closed down for July and August.

The Rev. R. A. Lundy and Geo. H. Purchase attended the induction of the Rev. S. H. Soper, B.A., into the ministry of St. Paul's United Church, Brampton. Mr. Soper was a school chum of Mr. Purchase and a class mate at the University. After graduation, Mr. Soper and wife volunteered for service in China, where they spent about 15 years. Owing to the interval disturbances in that Country Mr. Soper has not been able to return with his family. The Induction service was well attended. Dr. MacVicar was in charge. The message to the congregation was given by Rev. E. Payne of Huttonville and to the minister by Rev. J. J. Coulter of Toronto.

Almost 200 attended the Sunday school Picnic of the United Church. The weather was ideal. Every one reports a good time at Huttonville Park.

Watch for Eden Church annual garden party at Mr. D. Sinclair's on July 7th. Jamie Reid, assisted by other well-selected artists, will furnish the program.

John Willis, Esq., Warden of Peel County, will tender a picnic to his friends at Ferndale Park, on Friday, June 19th.

CHURCHVILLE

The annual meeting of the plot-holders of Churchville Cemetery was held last week when the following trustees were elected: Messrs. S. L. Hall, J. W. Hall, H. H. Arnott, Jas. Fletcher, A. M. Thomson, J. C. Fraser, A. Marchment, F. A. Hutton, Wm. Lambe, O. R. Church.

The new officers are: President, S. L. Hall; Vice-president, O. R. Church; Secretary-Treasurer, J. W. Hall. Management com., Stanley Hall, J. C. Fraser and A. Marchment.

The secretary reported 12 burials during the past 12 months, and over $500.00 in the bank. It was decided to start a permanent up-keep fund. Each plot-holder has the privilege of paying $100 in one sum or $2.00 per year for the up-keep of his plot. The cemetery is in splendid condition and will be kept that way. It is just 100 years since the first burial took place —that of Annajah Church, its founder,

French Excursion Steamer Capsizes—500 Perish

Boat Overturns, Throwing Hundreds of Excursionists Without Warning into Rough Sea, After Panic Follows Sudden Listing

ALL WOMEN, CHILDREN ABOARD BELIEVED LOST

St. Nazaire, France.—Nearly 500 excursionists are believed to have lost their lives Sunday when the excursion steamer St. Philbert sank between St. Gildas Point and Pornic, about five miles from here.

Only eight survivors had been picked up by rescue boats late Sunday night and it was believed that, except for these, all the passengers and crew of the boat were lost.

The excursion steamer was carrying large holiday crowds on its run between Nantes and the Island of Noirmoutier.

All of the eight who were rescued from the water by boats which put out for the scene shortly after the catastrophe were men. There were a number of women and children aboard the boat.

Panic Causes Disaster

A squall struck the boat in the late afternoon, the survivors said. It knocked the small steamer over on her beam ends, and the crowd, becoming panicky, rushed to the opposite side of the deck, causing the boat to capsize and spilling its load of human freight into the churning sea.

The eight survivors were more dead than alive when they were picked up after more than an hour in the heavy seas. They were saved, they said, by lifebelts which they managed to grab before they were thrown into the water.

The first information about the catastrophe came from the lighthouse keeper at St. Gildas Point.

The keeper saw the squall strike the boat and overturn it and he immediately telephoned to Pornic for help.

Lifesavers put off at once for the spot where the boat went down and after they were on their way the keeper phoned the news to St. Nazaire.

Even after the receipt of this news the report that the boat had sunk was discredited here. It was only after the first of the survivors reached the shore that the reality of the catastrophe was accepted.

Thought Impossible

The operating company continued to insist that it was impossible for the boat to sink at this point, where the water is shallow and navigation is protected by Noirmoutier Island.

One of the survivors, an Austrian named Silanek, was picked up by the tug Pornic, which was sent out from St. Nazaire. The other survivors were rescued by a lifesaver's boat. The boats also recovered the bodies of four of the passengers. Three of the bodies recovered were those of unidentified women.

A hope that the loss of life might eventually appear to be less than at first estimated was given by a report that many of the passengers left the boat at Noirmoutier Island to wait for better weather.

Private Excursion

The excursion was a private one, conducted by a co-operative society of Nantes.

Rough seas were encountered on the way to the island and many of the passengers, especially women and children, suffered greatly from seasickness.

It is possible to reach the mainland at low tide, for about an hour or so, over an ancient causeway, and the hope was held that many of the sick passengers might have landed to take this means of crossing, and left the boat with that in mind.

It was pointed out, however, that there were enough on board when the squall struck to capsize the craft when they rushed to one side.

The survivors were taken to a hospital to-night.

Black Squall Descends

Disconnected stories which the survivors were able to tell after they were picked up by the boats indicated that a black squall descended suddenly on the excusion boat, capsizing it quickly. A cloud, black as night, they said, rushed on the steamer from over the low-lying Noirmoutier Island.

The happy excursionists started out from St. Nazaire on what might be compared to a Canadian Sunday school picnic, to Noirmoutier, noted island of the monks of the middle ages but now a favorite haunt of French artists.

Similar picnics have been held on Summer holidays for many years, and have been considered without danger because of the island and the short crossing.

Mishaps Take 11 Over Week-End

Six Are Drowned, Five Killed in Variety of Accidents

Drowned

Edward Demolen, 9, Sault Ste. Marie.

Miss Lola Andrews, Trenton.

Jean Rouleau, Lake Chibougamau.

Youth named Smith, Sesikinika Lake.

Winston McCloskey, 11, Ottawa.

Carl McCloskey, 12, Ottawa.

Killed

Eugene Ingram, 34 Endean Avenue, Toronto, collided with fire truck.

John Robertson, Adelaide township, smothered in gravel pit.

Allan Bruce, Algonquin, kicked by horse.

David Walker, 11, Welland, burned by power wire.

Harry Blodgett, 12, Peterboro, struck by auto.

The first consistently fair weekend in Ontario in the past two months saw the toll of dead by drowning and other mishaps in the province placed at eleven.

Sault Ste. Marie, Trenton and three Northedn lakes were the scenes of the aquatic fatalities, while the locations of the other acciden's were as varied as the nature of the mishaps.

A horse, a fire wagon, a gravel pit, a power wire and a motor car were involved, taking the lives of three men and two boys.

Boy Falls in Canal

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.—While playing on the north bank of the Michigan Northern Power Company canal Sunday morning, Edward Demolen, nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Demolen, 1015 Augusta Street slipped into the water at Kimball Street and was drowned.

The body has not been rceovered.

Perishes at Picnic

Cobalt.—Apparently seized with cramps when he went swimming in Sesikinika Lake while attending a picnic there, an 18-year-old youth named Smith was drowned.

Smith was in a canoe alone, and when he dived into the water a short distance from shore, reappeared once and then sank. The body was recovered in seven feet of water an hour later, and resuscitation was attempted without success.

The body was taken to Kirkland Lake.

Brothers Die Together

Ottawa.—Two brothers, Winston and Carl McCloskey, aged 11 and 12 years, of Ottawa, were drowned Sunday afternoon at Wolf Lake, 40 miles northwest of the capital, where they had gone with their mother and older brother to spend the day.

No details of the accident were available here as a storm in the district threw communications out of order.

A brief message was received that the boys had been drowned and asking that grappling irons and dry clothing for their mother be sent to Wolf Lake. From the latter request it is thought here their drowning was the result of a boating accident, and that Mrs. McCloskey was saved. Later word was got through that their bodies were recovered.

Caretaker Drowns

North Bay—In a communication received by the North Bay Police department from the Rouyn office of the General Airways. Limited, relatives in Mattawa and North Bay were advised of the death by drowning of Jean Rouleau, caretaker of a camp in Lake Chibougamau, 200 miles northeast of Rouyn. It was stated that Rouleau had lost his life while crossing the lake alone in a canoe. Rouleau had been in the Quebec mining region for a number of years, and was regarded as an expert canoeist. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Rouleau of Mattawa.

Four Hurt At Oakville

Burlington. — About 1.30 o'clock Sunday morning a serious accident occurred east of Burlington at Osler's farm, when a car driven by Kenneth Good, 579 Jarvis Street, Toronto, crashed into a brick pillar at the Osler farm gates.

Good was accompanied by L. McClure, also of Toronto, and Miss Sheila Armour of Oakville, and Miss Sheila Heddle also of Oakville. Good received injuries to his head and legs McClure had his jaw broken, Miss Armour's arm was fractured and Miss Heddle sustained a broken collar bone. Traffic Constable B. Delaney investigated the accident, and the victims were taken to a Hamilton hospital.

Horse's Kick Fatal

Brockville—Allan Bruce, aged 18, employed by F. Smiley, a farmer at Algonquin, Grenville County, is dead in the General Hospital here as a result of having been kicked in the abdomen by a horse which was running at large along the road near the home of his employer.

The horse was caught by Smiley and after being handed to the boy, kicked him. An emergency operation performed at the hospital after his arrival proved of no avail.

French Scientist Has Hobby, His Own Miniature Railway

Rene Claude, son of Dr. Georges Claude, whose experiments in utilizing the difference in temperature between deep-sea and surface water for the production of mechanical energy have attracted world-wide attention, has an unusual "hobby". Lots of little boys have miniature railway trains in their gardens, but not many men have complicated electrical transport systems to play with in their spare moments, writes the Paris correspondent of "The Christian Science Monitor."

Around an artificial lake in his garden, M. Claude has constructed about a kilometer of railway tracks and dozens of freight and passenger cars, all in miniature, but strictly true to scale. There are electrical switching and signal systems, miniature repair shops, and all the material of a full-grown railway system. While playing with his trains M. Claude gets helpful ideas about railroad mechanics and safety devices.

Home Tannery Inexpensive And Simple, Farmers Told

Raleigh, N.C.—The farmer may save money by tanning his own leather, said R. E. Nance, animal husbandman at North Carolina State College.

"The farmer is the chief producer of hides and skins," Mr. Nance said, "but he is also the chief user of leather. The hides he has to sell usually bring practically nothing, while the leather he has to buy is usually expensive. He may get out from between these two millstones by curing and tanning the hides and pelts at home. This work may be done in off-seasons and is neither expensive nor difficult."

Busy Canals

Ottawa.—New traffic records for the month of May were set for canal traffic through the Welland and St. Lawrence canals, according to a Dominion Bureau of Statistics report. Traffic through the Sault Ste. Marie Canal was, however, nearly the highest in the past decade for that month. Through the Welland Canal freight amounted to 1,165,853 tons. Wheat, at 181,809 tons, was double the corresponding figure last year. Barley amounted to 131,036 tons, and oats 55,732 tons.

With the Lone Scouts

This week we have received another very interesting letter from Lone Scout Walter Wraight, who is connected with the Hudson's Bay Company and lives at one of their isolated posts in Northern Ontario.

The winters are long and dreary in that part of the country, and there are only two or three mails delivered by dog team throughout the winter months. Walter says that they were looking for the commencement of the "break-up" of wintry conditions about the 10th or 15th of May, and he will receive no more mail until then.

Walter says "one flock of geese has already passed over head on their non-stop flight to the Bay. There are a few ducks around, and of course plenty of crows.

The windigoes (Ghosts) have already started thei rannual trips. Every Spring, without fail, the Indians bring in all kinds of weird tales of being attacked by Ghosts. Last year one load of freight was lost. The Indians told a story of having been shot at by ghosts. The canoe was found with bullet holes in it all right, and as the crew were not carrying rifles it must have been someone else. Rather substantial ghosts that can use 30-30 rifles, don't you think? The literal translation of the word is, I think, "Wild Indians."

Walter is living quite a hard but very interesting life up there in the north, and he says that he is looking forward to the summer months, so that he can go our exploring in his canoe, as he wants to pass his Pathfinder's Badge. He also says that he wants to go and see a dentist, before he goes crazy, so you see there are disadvantages too.

Last week we discussed Camping and the way to select a suitable camp site, and this week we will go a little further and think about the necessary equipment to be taken on these trips.

Let us plan a short week end camp for a Patrol of Lone Scouts. We have already decided upon the place where we intend to make our camp headquarters, and we have decided whether the trip is to be made on foot, or by wheel.

If we are going on our wheels we shall be able to carry a little more equipment than if it all has to be carried on our shoulders, but first of all let us think about the matter of shelter. On this class of camp, of short duration, it is better to either take along small, light "pup-tents" or else to improve some sort of shelter on arrival. Page 177 of your "Handbook for Canada" tells you how temporary shelters can be made, and if you are camping in very wooded country, and the weather is settled and fine, it is sometimes more advantageous to erect such shelters than to carry tentage on your backs. However, if you have had no experience in erecting these shelters it is as well to practice a little at home, before starting out.

Good waterproof sheets can also be improvised as shelters, and provide very good cover. Eo having decided just what shelter we shall depend upon, we next come to the question of what each boy shal itake along. The following items are essential, whatever kind of camp you propose to have: two warm blankets, a ground sheet (in addition to any to be used for shelters), a sweater or jersey, sleeping suit, spare shirt and shorts towel, soap, toothbrush, comb, eating utensils, needle and thread. Scout uniform to be worn, of course.

All this can be packed into a pack sack or Rucksack," to be carried on the back. The Stores Department at Headquarters, Ottawa, stock a very comfortable Rucksack. Care should be taken to have good wide shoulder straps, and to see that the sack fits snugly to your shoulders, otherwise you will soon be tired and have sore shoulders.

Divided amongst the Patrol the following equipment should be carried: A good hand axe, large frying pan three or four large kettles or containers for boiling purposes, and a large tablespoon.

Food should be thought of, and your daily menus planned before you go. Often it is possible to obtain such things as eggs, milk, butter and vegetables from farms near your camping place, and then you can save yourself the trouble of carrying them. The other food should be provided by the Patrol, each member bringing certain articles, and care being taken that items are not duplicated by several Scouts.

Next week we will discuss the food problem in more detail, and also consider the activities of a Patrol when in camp.

Boys who are not Scouts and cannot join a regular Troop can obtain particulars as to how they can become Lone Scouts by writing to The Lone Scout Department, Boy Scouts Association, 330 Bay Street, Toronto, 2, Ont.—"Lone E."

British Flier Sets New Fast Record

Breaks Kingsford-Smith's Record by Flying from Australia to England in 11 Days

Lympne, Eng.—Australia came to within 11 days of England on June 6th when Flight Lieutenant Charles W. A. Scott brought his Gipsy Moth plane down at the airfield here ten days and 23 hours after he had left Port Darwin. By his feat Scott beat the record of Wing Commander Charles Kingsford-Smith, who made the westward flight from Australia to England, by nearly 48 hours. Previously he had clipped 20 hours from Kingsford-Smith's eastward record, making the flight from England to Australia in nine days, 3 hours and 20 minutes.

Scott had not been expected home and he missed an elaborate official welcome which had been planned for him at the Brooklands airdrome a day later. However, after leaving Brindisi, Italy, at dawn, he decided to travel the entire 1,350 miles in one day. Consequently he landed to the greetings of the air field attendants only, the same men who bade him goodbye on his departure for Australia two months ago.

The airman was tired, was suffering from gas fumes and was badly burned by the sun and wind.

"It is too far and I really am glad it is all over now," he said.

Kingston Woman, 100, Gets Royal Message

Kingston, Ont.—Mrs. Annie Townsend of this city, celebrating her 100th birthday on, June 3rd, received a cablegram of congratulation from His Majesty King George V., in which it was said: "The King and Queen heartily congratulate you on your 100th birthday and wish you every joy and happiness." The cable was signed by the King's private secretary.

A telegram of congratulation was also received from Right Hon. R. B. Bennett, Premier of Canada while letters from other prominent men were received. The Kingston Conservative Association presented Mrs. Townsend a birthday cake, bearing 100 candles. The cablegram from the King was read to Mrs. Townsend by Lieut.-Col. the Hon. T. A. Kidd, M.L.A.

Mrs Townsend is in full possession of her faculties and on this birthday sang the 123rd Psalm and "O Beulah Land."

Mountains That Honor Mankind

Many Famous Peaks the World Over Serve as Everlasting Monuments to Individuals

Out in the Black Hills a mountain is being turned into a memorial by a sculptor working on a gigantic scale. But as history, both recent and remote, bears witness a mountain as nature shaped it may also serve. Down in the Great Smokies they are talking of naming a 6,000-foot peak Sequoyah in honor of an eighteenth-century Indian artist, a Cherokee; and only a short time ago a whole range in Antarctica was named by Admiral Byrd for one of his backers, John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

The naming of mountains after persons goes back even to the legendary. Do we not find North Africa's highest mountain named Atlas after the giant who bears upon his ample shoulders the burden of our earth? Are not the Pillars of Hercules—the Rock of Gibraltar and Mount Ayela on the opposite side of the straits—named for another mighty legendary hero who shouldered out the hills and let the broad Atlantic sweep into the land?

The Old World has many mountains named for men and in it an English name will always be the highest; for the loftiest peak in all the world bears the name of a rather modest English surveyor and geographer—Sir George Everest—who made a survey of many Himalayan peaks in 1841 and was the first accurately to fix the position of Mount Everest and to gauge its height. So Mount Everest is his everlasting monument—and what a monument! It reaches up into space more than five miles above sea level.

New Hampshire, it is believed, leads all other American States in the number of mountains named for famous persons. Though her mountains are not such awe-inspiring ambassadors to heaven as are countless other peaks named for mortals, she makes up in numbers and in the dignity of her names what she lacks in altitude; for New Hampshire is the proud possessor of the Presidential Range.

The Pacific Coast evidently wanted its own mountain memorial to certain founders of the Republic. Hence it is that in the Cascade Range in Washington we find also a Mount Adams, while her southern neighobr, Oregon, has dedicated two great peaks to Washington and Jefferson.

People in Washington have had a long dispute over one of their most famous peaks. Is it proper to say Mount Tacoma or Mount Rainier? Seattle insists upon honoring the name of Captain Rainier rather than that of Tacoma, a rival city. Rainier's name, too, has been given to a great national park.

Oregon honors the name of an Englishman with its loveliest mountain. Mount Hood raises its hoary head high above the surrounding country and looks down from the height of 11,000 feet upon the Columbia River. This mountain was first discovered by white men in 1792. No one knows just which member of Vancouver's expedition first saw it and gave it a name in honor of Admiral Samuel Hood of his Majesty's Navy.

Although an English surveyor had the loftiest mountain in the world named for him, an American President was honored by having the peak that rises highest above the surrounding country named in his honor. Everest has many lesser brothers hemming it in. Mount McKinley, in Alaska, named in 1896 in honor of William McKinley, rises to a greater height above the surrounding country than any other mountain in the world. It pierces the sky at a height of more than 20,000 feet.

In the Andes whoever named the peaks seemed content almost to let mortals alone. Many are named for saints but we find a fine 17,000-foot mountain named in honor of a Spanish poet who was born 200 years before Columbus began his first voyage. The poet Ruiz may be otherwise forgotten, but Mount Ruiz will keep his name fresh.

The naming of mountains after people may sometimes be accompanied by ceremony. Such a ceremony took place not very long ago in the heart of the Canadian Rockies, when it was decided to do honor to the memory of Edith Cavell, the English nurse who was executed by a German firing squad during the World War. In Jasper National Park a tremendous peak was chosen—a peak that looked down upon the Glacier of the Angels and was a companion to Mount Sorrow and Throne Mountain—and with candles and choir and clergy, representatives of the State and other dignitaries, a great mountain was christened Mount Edith Cavell. The Canadian Rockies include several peaks named for pioneers or other men of distinction, Mount Bryce, Mount Lyell, Mount Coleman and others.

Few women have been honored by having mountains named for them, although there are in the Antarctic the Queen Maud Range and twin peaks named Mount Ruth Gade and Mount Alice Gade, all discovered by Amundsen. For an American woman mountain climber—Annie Smith Peck—a great peak in the Andes has been named Mount Peck.

Wherever explorers have penetrated the continent of Antarctica one finds the names of men—some prominent, others obscure—perpetuated in mountain peaks and areas of land. Ross, Scott, Shackleton, Mawson and Wilkins all honored their patrons and supporters and sometimes their ships.

The Tonic He Needed

Jim Hatherton was right in the middle of his final examinations at Varsity when as he said himself something snapped and he was just a bundle of nerves. He went to a doctor and told his story. The medical man, not so long out of university himself asked a good many questions about Jim's examination and his home folks.

Finally he said "You sit right down here at my telephone and call up your mother and have a real good chat. I know you write every week and all that, but just have a good chat and don't hurry for it will not cost much anyway."

Jim did more than that; he called his home every evening from his rooms while the exams were on. The sound of his mother's voice seemed to be just the tonic he needed.

Wife—"You don't love me any more."

Husband—"Why, dear, I certainly do."

Wife—"You couldn't love a woman with such old clothes as I have."

After vacation comes recuperation.

Nothing tones down a trouble maker so quickly as to run into someone he isn't sure he can lick. The success of a woman's evening depends upon her dress; one might say her happiness hangs by a thread. Death and taxes are no surer than summer visitors.

Why the Farmer Needs the Rain

The farmer needs the rain, you know;
It helps him quite a lot;
It saves his fruit and grain and crops
And other things he's got.

The rain saves farms from damages,
It does, and that's a fact;
It keeps the picnicers away,
And leaves the place intact.

Shopping to some women is so trying. Now is the time to go out and in for gardening. Most folks want things to be different, no matter how different they are already. When you are promised 50 per cent. return on an investment, the entire 100 per cent. often fails to return.

A Vacation Thought

The bee, though it finds every rose has a thorn, comes back loaded with honey from his rambles; and why should not other tourists do the same?

A kind-hearted gentleman saw a little boy trying to reach the doorbell. He rang the bell for him, then said:

Gentleman—"What now, my little man?"

Little Boy—"Run like the mischief. That's what I'm going to do."

Contractor (to his lawyer)—"Judge, the doctor says I've got about a month to live. I want to make my will.

"Fix it so my over-draft in the First National Bank goes to my wife—she can explain it to them.

"My equity in my automobile I want to go to my son. He will have to go to work to pay the bills.

"Give my unpaid bills to the bonding company. They took some awful chances on me and are entitled to something.

"That new-fangled machine on the job, I want the engineer to have. He made me buy it; maybe he can make it work.

"My equipment, give to the junk man. He has had his eye on it for several years.

"I want to have the funeral handled by you, Judge. Any undertaker will do, but I want these six material men for pallbearers. They have carried me so long, they might as well finish the job."

Brown—"Do you think the dead can communicate with us?"

Black—"I know they can't. Once I managed to borrow a dollar from a Scotchman. A week later he died, and I haven't heard a word since."

One commodity in the world not yet deflated is trouble. If you dont' talk too much about your troubles most people won't think you have any—and that's worth a good deal. "I forgot" is never an adequate excuse, except when you offer it yourself. What we can't understand is how the ant ever earned its reputation for industriousness, considering the number of picnics it attends. There's something funny about arithmetic problems—you can't understand them when you're studying them at school, but when you're grown up you can't understand how a child can be so dumb. Two things most needed at this time of the year are a clear day for the Sunday school picnic and a good left-handed pitcher for the baseball team.

Conduc...—"She seemed like a good sensible girl."

Brakeman—"Yeh, she wouldn't pay any attention to me either."

Seasonable Poem

Mary had a bathing suit,
She carried in her purse,
And every time she wore the thing
It shrunk up worse and worse.

Obedience

One way to know is to obey. Even our primary conceptions of moral duty depend for their vigor and clearness upon our practical attitude toward duty. Nothing so clears them as doing what we know to be right and eschewing what we know to be wrong.

That brings us to a solidity and simplicity of conviction which we can reach neither by observing men's experience nor by logical reasonings. It keeps us in touch with reality, and dissipates the vapors which otherwise becloud the mind.

Other processes may bring us to conclusions which we cannot deny, but which have no power over our lives; this gives us conclusions which act upon us as motives and helps to farther right action. For, as George Eliot says, the finest reward of doing right is the power to go forward to right action which is more difficult.

Short-Temper Cure Way of Reducing That Surplus

"Never lose your temper" is a maxim that has been impressed on countless generations of young people. But if you are too fat, and want to reduce, it's a good principle to adopt.

For it has now been proved by science that the emotions of anger and fear burn up fat. So every time you lose your temper you are helping to combat that middle-aged spread. And if you inspire sufficient terror in the object of your wrath, you are helping him to retain a slim and shapely figure as well.

So losing your temper may be good for you—and just as good for other people. The short-tempered wife who flares up on the slightest provocation, and whose husband trembles at her words, is, all unconsciously, the guardian of the family health.

Even a wet holiday, if it frays tempers sufficiently, may thus be a healthy holiday. And the small boy whose tricks make grown-ups stutter and shake with rage may be a public benefactor. But—be careful! Temper does sometimes get people into awkward scrapes, and the plea that you're reducing, or helping others to reduce, may not always be accepted.

Coal Better Than Sand As Filter For Water

Scientists have found recently that anthracite coal is an effective filter for water, being much better than sand and gravel. Tests have shown that certain grades of anthracite, properly prepared, filter out as much as ninety-nine per cent. of bacteria in polluted waters, and in addition remove colors and odors.

A CRY in the night. Colic! No cause for alarm if Castoria is handy. This pure vegetable preparation brings quick comfort, and can never harm. It is the sensible thing when children are ailing. Whether it's the stomach, or the little bowels; colic or constipation; or diarrhea. When tiny tongues are coated, or the breath is bad. Whenever there's need of gentle regulation. Children love the taste of Castoria, and its mildness makes it safe for frequent use.

And a more liberal dose of Castoria is always better for growing children than strong medicine meant only for adult use.

...give child Castoria

FUSSY, fretful, can't sleep, won't eat.... It isn't always easy to find just where the trouble is with a young child. It may be a stomach upset; it may be sluggish bowels.

But when little tongues are coated and there is even a slight suspicion of bad breath—it's time for Castoria!

Castoria, you know, is a pure vegetable preparation especially made for babies and children. When Baby cries with colic or is fretful because of constipation, Castoria brings quick comfort, and, with relief from pain, soothes him to restful sleep. For older children—up through all the school years, Castoria is equally effective in helping to right irregularities. Just give it in larger doses. What a comfort Castoria is to mothers!

Re-surface

old walls and ceilings

with Gyproc

HERE is a wallboard that does not burn, made from gypsum rock into sheets 4 to 10 feet long, 4 feet wide and ⅜ of an inch thick. It is used for interior walls, ceilings and partitions.

As well as being fire-resistant, it has structural strength, insulation value and is draught and vermin-proof. Use Gyproc Joint Filler for sealing the joints between the tall, broad sheets of wallboard.

When you are "doing over" any room in the house or adding new ones in the attic or basement, use Gyproc for walls and ceilings because you can nail it directly over the old surface. Gyproc is also an excellent base for Alabastine, Gyptex or wallpaper.

Gyproc is Canada's pioneer non-burning gypsum wallboard. Ask your nearest dealer for full details and a Gyproc direction sheet. Or write us for the FREE booklet, "Building and Remodelling with Gyproc". 374

Trinity Church Gard. Party July 1st

The "British Trio" comes to us with a fine reputation, individually and collectively. Tom MacDuff Copeland, who heads the party is hailed by press and public alike as being in a class by himself as a comedian entertainer. From East to West and North to South of this continent he has been proclaimed as an outstanding artist. Recently at the Massey Hall at St. Patrick's concert he received an ovation such as is seldom heard. His recitals given under church auspices in Toronto have been most highly praised, not only for their artistry, but their wholesomeness, and for versatility it is very doubtful whether Mr. Copeland has an equal in Canada to-day. He plays the organ piano, flageolette, violin and bag pipes, has an excellent bass voice, plays all kinds of characters, and packs his program with surprising variety, and many of the items performed in the "British Trio" program are his own compositions. Mr. Copeland was one of the most popular war entertainers, having given over 1000 concerts to troops of the Allied Nations from 1914 till 1919 and has entertained Royalty on several occasions. With the trio is a young violinist who has just arrived from London, England, Mr. Kenneth Duff, who although only 21 years of age has for the past 4 years been an orchestra leader, his tone and technique are said to be remarkable, and his high class work, also his old time fiddling along with Mr. Copeland will be a feature in the program A great future is predicted in Canada for Mr. Duff. Miss Margaret Williamson brings feminine charm to the party, and uses a fine soprano voice with cultured ability. She hails from Aberdeen, Scotland, and has appeared in many of the large centres. 'The Aberdeen Free Press' says "a voice of wide range, beautiful quality, reminiscent of the late Jessie MacLachlan."

Beehoo—Barron

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Barron, Guelph, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday, June 17th, at 3 o'clock, when their youngest daughter, Henrietta Ross, was united in marriage to Mr. George A. Beehoo, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Beehoo, of Streetsville.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. A. J. MacGillvary of Knox Church. Miss Evelyn Barron, sister of the bride, played the wedding music. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by Miss Nellie Beehoo, sister of the groom. The groom was supported by the bride's brother, Mr. John Barron.

The bride was becomingly gowned in white georgette with insets of lace and lace jacket, and the pretty bridal veil was in cap effect trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of butterfly roses and lily of the valley.

The bridesmaid wore a frock of mauve chiffon with velvet trimmings, a large baku hat in matching shade, with shoes and gloves of beige, and carried an arm bouquet of talisman roses.

After the ceremony a dainty buffet luncheon was served from a table effectively decorated in pink and white and centred with the wedding cake. Later the happy couple left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for a honeymoon trip along the St. Lawrence, visiting the Thousand Islands and other points, the bride travelling in an ensemble of poudre blue crepe with hat and other accessories to match.

The groom's gift to the bride was a white gold necklace, to the bridesmaid a ruby ring, to the pianist a lovely purse, and to the groomsman a pair of gold cuff links.

On their return they will reside in Streetsville.

To a Goat

From George, one day, I received a note
It said he wanted to buy a goat
He wanted a goat, the note did say say
To keep his lawn from going to hay
A goat was an animal he loved best
It would keep the lawn trimmed and he could rest.
He never had help like a goat before
But people told him it could beat a lawn mower;
He learned a verse at school he never forgot
And would use a goat like it, if he he bought,
If I had a goat that would give good milk
I would dress it in the finest of silk
I would feed it on some chosen hay
And milk it forty times a day.
And I could sit under the shade of a tree
And let the goat mow the lawn for me. SANDY

RUTHERFORD PRESBYTERIANS HONOR MINISTER

The Presbyterian Manse Dresden was the scene of a very happy occasion on Monday evening, June 1st when the Rutherford congregation met together to honor their minister, Rev. Geo. G. Treanor, on receiving the Degree of Doctor of Theology by examination.

The Manse was very beautifully decorated with flowers, carried out in colors of blue and white. The dining table was centered with Valley Lilies and forget-me-nots, while bud vases of violets and snowdrops, huge baskets of snow balls, lilacs, blue and white Iris filled the rooms with lovely fragrance.

The chairman of the evening was the Rev. Mr. Herbison of Thamesville, Moderator of the Presbytery of Chatham and a College mate of Rev. Dr. Treanor's. The program consisted of the Chairman's congratulations to both Minister and congregation. The members of session, Messrs. John Bell, Thos. Stinson, Irvine Wood and Bruce McNabb brought greetings and good wishes each spoke very highly of their Minister's good work. Mrs. Irvine Wood, 1st Vice President of the Ladies' Aid, brought congratulations from that organization of the church. Mr. Wm. Crummy brought greetings from the Board of Managers. A speech of good will was also given by Jno N. McDonald, ex-reeve of Dawn.

The artists of the evening were: Mr. Walter and Alfred Tricker, pianist and violinist, while Gordon Tricker rendered two solos, vocal and mouth organ which brought forth a hearty encore. A very beautiful duet was rendered by Misses Marion Campbell and Margaret Law. Readings and solos by Louise Gould, Jack McKernan and Harold Wigle.

After the program a dainty luncheon was served by the hostess of the evening, Mrs. Will Sager, Mrs. Thos Stinson, Mrs. George Brown, while Mrs Wm. Crummy and Mrs. John Bell poured tea, assisted by Anna Bell Lela McDonald, Louise Gould, Eileen Brooks.

Dr. Treanor on behalf of Mrs Treanor and himself thanked the artists and all those present who helped make the evening a success.

Out of town guests were Rev. Mrs Herbison and Mrs. Pray of Thamesville.—Dresden Times.

Don't envy the June bride

Her blankets all new and soft and cosy need no longer be a source of envy to those who have kept house for a long period of years. Our new process of re-fluffing brings back the soft surface to all blankets just as when they were first bought. This, combined with our rain soft-water method of washing, is giving joy to all who have sent their blankets here. An added touch is the pretty colored silk ribbons with which they are tied up. All ready to be put away in your linen cupboard or to take to your Summer cottage. Phone to day or stop any one of our courteous drivers. Look for the black and red motor wagons

DIED

Irvine—At Peel Memorial Hospital, Brampton, on Sunday, June 14, 1931, A. J. Austin, son of Mrs. Maria and the late James Irvine, in his 41st year.

The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon to Streetsville Cemetery and was largely attended. The service at the house was conducted by Rev. R. J. W. Perry, assisted by Rev. Capt. Frank Vipond and Rev. T.O .Curliss of Toronto. The men from the Dominion Sash Factory attended in a body to show their respects to one of their nnmber.

COMMUNITY CLUB

The last meeting of the North Trafalgar Community Club was held at the home of Mrs. Jack Miller. There was a good attendance, and we had some visitors. The date of the picnic was set for June 27. After the business part of the afternoon we sang our closing song. Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Lindsay gave a dialogue which was enjoyed by everyone. Mrs. Morris Williamson then gave a contest, which was won by Mrs. D. Lindsay of Streetsville. The hostess then served a dainty lunch. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Harold Beattie on Wednesday, June 24.

THE

TULE MARSH MURDER

STORY OF A MISSING ACTRESS AND THE TAXING OF WITS TO EXPLAIN HER FATE.

BY NANCY BARR MAVITY.

SYNOPSIS

Sheila O'Shay, formerly a popular actress, and now the wife of the young millionaire Don Ellsworth, disappears, leaving no trace behind her. Don visits Dr. Cavanaugh, the famous criminologist and confesses that his married life has been very unhappy. Dr. Cavanaugh agrees to investigate the case. Peter Piper, enthusiastic young reporter of The Herald is ordered to cover the case.

CHAPTER IV.—(Cont'd.)

Peter Piper had emerged from the locker room with a soft gray hat, its brown shapeless and its brim a series of irregular ripples from exposure to many rains on his head, whistling under his breath. What tune there was to this musical performance consisted of two phrases, endlessly reiterated, in a lugubrious, monotonous minor calculated to make the human listener long to lift his nose and howl.

"Put it out!" growled the waterfront man whose desk ajoined Peter's. Peter stopped whistling long enough to grin, then absent-mindedly resumed his wailing cadence at the precise note where he had left off. He tossed all the clippings but one into a drawer, which already contained carbon paper, cigarettes, a torn bag of peppermints, an assortment of very soft black "copy" pencils, and an upset box of paper-clips. The remaining clipping he thrust into his coat pocket, which already bulged with several sheets of folded copy paper.

"You'll emit that series of sounds once too often some day," the waterfront man said, "and there'll be another ax murder. 'Crazed reporter slays mate.' What's the good cheer?"

"Oh, one of Jimmy's wild goose chases. Nothing to it. It's bound to be a fiflop. If Jimmy got the idea that there was a cheesemongers' convention being held in the moon, he'd send some poor devil of a reporter out to cover it—and by heck, he'd get so firmly fixed in the idea that he mustn't come back without the story that the chances are, he'd get there!"

Nevertheless, Peter was cheerful.

"Hoo-oo-oo, hu-hu-hu-hoo." The wailing notes were cut short by his effort to dodge a wadded piece of copy paper hurled after him by the waterfront man. He ducked with exaggerated alacrity, and made a hasty exit into the library.

"Say, Ben, dig up what we've got on this bird." He thrust the clipping which he had brought from the local room into the hand of the library attendant. "The society department must have run a picture at some time or other. If not, of what earthly use are they, I ask it?"

A few minutes later he had recrossed the local room, still whistling, and slammed the door behind him. He angled his battered car out of the Herald's parking lot and favored the watchman with a hoarse honk of greeting. Peter called is car "Bossy" because, he explained, it had a crumpled horn like the cow in "The House that Jack Built." It also had four crumpled fenders whose waves and dents were only to be matched by the waves and dents in Peter's hat. It was painted bright green, and there were two bullet holes in the side curtains, relics of Peter's rather too prompt arrival on the scene of a shooting fray between the police and a fugitive holdup man. Peter would not have exchanged it in even trade for a next year's model Rolls-Royce.

Twenty minutes later he parked hastily, with a shriek of brakes, opposite the house of Dr. Cavanaugh. The haste was due to the fact that a small sport coupe, very shiny as to nickel trimmings, was at the moment drawing up at the Cavanaugh entrance. Peter's long legs swung over the door, whose catch had a habit of sticking, and by the time the girl in the sport coupe had alighted and clicked the door shut behind her, he was standing on the sidewalk beside her, hat in hand.

CHAPTER V.

Peter surveyed the girl with one rapid glance, and took a chance.

"I'm a poor man, your honor," he began.

The girl took one step backward and stopped. The backward step was the first reaction of one startled by an unexpected voice at her elbow. But Barbara Cavanaugh was a girl who usually stopped to look things over before running away from them.

She saw before her a tall young man in a baggy blue suit. His thick black hair sprang up recalcitrantly from a centre part. His long face was slit by a wide, intelligent mouth which divided a determined, outthrusting chin from bright and peering gray eyes.

Barbara hesitated for a moment, then grinned back.

"You're a very poor speaker," she capped. "And while you're undoubtedly mad enough, you'd never do for the Mad Hatter—with that hat."

"I knew it!" Peter crowed. "You look so exactly like Alice in Wonderland grown up that I had to risk it. I really am in a hell of a hole, but if you'd said 'Sir!' or 'Who are you?' I suppose I'd just have had to stay in it."

Peter forebore to tell her that he had dilligently studied photographs of Barbara Cavanaugh in The Herald's morgue, and had already decided that she looked like Alice in Wonderland grown up. The clipping, at present crumpled in his coat pocket, had led him straight from the city editor's desk to the library's photograph files—but there was no use exposing the machinery behind an inspiration.

Barbara did indeed bear a resemblance to Tenniel's immortal child. She was very straight and slender, and so short that her face was habitually lifted a little. Her straight hair, yellow verging to soft brown, was combed smoothly back from her forehead and lifted behind ears that had nothing to fear from exposure. She achieved the difficult feat of appearing quaint, even with a shingled coiffure and attired, as now, in a white tennis dress rumpled from active play and a sweater of vivid rose. Perhaps the effect was unconsciously favored by the shy and dazzled look in her wide-set brown eyes. Barbara had lived in an orphan asylum until her fourteenth year, and she had never recovered from the wonder of life, which had begun as an inexorable mechanism and had miraculously taken on the aspects of a fairy tale.

She stood tapping the tip of her tennis racquet up and down on the sidewalk.

"But you couldn't have been after seeing me!" When agitated or puzzled, Barabra's voice—a low and somewhat breathy voice, like the beginnings of wind in leaves—relapsed into the diction of her orphan asylum days.

"I just was, though!" Peter asserted. "I'm a newspaper reporter, and I'm out on the Ellsworth case."

"I know nothing about it!" Barbara said sharply.

Peter's eyebrows lifted slightly. She'd been rather too quick about that. He swiftly reviewed in his mind the information contained in those clippings pasted to colored slips of paper, with the typed heading, "Cavanaugh, Barbara." It was a slim little file as compared with the bulging manila envelope devoted to the exploits of her father, as chronicled in the press. From it emerged a general conception of Barbara as a member of the younger "countryclub set," more addicted to athletics than to formal social functions. Barbara with a silver cup or two, Barbara as runner-up in the inter-club tennis tournament. Barbara arrested for speeding and naively telling the judge as she paid her fine that she'd "like to leave something extra for the cop—he was such a pleasant cop and absolutely in the right!" (A good little "freak" story, that had been). Barbara's name underlined in red pencil in the society chatter of "Suzanne." What did this engaging youngster have to do with Sheila O'Shay who must have crossed the "forty" line (though dates were very hard to find in all the stories about her), who boasted in Paris that two men had fought a duel over her and another had committed suicide in despair of winning her favor, all on the same day.

And yet—there was that bit about Ellsworth. It might mean nothing, of course; Ellsworth wrapped in the glamor of his fabulous wealth, was always copy. There was Ellsworth's sudden unheralded marriage to Sheila O'Shay a little less than a year ago, and the equally sudden omission of his name from the lists of parties where Barbara was to be found. Sheila, of course, in her own sphere, was glamorous enough for anybody. In these days only the most faded of dowagers would decline to meet the latest successor of Helen of Troy. Had Ellsworth purposely kept himself and his wife out of Barbara's way? All this was the vaguest speculation—but Barbara's quick and unnecessary disavowal had given his a "lead."

"Of course you couldn't possibly know anything about the Ellsworth case," he agreed. "Nevertheless, it's because of that case that I've looked you up. There's a point on which I think you might help me. If I may talk to you for just a few minutes?"

"And why should I?" Barbara said coldly.

Her face had shut down as if a blind had been drawn across a window. Barbara, who on ordinary occasions could easily have passed for sixteen suddenly looked all of her twenty-three years. Her lips tightened, losing their childish curve. Her eyes flitted from side to side, from the coupe at the curb to the doorway of the big house. Peter suddenly thought of a chipmunk which he had caught when he was a boy. It had lain quite still in his imprisoning fingers, its eyes darting from side to side, like hers.

"I think you should talk to me," he said, "because the Ellsworth affair may turn out to be a very serious case."

She twisted the tennis racquet round and round in her hands. Then she turned without another word and opened the door of the coupe, slipping into the driver's seat and holding the door open for him to enter.

3103

Wear a and chi[illegible] this little French model. And believe me, you'll love it!

To be certain, it's fashioned of lovely white satin, so thoroughly modish, with self-fabric binding.

It's very simple to make it. The tiny kimono cap sleeves give it so much distinction. Then, too, it has the new peplum hipline, belted waistline and exceedingly flattering neckline.

Style No. 3103 is suited to miss or matron. It is designed for sizes 16, 18 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust.

The saving in cost over the original model is enormous. It is a blouse that will go beautifully with any color scheme. It may also be worn with a separate skirt.

Printed crepe silk, printed batiste, cotton lace, tucked net, linen, dimity, shantung and wool jersey make up smartly in this youthful type.

Size 36 requires 2 yards 35-inch or 1¾ ards 39-inch, with 4¾ yards binding.

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

What came before: After many adventures flying over China, Captain Jimmy and his friend Jed Stone seek to recover the plane which Captain Jimmy was forced to land in enemy territory. They plan a night raid on the army camp to secure food and gasoline.

Under the cover of darkness I made my way quietly toward the big tent. If our plan succeeded we would soon have enough gas and oil for our plane—if it failed, we wouldn't need any.

While I softly crept along, taking advantage of every shadow, Jed Stone was busy arriving at what he figured was the proper place to carry out his part of the plan. He dismounted, threw the bridle reins over the horse's head and probably hoped the animal would be there when he got back. Together, Scottie and he crawled close to where a lone soldier was walking his post.

Jed Stone and Scottie edged up, bit by bit, until they were right in back of a hummock and not over fifty feet from him. He was a nervous sort of soldier. Every now and then he'd turn quickly and peer out into the darkness; then he'd step along quickly as though he wanted to get away from there in a hurry. Many a good Chinese soldier is afraid of dragons in the dark. This China boy must have been sure there was a big, bad dragon on his trail for he was surely nervous.

At the end of his post he turned and started back. Scottie stood tensed, scarcely breathing. He sensed the excitement and he strained against his collar which Lieutenant Stone held tightly gripped.

The sentry was just in front of them when Jed Stone let go of Scottie's collar. "Go get him," he whispered, and Scottie was off like a rifle bullet. At the first jump, that sentry stopped dead in his tracks, the hair standing up on his head. He was frozen still in his tracks.

Somewhere out in front in the darkness there was a sound of scurrying. Something was about to pounce on him, to grab him, but that soldier couldn't move, neither could he utter a sound. (I'll bet that you, yourself, have before now had just such a frightful nightmare.)

From out of the unknown inky blackness it came. Not till Scottie sank his teeth into his leg did that soldier cry out. He couldn't—his vocal cords were paralysed.

But then he yelled sudden murder pulled the trigger of his gun and was bowled over, all in the same instant.

Sentries from all over camp were running—firing as they came. Between shots I gave a shrill whistle and Scottie came up, zigzagging his way pell mell for Sunday across the camp, spreading destruction at every leap.

Excitement was working up to fever heat when out rode an under officer on horseback. He had jumped on a horse and with only a halter to guide him had ridden out into the melee with goodness knows what idea in his head.

An enthusiastic soldier fired and, with better luck than usual, shot away the officer's hat. Pandemonium broke loose. Then while it was getting too hot around that corner for Lieutenant Stone, he slipped off into the darkness to find his horse. The horse had deserted at the first shot, however, so he walked on, carefully avoiding soldiers, back to our plane.

Trade-Wind

Breath of the seas, of the four-way seas
Balm of the tropic isles
Wafture of ease, of the month-long ease
Roll of the magic miles,—
The trade-wind blows from the end of days
Soft and silken and rare
Curling the crests of the blue-white sprays
Playing my sleeves and hair.

Blow, ye trade-winds, blow,
The ship is swinging low;
Blow, ye trade-winds blow,
Around the world we go.

Dreams of the mains, of the blue-thin mains
Sighted from tar-patched sails
Call of the lanes, of the long salt lanes
Flavor of old sea-tales,—
Down the tropic and far on the Line
Safe past the doldrum calms
The trades bring word of the rover brine
And reefs thin-ringed with palms.

Blow, ye trade-wind, blow,
With music soft and low;
Blow, ye trade-wind, blow,
Over the earth we go.

Athwart the lines the world-winds roam—
The freighted ships are sailing home.
—L. H. Bailey, in "Wind and Weather."

Opportunity

There are no men or women who owe more to themselves and their fellows than those to whom opportunities are constantly coming, before whom doors are constantly opened. Such a lot is the highest of all good fortunes, since it means not only success but growth, not only talent but the possibilities of character. Every new opportunity should send a man to his knees, instead of lifting him up in his own mind; should give him additional poise and balance, instead of excess of vanity. Nothing is more painful than the spectacle of one whom a little success makes self-conscious and inflated; the larger the success which comes to such a man the plainer becomes his essential weakness. On the other hand, there is nothing which comforts those who are striving with adverse conditions so entirely as the untainted and the unspoiled spirit which receives success as a trust, not as a reward, and bears it as a possession, to be divided rather than hoarded.—Outlook.

"So Edith has caught that young fellow who rescued her while skating. He seemed awfully shy."
"Yes; she had to break the ice."

Something Wrong

The shabby visitor placed his hat upon a chair, and, drawing a booklet from his pocket, approached the business man.

"I can tell you," he said, "how to become a great success—how to win independence for life."

"Three seconds gone from the minute I'm giving you," said the business man.

"I have here,' 'the visitor went on, "an infallible memory system. Master it, and you will master the world. You will not forget to post the letter your wife gave you this morning, and you can do without that worsted on your finger."

"My trouble," said the business man, "is that I can't find a reliable system for forgetting things I want to. Your minute's up."

Sadly the visitor departed, but two minutes later he returned to the office breathless and excited.

"I forgot my hat!" he said.

Silkworm Imported For California Tests

Lindsay, Calif.—Matteo Bruno, a fruit grower, has started what he hopes will become the silk industry of California.

Bruno sent to Italy and obtained eggs of the silkworm which he fed and since has attended diligently. A native of a part of Italy where silkworms have been grown for centuries, Bruno is familiar with the work and has been successful with his first small crop of cocoons.

He says weather in the San Joaquin Valley is very similar to that of his native country where the silkworms are cultivated, and points out that mulberry trees, the leaves of which form the food for the silk worm, are easily grown here.

The Kiddies

Wee John of three was visiting his uncle Henry in the country for the first time. He was very interested in the live stock and one day for the first time, saw the cows milked. The milk was pouring into the pail in a steady stream and he watched it intently.

"How would you like a drink of milk, John?" asked Uncle Henry. But John turned away, making a face, and walked to the stable door, saying positively:

"No, no milk bottle."

After a while he became used to milk coming in this way and in due time a couple of the cows had their little calves, whom one day he saw feeding industriously in the natural way.

He was exceedingly interested again, watching them for a long time. That night when he was eating his supper and was given his glass of milk he remarked thoughtfully, "Nice little calves milking cows for Uncle Henry."

The Twilight Hour Story
Chicks and Other Little Friends
No. 24

Topsy, the barn cat, was curled up in Fluffy's chair, sleeping. You see, Fluffy was not back yet. Mamma Lady was making some real good cookies in the big bright kitchen. You know the kind little boys like were the kind she was making. My, but don't cookies smell good when they are baking?

Billy wasn't far away when he knew cookies were to be made. He liked to help take them out of the pan, after he washed his hands good and clean. He liked doing that so well I wouldn't be surprised if Billy should be a baker when he grows up. I'm sure it must be nice in the big shops to keep taking out of the oven good cookies and cakes and pies, piles and piles of them, and warm crusty bread to put on the rows and rows of shelves for all the people. Well, these cookies smelled so good Billy wanted to eat one, a nice extra fat one, because he was helping. I believe he had two, but then more than that wouldn't be good for any little boy, so he just thought about supper time, when he could have another one after those two were all eaten up.

Everything was real quiet in the kitchen. The clock even sounded loud, ticking away on the shelf, when all at once Billie heard a little noise. He heard it again, so looking at his mother, he asked: "What's that noise, Mummy, just a wee little noise up there in the ceiling?"

Billy had pretty sharp ears, for Mamma Lady didn't notice anything. "There it is again. Can't you hear it now?"

"Yes, I believe I do. It sounds just like something scratching up there. Is that what you hear?" Billy nodded his head. "Let me see, I guess that part of the ceiling would be the attic upstairs," said Mamma. "When this last pan of cookies is baked we will go up and see if we can find out what it is." When they went upstairs and opened the attic door, who do you think was standing there, so glad to see them? It was Fluffy. She had been shut in and couldn't get out.

"Oh, Fluffy, I'm so glad you're found at last," cried Billy.

You see, Mamma Lady knew that Fluffy was all right; of course she did. But she didn't know just exactly where she went to hide. It was a good thing she had put something up there for her to eat in case she had got into the attic, for she had been there three whole days and nights.

"But why did she want to hide, Mamma? We wouldn't hurt her; she knows that,' said Billy, very puzzled, petting Fluffy all the time.

"Yes, dear, I believe she knows that but I think all at once she grew a little afraid of Rover. Was that it, Fluffy?"

But Fluffy just purred and walked round and round Mamma Lady and Billy.

"Haven't you got something to show us?" said Mamma Lady, smiling. "Where are they, Fluffy?"

But Fluffy just kept purring and pretended she didn't know what Mamma Lady was talking about.

"Well, Billy, I guess we'll have to find out what that noise was, for Fluffy won't tell us." Once more she asked her, "Where are they, Fluffy, won't you tell me?"

No, Fluffy just sat down comfortably on the floor and curled her paws under her to stay there until they were ready to go downstairs. She even shut her eyes as though she were going to sleep. She wasn't, though, for once in a while she opened them a little to see what they were doing.

"Can't you guess, Billy, what that noise was?"

"No. I can't guess. Do you know?"

"Yes, I know, dear," said Mamma Lady.

But that is what we'll tell you about next time, if you keep quiet and won't make the least bit of noise.

Extensive Research Planned of Ontario Pasture Problems

Guelph, Ont.—Plans for extensive research on the pasture problems of Ontario were made at a recent conference of representatives of the various interested departments of the Ontario Agricultural College, at which the Deputy Minister of Agriculture attended and assisted in outlining the project. A committee was appointed to make a preliminary survey of pasture conditions in the province, and will start out shortly to visit different parts of the province. Research projects will cover different phases of the problem such as grasses, fertilization, best utilization and management, the control of weeds, the elimination of insect parasites, diseases, etc. This means the co-operation of the Departments of Field Crops, Chemistry, Animal Husbandry, Farm Economics, Entomology, Botany and Zoology. A number of experiments on pastures are now under way at the College and in other parts of the Province. These will be supplemented and new phases of the work will be undertaken.

Among the "accessories" at a recent American wedding were half a mile of sausages, two orchestras, sauerkraut by the barrel, and 1,000 violets for decoration, in honor of the bride, whose name was Violet.

"Being a fool is no disgrace."

"'Tisn't that."

"What's the trouble, then?"

"The money is always on the other side."

Cattle Clubs

Edmonton, Alberta.—"Cattle clubs formed under the new federal live-stock policy by which three pure-bred bulls are loaned for six years, with changes made every two years for each three clubs of a breeding centre, have made good progress in Alberta," says the Edmonton Journal. "To date there are 63 bulls scattered all over the province. Each centre selects one breed and while the majority of clubs to date secured beef and general purpose breeds, a number of clubs have requested dairy bulls of the Ayrshire, Holstein and Jersey breeds, also Red Polled. Most of the bulls already placed have been Shorthorn with 40 per cent. Angus Herefords and other breeds."

What New York Is Wearing

BY ANNABELLE WORTHINGTON

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern

When you study this lovely afternoon dress, you'll see it's really very simple to fashion. It's slenderizing too.

The original carried out the fashionable black and white theme in crepe silk print.

The bodice is given a softened line through the becoming cowl drape. And to give the figure height—the wrap-over tunic skirt sees to that.

There are numberless other fabrics equally suited to this model. For instance, a printed chiffon would be adorable for more dressy occasions.

Wool crepe, plain crepe silk and many rayon novelties are smart.

Style No. 3084 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust.

Size 36 requires 4⅜ yards 39-inch with ½ yard 39-inch contrasting.

An Old-Time Custom

Holding out one's hand to indicate in which direction one intends to turn when driving a car has often been considered an innovation brought about by our age of the swiftly moving traffic. But it was in use 170 years ago in Berlin, as is shown by a decree published at that time. When the conclusion of the peace of Hubertusburg was celebrated in this city, the police headquarters issued the following proclamation:

During to-night's illumination in the city, carriages are ordered to move at a slow pace only, and drivers intending to turn at street corners and enter a side street are ordered to hold out their right hand so that they are not hindered.

One wonders what precautions the city fathers would have taken if an eight-cylinder, 100-horsepower car with screeching horn and glaring headlights had taken part in the nightly corso of carriages.—The Christian Science Monitor.

Greatness lies not in being strong, but in the right using of strength.—Henry Ward Beecher.

When Holland has completed her work of draining the Zuyder Zee she will have added 550,000 acres, or the equivalent of 10,000 farms, to her area.

What Type of Book Does The Girl of Today Read

What do the young German high school girls between fifteen and twenty years read to-day? was a question put in an inquiry sent out by the association of booksellers. Do they still devour the sweet "tales for young maidens" filled with sunshine and flowers and always ending happily? No, the times have changed. In this age, in which families are struggling to make both ends meet, in which the young woman of the educated class only too often must step out into the world and earn a living, the German high school girls want to read about the world as it presents itself and not as it is imagined. This, anyway, is the gist of the replies received. Make-believe is taboo. With the whole nation having braced itself in the last ten years to face unpleasant facts unflinchingly and to discuss in public conditions, so as to master them, which were formerly not even mentioned in private circles, the young girls do not want to continue living in an abstract rose-tinted world.

For the same reason they decline to be problematic. This, also, marks a change, for not so very long ago the problematic formed the chief topic of countless books, plays and conversations. The Germans have still retained their fondness for deep thinking, but it is now turned toward investigating facts and not abstract questions. The new desire for reality has lessened the appreciation of the classics. This may seem surprising in a country honoring Goethe, Schiller and Shakespeare so highly. But the young girls think much more of the problems, the persons and the happenings of their books than of the poetical form in which they are cast. The books which are to appeal to them must be simple, sincere and straightforward.

The Use of Education

Truth (London): ("It is high time we abolished the intellectual snobbery which regards art, literature, music, and the classics as members of the aristocratic educational family, with science as a distant cousin, and which spurns technology as being illegitimate."—(A. E. Evans at a conference of the National Union of Women Teachers.) There is a great deal too much intellectual snobbery in modern education, and the snobbery takes the form of learning, or trying to learn, a thing not for its own sake, but because it has a social cachet. Subjects that exercise the mind equally have an equal intellectual value, and in schools the utilitarian should be regarded as more important than the cultural, for those who want to be cultured will realize their ambition on their own. The first requisite is to teach young people how to earn their living by doing useful work, not to cram them with ill-digested gobbets of information which are as different from culture as chalk is from cheese.

Bowling Holds Place in Saxony

Dresden.—Of all sports the time-honored game of bowling is one of the most widely popular in the State of Saxony. There are about 200,000 active bowlers in Germany and one-fifth of them live in Saxony. What is more remarkable is that bowling is not the hobby of the male population only. In Dresden alone there are fifty women's bowling clubs.

Weather Bureaus Girdle the Globe

To Learn How Magnetic Storms Are Caused by Sun

Mount Wilson Observatory, Cal.—Twenty-five weather bureaux of the sun are being organized around the earth. By these, astronomers expect to learn just how storms in the sun cause magnetic storms on the earth. The question involved is how long it takes the outbreaks on the sun to start a storm on the earth.

Light from the sun travels the 93,000,000 miles to the earth in eight minutes. Perhaps the magnetic disturbance travels that fast, but it will be a year or so before the astronomers are ready to report the results of the solar observations. Then will be known the possibility of forecasting storms on earth caused by solar magnetic disturbances.

Dr. Charles E. St. John, member of the international committee on the relation of solar to terrestrial phenomena, announced recently that organizations of the weather bureaux of the sun may be perfected next July in Brussels. The committee holds its triennial session then.

These solar weather bureaux will be equipped with spectroheiloscopes that observe the bright and dark flocculi on the sun's disk. Dr. George Ellery Hale of Pasadena, is the inventor.

Dr. St. John announced observations here had established in one case a magnetic earth storm registered on the Mt. Wilson magnometer corresponding precisely to a solar outbreak observed through the spectroheliscope.

The twenty-five solar weather bureaux will have their international headquarters here, sending in regular reports of their observations to be checked and compared at Mount Wilson with observations and magnetic earth storm records. Some of these solar outbreaks last only a few minutes, and only by observations made simultaneously from various points around the earth can their effects be accurately determined.

Berlin's Tin-Hated Cabbies Are Rapidly Disappearing

Berlin.—Only 116 horse-cabs are left in Berlin and the old-time drivers with their high hats made of metal instead of silk have all but disappeared. Their humor was so much a part of the life of the capital that their passing has been felt.

It was said that their horses could find any street without assistance from the driver, who usually turned his back and entertained his passengers. They were so proud of Berlin's points of interest that they would show them free to a stranger.

The last bid for public attention was made several years ago by a 70-year-old cab-driver who rode in his cab with his old horse from Berlin to Paris and back. For some time he was a national hero and was called "The Iron Gustav," but his feat failed to boost his trade permanently.

$300,000 Gold Crown Tops Rangoon Pagoda

Rangoon, India.—A new golden top inset with diamonds which cost more than $300,000 has been hoisted on the famous Shwe Dagon pagoda. Pilgrims from all parts of Burma attended the ceremony.

The top was destroyed by an earthquake in May, 1930, and on March 6 of this year a fire consumed several costly carved wooden structures with images which stood on a platform encircling the main building.

The pagoda, tradition says, was founded in 585 B.C.

Sunday School Lesson

June 28. Lesson XIII—Review (Jesus the World's Saviour: Suffering and Sovereignty) — Luke 24: 44-53. Golden Text—God so loved the the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3: 16.

FOR TEACHERS OF YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS

(By Rev. Professor Fred W. Langford, M.R.E., Toronto.)

We have followed the latter part of Jesus' public ministry through this Quarter. We have seen some of his greatest expositions of his gospel of love and its implication for our life, on through the period of growing hostility from the leaders to his crucifixion and resurrection—the greatest of all his expositions of his gospel of love. In the discussion of this week, with so wide a field to cover, we cannot hope to do more than to restate a few of the great lessons of the Quarter's study. Some of the following questions recall the lessons of the past weeks.

What was Jesus' teaching about humility? Is it an asset or a liability in this age? Give some illustrations of the humble spirit as a person of real strength.

Give the gospel message—the real good news, disclosed in the story of the forgiving father and the returning prodigal.

What does it mean to be spiritually "lost"? Was Zacchæus lost in the same way, or as effectually, as was the prodigal son? What about the rich man who had no thought for Lazarus?

What is the value to you of the observance of the Lord's Supper?

Could Jesus have become the Saviour of man if he had stopped short of the cross? If he had not risen from the dead?

How would you tell a stranger to Christianity what you mean by calling Jesus the world's Saviour.

FOR TEACHERS OF INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR DEPTS.

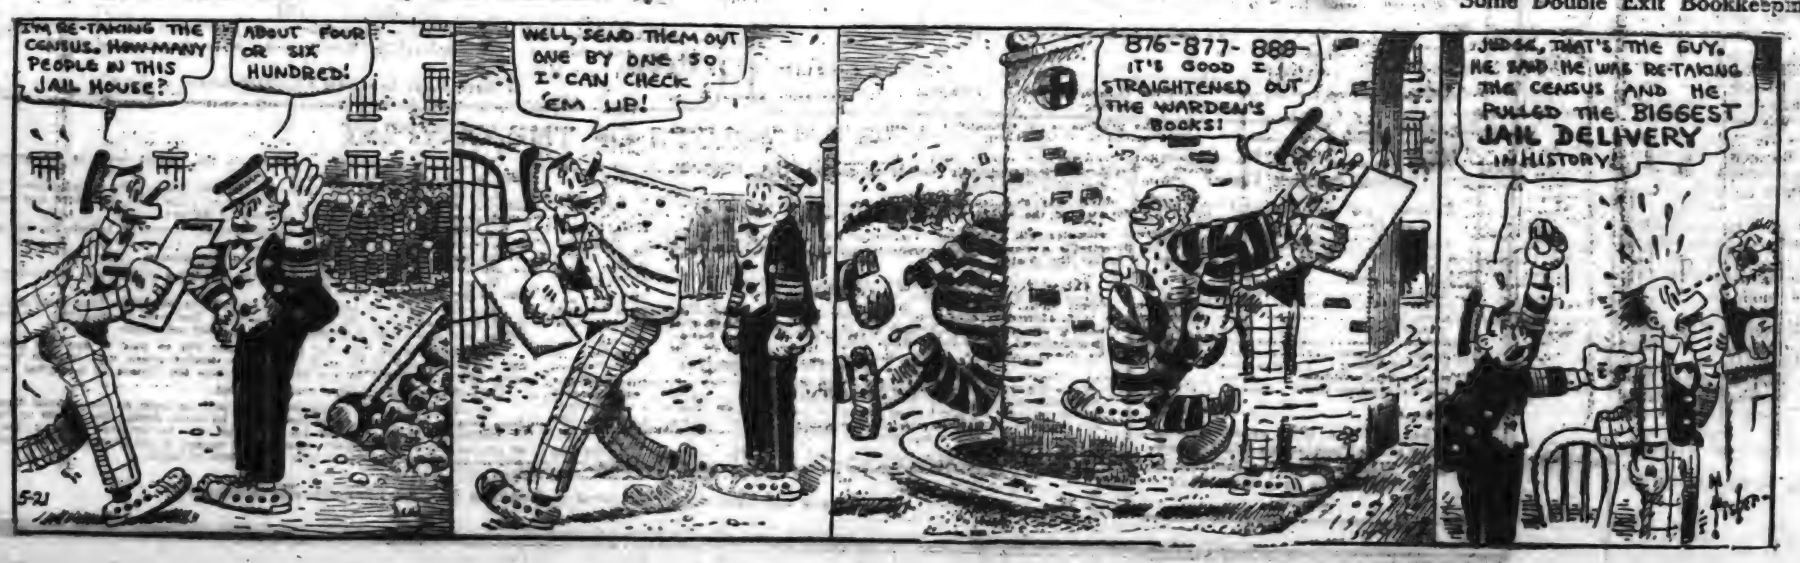
(By Rev. A. E. McCutcheon, B.D., Belleville, Ont.)

Aim—To discover the appeal and claim of Jesus as our Saviour, as presented in the complete study of the Quarter.

Introduction—Who has been the central figure in our studies of this Quarter? From whose records were these studies taken? What do you think was Luke's idea as he told the story of Jesus?

Presentation—What do you think Jesus meant to teach in his story of: (1) The Prodigal Son. (2) The Rich Man and Lazarus. (3) The Parable of the Pounds. (4) The Judge and the Widow. (5) The Publican and the Sinner.

Describe each of the following incidents: (1) The Entry of Jesus into Jerusalem. (2) the Crucifixion. (3) Jesus' Treatment of Zacchæus. (4) The Scene in Gethsemane.



In your own words tell what you think is the meaning of: (1) The Lord's Supper. (2) The Resurrection. (3) The Triumphal Entry. (4) The Crucifixion.

Some general questions: (1) How did Jesus teach a lesson on humility? (2) How did he illustrate the grace of humility? (3) How did Jesus teach that God's attitude to men was love? (4) What was the sin of the rich man? (5.) Who was Zaccæus? (6) Where did Zacchæus live? (7) What great change came over his life? How? (8) What and where is the Mount of Olives? (9) Cite any incident of importance that occurred on the Mount of Olives. (10) Why did Jesus weep over Jerusalem? (11) Why did Jesus cast the people out of the Temple? (12) What was the Passover? (13) How and where did Jesus observe his last Passover with the disciples? (14) Why did Jesus go into Gethsemane? (15) What help came to Jesus in Gethsemane? (16) How did the disciples know that Jesus was risen and living? (17) Cite any great principle learned to guide you in your conduct.

Application—Do we owe anything to Jesus? What do we owe him? How do you think we can best pay him what we owe him? What do you think he most desires of us? Will you accept him as your Saviour and Master, and try to follow him?

ISLINGTON

A strong committee is working hard to make the annual Islington Community Field Day, on July 1st, a real success

The annual Sunday School picnic of the Islington Presbyterian church was held last Saturday afternoon to Pine Grove Park on the Credit River, just north of Port Credit. The party, numbering upwards of 200 went by trucks and motor cars. The weatherman smiled his most gracious smile, bestowing the nicest week-end in many moons. The sports committee consisting of Messrs. D. Hill, J. M. Beamish, W. Waters, L. Hill, E. Menzies and W. Jack ran off a lively set of events, for which good prizes were given. The balloon race, won by Mrs. McKazue and Mrs. Kirkley was an interesting feature as was also the guessing contest won by Mrs. Watson. The little tots were in their element on the swings and slides, the older pupils indulging in swimming, boating and base-ball. The grown-ups enjoyed horse- shoe pitching and motor-boat trips to Port Credit and back. By the way, the scenic beauty of the Credit River is appreciated to the full on this three-mile round trip.

One lover of the beauties of nature remarked that if you were spirited unawares or dropped by aeroplane into the motor launch you might easily guess it to be somewhere in Muskoka or some other fine summer resort. Truly, many tourists will drive a hundred miles to see beautiful rivers and lakes while many fairy lands near Toronto remain unexplored.

Rev. G. S. Lamont, former pastor (now of Bonar Church, Toronto), with his family enjoyed the outing. The superintendent, J. H. Beamish, and assistant superintendent, W. A. Barber, were busy keeping things running smoothly.

The Etobicoke Horticultural Society are holding their paeony and rose show next Saturday afternoon in the community hall.

The communion service in the Islington Presbyterian Church last Sunday evening was conducted by Rev. Thomas McAfee of Qu'Appelle, Sask., three new members being received, two from ...lkerville United and one from Woodville United.

The Rev. Joseph Wells of the Islington United Church, has received a call from the town of Parry Sound, and Rev. S. H. Smith of Collingwood will succeed Mr. Wells at the end of June.

Streetsville High School Report

Departmental examinations are the order of the day. Mr. Doupe of Port Credit is presiding at the local sitting. Class work finished on Friday last and as a result of the recent term examinations held throughout the school, promotion results for most pupils of lower school are announced. Only one subject may be carried to the next form and must be repeated in part at least. Where a student is down in a subject, its name will appear after that of the pupil. Where a student received over seventy-five of an average on all examinations of the year, the word 'honors' appears after his name.

Form I to Form II (in order of merit):

1, Erna Bailey (hon.); 2, Marion Lindsay (hon.); 3, Rosa Hollingshead (hon.); 4, Hazel Ross (hon.); 5, Freida Dowling (hon.); 6, Ruth Haddon; 7, Marion Harkiss; 8, Elizabeth Bailey; 9, Lucy Scherd (alg.); 10, Bill Munro; 11, Thora Elderfield; 12, Margaret Falconer; 13, Blanche Lugg; 14, Isabelle Leslie; 15, Rose Hollingshead; 16, Leona Durie; 17, Wanda Cooke; 18, Gerald Fullerton; 19, John Leece (alg.); 20, Lorne Chamberlain. The following, in order of merit, have pass standing in over half their subjects: 21, Edna McLean; 22, Francis McCracken; 23, Mildred Quennell; 24, Rosamond Pope.

Form II to Form III (the order of merit is determined on the average of all examinations of the year):

1, John McGill (Hon.); 2, John McClintock (Hon.); 3, Alfred Houlgrave; 4, John Harkiss; 5, Harold Treanor; 6, Mac Gibson; 7, Ian Johnson; 8, Alex. Dick; 9, Edna Stephens; 10, Thomas Doherty; 11, Bert Cooke; 12, Unitt Bailey (Lat.); 13, John Schnurr (Arith.); 14, Laura Plumb (Arith.); 15, Donald Adamson, (Geom.); 16, Bernice Bentley (Lat.); 17, Hazel Greensides (Geom.); 18, Audrey Bentley (Geom.).

Of the Departmental final subjects of Form II, William Underwood passed in Grammar, Physiography and Zoology. Middle school pupils taking Form II subjects passed in all.

Middle School (Form III and Form IV.) of course will not know their promotions till August. On the year's examinations their standing is announced, with the number of subjects each is writing after the name:

Form III.—1, Arnott Charlton (Hon.) (8); 2, Mary Steen (Hon.) (8); 3, Melville Steggall (Hon.) (8); 4, Roy Hollingshead (6); (5) Wesley Wolfe (8); 6, Ruth Andrews (6); 7, Emerson Wolfe (6); 8, Bernice Temple (6); 9, Edith Rogerson (5); 10, Helen Turner (5); 11, Pat Ardagh (6).

Form IV.—1, Margaret McClintock (Hon.) (4); 2, Dorothy Atkinson (Hon.) (4); 3, Hilda Haddon (6); 4, John Houlgrave (7); 5, John Ross (5 and 2 u.s.); 6, Jean Hammond (5 and 1 u.s.); 7, Iola Hope (9); 8, Tony Ironsides (4); 9, Harry Johnson (5); 10, Aubrey Pope (10); 11, Bill Lines (7).

Mac Gibson also writes two Middle School subjects.

in which every reader is invited to compete.

$5,000.00 is the First Prize

Over 100 Other Cash Prizes

Special cash awards to paid-up subscribers to The Streetsville Review only.

What is the Population of Canada?

Here is a question of national interest supported by a $10,000.00 Prize List. The Census in June will decide the answer.

The big Cash Prizes go to those who most closely estimate Canada's population according to the government figure.

Read the full details. This splendid offer is sponsored by The Streetsville Review and the Family Herald and Weekly Star, and open to readers of these two papers.

ACT NOW AND SHARE IN THIS WEALTH OF ATTRACTIVE AWARDS

How to Take Part and Win

The Government of Canada will take the census in June of this year. Every ten years the government takes this census to determine the population of the Dominion. In June Government representatives will set to work to cover every section and make a count of the number of people resident in Canada. Government statisticians will then determine just what is Canada's population.

Canada has grown rapidly since the last census in 1921. Just to what extent her population has increased is the problem of this contest.

The splendid cash awards shown on this page go to those who can most closely estimate what the Government will find our 1931 population in Canada to be.

What an opportunity for earning a marvellous cash prize with little or no effort. Be sure to take part.

Use this coupon to send in your own or other subscriptions or both. An ordinary sheet of letter paper may be used instead of this coupon if desired.

RULES OF THE CONTEST

1.—The Contest is open to all readers of The Streetsville Review on the conditions following:

2.—The problem is to estimate what will be the population of Canada for 1931 according to the government census taken in June, 1931.

3.—Each contestant in order to win a prize must continue to be a subscriber to The Streetsville Review and the Family Herald & Weekly Star until the Contest is over.

4.—The Contest may close any time after notice has been given by the Streetsville Review and the Family Herald & Weekly Star.

5.—Seven estimates will be allowed for your club subscription for one year to The Streetsville Review and the Family Herald & Weekly Star provided it is renewed before the Contest closes.

How to Get Extra Estimates

6.—Every present subscriber to The Streetsville Review who secures one club subscription at $2.25 from someone who is not at present a subscriber to The Streetsville Review will be entitled to make seven estimates in the Contest, and the new subscriber will also be entitled to make seven estimates. Get extra estimates for the big prizes by sending in new subscriptions.

The more new subscribers you send in to The Streetsville Review the greater are your chances of winning the big $5,000.00 prize.

7.—All new subscriptions to count in the contest must be for persons living in Canada or Newfoundland.

8.—Estimates MUST accompany the subscription orders and cannot be accepted at a later date or in a separate envelope. All estimates and subscriptions must be mailed to The Streetsville Review.

9.—Credit cannot be given for subscriptions sent in before the Contest opened or after the closing date.

10.—No changes in the estimates will be allowed.

11.—A contestant may not claim the estimates of the new subscriber as well as his own. See Rule 6.

12.—Should two or more persons be tied for any prize that prize and as many others following as there are persons tied will be received for those before any prizes are awarded for less correct estimates.

13.—Only one of the first cashed prizes will be paid to any one person, but more than one of the lead money-draw number might easily be won by the same person, provided he (or she) is not also the winner of a cashed prize.

14.—Orders and coupons must be dated.

15.—The prizes will be awarded and paid as soon as the official figures from Ottawa are issued. The census will be taken during the month of June, and the official figures will be announced soon as obtained from Ottawa.

Additional blank coupons for estimates can be obtained free of charge by applying to The Streetsville Review. If coupon is not available, write name and address and estimates on a plain sheet of paper.

HEAT NOT AN EXCUSE FOR NUDE BATHING

Although the heat was stiffling on Saturday, Provincial Traffic Officer Joseph Palmer thought it was going just a little too far when three young sheiks drove into the village of Cooksville minus their shirts. They had figured in a slight collision and after giving the youths a lecture on the necessity of appearing properly clad on the highways, even if it was warm, the officer allowed them to go. But first they had to don the garments which had been cast off.

COOKSVILLE

Lafeyette Walterhouse

Cooksville, June 21—The death occurred here of Layfayette Walterhouse, 78 years, who had been a resident of Cooksville all his life, a son of the late Isaac Walterhouse. He is survived by his widow, formerly Hannah McMillan, of Montreal; a son, Albert, in Niagara Falls and two daughters, Mrs. Cox, Toronto, and Miss Theresa, at home. Mr. Walterhouse was the last of his parental family. He was a member of the Orange Order, and of the United Church.

The section of the Municipal Act which prohibits sale of the entire portion of any parcel of land in arrears for taxes for three years, caused the bidding at the sale held in Toronto township hall Saturday to be almost nil.

Only two parcels found bidders, no one being anxious to bid on 300 feet of a property when he could, by Waiting until the adjourned sale on August 22, obtain the entire parcel.

RUPTURE EXPERT HERE

Do you suffer form rupture? If so, your big opportunity has now arrived. Mr. Reavely, the noted rupture expert, will be at the Queen's Hotel, Streetsville, for one day only, Thursday, July 9th, and will be pleased to give free examination to any sufferer and to demonstrate his famous appliance. This applince will contract the opening in 10 to 15 days and has been known to cure cases in from three to six months. This appliance is positively demonstrated to you right on your own person without any charge. You do not spend a penny unless you are fully satisfied that it is the right appliance for you. A consultation with Mr. Reavely will cost you nothing. Don't let this opportunity get away from you. Remember the date.

PORT CREDIT

Signs will be erected along the banks of the Credit river to warn bathers of dangerous spots, decided council at a special meeting. The action followed a near water fatality on Sunday and the unfortunate drowning of Lyle Murphy, at the mouth of the river.

Miss J. Craigie, aged 63, resident here for over 50 years, died at her residence after an illness of two months. She was born in Cedarvale. An active member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, the first service of that church in Port Credit was held in her home. One sister and a brother survive.

Meeting in special session Port Credit Village Council gave third reading to a by-law under which the Consumers' Gas Company, of Toronto will be permitted to extend its mains into the municipality. Reeve W. B. Hare presided.

BRAMPTON

H. Lonsdale, Hamilton, appearing before Magistrate Bull, on a charge of being intoxicated in charge of a car received the customary seven days, which will be spent in Brampton Jail. His drivers' permit was cancelled, and the Crown confiscated his Liquor Permit. Jas Gilmour, found wandering about Cooksville, in an intoxicated condition will spend the next 10 days in lieu of a fine of $10 and costs.

CLARKSON

Fire, said to have been caused by spontaneous combustion, damaged the building of McCord Brothers, located about one mile north of the Lakeshore highway to the extent of $1,500. The Port Credit fire fighters quelled the blaze before it had time to spread to several adjoining buildings. The post office is located next to McCord's, and although seriously threatened was saved.

LET US SMILE

Little Willie was invited to a party and ate heaps of chocolates and cakes. "My dear boy," said his aunt, "you must stop eating now or you'll be ill to-morrow. You're too small to eat so much."

"Oh, no, auntie," replied the little chap: "I'm not so small as I look from outside."

COUNTY COUNCIL

The annual Warden's Picnic of Peel County was held at Ferndale Park, and the host, Warden John Willis, was greeted with a large number of guests. In softball, Alton won from Caledon East, while visitors defeated members and officials of Council in a tug-of-war. The prize for the oldest ex-Warden present went to John A. McBride, who served in Caledon Council for many years and now resides at Orangeville. George Hunter and George Wiley, representing Claireville won the doubles horseshoe tournament, and Giles Brothers of Caledon were second.

N. L. Powell, County Engineer, was victor in the special race for members of Council and officials, his nearest opponent being Robt. Whaley, Deputy Reeve, of Toronto Township. After a basket luncheon a dance was held in the Pavilion.

DIXIE

Mrs. Fred Holder presided at the annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Deanery of Peel, held in St. John's Anglican Church. A joint communion service with the Clergy of the Deanery was held. Rev. R. W. Allen, rural Dean celebrating Holy Communion, 65 taking part in this service. Mrs. Amy Guthrie, a member of the W.A., of St. John's Church for 40 years, told of the work done in that long period, and at the close of her address was presented with a small communion set. Mrs. A. R. Robinson, second vice-president, of Toronto Diocesan Board, Rev. Victor Spencer, missionary to Japan, were the speakers and musical numbers were rendered by Mrs. C. Bigham and Mrs. C. Bidwell, Brampton.

PRESBYTERIAL MET AT MILTON

The Sixteenth Annual Meeting of Section No. 2, Toronto Presbyterial W.M.S., was held in the Presbyterian Church, Milton, on Tuesday, June 16th. Morning session at 10 a.m., was largely attended by delegates from Brampton, Norval, Union, Georgetown, Limehouse, Milton, Omgah, Streetsville, Boston. Much enthusiasm was shown. Rev. J. N. McFall gave the address of welcome on behalf of the W.M.S. and the session of Milton Church, saying all felt it a real pleasure and honor to have the women meet in their church. Excellent addresses were given by Mrs. J. A. McClure, of Toronto, on Supply Work; Mrs. J. S. McGonegal, Toronto, on Home Helpers; Mrs. I. Stark on "The Evangelization of the Jews." Mrs. Inkster, President of Toronto Presbyterial, gave a splendid report of the Council Meeting in Winnipeg. Most encouraging were the reports of the Auxiliaries, Y.W.A. and Mission Bands, one society reporting perfect attendance, and going above their allocation. Miss Laura Wilson, of Milton, gave the report of the Summer School at Glenmore Camp, which showed the good influence this school has on the Young People of our church. Mrs. W. A. McLennan brought greetings from the Provincial Board, saying it was only possible to carry on by each woman doing her own part in her own special corner. In speaking of the W.M.S. mission Stations the picture she drew of the Cecelia Jeffry school for Indians at Kenora, will long remain in the minds of her hearers and much valuable information and Inspiration was received from this address. Musical numbers were given by Miss B. Fenwick, Brampton; Miss Olstead and Miss Molly Hately, Milton. Mrs. Jas. Marshall, of Milton, and Mrs. S. D. McClure, of Norval, vice-presidents of the section presided at the sessions. Mrs. W. McClure, Brampton, Sec'y.

ANGLICAN RECTOR OF ISLINGTON HONORED ON JUBILEE

St. George's Anglican Church was crowded to capacity on Thursday last for the special service commemorating the 60th anniversary of the ordination of Canon W. R. F. Green. Canon R. A. Armstrong, Rector of the Church of the Redeemer, Toronto, preached the sermon. Many members of the clergy were present for the service as well as many of Canon Green's parishioners whom he served during his long and honored ministry.

BOLTON CAMP OFFICIALLY OPENED LAST SATURDAY

The Bolton camp of the Neighborhood Workers Association situated about three miles east of Bolton village, was officially opened before hundreds of visitors last Saturday. The ceremony was held in the splendid new assembly hall in Rotary Camp, the gift of the Rotary Club of Toronto. A feature of the opening was the dedication of this new building just completed. It was presented to the camp by C. E. Edmonds, treasurer of the Rotary Club of Toronto, and accepted by John Gibson, treasurer of the Bolton Camp.

The Toronto staff of the Dominion Life Assurance Co., the North Toronto Lions Club, the Toronto Postal Patriotic Association, the Metropolitan Business Club, Frank Littleford and the staff of the Rotary Boys' Camp each presented a cabin and the Home and School Club of Brown's School fitted up a play-ground.

Frank Stapleton, the general secretary of the association, thanked the various clubs and individuals for their most appreciative help. Nearly 5,000 children will have had their chance to enjoy a real holiday at the camp by the end of August. At present there are 789 mothers and children in the grounds. To show the amount of food consumed by this large number of people last year the annual report states that 178,259 meals were served. Among other things were 12,177 loaves of bread, 47,968 quarts of milk, 1,783 dozen eggs and 245 bags of potatoes. We congratulate the Neighborhood Workers Association for the noble work they are doing. We wish to state that the Rev. G. H. Purchase, minister in the Streetsville United Church, when in charge of one of Toronto's churches, had the honor of being president of this association. The Rev. Dr. R. P. Laidlaw of Toronto is the president this year.

PEEL COUNTY COUNCIL

Starting at 10.00 o'clock on Wednesday morning last to try to achieve a settlement of the 1931 county equalization of the Assessment, Judge Justin found Albion and Brampton in the same position regarding their appeals as he had left them on June 5th. Albion was still holding out that they were assessed too high, and that that township will not be satisfied unless county valuators are appointed to secure an equable valuation of the entire county. Brampton was firmly entrenched in her position of being unwilling to accept any move of the 1931 spread than had already been allotted her.

Before the special meeting of council, which was held during the afternoon adjourned at six o'clock, progress had been made to the point where Toronto township assumed $15,000, Port Credit $10,000, of the amount in dispute, the sum total being subtracted from Albion's equalized assessment.

Brampton expressed willingness to assume the $53,000 allotted to her. Albion township was willing to withdrawn her appeal, following the action of Toronto township and, Port Credit, if county council agreed to put through a by-law appointing valuators on the same afternoon.

Judge Justin instructed the council, sitting in committee before him in the morning, that there are three ways of setting an equalization. First, is by the equalization committee of the county council, whose decision this year has been appealed against by two municipalities. Second, it may be settled by valuation. And third, it may be put in the hands of the Judge.

In this case, a court would be formed with the Judge as the presiding official, assisted by the registrar of the county, and another Judge.

His Honor stressed very urgently, the most careful consideration by the county council of any steps proposed. Above everything the expense should be seriously considered.

Coming to the matter of settling the equalization, at the afternoon session, Reeve Westlake, of Albion, chairman of the 1931 Equalization Committee, said, that in his opinion the work of this committee was finished, and the committee had ceased to function.

Howard McCort, councillor of Albion, was asked to speak, and rose to support Reeve Westlake regarding the appointment of valuators.

Representing Toronto Township, Reeve L. H. Pallett, said that he had assumed the $15,000 in anticipation of a compromise settlement. He found it impossible to support any by-law appointing valuators before the November session, if then. If passed then, the by-law should be passed independently of any connection with the present equalization.

An alternative was suggested by W. J. McKinley, deputy-reeve, of Caledon, that the by-law could be passed and blanks left for the names of the valuators. Deputy-reeve D. W. Moran, Chinguacousy, was not prepared to support the by-law at that session. Reeve W. J. Beatty, Brampton, could not see the necessity for appointing valuators at the present time. Mr. Moran raised a laugh when he said: "These valuators would be for 1932. Well, we haven't got the 1931 valuation, why worry about 1932?"

This special meeting was adjourned until June 24th, to secure a definite pronouncement of the county on the passing of a by-law to appoint valuators.

The opening hour of this June 24th session was spent in discussion of a request from W. J. McKinley, deputy-reeve of Caledon, for consideration of the condition of a Caledon township road, injured through the passage of trucks carrying gravel to county road jobs. Mr. McKinley stressed the fact that this is the only road in the county spoiled under similar conditions. Deputy-reeve R. S. Whaley thought that contractors and truck-drivers are really the ones concerned in doing the damage and should be the ones to make the damage good. D. W. Moran pointed out that Chinguacousy township is planning right at the present time to repair the road leading from the Parr gravel pit, and is prepared to assume the entire costs, without assistance from the county. The road to Eldorado Park, Mr. Moran said, is another example of what the township has been called on to do through the amount of picnic traffic that traverses this road. Neither is Chinguacousy asking any consideration on this expenditure. Mr. Moran said, while he further pointed out the expenditure incurred by the residents of Huttonville village, to pave the road from the fourth line to the Park. "We are up against this kind of thing constantly," Mr. Moran concluded, "and we have been asking nothing. But let the county council start giving reimbursement in one case, and there will be a sheaf of bills in from Chinguacousy right away!"

At 11.30 a.m., Reeve L. H. Pallett placed a motion on the table, moved by himself, seconded by R. S. Whaley, that the council adjourn until November 24th, except at the call of the Warden.

Mr. Pallett's motion provoked some surprise, as it was understood that the meeting was called especially to finish the last discussion over the equalization, and prepare to accept the 1931 equalization as passed by council, or allow Judge Justin to handle the equalization in his own way.

Mr. Whaley reminded council that he and Mr. Pallett were elected on an economy ticket a few weeks ago, and that he, Mr. Whaley, is worth more at home at this season than he is in the county council.

"Why did you get elected," queried W. J. Beatty, "if you feel that way about it?" Mr. Whaley urged action, or adjournment.

W. C. Hare, reeve of Port Credit rose to tell council that although a Toronto paper had reported Port Credit as willing to take $10,000 of the spread, he had been willing only to consider $8,000 and that now, he is unwilling to go that far.

The meeting was adjourned until 1.30 p.m., to allow the equalization committee to meet for a further discussion, in an effort to get the entire matter settled at this session. Clerk David Wilson said that he had heard from Judge Justin to the effect that the latter was willing to accept any decision reached by the county council, so long as that decision is unanimous.

ADDITION TO PORT CREDIT ANGLICAN CHURCH

On Monday evening, in the presence of a large gathering of parishioners, Mrs. F. W. Lee turned the first sod on the site of the $12,000 addition soon to be made to Trinity Anglican Church, Port Credit, which ultimately will be part of the new stone church, estimated to cost in the neighborhood of $45,000. The original edifice was erected in 1867 and remodelled in 1917. Mrs. Lee, who turned the first sod for this new addition, is a daughter of James Hamilton, one of the original members of the first congregation. Rev. H. Earle, the rector, presided.

Mr. Roy McMillan spent part of last week at Alliston on business.

Victor Johnston and wife spent the week-end with friends at Shelburne.

W. E. W. Steen is erecting a new barn; he expects to have the raising some day next week.

Mrs. Elmer Waite on Saturday last gave birth to twin girls. Both mother and daughters are doing well.

Mr. and Mrs. Omar Turney have returned from their honeymoon spent in Muskoka, Ottawa and other points.

Norman Cook, son of Mr. Will Cook, who met with an accident, is showing signs of rapid improvement.

Bessie Steen is spending the summer at Franklin Camp, near Parry Sound. Miss Steen looks after the office work.

Watch for Eden Church annual garden party at Mr. D. Sinclair's on July 7th. Jamie Reid, assisted by other well-selected artists,

Mr. and Mrs. David McCaugherty, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Steen motored to Guelph last week to the demonstration fostered by the Agricultural College.

Mr. Harry Gerhart and Mr. E. E. King will attend the Masonic Grand Lodge which is being held at Windsor the early part of July.

Mrs. Duller, wife of Rev. Howard Duller, of Cleveland, Ohio, U.S.A., accompanied by her three sons are visiting her sister, Mrs. Thomas Rogerson.

Under the auspices of River Park Masonic Lodge, Streetsville, annual divine service will be held at Eden United Church this Sunday, June 28, at 2.30 p.m. standard time.

A large number of young people belonging to the Young People's Association of the United Church have formed themselves into a tennis club. The court is at the rear of Mr. Eugene Redick's home. The attendance is very encouraging.

The congregation of St. Mary's Church, Port Credit, will hold their annual picnic on the Church grounds on Wednesday, July 1st. A splendid program has been prepared for this event and a good time is assured to all who attend. See advt. in this issue for particulars.

On Saturday last about 75 of the members of Eden appointment Sunday School held their annual Sunday School picnic at Eldorado Park. After a mid-day lunch, baseball, races, horse shoe pitching were enjoyed by those who took part. The arrangements were in charge of Stanley Hall and Wilmer Mason. William Sparling of the town line is superintendent.

About 200 of the Featherstone family gathered at Dundurn Park, Hamilton, last Saturday for their third annual re-union. After indulging in sports and speech-making, all enjoyed a very tasty lunch. The party broke up to meet again next year. J. K. Featherstone and family and T. Gould and wife of Streetsville were among those present.

Last Saturday, with 15 picnics, large and small in number, Eldorado Park enjoyed its high peak for the season and while a sharp shower interrupted the various programs, they were mostly completed before happy and tired picnickers left for their homes. St. Andrew's Presbyterian Sunday School and Eden United Church Sunday School were among the number.

PINECREST CAMP

"There's a long green worm a-winding
Round the roof of my tent,
And the morning breezes tell me
That it's time I went,
There's a cold cold water waiting,
For me to take my morning dip,
And return to find that long green worm,
Upon my pillow slip.

Don't you wish you were there at camp, boys and girls of Peel. These last few days do seem to drag, don't they?

The boys' camp starts next Monday, June 29th. And so far, boys, there are only 24 registrations in and the camp holds 70 boys. So there's plenty of room. Make your plans at once and send your registration form and fee of $2.00 to Mr. Albert Bolster, Brampton. If you haven't a folder use this form.

TULE MARSH MURDER

STORY OF A MISSING ACTRESS AND THE TAXING OF WITS TO EXPLAIN HER FATE.

BY NANCY BARR MAVITY.

SYNOPSIS

Sheila O'Shay, formerly a popular actress, and now the wife of the young multi-millionaire Don Ellsworth, disappears leaving no trace behind her. Don visits Dr. Cavanaugh, the famous criminologist, and confesses that his married life has been very unhappy. Dr. Cavanaugh agrees to investigate the case.

Peter Piper, reporter of The Herald, is sent to cover the case. He goes to Dr. Cavanaugh's home. By accident he meets the doctor's adopted daughter, a beautiful young woman. Peter learn that she is interestedly interested in the Ellsworth case.

CHAPTER VI.

Peter Piper had all the normal susceptibility of a young man to the charm of a pretty girl. The difference between him and the usual young man was that he had learned to gauge its effect discount it and lay it neatly on one side where it would not interfere with his judgment. The life of a reporter early teaches the lesson that women—even young and pretty women—are human beings. Peter had looked into more than one pair of wide and innocent eyes had listened to more than one sweet and persuasive voice, had responded amiably to more than one appealing smile, and had discovered that all these attractions might not prevent their possessor from passing bad cheques or engaging in the art of blackmail. Experience tends to dissipate the rosy and distorting mist in which one sex views the other; but the reporter quaffs strong and numerous draughts of experience beyond the limits of his personal affairs. If he cannot carry that brew with a clear head, he is soon advised to seek a more congenial career, in which he will be the only loser if his sympathies run counter to the facts.

Peter's head was very clear indeed. He was aware of the faint tingling exhilaration of following a "lead" which had turned in an unexpected direction. The fact that Barbara was very attractive to look upon enhanced her newspaper value; it did not in the least befuddle Peter's faculties. He was capable of proceeding precisely as if she were an angular spinster of all too certain years—which may be lack of chivalry or its fine-drawn furthest developments. As he glanced sidewise at Barbara's averted profile and noted the firm curve of her chin and the breadth of brow delying the childishness of her short tilted nose and delicate coloring he paid her the unspoken compliment of not underestimating her intelligence. She was, for the moment at least, his antagonist. And experience had taken out of him any masculine conceit that, being a woman, she was therefore too helpless a foeman to be worthy of his steel.

Barbara showed that she deserved the compliment by sitting, quite still and silent, in her corner of the coupe.

"What I really came for," Peter observed conversationally, "was to see if you wouldn't help me by using your influence to get me an interview with your father."

"You said you came on the Ellsworth case," Barbara took him up quickly. Her hands lay quiet in her lap, but there was a tense watchfulness in the poise of her small, alert figure. The years had dropped from her, dropped like pebbles flung soundlessly from a cliff edge into the sea. She was once again the orphan asylum child, stamped by the hard, unremitting effort to hold her own, to clutch, bit by bit, at fragmetary advantage in that regimen so inimical to the spirit of childhood.

"So I did," Peter assented. "The office sent me out to get an interview with Dr. Cavanaugh on the case—his views on the psychology of runaway wives, with sidelights on husbands from whom wives disappear—something like that."

"My father doesn't see interviewers—surely you knew?" Barbara faced him now, once again the self-possessed young woman of wealth and position. Her polite remote voice was calculated to put a presumptuous reporter in his place.

But Peter was not to be intimidated by a "society" manner.

"You're ever so much more like Alice in Wonderland than Lady Clara Vere de Vere really," he said with a disarming smile. "Look here, I hoped you'd help a fellow out—it's my job, you know. I came because I was sent, but since I was sent, I've got to use every effort to get what I was sent for. That's reasonable, isn't it?"

"Ye-es," Barbara admitted. "That's your point of view. But I'm much more likely to take my father's. There's a little thing like loyalty, you know. You play on my sympathies to get me to persuade father, as a favor, to do something he wouldn't do otherwise. Well, supposing that I could—I won't!" The set of Barbara's chin was very firm indeed.

"Not even to help out Don Ellsworth?"

"What—do you mean?" Barbara's voice was little more than a gasp.

"You and Mr. Ellsworth were privately engaged to be married—before he married Miss O'Shay," Peter calmly asserted.

"How did you know?" The words came out before she could stop them. She bit her lip and a slow flush mounted to her forehead and drained away again.

"Look here," Peter said kindly, "I haven't any ill motive against any of you. I'm quite willing to be frank. I simply guessed it. Whatever Don Ellsworth does has a way of getting into the papers, and one of the things that got in, by way of society gossip from our Del Monte correspondent, was that you and he were seen together a great deal just prior to his sudden marriage. I've the clipping here. But you needn't mind—the admission is certainly nothing against you."

"But what does it matter? Why do you want to know? You surely don't mean that you're going to drag that in? I was a fool to let you trick me like that?" Barbara's voice was bitter with accusation of both herself and him.

"It matters just this much," Peter said steadily. "There's more in this Ellsworth business than meets the eye—though goodness knows it's been meeting the eye plenty these last few days. Suppose that young Ellsworth had a reason for wishing his wife out of the way. Suppose that you were the reason."

"Gracious, you do leap to melodrama!" Barbara's smile flashed out a moment, and was gone. "If every married somebody else than the first girl whose name the gossips connected with his, changed his mind and murdered his wife, this world would be an even more jolly place for the newspapers than it is."

Peter's eyebrows rose.

"Murder," he murmured gently. So far as I know, nobody has mentioned that the Ellsworth case involves a murder."

He saw Barbara's teeth catch her lower lip. Then, as if warned against allowing her features to betray her, she released it and turned to him a composed and inscrutible face.

"Your own phrase, I believe, was that Mr. Ellsworth might wish his wife 'out of the way.' Putting someone out of the way is a familiar idiom, isn't it? Pardon me if I misinterpreted your meaning."

Peter's eyes beamed upon her with frank admiration. He could discount personal attraction, but he knew better than to discount quickness of wit. Peter disliked fools, even when they made his own task more simple.

"You reserve all your naps for your sleeping hours, don't you?" he commented.

Barbara ignored the tribute.

"I might remind you that your inspired flight of imagination has no string tied to it, holding it down to mere evidence. You must know that you can't print any such insinuation. Mr. Ellsworth would be after you for libel in no time."

"I knew you were a bright girl!" Peter's gray eyes shone with enthusiasm. "I didn't suppose society buds had a chance to accumulate that much common sense. The point is, it's a working hypothesis,—and working hypotheses sometimes accumulate proof while they work. Now you see why it would be a good thing for you to get your father to give me that interview."

CHAPTER VII.

Barbara pondered Peter's last statement, with its sudden shift of ground.

"No," she said finally. "I don't see what interviewing my father can possibly have to do with it."

"You thought my hypothesis flighty and libellous and a few little things like that—not a nice hypothesis at all. Well, I'm not wedded to it. Only I'm addicted to theories—I really can't live comfortably without one. Your father might present me with a pleasing substitute, devoid of dynamite. Even if he doesn't, he's always good copy. He would distract my attetnion from these imaginative flights."

"This sounds like a novel sort of blackmail." Barbara's face was white, but her voice was cool. Not for nothing had she spent the first fourteen years of her life on the defensive against the world. "Naturally, I don't care to have the fact that Mr. Ellsworth and I were once—very good friends dragged into print in connection with a sensational story. I should dislike it extremely. The rest of your flight into the blue is sheer piffle, and you know it." Her voice vibrated in a quick gust of anger—but under that burst of indignation Peter listened for the note of anxiety. "You wouldn't dare print a word of it—you're trying to frighten me with bogies. I used to cry all alone in the dark, because I knew there was a black leopard crouched in the corner of the room, where the broom and dustpan stood in the day time. Nobody ever bothered to come and console me. Well, it was good training. I had to learn to meet and know my bogies, alone and in the dark—and to conquer them. So, you see, I recognize a bogie when I see one—even a grown up one."

Caprice

Caprice
Is gold;
An orange-colored toy balloon,
The tinkle of a tambourine,
Pollen that makes the brown bee bold,—

Caprice
Is green—
A hurdy-gurdy's tangled tune,
The tassel from a jester's shoe,
A faun's dream in mid-afternoon,

Caprice
Is blue—
Soap-bubbles blown by Pirrot,
An errant dragonfly or two,
Venetian lanterns hung a-row,—
Caprice
Is you.

In A Nursing Home

By day chill winds blow from the sea
And beat upon the grey stone walls.
While the Dean Waters monody
Rises above their sough, and falls.
A rushing train screams through the night;
A hooting car takes revellers home,
And echoing wheels, until daylight,
Tell of balls ended, morning come.
All night winged angels hover there;
One they call Pain, with sad, dark eyes.
While Sleep red poppies in her hair,
Drives Pain away with lullabies.
The night drags past, and now one sees
Figures, blue-robed, with coiffes of white—
Just human women, all of these,
Yet, surely, angels in God's sight.
—Jean Lang, in Chamber's Journal.

Money or Her Youth

"I've just met Maude again," said Alice, "and she wanted to borrow $5.00 for her holiday expenses."

"Good gracious!" said the girl's mother. "Why is Maude always so short of money? I thought her uncle left her a lot."

"So he did," smiled Alice. "But, you see, she's not allowed to touch it until she's thirty, and she'll never own up to that."

In a thin woolen in skipper blue coloring, was the original model, with tuck-in blouse of white crepe satin.

A printed crepe silk with plain crepe is quite as attractive.

Then again, it may be very interestingly carried out in black crepe silk with white crepe—a costume that is smart wherever it goes.

Rayon novelties, linen, shantung and shirting fabrics are other lovely suggestions.

Style No. 3079 may be had in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 36 and 38 inches bust.

Size 16 requires 3½ yards 39-inch with 2 yards 39-inch for blouse.

The village doctor was called in to attend a very testy aristocrat.

"Well, sir," he commenced, "and what is the matter?"

"That, sir," snapped the patient, "is for you to find out."

"I see," returned the doctor calmly. "If you'll excuse me for a few minutes, I'll go and speak to a friend of mine and ask him to come along."

"What ever do you mean?" asked the patient. "What use will your friend be?"

"He's a vet, and he's the only chap I know who can make a diagnosis without asking questions," explained the medical man.

The United States spends $5,000,000 on crime. And they certainly get value for their money.

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

What came before: After many adventures flying over China, Captain Jimmy is forced to land behind the enemy's lines. He plans a raid on the military camp to secure gasoline and oil.

While Lieutenant Stone threw the military camp into an uproar, I whistled softly to Scottie and groped my way through the darkness toward the big, imposing tent.

Quietly I slipped under the canvas, and felt my way around the sides. As my eyes grew more used to the darkness, I could see the outline of a large cot on which someone lay sleeping soundly. Scarcely daring to breathe I crept slowly forward. Then before the surprised Chinese could offer any resistance, I grabbed him and secured his arms behind his back.

Under his pilow I discovered no less than two pistols and a knife. The knife I threw away. One pistol I pocketed; with the other I induced him to follow me. Wrapped in a blanket, I shoved my captive under the tent wall, and marched him along to where the horses were held by Fu Hsu.

Once we had put some distance between ourselves and the camp, we questioned our prisoner. To our amazement, we discovered that we had secured no less a personage than General Fong as a hostage.

"Tell him" I said, "that as soon as it becomes light, he'll write me an order for 150 gallons of gasoline, twenty gallons of oil and a supply of food, and if he doesn't write the order pronto, I'll take him apart by hand to see what makes him tick".

The interpreter translated my message.

"General say he no can do", said Fu Hsu, "He say you sullender now and he'll be very easy with you".

I scowled as fiercely as I could. The poor Chinese looked so funny in his night clothes and blanket, yet he just could not forget his rank of General. Pulling out my pistols I made a number of horrible faces, expressing the dozens of doleful things that would certainly happen to him if he continued to refuse our request.

Being a sensible man, and a General, he decided to yield handsomely since yield he must.

"He say 'Yes', can do," translated Fu Hsu; "Velly glad to do such little favor for fine gentlemen."

At daybreak I rode out to the camp with the General's written order in my pocket, and his gold signet ring on my finger, as proof of my authority.

The camp was astir and immediately we were sighted, a group of mounted men galloped out and surrounded us. In a loud and commanding tone I insisted that we be taken at once to the commanding officer. To him I showed the ring and made the demands for gas, oil and food.

We got plenty of immediate action. Burros were loaded with gas, oil and food and we set out for camp. Leading off in a round-about way, it was over four hours before we shook off the last spying soldier and finally reached the plane.

For us, the tinned food was a real feast and even the General seemed to enjoy it. Breakfast over, we put him to work emptying cans of gasoline into the plane and he proved to be about average Chinese labor at that job.

Then we took off on a level spot in back of the trees and our last sight of General Fong was seeing him walking wearily back to his camp.

How "Dixie" Came To Signify the South

Money gave to the South its pet name of "Dixie," says Fred W. Thompson, of the American Bankers' Association. The principal bills issued by a bank in New Orleans before the war between the States were in $10 denominations. They were engraved in English on one side and in French on the other. On the French side the word "dix" was very prominent; it means "ten".

The Americans throughout the Mississippi Valley who did not know the French pronunciation called the bills "dixies," and Louisiana came to be known as "the land of the dixies," or "dixie land." This inspired Dan Emmett, who in 1859 composed the original "Dixie Land" for a minstrel show, then performing in New York. He embodied in it the expression he had so often heard: "I wish I were in Dixie." This song was later rewritten by General Albert Pike, who gave it the battle thrill that makes "Dixie" immortal and stamps the name "Dixie upon the South.

Germany's Great Spring

Germany's biggest spring, which is seldom visited by tourists, pours forth about 100,000,000 gallons of water a day, according to the tourist information office of the German National Railways. The huge volume of water comes from the Rhumesprung near Rhumspringe on the railroad from Herzberg to Bleichrode in the Harb Mountains.

The spring is not far from the 1,000-year-old community of Poehlde, formerly Palathi, where King Henry I. is said to have become Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire in 919. Henry presented the Edelhof palace with its surrounding lands to Queen Mathilde for the creation of a cloister. Relics of the history of the ancient town are preserved in the Guilph Museum in Hanover.

The Rhume River rises in a small valley not far from Poehlde. Hundreds of springs in a small pond form the source of the river. The water always rises at a temperature of 50 degrees Fahrenheit. The water furnishes power for factories and mills.

The vast spring lures Sunday excursionists from Duderstadt, Nordhausen and other points in the Harts Mountains. Lectures are occasionally held to explain the origin of the spring, which has been found to result from seepage from the Sieber and Oder Rivers, about seven miles away. Coloring matter placed in the rivers appears in the water of the Rhume Spring about thirty hours later.

The second largest spring in Germany, which is much better known to travelers from abroad is the artesian spring at Oeynhausen, which throws a single colum of water high in the air at a rate of more than 2,000,000 gallons daily.

When Sail Beats Steam

Cornwall is one of England's favorite holiday counties, and most of those who visit it look in at Falmouth during their stay.

Just now Falmouth should be especially interesting, for the grain ships from South Australia have begun to arrive, and those windjammers are perhaps the most picturesque and interesting of all the ships afloat today. Also, there are very few of them left—and Falmouth is one of the few ports where they can still be seen.

It is interesting to note that the champion windjammer, the four-masted Herzogin Cecile, which arrived at Falmouth recently, has been known to sail 17½ miles in an hour, which is considerably faster than the average steamer. In one twenty-four hours' period she has sailed 360 miles, beating the Cutty Sark's best run, which was 353 miles in twenty-four hours. The Cutty Sark, by the way, is also in Falmouth Harbor.

Mothers and Wife Say "Bon Voyage"

Four intrepid Montreal canoemen started on Saturday a 5000-mile journey over the waterways followed by La Salle in his historic journey from Montreal to New Orleans. They are Paul Paquin, leader of an Across-Canada canoe expedition last year; Jean Maison, R. Beaudry and M. Bourcier. Relatives witnessed their start from Lachine, on historic Lake St. Louis when the mothers of Maison and Bourcier, (left and right) and the wife of Paul Paquin were on hand to wish them godspeed on their journey which is expected to take them 10 months. The party, in two "Canayank" canoes, will follow the St. Lawrence west to the Great Lakes, and paddling westward as far as Duluth, will then strike southward to the southern metropolis.

"Do not hang all your mottoes on the wall. Hang some of them in your heart and in your life."

How Would You Like Dessert For Your First Course?

Many families in England have their dessert first. In fact, "Those people who eat Yorkshire pudding with meat and potatoes are all wrong. We eat it always at the beginning of our meal," said the Yorkshire lady from England with nature's real complexion of peaches and cream.

Then by a strange coincidence advice comes from Baltimore with the same instructions. "How would you like your apple pie smothered in ice cream first and then finish with beefsteak smothered in onions?"

In China, too, the people start a meal with dessert. Then after the sweets have taken the edge off the appetite as much meat and vegetables may be eaten as desired.

The Rev. W. A. Crawford of Frost Emmorton, Md., Rector of St. Mary's church, says:

"I am persuaded that this Chinese custom was adopted centuries ago as a food conservation measure, for families are common and people run into millions in small areas. These Chinese customs are more rational and less animal than ours, and it is also more healthful, for when one ends a meal with sweets and acid reaction occurs in the mouth which is bad for the teeth and system generally."

Twilight Hour Story

Chicks and Other Little Friends

Fluffy was a funny puss that day up in the attic, wasn't she? She just sat on the floor and wouldn't do anything but sit and pretend she was sleeping.

"Can't you guess, Billy boy, what that little scratching noise was?"

"No, I can't guess. Do you know?" said Billy, giving up guessing.

"Yes, I know," said Mamma Lady. "Fluffy had her kittens and has hidden them away. I fixed up a nice box for her to have them in, but, as I told you, she was afraid Rover would come and poke his nose in the box some time when he was snooping around and she just wouldn't have that, so thought she'd hide them where Rover couldn't come."

This was wonderful news to Billy to know Fluffy had kittens, and he laughed and laughed. "Oh, Mamma, won't they be cute? Do you think their fur will be long like hers? Oh, I can hardly wait till we find them." Then he got quite excited, and getting down on the floor close to puss, he coaxed, "Fluffy, where are they? Oh, do tell us, please, Fluffy."

But Fluffy just sat there and purred and put her paws under her body more comfortably and wouldn't tell a thing. They hunted and hunted but couldn't find them. If they went down stairs and listened sometimes they heard a little scratching noise. Oh, a very little noise, but that was all.

"Well Billy, I believe Fluffy has her kittens away underneath the floor. However did she get there? She must have gone away back in the attic where there is no floor and then walked along underneath between the floor and the downstairs ceiling util she got to the chimney. She chose a nice warm spot, didn't she? But how are we going to get them out is the question," said Mamma Lady, thoughtfully and quite puzzled. "If Daddy were here he'd soon get them out by taking up the floor, but he won't be back for three weeks. If we should leave them there all that time they would be so shy we couldn't get near them. We want them tame and cute, don't we?"

"I should say we do," he sighed. "What can we do, Mamma? We must think up a way." Billy was feeling pretty disappointed. "Why did she go and put them away in there?"

"Well, you see, Rover is pretty big looking to Fluffy, and sometimes a little rough. I guess she remembered how he used to run after her when she was just little. So now she thought he might hurt her babies."

They walked slowly back to the attic door leading downstairs and when they looked for Fluffy she wasn't there.

Mamma Lady laughed. You see, dear, Fluffy went to her kittens when we weren't looking. She seems to want to tease us, doesn't she? Now that she is with them, perhaps if we go back we can hear them when she starts washing them all over like Topsy used to do with hers out in the barn. They are always so glad to see her they begin to meow, which means, 'Hello, Mamma, I'm glad you are back'."

So back they hurried for the spot where they though the kittens might be, and put their ears to the floor and listened.

A World Language

Cairo Sphinx: One of the anomalies of Egypt is the fact that Egyptains take more time and trouble to learn English than any other foreign language, and yet fail to insist on its full use as a secondary language. English is the administrative language of five hundred million—one-third the world's population. It is the language of the sea and of commerce, is taught in practically all the secondary schools in most civilized countries, and is the language in which 65 per cent. of foreign businesses are conducted. Nearly the whole world's literature is in English, as some amazing statistics have recently shown. English is spoken all over the world except in Slavic Eastern Europe, Asia Minor and South America, but even there is gaining ground. It is the second language of the Mohammedan world.

The Advantage of Co-education

Lord Lytton in the New Era (London): I am a firm believer in the general principle that boys and girls should be educated together as far as possible. Family life is the natural environment for the child till adolescence. School life is an inevitable departure from the natural, but this departure should be made as little as possible. The segregation of boys and girls in separate boarding-schools produces conditions which make the widest possible divergence from those of the family. The size of the whole community, the existence of large numbers of approximately the same age, and finally the presence of only one sex, produce an environment which is wholly unnatural and artificial. If children must be boarded together in order to be taught, the schools should be kept as small as possible, and should include children of different ages and both sexes.

Britain's Export Trade

London Times Trade Supplement: Too many firms have been content to await orders from merchant houses and to make no efforts to keep in touch with changing conditions in the countries where their goods are consumed. The latest and most authoritative warning of the inevitable result of neglecting to make personal visits to foreign markets has come from the Prince of Wales, and in confirmation of what he has said is the fact that during the prolonged depression of recent years nothing has been more remarkable than that certain businesses which have made a practice of keeping in touch with their foreign markets by frequent visits, paid by important and responsible members of the firm, have suffered less acutely than others.

British Goods Are Best

Truth (London): The Prince of Wales, whose energy and willingness to pull his weight entitles him to our warm gratitude, and whose common sense is quite uncommon, has been telling Manchester that British goods are too good for the modern world, and advising Lancashire to turn out more shoddy. When we remember Carlyle and Plubson of Undershot, we were at first inclined to shudder at this advice. But the Prince of Wales "a bien studie sa bete." He has travelled and studied business in all countries. He is perfectly right. This is an age of artificial silk and sham jewellery. British goods are too solid and wear too well. They must be made more cheaply.

Amusement Taxes Raised in Russia

Moscow.—The cost of entertainment has gone up in Russia. The Central Executive Committee of the Republic of Russia issued a decree recently raising all taxes on amusements from 10 to 80 per cent.

No reason was given for the increases, but they followed the boosting of the prices of basic commodities on an average of 50 per cent.

Building Growth in Calgary

Calgary, Alberta.—Building permits issued by the City of Calgary for the first two weeks in May called for sixteen new homes each costing $4,000 and more, twelve of which are to have garages. In addition, permits have been taken out for fifteen other garages. Which is taken to indicate progress and stability of growth.

Explorer Finds Vast Field Of Ice in British Columbia

Montreal—Discovery of an immense and accessible ice field of about 350 square miles in the Bridge River district of British Columbia is reported by Major F. V. Longstaff, of Victoria, B.C., who, wiht two Swiss guides, explored the region. He believes it will become an important scenic attraction. In his opinion it surpasses the famed Columbia ice field.

It provides the source of several large rivers, among them the Squamish, Bridge, Whitewater, Lillooet, Tobamand and Southgate. On or near the ice field the explorers noticed a dozen mountain peaks about 10,000 feet high.

The distance from the nearest point of the motor road in the Bridge River valley to the gravel flat of the main glacier is forty-five miles by the river trail, the explorer said.

A Valuable Wood

In the sitka spruce Canada possesses one of the most valuable woods used in aeroplane construction. There are few woods of its great lightness to equal it in strength, toughness and resiliency and there is no other wood with these combined qualities which is available in large sizes and quantities, comparatively free of knots and other defects.

The real progress of humanity probably depends far more on the conception of duty than on the conception of rights.—Lord Hewart.

The Green Bank of England

Have you seen the gold in the Green Bank of England?
Wonderful, beautiful, lovely to behold—
Aconite and coltsfoot, buttercup and daffodil,
Crocus and celandine, and dandelion bold!

Have you found the gold in the Green Bank of England?
You may go and take it—none of it is sold.
Gorse, broom, and ragwort, bedstraw and cowslip,
Kingcup and pansy, and silverweed gold.

Yours is the gold in the Green Bank of England,
Yours for the asking—treasury untold;
Potentilla, primrose, yellow vetch, and trefoil,
Pimpernel and hawkweed, and pussywillow gold.

A Windy-Day Task

It is well to select a warm day for washing quilts, and a bit of wind is helpful in hurrying the drying process. A generous suds is made in soft water, or water softened with borax, using a mild soap or soap flakes. The quilt is immersed in this soapy bath and allowed to soak for 30 minutes before the washing proper begins.

Dip the quilt up and down in the soapy water to force out the loosened dirt, but do not rub, because that loosens the cotton filling and forms lumps in it. The washing machine may be used for the heavy work, and if there are still badly soiled places, they can be removed with a brush dipped in soapy water.

Rinsing is done in two waters, both of the same temperature as the wash water. Then the dripping quilt is hung outdoors between two lines. Wringing is also to be avoided, since it forms lumps in the cotton filling. Careful squeezing is allowed if there is no twisting.

When the quilt is partly dry, beat it lightly with a rattan carpet beater, or a small branch stripped of its leaves. This gentle beating helps to make the cotton filling fluffy. The quilt, when dry, may be pressed with a warm iron. It will then be just as attractive as a new one.

A Case in Camera

The police officer was put in the witness box.

"He's a camera fiend of the worst type, sir," said the constable, "and ——"

"But surely," interrupted the magistrate in surprise—"surely you didn't arrest this man simply because he had a mania for taking pictures?"

"Oh, no, sir!" explained the witness. "It isn't pictures that he takes—it's cameras!"

June

What is so rare as a day in June?
Then, if ever, come perfect days;
Then Heaven tries the earth, if it be in tune,
And over it softly her warm ear lays.
Whether we look, or whether we listen,
We hear life murmur or see it glisten.

The cowslip startles in meadows green,
The buttercup catches the sun in its chalice,
And there's never a leaf or bud too mean
To be some happy creature's palace.
The little birds sits at his door in the sun,
Atilt like a blossom among the leaves,
And lets his illumined being o'errun
With the deluge of summer it receives.
His mate feels the eggs beneath her wings,
And the heart in her dumb breast flutters and sings;
He sings to the wide world, and she to her nest,—
In the nice ear of Nature which song is the best?

Uses Stage Magic To Reclaim Boys

Columbus, Ohio.—Stage magic is being used to control and help wayward boys and make them useful members of society. J. Harry Messersmith of Harrisburg, Pa., attending the International Brotherhood of Magicians' convention, disclosed how he utilizes his tricks to arouse the interest of wayward youths and direct them to the straight path.

He has 200 boys under his charge in Pennsylvania. "Fifteen minutes of magic and sleight-of-hand tricks bring better results with a wayward boy than could otherwise be accomplished in a month," he says.

He shows them tricks, and they want to know just how they are done Some of the lads have decided to devote their lives to studying stage magic, and are recognized by the profession as" magicians of unusual ability."

Messersmith takes the boys camping for weeks at a time, teaches them his art and in some cases gives them money to get a start in life.

Water Sterilized by Beads; Harmful Germs Electrocuted

Harmful germs in water are electrocuted by a sterilizing process developed in England that uses neither chemicals nor filters. Instead the water is purified by simply immersing specially treated silver beads in it, explains "Popular Mechanics Magazine." It has long been known that certain metals, including silver, gold and palladium, have the property of destroying bacteria, when brought in contact with them, and the sterilizer accelerates what is called the "oligo-dynamical" action so that water is made germfree in one or two hours. Water so treated has powerful sterilization properties of its own and may be used for washing nursing bottles, cooking utensils and surgical instruments. The life of the device is virtually unlimited, one set of beads being capable of dealing with 250,000 gallons of water before deteriorating.

Mummy's Name for Him

A four-year-old boy was asked by an elderly visitor what his name was.

"Jinky," replied the boy.

"But have you no other name?" asked the visitor.

"No," replied the boy.

"But what is your father's name?" she persisted.

"Daddy," came the reply.

"No, no," she went on; "hasn't he another name? What does your mummy call him?"

"Fathead," the boy replied.

Sunday School Lesson

July 5. Lesson—The Gift of the Holy Spirit—Acts 1: 6-9; 2: 1-8. Golden Text—Ye shall receive power, after the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.—Acts 1: 8.

ANALYSIS

I. THE PROMISE, Acts 1: 6-12.
II. THE PREPARATION, Acts 1: 13, 14.
III. THE FULFILMENT, Acts 2: 1-13.

INTRODUCTION—This week we begin a study of early Christianity and its spread into the Gentile world. The movement was definitely launched in that glowing experience on the day of Pentecost. On several previous occasions the disciples had assurances that their crucified Lord was alive. But these moments of illumination were not long continued, and eventually they ceased altogether. "Jesus was parted from them" at the Ascension. Then, ten days later, came this new experience—"The Gift of the Holy Spirit."

I. THE PROMISE, Acts 1: 6-12.

The disciples were met together for what turned out to be the Risen Lord's last appearance. Their minds were occupied, not with dreams of the promised Spirit (v.), but with dreams of a restored national independence. The kingdom of God which they had in mind was material, national, and to be won by force. Their Master brushed aside their questioning about this kingdom. The kingdom he was going to establish would not be a Jewish State, but a spiritual kingdom, not national, but universal. They looked for political power; he promised them, instead, a Power different from, and greater than, that of which they were dreaming.

That power would come when the Holy Spirit came upon them. That is, when the Holy Spirit, which is the Spirit of God, which is the Spirit that was in Jesus of Nazareth, would be in them also—when their ideas and attitudes and purposes would be in harmony with his ideas, attitudes, and purposes. Then they would possess, not the political power which they had in mind, but a moral, personal, spiritual power. With their new vision and driving power they would witness for him in Jerusalem—and far beyond the boundaries of Palestine. But they still held inadequate ideas of God and his purposes. They still lacked the courage necessary for witnessing. Therefore, until the illumination came, which would reveal him and his plans more truly, until they could speak with boldness, they were to wait in Jerusalem.

II. THE PREPARATION, Acts 1: 13, 14.

The disciples where were in Jerusalem kept together. They knew that the time must be close at hand when they must face the world as witnesses for their Lord and his kingdom.

They realized now that their old idea of that kingdom was wrong, but they felt themselves inadequate to the proclaiming of the new. So, with one accord they gave themselves to prayer and supplication. "With one accord"—they were agreed among themselves. Prayer-meetings to be effective must be made up of people who are on good terms with each other. An atmosphere of sympathy, unity of mind and purpose is essential. Thus agreed, they continued in prayer. They placed themselves, mind and heart, unreservedly at God's disposal. They had one overwhelming desire; to come to fuller knowledge and be the channels through which God's grace and power could flow. In this mood of expectancy and consecration they waited for the fulfilment of the promise.

III. THE FULFILMENT, Acts 2: 1-13.

God does not fail lives so consecrated and expectant. While the believers were met for prayer, they experienced a vision—a sound like a mighty rushing wind, tongues, not of fire, but like fire, lighting upon each one present. To the waiting believers there were impressive and significant symbols. They were an assurance that the beliefs to which they had been growing concerning their Lord and his kingdom were true. God was indeed speaking to them, commanding them to go forth with his message, assuring them of his sustaining power. The signal to launch the evangelistic movement had been given.

The believers' joy expressed itself, first, in that exuberant emotional demonstration—"speaking with tongues." This was the confused exclamation of hearts overflowing with sudden joy and thankfulness and praise, and which, as yet, had no "language but a cry." See Acts 10: 44-46; 19: 6; 1 Cor. chap. 14. At first these ecstatic utterances and exclamations were so unrestrained that they attracted the attention of passers-by. Soon a crowd gathered—citizens of Jerusalem and pilgrims from all parts of the Empire who had come to the Holy City for the Feast of Pentecost. "Pentecost means the feast on the fiftieth day after the offering of the first sheaf of the first grain crop, barley. At the end of that harvest came the Jewish thanksgiving of Pentecost." Some of them thought they were witnessing a drunken orgy.

These strange occurrences, however, were but the "externals" of the Pentecostal experience. The essential importance of Pentecost lay in the fact that these men and women became vividly conscious of God. Their Master was no longer the absent Jesus of Nazareth. He and God were now, as Stanley Jones says, merged in one. That One was universal, spiritual, ever-present. They knew now that they were in harmony with him. They had one passion—to share him with others.

...give child Castoria

FUSSY, fretful, can't sleep, won't eat.... It isn't always easy to find just where the trouble is with a young child. It may be a stomach upset; it may be sluggish bowels.

But when little tongues are coated and there is even a slight suspicion of bad breath—it's time for Castoria!

Castoria, you know, is a pure vegetable preparation especially made for babies and children. When Baby cries with colic or is fretful because of constipation, Castoria brings quick comfort, and, with relief from pain, soothes him to restful sleep. For older children—up through all the school years, Castoria is equally effective in helping to right irregularities. Just give it in larger doses. What a comfort Castoria is to mothers!

Get the genuine, with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on wrapper and the name Castoria that always appears like this:

Trinity Church Gard. Party July 1st

The "British Trio" comes to us with a fine reputation, individually and collectively. Tom MacDuff Copeland, who heads the party is hailed by press and public alike as being in a class by himself as a comedian entertainer. From East to West and North to South of this continent he has been proclaimed as an outstanding artist. Recently at the Massey Hall at St. Patrick's concert he received an ovation such as is seldom heard. His recitals given under church auspices in Toronto have been most highly praised, not only for their artistry, but their wholesomeness, and for versatility it is very doubtful whether Mr. Copeland has an equal in Canada to-day. He plays the organ piano, flageolette, violin and bag pipes, has an excellent bass voice, plays all kinds of characters, and packs his program with surprising variety, and many of the items performed in the "British Trio" program are his own compositions. Mr. Copeland was one of the most popular war entertainers, having given over 1000 concerts to troops of the Allied Nations from 1914 till 1919 and has entertained Royalty on several occasions. With the trio is a young violinist who has just arrived from London, England, Mr. Kenneth Duff, who although only 21 years of age has for the past 4 years been an orchestra leader, his tone and technique are said to be remarkable, and his high class work, also his old time fiddling along with Mr. Copeland will be a feature in the program A great future is predicted in Canada for Mr. Duff. Miss Margaret Williamson brings feminine charm to the party, and uses a fine soprano voice with cultured ability. She hails from Aberdeen, Scotland, and has appeared in many of the large centres. 'The Aberdeen Free Press' says "a voice of wide range, beautiful quality, reminiscent of the late Jessie MacLachlan."

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

Last Sunday was a special day at the Presbyterian Church. In the morning the Rev. G B. Greig from California, preached an eloquent sermon, and the pastor Rev. W. T. McCreeM.A., conducted the evening service. The services were well attended. The choir was assisted at both services by the following talented artists from Toronto: Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Cross, Miss Dorothy Cross, Miss Gladys Hall, MrsMurch and Edward Murch, and Master Billie Dale. The assistance of the visitors was a wonderful help in the service of the sanctuary and the people of St. Andrews deeply appreciate the kindness of their Toronto friends for coming to their aid.

OBITUARY

A. J. Austin Irvine

On Sunday, June 14th, 1931, at the Peel Memorial Hospital, Brampton, there passed to rest one of Streetsville's young men, Austin, second son of Mrs. Maria and the late James Irvine. He was born in Streetsville 40 years ago and spent his life here. He was an employee at the Dominion Sash Factory, where he was injured last December. As time elapsed he grew worse and on May 26th he was taken to the hospital, where an operation was performed, but his injuries proved serious, and early on Sunday morning he suddenly passed away. Deceased was a quiet young man of genial disposition and had many friends. He was unmarried and always lived at home where he was a great help to his mother since his brother's death ten years ago. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon from the family residence and was largely attended. Rev. R. J. W. Perry, Rev. T. O. Curliss and Rev. F. Vipond taking part in the service. Deceased was a member of Court Streetsville No. 1243, I.O.F. and a veteran of the great war, although he was not able to go overseas he suffered greatly from the effects. The veterans attended in a body to pay their last respects, under the direction of Capt. Vipond. The men from the Sash Factory, which was closed for the funeral, also attended in a body. The pallbearers were: J. Dingwall, E. Reddick, H. Wright, F. Evans, H. McClintock and Robt. Cook. The numerous floral tributes were an evidence of the respect in which he was held; among them was a wreath from Toronto Terminal Lodge; a spray from Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Irvine, Toronto; a spray from Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Nelson, Galt; a pillow from the family; a spray from Dorothy and Jean Hammond; and a beautiful basket from the "Boys" from the Sash Factory. Besides his aged mother, there are three sisters, Mrs. J. A. Hammond, Streetsville; Mrs. W. D. Goddard, Dixie; and Miss Ada at home, and one brother, H. E. Irvine, who have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Maria Irvine and family wish to express their appreciation of the kind sympathy shown by their many friends and neighbors in their recent bereavement, also the different societies for gifts of fruit and flowers sent to the hospital, and for the attention given by nurses and doctors.

Mrs. Thomas Hunter

Mrs. Thomas Hunter, aged 65, resident of Esquesing Township, died on Tuesday, June 16th, in Guelph Hospital after a prolonged illness of some years. Born near Brampton, she moved to Georgetown while a child. Surviving are her husband, three sons, Isaac, John and Clifford, all of Esquesing; two daughters, Mrs. L. Whaley, Streetsville, and Mrs. A. Black, of Chinguacousy; two brothers, Samuel, Hornby, and Joseph, and one sister, Mrs. B. Howden, Guelph. The funeral took place on Thursday from her late residence, Lot 5, Con. 9, to St. Stephen's Anglican Church, Hornby, with interment in the Church cemetery.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Week-End Marked By Violent Deaths

Four Drown, Five Killed, Two Heat and Fire Victims

Drowned

John Montgomery, Windsor.

Albert Hill, Wellington Street North, Hamilton.

Nelson Quenville, 18 months, Staples.

Robin A. McCrae, aged 10, Toronto.

Killed

Mrs. Audrey Brimacombe, Windsor.

Jerry Tracey, Belmont Avenue, Hamilton.

John W. Wild, Toronto.

Ralph Orton, Hespeler.

Dennis Powell, aged 6, Belleville.

Died From Heat

William E. Waring, aged 72, Toronto.

Henry Roszell, aged 85, Hillsburg.

Burned to Death

Becher Carr, Corunna.

Four persons drowned, five killed by vehicles, one fatality by heat and one burned to death, was the total list by the authorities throughout Ontario following a tabulation of accidents of various kinds over the week-end.

A tragedy at Port Dover, where Albert Hill, a young Englishman of Hamilton, gave his life in a valiant effort to save his landlord's daughter, and a traffic fatality in Windsor, when the mother of seven children was killed by an auto on the way to the baptism of her youngest child—who was injured by the car—were the most pathetic of the week-end's toll.

Overcome by the heat of Saturday Henry Roszell, aged 85, of Hillsburg, Ont., collapsed and died while visiting at the home of his son, 1016 Dovercourt Road, Toronto. Coroner Dr. G. W. Glendenan attributed his death to heat prostration.

Irish Youth Drowns

Owen Sound.—John Montgomery, a young man in his early twenties, was drowned here Saturday at 10.30 o'clock when he dived from the trestle work of the Jubilee Bridge.

Montgomery, a transient, had stopped with two companions to take a swim along with a number of others who were bathing. In diving, he apparently slipped, landing on his stomach with such force as to drive the air from his lungs. He at once swallowed water and sank.

Montgomery is said to have resided at Windsor for some time after coming to this country from Ireland. He was well dressed, and carried several letters of recommendation from persons in Ireland.

Dr. Heath, of London, happened along, and made a valiant effort to save him, diving into the river and bringing the body up. He was assisted by Harold Lloyd. After he had worked over the body for 50 minutes the man was pronounced dead.

Found Dead in Trough

Windsor, June 21.—Nelson Quenville, 18-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Quenville, of Staples, was drowned to-day in the horse trough at the home of his parents.

The body of the child was found by his brother Ralph. Dr. H. G. Emerton, of Comber, has decided that an inquest is not necessary.

Dies Trying Rescue

Port Dover, June 21.—This afternoon Albert Hill, who has been making his home with John Vandusen, 61 Wellington Street North, Hamilton, was drowned here. Hill, accompanied the Vandusen family to Port Dover, and he and Miss Vandusen went bathing, wading in the shallow water to the submerged pier of the ferry slip.

The young woman crossed the pier first and dropped into 12 feet of water in the slip. Hill, who could not swim, went to the rescue and was soon in difficulty.

Alex. Gardiner and George Ingraham plunged into help. The former managed to rescue the young woman. The latter had hold of Hill but was forced to desist from his effort.

Hamilton Man Killed

Hamilton, June 21.—Jerry Tracey, of 125 Belmont Avenue, father of seven children, was fatally injured Saturday night when the auto in which he was riding turned turtle on the old Stoney Creek highway at Red Hill. Four other occupants of the machine escaped injury.

Mother Killed, Tots Hurt

Windsor. On the way to the Church of the Ascension, to attend the christening of her seven-months-old daughter, Mrs. Audrey Brimacombe, 37, was the victim of a traffic accident and died a few minutes later as she was being taken to Hotel Dieu Hospital.

The baby, Audrey J., is in Grace Hospital, but her injuries are not serious, and a second child, Ivy, aged 7 years, is in Hotel Dieu Hospital with minor injuries.

Surviving are the husband and seven children.

Four Americans Hurt

Niagara Falls, Ont.—As the result of an automobile accident, Sunday, Miss Ann Tuzianski, 43, of Niagara Falls, N.Y., is in a critical condition in the General Hospital. She sustained compound fractures of both legs, and it may be necessary to amputate one. She is also suffering from shock.

The driver and owner of the car, Anthony Witkowski, Niagara Falls, N.Y., is in hospital with a broken collar bone and cuts and bruises. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Witkowski, escaped with bruises and a bad shaking.

Two Are Rescued

Hamilton.—Two - year - old Doris Slater, daughter of Philip and Mrs. Slater, of 197 Wood Street East, fell from the revetment wall at the foot of Wellington Street North late Sunday afternoon and was admitted to the General Hospital suffering from the effects of the plunge. Her condition was reported to be critical.

Losing his balance while fishing from a bridge at the high level bridge Saturday afternoon, David Henderson, of 212 John Street South, aged 12 years, fell into the marsh and had a narrow escape from death. Pulled down by heavy rubber boots which quickly filled with water, the lad was struggling helplesly when Maurice Cowan, of Brampton, plunged into the water to rescue him.

Injuries Prove Fatal

Belleville.—Denis Powell, six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Owan Powell, Chatham Street, succumbed on Sunday afternoon to his injuries in Belleville Hospital after being struck by a car driven by J. V. C. Truslach, postmaster of this city. An inquest was called by Dr. R. W. Tennent, the coroner.

Canadian Crosses Channel in Glider

Native of Toronto First to Make Flight in Motorless Craft

LANDS NEAR CALAIS

Boulogne, Sur Mer, France.—A Canadian airman and opera singer, Lieut. Lissant Beardmore of Toronto, made the first glider flight across the English Channel last Friday. Lieutenant Beardmore took off from Lympne airdrome and landed perfectly at Stinglevert airdrome near Calais. His glider was fitted with a detachable undercarriage, and was towed by a light airplane to which it was attached with 800 feet of cable. The plane rose to a height of 12,000 feet and then the glider was released.

The powerless plane made 60 miles an hour across the channel flying smoothly all the way. The flight was made on the eve of a $5,000 competition for the first glider to cross the channel and back in one day which had been organized by a London newspaper.

Beardmore said on arrival that he had heard the Austrian gliding expert, Kronfeld, was planning to attempt to capture the first prize in the contest, and that he himself had made the flight because he wanted the first cross-channel glider to be a British subject. He was not competing for any prizes, he said.

The glider the Canadian used was designed and constructed by him. He was also the inventor of the mechanical contrivances for towing the glider behind the plane. The towing cable contained a telephone wire to enable him to communicate with the pilot of the plane, while a special trigger device was fitted to enable the glider to be released. "There was nothing in the flight," he said, "except for the intense cold. I have never been so cold in my life, even in Canada."

The flight was regarded as one of the most daring since the channel was first crossed by air.

The towing of gliders by airplanes is not new. It was tried successfully by Capt. Frank Hawks, in the United States some time ago. But this is the first time in history an airplane has been used to start a glider on what is undoubtedly an epochal event. The channel, always noted for its rough waters, is not immune from heavy weather above, and its tricky cross currents were one of the Canadian's greatest handicaps.

Lissant Beardmore was born in Toronto, the son of the late Walter Beardmore, who was a brother of Alfred Beardmore, of 75 St. George St., Toronto. Walter Beardmore died 15 years ago. Lissant lived in Germany, where he studied music, before the war, and then went to England, where he has since lived.

The International Chamber of Commerce

Economist (London): Once again the captains of industry of every country have met in conclave and pointed out to the Governments and the peoples the only road that leads to economic salvation. They have heard once more reiterated, emphasized, underlined, at a moment when all must have learnt much in the hard school of adversity, the immutable truth of economic law, which, briefly stated, is that, in proportion as the free flow of commerce is blocked, the production of the nations will be restricted and the recovery of their prosperity effectively impeded, and the peace of the world jeopardized by the strain of economic warfare.

Bananas Form Staple Crop

Sao Paluo, Brazil.—A recent report from the Agriculture Department reveals the fact that this state has 12,000,000 banana trees capable of yielding 5,000,000 bunches for export trade as well as meeting local consumption demands. Bananas are one of the mainstays of Brazilian diet.

Simcoe, Ont.—Anticipating a crop of 100,000 barrels of apples, the Norfolk Fruit Growers' Association is planning an addition to its present pre-cooling and storage plant, according to James E. Johnson, manager of the association.

Dust Storms Hold Up Prairie Trains

Railwaymen Shovel Through Drifts Two Feet Deep After Placing Barrier Fences

Regina—Some idea of the intensity of the sand and dust storms in the Regina district may be gained from the fact that last week two trains of the Canadian National Railways became stuck in the sand on the Regina-Neidpath line. A passenger train was stuck for one hour and a freight train took two hours to get through. Sand was blown over the right-of-way to a depth of from one to two feet and temporary sand fences were necessary before the crews were able to shovel their way through. Many telephone and telegraph poles went down under the gale.

Tons in Streets of 'Peg

Winnipeg—The two dust storms which centred on Winnipeg Wednesday and Thursday deposited in Greater Winnipeg 6,292 tons of fine silt from farms in North Dakota, Southern and Cetral Saskatchewan.

This method of arriving at these figures was suggested by Prof. J. J. Jackson of the Manitoba Agricultural College. Dust from one square yard of pavement was swept up and weighed. It tipped the scales at exactly two and one-quarter ounces. This was multiplied by 4,840 to give the weight of dust over an acre, and again by 15,961, the acreage of Greater Winnipeg.

Changes in the wind, however, shipped most of it back by the air route to North Dakota, Minnesota and Saskatchewan.

12,427 Post Offices in Canada, is Report

Ottawa.—Canada has 12,427 post offices, an increase of 18 since last year and of 180 since 1922, according to a recent statement made in the House of Commons. Rural mail carriers throughout the country number 4,256.

Argentine To Install Central Heat System

Buenos Aires, Arg.—Central heating, a long felt want in Buenos Aires, the largest city south of the equator, is now being rapidly introduced. Practically every new building being constructed or that has been constructed during the past few years has central heating. Most of the homes are without heat despite the very chilly winters, the residents warming themselves with oil stoves and electric heaters.

Business Reply Postal Rate Goes to 4 Cents

Ottawa—The postal rate on business reply envelopes and business reply postal cards has been raised to four cents effective July 1, according to official notice in this week's Canada Gazette.

Business reply envelopes and post cards are described as a special form of communication sent out for advertising purposes and bearing a stamped self-addressed portion to be returned to the sender. The present rate is three cents.

Soviet Has Air Amazon

The Moscow News recently told its English-language readers that the Red Army had on its rolls the only honest-to-goodness, 100 per cent., woman military pilot. The name of this Amazon of the air is Nadezhda Vladimirova Sumarokova. She has been flying for eight years and is classed as one of the best in the service. So great is her enthusiasm for flying that serious crashes, like one she had in 1925 which nearly put her out of commission for good, haven't made her quit the profession. Madame Sumarokova is a widow, with an only son. Many important posts in civil aviation in the Soviet Union are held by women. At the flying schools in Leningrad and Tula large numbers of the students are girls. A school for gliders at Leningrad is under the command of Madame Obraztsova.

Ford's German Plant Opened in Ceremony

Cologne, Germany. — Henry Ford's new plant, which has been operating for some time, was ceremoniously opened early in June in the presence of local authorities and notables.

Chief Manager Heine, addressing the assembled company, said $3,750,000 had been invested in the new enterprise of which 40 per cent. is in German hands.

Conrad Adenauer, the Lord Mayor, emphasized that German material, German ideas and German labor are used in the production of the motor-cars and German social laws operate in the new plant.

On Time Every Day

Richmond, Va.—Among the graduates of a North Carolina high school is Miss Ellen Booth Washington, who claims the unusual distinction of having gone through school without being absent or tardy. She lives three miles from the school, but has managed to get there and return regardless of the weather. She is planning to enter college next fall, and hopes to continue her perfect attendance record.

WITH THE LONE SCOUTS

Figures recently released from Dominion Headquarters at Ottawa indicate that Scouting is steadily growing in Canada, and especially in this Province.

According to the census there were 52,572 Scouts in the Dominion at the end of 1930, which is an increase of 2,404 over 1929. It is interesting to note that Ontario increased its membership in 1930 by 2,158 Scouts, and of course quite a few of these were Lone Scouts who enrolled during that year.

At the present time there are considerably over 300 Lone Scouts in this Province, and applications for membership are received daily at Lone Scout Headquarters.

Other interesting figures revealed by the report show that, during 1930, 14,658 Proficiency Badges were awarded to Canadian Scouts, showing that much keenness prevails amongst the boys to maintain an efficient standard.

Also one bronze, eighteen silver and six gilt crosses for bravery were awarded to Scouts in this country, as well as nine medals for meritious service in the Scout movement.

Thus it will be seen that of the population of Canada about one person in every two hundred is a Scout, and this is a very wonderful fact, for if everyone was imbued with the Scout Spirit, what a wonderful place Canada would be to live in, wouldn't it?

We publish below two messages which are of interest to every Lone Scout. The first is from His Excellency the Right Hon. the Earl of Bessborough, Chief Scout of Canada, and is as follows:

"On assuming the position of Chief Scout for the Dominion, I am delighted to have the opportunity of sending my greetings to all the officers and members of the Boy Scouts Association of Canada.

"I am eagerly looking forward to having many occasions, during my term of office, of becoming acquainted both with Canadian Scouts and Canadian Scouting and of observing their progress. It is most gratifying to me, as Chief Scout, to know that E. W. Beatty has consented to undertake the important duties of President of the Association.

"With all my heart I wish the new President and the Boy Scouts of Canada every possible success."

The second message is from Mr. E. W. Beatty, K.C., who is President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and also President of the Boy Scouts Association. He says:

"It is gratifying to think that so fine a movement as that of the Boy Scouts has captured the imagination of the youth of the world and become so truly international. For Canada it is peculiarly fitted, as the campcraft which it teaches is so well suited to our geographical conditions. Nothing could be better than its gospel of self-reliance, self-respect, unselfishness, and the pledge to help others whatever it may cost; moreover, it appeals to the boy, as he gets a lot of fun out of this process of developing the spirit of true sportsmanship. The qualities inculcated are the qualities of the good citizen and one is not surprised that another name for a good citizen is 'a good Scout'."

Space will not permit us this week to continue our "Camp Hints" very fully, but we will content ourselves with reminding all Lone Scout Campers that "A Scout's duty is to be useful and to help others."

Here are a few of the things which last year's Boy Scout Campers did as their "Good Turns": Cut and burned all weeds on camp property, repaired nearby road, cleaned refuse from nearby field, put up signs at dangerous places on road, built protecting fence around plot of young trees, built a stairway leading to beach, built a fireplace for neighboring campers, helped newly arrived cottagers to get settled, took neighbors' mail to and from post office, erected small bridge for farmer, made rustic seats for a farmer, helped farmer dip sheep, assisted short-handed farmer with chores and crops, found lost cattle, made winter woodpile for farmer who loaned camp site, helped at country church garden party, cut weeds and tidied up around country church, made rustic seats for country churchyard, made seats near a bus stop, put out bush fires, guarded timber limits against fire, gathered firewood for future campers.

Lonies, when in camp don't forget your good turns. —"Lone E."

Alchemist MSS. in Greek Found in German Town

Koenigsberg, Germany.—A valuable Greek alchemist manuscript has been discovered here by Dr. Gunther Goldschmidt, librarian of Koenigsberg University, who has been intrusted by the Union Academique Internationale of Brussels with the cataloging of Greek alchemist literature in Central Europe.

Dr. Goldschmidt found the manuscript in an obscure corner of the ancient library where it had lain forgotten for a century. It had been composed by Friedrich Reinhold Dietz, a Koenigsberg physician who died in 1836. Dietz compiled it from notices in Munich and Venice, with the assistance of notes from manuscripts in Paris and Florence.

Alchemist lore of ancient Egypt, taken over by the Greeks, spread over Western Europe at a time when most medieval courts were deeply interested in the "philosopher's stone" and other gold making processes.

The new discovery adds materially to the knowledge of ancient alchemy, which, Dr. Goldschmidt declared, has left its impression on many sciences, from medicine and astronomy to jurisprudence.

Britain's Small Savings Show Large Increase

London—Britain is thriftier than ever. Despite the depression, $250,000,000 worth of postoffice saving certificates were bought in the last financial year, it was reported recently. This figure was $50,000,000 higher than in the fiscal year of 1929-30.

Rare Bison Born in Berlin

The birth in the Berlin Zoo of an aurochs calf raises the total number of these animals in Europe to fifty-one. The aurochs, or European bison, was almost exterminated during and immediately following the war, but a few were rescued. The zoo's calf, a heifer, was given a hornless Swiss cow as foster mother.

KRAFT CHEESE

Made in Canada

For dinner to-night, serve Macaroni and cheese, baked golden brown . . . for to-morrow's luncheon, give the children toast covered with tasty, bubbling cheese.

But be sure you use Kraft cheese, for Kraft, being fully matured, is readily digestible and, because it is exceptionally rich in butter fat, it is a particularly nourishing food.

Owl Laffs

Miss Ima Hardnut, of Brushville, has returned the lavallier her sweetie gave her because it made a green spot on her wishbone.

Teacher—"Robert, here is an example in subtraction. Seven boys went down to the creek to swim, but two of them had been told not to go in the water. Now, can you inform me how many went in?"

Robert—"Yes'm; seven."

If you want to find out how valuable you are about an institution, lay off a week and see how easy it is to fill your place. This is a a good cure for a person who has allowed his conceit to assume undue proportions. Flattery often leaves a pleasant feeling even though you know it is flattery. There ought to be a law against travel bureaus sending their alluring summer trip folders to busy folks. They disrupt the entire day's work. It is now claimed that no man can really love until he is 60. A lot of people are lying about their age if this is true. The radio inventor who will invent a radio which will tune out programs filled with boring advertising broadcasts, will make a fortune. An optimist is a guy who thinks his wife has quit cigarettes when he finds cigar butts around the house. A Scottish lassie, who applied for a job as an artist's model, was told to come down again the next day and to bring along a pair of tights. She brought her father and mother.

Gerald—"Hello, aren't you a stranger around here?"

Imogene—"Yes, to you!"

Any store, any business, that lets a gang of loafers hang around it, no matter how fine and charming they may be personally, is sure to fail. These hangers-on won't buy much. But they will keep real customers out of a place.

Mrs. Pemberton—"It is said that the young girls to-day are abandoning all restrictions."

Mr. Pemberton—"Well, I'd better not catch Mary Katherine without hers on."

Simpson—"Hallerston is the most brutally frank business man in town."

Lewis—"How so?"

Simpson—"When he remits in payment he writes: 'You have already found the enclosed cheque'."

It's Up to the Girls

When skirts were short, some funny things
Both fat and thin were viewed;
We hope those props will be improved
Ere short skirts are renewed.

Father (to son who is leaving on summer vacation)—"Don't let me hear any bad reports about you."

Son—"I'll try, Dad, but you know how these things leak out."

Wedlock often develops into a deadlock. Bathing beauties are among the bare necessities of life. The late husband catches the early morning lecture. The turning point in a man's life often is when he begins turning his pay envelope over to his wife. Men have only themselves to blame. Women buy nearly everything on their account. Some wives seem to think their husbands are made to order. A girl may allow herself to be led to the altar, but that's when the leading ends. Dashing young ladies often lead fast lives. Even in these swift modern times occasionally a girl may be found who is so slow that it takes her thirty years to reach the age of nineteen.

Paul—"Are you going to kiss me good-night?"

Eve—"Mercy, No! That's the last thing I'll do."

Paul—"All right, then, what'll we do first?"

It's terrible to be poor and old, but it isn't very much better to be old and rich, either.

The Sun's Munificence

Boundingly up through Night's wall dense and dark,
Embattled crags and clouds, outbroke the Sun
Above the conscious earth, and one by one
Her heights and depths absorbed to the last spark
His fluid glory, from the far fine ridge
Of mountain-granite which, transformed to gold,
Laughed first the thanks back, to the vale's dusk fold
On fold of vapor-swathing, like a bridge
Shattered beneath some giant's stamp. Night wist
Her work done and betook herself in mist
To marsh and hollow, there to bide her time
Blindly in acquiescence. Everywhere
Did earth acknowledge Sun's embrace sublime,
Thrilling her to the hearth of things: since there
No ore ran liquid, no spar branched anew,
No arrowy crystal gleamed, but straightway grew
Glad through the inrush—glad nor more nor less
Than, 'neath his gaze, forest and wilderness,
Hill, dale, land, sea, the whole vast stretch and spread,
The universal world of creatures bred
By Sun's munificence, alike gave praise.

—Robert Browning, in Poems.

Paris Suburbs Grow

Paris—Paris suburbs are growing rapidly, the recent census shows, while the city itself expands more slowly. The explanation lies in the housing problem and in suburban communications.

In 1926 the census showed an increase of 220,000 inhabitants in the suburban districts of the Department of the Seine, while the population of Paris itself decreased by 27,000. Since then Paris has annexed the outer zone, where the old fortifications stood, with a population of 40,000, and apartment buildings have been built within the city limits accommodating 39,000.

Notwithstanding thir increase, the total gain in the 1931 census was 20,000 for the city, while the population of the Seine Department was augmented by 280,000. Migration of the Paris population to better quarters in the suburbs has been made possible by improved transit facilities.

A Sense of Progress

I was dining once in London, quite informally, with a great electrical engineer, a very trim maid in attendance. At the table near my host's right hand was a small block of white marble and a tiny silver mallet. When he wanted the maid, he struck the marble a resounding blow.

I was somewhat amused, and asked him if he had ever heard of a push-button for the same purpose.

"My boy, I have," was his reply, "but I get enough of electrical devices in the city; I don't want a single one of them in my own home. I've not come yet to using gas; I prefer candles; they are not so likely to get out of order. I hate this pushing a dimple and waiting for something to happen. When I make a noise myself I begin to feel a sense of progress; that's what we stand for in this country,"—with a knowing wink, — progress."—A. Edward Newton, in "A Magnificent Farce."

For Empire Marksmen

The handsome silver cup, shown above, was sent to Lt. Col. R. J. Birdwhistle, secretary of the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association, Ottawa, by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, to be shot for at the famous meeting at Bisley, England, by teams from various parts of the British Empire, at long ranges. It is 30 inches high, including the triple wooden mounting which forms the base. The figure of a rifleman in the prone position is reproduced on the base of the cup, coinciding with the front and rear faces of the pedestal.

Egypt Yields Secrets Of Animal God Cults

The Crocodile of a Sanctuary Recently Dug Up Was One of Many Creatures the Ancients Held Sacred

New knowledge of an ancient Egyptian cult will result, it is believed, from the recent discovery of the first complete sanctuary, with all annexes, of the crocodile god Seknebtunis. This sanctuary, composed of a long processional way, a temple and priests' dwellings within a walled enclosure, has been unearthed by an Italian archaeological mission in the Fayum district. Limestone reliefs in a vestibule at one end of the way show Seknebtunis in several aspects, as well as a procession bearing the sacred crocodile on a litter.

Much has still to be learned of the many cults of the ancient Egyptians, though it is known that hundreds of them were recognized by theologians even in late dynastic times when animals, beasts, birds, fishes and reptiles were worshiped. The Egyptians extended their veneration to human beings, to the great powers of nature, and to the large numbers of beings with which they peopled the heavens, the air, the earth, the sky, the sun, the moon, the stars and the water. These animals were not venerated in dynastic times as animals, but as the abodes of gods.

The cults had their origin in the precarious life of primitive man when the physical conditions of Egypt were similar to those in certain parts of Central Africa to-day. The land was covered with forests and the ground obscured by dense undergrowth. Great numbers of beasts roamed about the forests; huge serpents of various species, including hosts of deadly reptiles, lived in the undergrowth, and the river was filled with great crocodiles such as may be seen even to-day in the Blue Nile. When the canals dried up, the crocodiles wandered about the field at will and ate whatever came their way. When man captured them he tamed them, fed them honey, put crystal and gold earrings into their ears, and bracelets on their forepaws. After death he embalmed their bodies and buried them in vaults.

Worship Because of Fear

Facts now available indicate that primitive man worshiped animals because he feared them. They possessed, he thought, greater strength, power and cunning than his own; they were endowed with some quality which enabled them to do him harm and to cause his death. He regarded them as the personification of the powers of evil and of death, and came to believe that he might court their good-will by offerings and prayers, for their spirits must be appeased.

The Egyptians, having developed the idea that individual animals were the abodes of gods, believed that certain ideas were incarnate in them. They were beloved by him and treated with reverence and care. Apartments were set aside for them in the temples throughout the country; whole cities were dedicated to them. Sacred animals were washed in hot baths, their bodies annointed and perfumed. Rich beds were provided for them to lie upon and the greatest care was exercised to give them the most comfort.

The Fear of the Serpent

The abject fear of the Egyptians for the serpent seems to have been constant in all generations and many prayers were said to deliver the human dead from the "Serpents which are in the Underworld, which lie upon the bodies of men and women and consume their blood." The Egyptian so coveted the power of the serpent that he learned those prayers which were most certain to bring him its powers after death, when his soul wandered about the earth: "I am the serpent Sata whose years are many. I die and I am born again each day. I am the serpent Sata which dwelleth in the uttermost parts of the earth. I die and I am born again, and I renew myself, and I grow young each day."

At the period when the serpent was being worshiped in Lower Egypt the vulture was the chief object of adoration in Upper Egypt. So powerful were these two centres of worship that the kings gave themselves the title, "Lord of the Shrines of the Vulture and Uraeus," to proclaim their sovereignty. Other wild animals which were worshiped by the Egyptians were the lion, the lynx and the hippopotamus. Not much is known of the cult of the fish, but several species were venerated.

The beetle or scarabaeus became the symbol of the god of creation and resurrection. It was often placed in tombs because it was thought to give potential life to the dead body upon which it was placed, provided the proper words of power were first said over it or written upon it. The idea of life appears to have been associated with the scarab from time immemorial in Egypt, for to this day, the insect is dried, pounded, mixed with water, and then drunk by the women, who believed it to be an unfailing specific for the production of large families.

One of the oldest animal cults was that of the Apis or Bull which was worshiped throughout the Nile Valley. His birth was commemorated by an annual festival which lasted seven days, and during this period no man was ever killed even by a crocodile. The bull was turned loose in the courtyard of the sanctuary on certain days to be exhibited to the worshipers. They fed him cakes made of the finest wheat flour mixed with honey; boiled or roasted geese, and live birds of certain kinds.

The vulture, the hawk, the heron, the ibis and the bennu, among the birds, were universally venerated throughout Egypt. Some of them were regarded as spirits of the dawn which, having sung hymns of praise while the sun was rising, turned into apes.

There were many other gods for the Egyptian, which Egypt's conquerors adopted in time, but they never were fully assimilated by them. The Assyrians and Babylonians never made them their own, and the Greeks scoffed not a little at such materialism, though they themselves used animals as symbols of their gods and goddesses.

To be happy is to say little and feel much. "When we were married I thought you were a brave man." "So did all my friends."

DEPRESSION

"I'm a different woman"

"Two years ago I began to get depressed, and everything was too much trouble for me. I was a misery to myself and everyone around me. I was advised to take Glauber Salts by my friends who said it was the same as Kruschen but it did me no good, so at last my husband got me a bottle of Kruschen and no one would realise the different woman I am. I have been taking Kruschen now constantly for two years. My daughter also would not be without it. I have got my neighbour to take Kruschen as well and she has found its worth as she feels a different woman."

—(Mrs. G. A. K.)

The commonest cause of depression is partial constipation—an insidious complaint because the sufferer is seldom aware of it. It means the gradual accumulation of body poisons which dull the mind, damp the spirits, sap the nervous strength and lower the whole vitality.

Kruschen Salts make constipation impossible. Therefore, if you keep to Kruschen you need never know the meaning of melancholy; never feel "nervy," or depressed.

MANITOBA LETTER

Empire, June 11th, 1931.

Dear Editor:

We have been back on the farm a month. After we came back it turned in very cold. We thought we had come back too soon, but that week there was a snow storm in Winnipeg, that held up the street cars, so we thought we had done the best thing after all.

It sure is a great change coming to the country after being in the city five months.

Seeding is finished, but no rain, excepting a little that scarcely dampened the ground. The grain sown on summer fallow is making a little progress, after a very hard frost the end of May.

I never saw the farmer so discouraged; cattle are low, also pigs; butter 15c lb.; eggs 8c dozen. The pasture is very poor.

Mrs. Rebecca Madill celebrated her eighty-second birthday—the 26th May; very smart, did all her own work all winter. In the evening many of her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren came to offer good wishes and to hope she will be spared to celebrate next year. One of her very first neighbours came and spent the day with her, Mrs. Boyd, eighty-six years of age, and very smart. The two families were amongst the first settlers here, over fifty years ago.

A man by the name of Casbrick was coming down the Huns Valley hill yesterday morning; his horses ran away, the breast strap broke, and he was thrown off the waggon and broke his neck; killed instantly. His Father was killed in the same way, a few years ago, only it was a buggy he was thrown out of instead of a wagon. The man killed yesterday leaves a wife and large family.

I did not finish telling you about our trip last summer. We left Eldersley the 29th July and came to Melfort. Our son's family met us there from Birch Hills and we enjoyed a picnic together at the touring camp. In the afternoon we took R-6 back to Watson, and then on the same route to Dafoe; we stayed there all night. If the crops are the same there this year as they were last, I think there will be some vacated farms. The next day we went as far as Raymore on the same route, then turned west to Semaris to visit Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Grice. Made a couple of days' visit—then struck for home. Starting from Raymore. A car from Guelph, Ont., was getting a supply of gas. A woman attended the filling station there. She says Oh a car from dear old Ontario. The car sure carried quite a family—and were on their way to the coast. Raymore is on No. 6 and No. [illegible] 15 until we 15 highway. [illegible] came to 9, we found it a good road, but farming seemed to be carried on very half-heartedly. We kept 9 until we came to Whitewood on 1. We had to cross the Quepelle valley and some road, going down was so steep, you almost felt the car would take a summersault. We were well repaid when we arrived at the bottom. I thought of pictures I had seen of Switzerland. There were a number of farms in the valley—and going up the other side, was much easier, the road wound around a good many places. About half way up was a camping place. A spring of water coming out of the hillside; just an ideal place to lunch. It certainly was lovely scenery. But if any Ontario folk were thinking of touring west from Winnipeg, keep on 7R until Regina is reached—then 6R to Melfort. The Quepelle is more easily crossed on 6. Then from Melfort on 3R to Prince Albert. a very enjoyable outing. From Whitewood, we enjoyed such beautiful weather all the time we were away.

OBITUARY

Charles W. McClintock

Last Friday, June 19th, Charles William McClintock passed away at Brampton, at the age of 63 years. He was the youngest son of the late William McClintock, who came from Fermanagh, Ireland, about 1850, and who kept the toll-gate at the north end of Streetsville for several years until it was finally abolished. Charles McClintock was a well-read man and could converse intelligently on many subjects. In his younger days he was a good worker, being a miller by trade.

The funeral took place Sunday afternoon from the residence of his nephew, William S. McClintock. Service was held at Trinity Anglican Church by Rev. R. J. W. Perry, and interment followed in Streetsville Cemetery.

Deceased is survived by two brothers, George, Streetsville, and James H., of Toronto; also two sisters, Mrs. S. Gartley, and Mrs. H. K[illegible]

Moved by R. S. Whaley, seconded by Geo. Bonham, that this Council do now adjourn till Saturday, July 4th, at 10 a.m.

J. H. PINCHIN, Clerk.

Tonight is the family re-union. It has been a weekly event ever since the young folk scattered to various towns, each to make his or her own way in the world.

It started when Dick left to work in a neighboring city. Dick was full of enthusiasm, but apt to be just a little bit wild. So Dad started the habit of calling him once a week just to keep him under the parental influence.

Then Helen was married and moved away, and mother must needs make weekly voice visits with her.

And now Betty has taken a position in another town. Her voice comes home each week too.

Dad and mother gather all the news and pass it on to the others. It keeps the family together — and the cost of the three evening calls is less than a dollar.

Evening rates on "Anyone" (station-to-station) calls begin at 7 p.m. (local time). Just give "Long Distance" the number you want — it speeds up the service. If you don't know the distant number, "Information" will look it up for you.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY OF CANADA

Never.. pass a car on a hill... or curve

Experienced drivers of motor cars have learned that there is one rule of the road which cannot be violated without danger to life and limb . . . these seasoned drivers always keep in line when the road ahead is obscured.

Hill tops and curves are blind spots on the highway. You can't see what is coming toward you . . . and there's almost always sure to be another car coming around the curve or over the hill. The one safe rule is to stay on your side of the road . . . the right side.

Every time you take a chance that the road ahead may be clear, you jeopardize your own safety and the approaching motorist may be made an innocent victim of your carelessness . . . surely a heavy price to pay in conscience and cash.

After all you can observe the "Hill and Curve rule" for a whole season without losing as much as sixty minutes' time all told . . . Why not?

Masons Attend Divine Service

River Park Lodge, No. 356, A.F. & A.M., Streetsville, and visiting brethren from Toronto and rural lodges, to the number of 100, met at the lodge room in Streetsville, on Sunday afternoon and motored to Eden United Church, where they attended divine service. They were welcomed to the church by the minister, R. W. Bro. Rev. Geo. H. Purchase, B.A., who conducted the service and preached a splendid sermon from the text taken from I Kings 7: 21-22. He was assisted by Rev. R. J. W. Perry, Rector of Trinity Church, Streetsville.

The choir rendered great assistance in the service of song and there was also a quartette by members of the choir.

The pulpit was nicely decorated with flowers and those present enjoyed the service all through.

Eden is the home church of Wor. Bro. E. L. H. Waite, Wor. Master of the Lodge, and it was through his invitation that the Masons were present, this being the first time they attended such a service in this church.

After service, the brethren returned to the lodge room and passed a vote of thanks to the minister, the management and the choir.

MRS. H. WATSON, Teacher

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lawson, Toronto, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Caves on Sunday. Mr. Lawson is a brother of Mrs. Caves.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Summer and family of Kitchener; Mr. Thomas Summer and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McCombe of Mimico visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Caves this week. Mr. Summer is now 96 years of age and is enjoying good health.

Mr. Summer came to Canada when 32 years of age. He was first employed on a farm at Islington, receiving $5.00 a month, later going into the butcher business. He remembers taking loads of spring lamb to St. Lawrence Market, Toronto, and selling it at three cents per pound for front quarters and five cents for hind quarters. Wheat then sold for 65c to 75c bushel, butter 12½c lb. and eggs at 9 and 10c a doz. He was seven weeks crossing the ocean. He says there used to be a Fall Fair held at Islington, the grounds for the purpose being given by one William Montgomery. That was before the C.N.E. started. He dug all the postholes for the fence around the grounds, and received only $1.50 a day for his work.

ROMAN CATHOLIC GARDEN PARTY

There was a good crowd at the R.C. garden party in the village on Saturday evening and the church people made a tidy sum of money. Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, acted as chairman and a very entertaining program was given. There were plenty of attractions and all enjoyed the evening immensely. In the raffle, Ralph McGregor of Niagara Falls and little Harold Gill of Brampton won blankets, while Mrs. Fred Noble won a $5.00 gold piece with a lucky ticket.

Claude Wade's orchestra furnished music for the dancing, which was enjoyed by a large number.

PRESENTATION

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wick Atkinson on Friday last when the choir of the United Church met to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Omar Turney and to extend to them best wishes in their married life. After a brief choir practice games were played and a beautiful solo was rendered by Mrs. Harry Burton, Mr. Len Pope, President of the choir, called on Mr. and Mrs. Turney to a central seat when he on behalf of the choir read the following:

There is an old saying which goes, "Business and Pleasure do not mix", but it is the object of this gathering to-night to show how well the two can be combined and now choir practice is over the real pleasure of the evening is here.

For some years past the church and village life of our community has been enriched by the kindly, christian influence of one of our fellow choir members and so it was a great delight to us to learn that our good friend, Omar, was forsaking the ranks of the bachelors to join the benedicts and are rejoicing with him on his recent marriage.

It is an honor and a privilege to welcome Mrs. Turney Jr., to our midst and we must heartily congratulate her on securing for a partner in life, one whose sterling qualities have endeared himself to all.

Omar, too, is to be congratulated on his good fortune in the choice of a life partner and for both Mr. and Mrs. O. Turney our wish is that they may long be spared to enjoy a happy married life and that we may be the richer for their friendship for many years to come.

It is our wish on this occasion to show in some tangible way our esteem and pleasure, so on behalf of Streetsville United Church Choir, we would ask Mrs. Turney to accept this silver flower vase as a token of our good will and best wishes.

Signed on behalf of the choir,

LEONARD POPE, President
EDNA FALCONER, Secretary
GEO. H. PURCHASE, Minister

Mr. and Mrs. Turney each thanked all for their kind thoughts and wished to state that they were ever ready to serve the church and choir to the best of their ability. Mr. Pope invited Mrs. Turney to become a member of the choir which she gladly accepted.

A dainty lunch was served, the pleasant and profitable evening was concluded by all joining in singing "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot."

The Community Club Held Their Meeting at the Home of Mrs. H. Beaty on a Beautiful June Day

Sunniest month of the fruitful year,
Why, O why are thy feet so fleet.

Poets have sung of the beauties of June and we have all gazed on the beauties that so soon fade away.

William Cullen Bryant expressed a wish that his death might occur in June, which was singularly fulfilled, by his death occuring on the 12th of June. He spoke thus:

I gaze upon the glorious sky,
And the green mountains wind
And thought that when I come to lie
At rest within the ground
T'were pleasent that in flowery June,
When brooks sent up a cheerful tune,
And graves a cheerful sound,
The sexton's hand my grave to make,
The rich green mountain turf should brake.

The poet Lowell says:

What is so rare as a day in June?
'Tis easy then for the heart to be true,
As the grass to be green or the sky to be blue,
'Tis the natural way of living.

The eyes of lady members of the club who motored to Mrs. Beattie's on that perfect day in June were not closed to the beauties of nature. The new mown hay smelt delicious and although they all knew that more work was being added to their already busy lives, yet they will face it with grim determination as they do every task that is set before them.

So they all arrived at the farm house, children, babes in arms, middle aged and old. The meeting opened with the opening song and while the members planned for the picnic, which was to take place the same week the children played and enjoyed themselves as only children can. After the business part of the meeting was over a contest was held, and won by Mrs. Mary Leslie, 8th line, Trafalgar. Tables were set under the trees for the older ones, and on the spacious verandah for the children, the verandah almost enclosed with roses. It was a happy day for the little ones, who enjoyed it to the full. Soon the setting sun, which was disappearing amidst a glow of golden glory warned the mothers to gather their little ones home and so the happy day for them and all of us present came to an end, but it will never fade from memory's glowing canvas.

Electrical Storm Does Much Damage

Bursting into flame after it had been struck by lightning during Thursday nights storm a small two story barn on the property of Earl Harper, 2nd. line, Toronto Township, was completely destroyed togetherwith two cars and a truck. A quantity of commercial fertilizer, carpenter's tools and furniture was also burned, bringing a total loss of $2500, with little insurance. The bolt of lightning narrowly missed the house, a few yards away, where the family were at their meal. Port Credit fire brigade were called but the blaze was beyond control when they arrived.

Three valuable horses, owned by Wm. Pallett of Burnhamthorpe, were killed by the lightning on Thursday night last as they stood in the shelter of a large tree in the pasture field. The bolt struck the top of the tree, running down the trunk and making contact with the animals packed closely together at the bottom. The horses are valued at $500.

BRAMPTON

Stories of personal experiences in the Regina district during the past few weeks were received by Mrs. W. McClure, secretary of the County Women's Institute, from members of her family residing there.

Mrs. D. M. McClinton, Yellowgrass, sister of Mrs. McClure, stated that they have had their crops blown out three times this spring and their experience is a continuous torture of dust storms and drouth. They are moving their stock this week 70 miles to the east to get water, and are paying 75 cents per tank for water at Yellowgrass.

Chickens do not know by experience the taste of a green leaf, and have been raised entirely on dry feed. This is the first crop failure Mr. and Mrs. McClinton ever knew. They have had seed and feed, while every other farmer in the district is buying both. Assistance in the shape of seed, feed and gas for transportation purposes is being supplied by municipalities. Money in amounts over $50 is not to be obtained at the banks. It was decided not to employ a teacher in Mr. McClinton's section as the community feels it cannot afford the expense.

Another sister, Mrs. W. J. Lennox, Colfax, also in the Regina district, stated in her letter that the only green thing to be seen around there is the caragon hedge. Potatoes and onions are up, but are at a standstill. They are keeping a cow but feeding nothing but dry feed.

A neice Miss Olive Shaw, teacher in southern Saskatchewan, says that in her section 75 per cent. of the people are receiving municipal or Government aid. All through that district teachers' salaries have been cut 20 per cent., and Miss Shaw does not know whether her trustees will continue to spend money on a teacher or not.

The Rev. J. H. Purchase preached at Sandhill appointment, Mono Road charge, last Sunday evening. The sermon in the morning was preached by the Rev. C. S. Jones of Cooksville. This was Sandhill's Anniversary Day. The Church at this point was built during the pastorate of the late Rev. A. B. Hames, one time pastor at Streetsville.

Rev. Robt. Lundy is confined to his bed with a slight indisposition, he expects to be about in a few days.

Miss Gertrude Workman is spending a couple of weeks with her sister, Mrs. Ezard, at Cooksville.

Little Billy Cook met with a slight accident last Saturday he is improving.

Rev. Geo. H. Purchase and Mrs. Purchase wish to thank the many friends for their kind and thoughtful consideration extended to the family during Mrs. Purchases long illness and retarded recovery.

COMMUNITY CLUB

Community Picnic

Throug the kindness of Mr. Tom Steen, who allowed the Community Club to hold their annual picnic in his grove, which is an ideal spot, with the River Credit winding its way through the grove, it enabled young and old an afternoon of enjoyment. Soon the bathers were sporting in the river, which owing to the recent heavy rain, looked like the Red Sea, which seemed to add to its beauty. Moving up to another part of the grounds the races began, in which every one joined. Then a bounteous supper was served, with ice cream for every one. The afternoon was marred by an accident which happened to the young son of Mrs. W. Cooke, who while playing with horse shoes received a cut on his head.

St. John's Anglican Church, Dixie, will hold a garden party on Cooksville Fair Grounds on Wednesday, July 29th.

Mrs. Lindsay, Toronto, with her two daughters, Mrs. Gibson and Mrs. Morrison, visited with Mrs. Douglas Lindsay on Friday. Mrs. Gibson has returned from Halifax.

During the thunderstorm last Thursday the Streetsville Creamery was struck by lightning, but escaped serious damage, as only a few bricks were knocked off the top of one wall.

Mrs. William Watkins passed away at her home at Malton on Sunday at the age of 68 years and was buried at Weston. She was born in Ireland and was formerly a school teacher.

The Women's Institute of Meadowvale held a very successful garden party Friday night. The program was furnished by the Melody Boys of Hamilton and Mrs. Cecil Corkett of Brampton.

Mr. McArthur of Sarnia, visited his brother, Mr. C. P. McArthur, principal of Streetsville High School, over the week-end.

Mr. Emanuel Vonder Mull of Switzerland and Miss Elizabeth Arnold were married in the Lorne Park Anglican Church on June 24th by Rev. A. M. Durnford.

Hon. Tom Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, will perform the opening ceremonies at the garden party to be held by the Lakeview United Church, on the minister's grounds at Dixie, on Saturday, July 4th.

Miss Lilian Underwood, B. A., accompanied by her two sisters and brother, arrived home on Friday from their extended trip into the province of Quebec.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Downs of Milton announce the engagement of their daughter, Jessie Anderson, to Mr. Ross Carmen Mark, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Mark of Milton, the marriage to take place in July.

Frank Sheppard, an immigrant boy of 17 years, was drowned in the Humber River Sunday afternoon. He was employed with Albert Woodill, sixth line, east of Brampton.

Broke Arm Cranking Car

James Moran, younger son of Deputy Reeve D. W. Moran and Mrs. Moran, Churchville, broke his right arm at the wrist while cranking his car. Following an X-Ray, he received treatment from Dr. Colin Heggie.

Mrs. H. F. Staly and Mr. Bert Street received word on Monday of the death of their brother John Street which occurred in Winnipeg on Wednesday June 24th, after a lingering illness. Mr. Street went west some 50 years ago and has made his home in Winnipeg ever since.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith and son, Mr. and Mrs. Dagleish, sons and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. E. Winson and daughters, Mr. Greenwood, Mr. McKay, Miss M. O'Nile, Miss McKay, Mr. J. Fox and Mr. A. Boots of Toronto visited their mother and grandmother, Mrs. Winson, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Tracy, this week-end.

Rev. H. V. Thompson, Rector of St. Peter's, Erindale, was presented with a gold piece and a box of stationery by the teachers and pupils of Erindale Public School last week, as a token of respect. Mr. Thompson has often visited the school during the quarter of a century in which he has been rector there and when addressing the pupils always gave them good advice and has endeared himself to both old and young, who regret very much to hear of his intended departure in the near future.

Unemployment Causes Riots In Canadian Cities

Militia Called into Action—Police and Idle Men and Women Clash

Winnipeg, June 26.—Fourteen policemen are in hospital following a violent riot of unemployed men and women this afternoon outside the hotel where Senator Gideon Robertson, Dominion Minister of Labor, was conferring with city relief officials. Stones and sticks were thrown, blocks of cement tossed about and policemen's billies were turned upon an officer during the fray.

More than 1,000 gathered in a milling mob, aroused by the frantic screams of a woman who sought to have the crowd force its way into the building after jobless delegates had been refused entry. One hundred policemen were called into action to quell the rage of the mob, and for a time guerilla warfare, with rocks and cement blocks as missiles, was waged in the streets.

Seven men were arrested before the crowd had been dispersed, among them one alleged to have struck Constable John Brune with his own night stick when he was caught in a swirling eddy of bodies as the crowd moved along. Most seriously hurt of the policemen, Brune is believed to have suffered a fractured skull as well as a broken arm.

The howling jobless claiming entry to the hotel were sent on the run into adjoining streets when policemen rolled down upon the rioters with swinging billies. But a group of the jobless sought refuge behind the corner of a building two blocks down the street and showered with missiles the constables who sought to dislodge them.

Inspector R. McDonald, police veteran, was struck on the head by a five-pound rock while giving chase to the fleeing rioters. Momentarily stunned, he was carried away in a police sidecar. Within 15 minutes after the first disturbance occurred, the crowd had vanished but the nearby streets were strewn with bricks, stones, broken fences and numerous impediments. A child, shouldered by a running rioter, was slightly injured.

Several of the rioters got on the railway tracks near the immigration hall and from a vantage ground commenced hurling rocks at the policemen.

Several of those who got hit by policemen's billies were not the ones who were actually engaged in throwing stones but they prevented the officers from reaching the real offenders.

A machine-gun was also sent, but Chief Newton, who was in command there, ordered that it not be shown until the situation got beyond control.

Winsor, Ont., June 26.—One policeman was badly beaten, three men were arrested, and other were being sought following a riot staged by Communists at a meeting of the Trades and Labor Council. The meeting was addressed by A. A. Heaps, Labor M.P. for Winnipeg North.

Police and soldiers were pressed into service in dispersing the crowd of 700 which swarmed from the building where the meeting was held into the street.

Sergeant Joseph Pero of the city police force was badly beaten as he attempted to break up the mob. He was rescued when constables came to his aid.

Extra police, in addition to those detailed to attend the meeting, were called out when the crowd became out of hand. The Essex Scottish Regiment, homeward bound after a parade, was pressed into service and aided in breaking up the crowd.

Heavy rain, which started to fall as the police began to gain control, hastened the dispersal of the mob.

The trouble started when a group of Communists attempted heckling just after the close of the address by Mr. Heaps. The police began to eject them and strenuous opposition was presented. Police reserves were called, and soon more than 40 policemen were engaged in the turmoil.

Harry Binder, the ringleader, got outside the building, and mounting the steps leading to the Collegiate, began a fiery harangue. Ald. George Bennett, chairman of the meeting, and Mr. Heaps, urged the crowd to disperse quietly, but their voices were drowned in the tumult.

Wielding their clubs, the police, augmented by the soldiers and others commandeered into service, drove the crowd backward. The rioters fled after showering the police with gravel and stones from a nearby tennis court. They, however, did not escape being manhandled to a considerable extent.

Man in Rowboat Plunges Over Horseshoe Falls

Victim of Rum Gang Feud, is Police Theory—Partly Sawn Off Oar Recovered

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 28.—Standing upright in a rowboat, wildly waving his hands, an unknown man disappeared to his death over the Horseshoe Falls this morning while police and firemen watched, unable to assist, and unaware that they were witnessing the last act in what is believed to have been a gangster murder.

William "Red" Hill, riverman, and his son, searching for the body, found one of the oars, with the blade snapped off clean.

There were plain indications that the shaft had been partly sawed through, in such a way that it would brak off when the rower started to pull hard against the current.

The police believe that the unknown victim was a rum-runner who was blamed by other rum-runners a few days ago for tipping off United States coastguards. The man is said to have come from Detroit.

When the oar snapped, the victim stood up in his boat and waved frantically as the current swept him towards the crest of the Horseshoe. A call brought the police and firemen, with ropes and ladders, but they arrived just in time to see the boat plunge over the Falls. The boat passed 500 feet out from Goat Island, too far out for the first observers to cast a rope.

It is admitted that there were heavy shipments of liquor across the upper river during the night.

Smugglers who came from a distance are less familiar with the river, and it is suggested that the man probably would have been able to guide his disabled craft into shore eddies, even with his hands, had he known the currents.

Discovery this evening of the side of a green "clinger" boat and an oar, partly sawn through, gave the sinister twist to the tragedy and suggested that the victim died because of spite.

Watchers on shore who witnessed the tragedy this morning assumed that it was a power boat, but it is now believed to have been a rowboat.

Dynamite Blast Kills Four

More Than 150 Men Sent To Battle Algoma Blaze

Sault Ste. Marie, June 26.—Sixty-five men left the Soo overnight on the steamer Manitou, making a special trip to join the 15 men from Michipicoten already at the scene of the bush fire, and 20 men were flown up from the Soo in transportation planes.

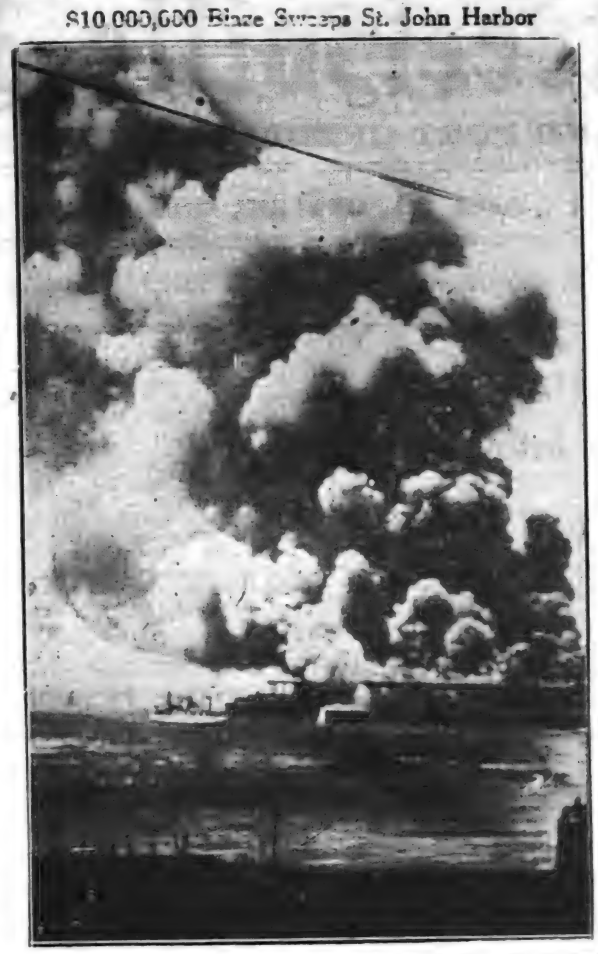
A gang of men from the mines at Wawa has been sent in and the A. C. R. ran a train to Sand Lake, an hour's flight from the fire, with 50 men, supplies and equipment. Two large planes will be operated from Sand Lake.

A plane from Sand Lake flew over the fire area in an endeavor to take pictures which could be used as a check-up on the extent of the blaze, but visibility was poor. The fire is burning in very rough country in a stand of pulpwood in which there are innumerable windfalls, providing splendid fuel.

Shifting winds and the lack of rain are given as the cause of the spread of the fire.

British Newspapers Increase Circulation

London. — Newspaper circulations are increasing generally in Britain despite trade depresion, it was revealed at the annual conference of the Booksellers and Stationers here. Morntional Federation of Retail Agents, ing, evening and Sunday dailies were particularly successful, the report added, though there was a slump in magazine reading.



A special appeal was made by the conference to end the "coupon menace"—a scheme whereby purchasers of certain goods receive coupons which, when collected in sufficient numbers, entitle the owners to free gifts of various kinds.

"In conjunction with nearly every other national trade organization," stated the report, "our national federation has joined wholeheartedly in the fight against this coupon menace. We consider this method of trading as immoral and artificial and, unless it is discontinued, it will render future legitimate shopkeeping extremely precarious. Parliamentary legislation is the only effective way of putting an end to the menace."

English Pheasant Eggs Imported

Harrisburg, Pa.—The Pennsylvania State Game Commission has turned to England for choice eggs of the Mongolian pheasant for development of the bird in the state woods. The commission purchased 500 Mongolian pheasant eggs from the Gaybird Pheasant Farm, Great Missenden, Bucks, England. They will be incubated at the Fisher State Game Farm and the young birds will be distributed throughout the state in an effort to propagate the species.

$10,000,000 Blaze Sweeps St. John Harbor

Flaming and smoking remains of grain elevator, one of many buildings along waterfront at St. John, N. B., destroyed during recent conflagration. Scores were thrown out of work by the burning of buildings. Fishermen's dories and schooners were burned at their docks.

Bandit Flies to Toronto After Daring Bank Robbery

Raids Bank, Gets $2,600, Hires Plane, Flies to Toronto and Disappears

London, Ont., June 28.—Favored at every step by the breaks of Lady Luck, a flying bandit robbed the Richmond and John branch of the Bank of Toronto of $2,600 at noon Saturday, and while the police searched blind alleys in a clueless chase, escaped by the sky route in a hired plane.

Displaying enterprise, imagination and not a little sense of humor, the lanky young bandit flew to Toronto so swiftly that he kept pace with the alarm that flashed over telephone and telegraph wires. He vanished from the DeLesseps Field airport at Mount Dennis half an hour before roaring police speed cars arrived.

Up to late Sunday, his whereabouts remained unrevealed despite energetic and relntless efforts by city, provincial, township and Weston police to find him. A black derby hat of an expensive English make, discarded by the bandit as he coolly walked away from the airport, was the only trace police found after combing the Weston, Mount Dennis and Toronto west end districts; watching hotels, railway stations, steamship docks and highways, and keeping a sharp lookout all through the Toronto area.

Unable to procure a taxi to take him from the airport, it is believed he carried out his announced intention of "bumming a ride to town" and quietly slipped out of the city or went into hiding somewhere within the district. It is thought possible he continued his daring eastward flight from London and headed for Kingston or Montreal.

Colonel Currie Called by Death

Veteran of First Canadian Overseas Contingent Dies in Florida

Toronto, June 29.—Veteran of the First Expeditionary Force of the fateful days of 1914, one of the four original captains of the 48th Highland Regiment, legislator, parliamentarian, former newspaperman, author, promoter and manufacturer, Colonel John Allister Currie, ex-M.P., breathed his last in a hospital in Miami, Florida, yesterday.

Word to that effect was received in the city and drew much comment in the circles, political, military and civil, where he moved in life—and often moved turbulently.

Remembered for his military record, and for his enlistment with his whole battalion, fully equipped, in August, 1914, at the outbreak of the World War, Colonel "Jack" Currie seems best remembered as the stormy petrel of many a hard-fought political contests were not by any means restricted tests were not by an means restricted to warfare with his political opponents. He was just as ready for war at any time, or perhaps at all times, within his own party.

Comment was mingled, as befitted the man who hit hard, often, and spared no feelings—but on all hands the recognition was generous of the fact that "Jack" Currie had sprung to arms among the leaders of his nation when the call to battle rang through the Empire.

Record Heat In Mid-West

Deaths Mount to Two Score and Hundreds of Prostrations Reported

Chicago, June 26.—The midwest sizzled and seared again to-day in a record-breaking heat wave which gave no indication of let-up.

Temprature zoomed to 100 for the third day in succession in widely scattered cities, a coppery sun singed and scorched all growing things, while the list of heat deaths mounted to two score and the number of prostrations rose to the hundreds.

Suffring St. Louisans went about their work half-heartedly while the temperatures climbed almost to 102 degrees, the hottest day of the year, three more heat deaths brought the total here for the week to 11. About 100 persons were prostrated, including a 96-year-old Texan who was hitch-hiking home from the funeral of his wife in Daleware.

Five persons have died of the heat and two have drowned trying to escape it in Indiana during the last two days.

The heat wave in Chicago kept citizens awake last night and started to send thermometers to new record notches today when a sudden cool Lake Michigan breeze sent temperatures down from the nineties to 78. Then the wind shifted again and pedestrians once more began to hunt the shady spots. More than a dozen Chicagoans have been killed by the heat.

True domestic happiness is founded upon the rock of a cradle.

WITH THE LONE SCOUTS

Recently a very interesting article appeared in the Oshawa Times, written by a Scout Leader in that city who stated that one evening recently, whilst he was standing in his own garden, he was startled to hear the whine of a .22 bullet as it passed over his head, followed almost simultaneously by the crack of the rifle.

Apparently some boys, and we are glad to record that they were not Scouts, had just shot a robin, and they were seen to pick it up shortly afterwards and throw it into a nearby field, little realizing that their bullet had passed right through their victim and gone speeding on for nearly another block, past numerous people who might have been seriously injured.

Now apart from the well known fact that "A Scout is a friend to animals" and therefore should not use animals or birds as targets for their rifle practice, there arises the question of who should be permitted to use firearms and who should not.

In my estimation no one should be allowed to carry firearms until he is absolutely conversant with the ordinary rules of safety covering their use.

As far as the Scouts are concerned, although this organization is non-military, the use of firearms is not absolutely forbidden, and boys are encouraged to learn to shoot accurately and a badge is awarded for marksmanship. It is, however, very definitely laid down that all instruction for this badge must be carried out under the supervision of a competent instructor, and the target practice rules are very stringent.

No doubt quite a number of Lone Scouts are in possession of .22 rifles, and we urge very strongly that they take particular care as to the manner in which they handle same, so that it can never be recorded that a Lone Scout was responsible for the injury to another person through the careless handling of fire-arms.

A few simple rules strictly adhered to will help a great deal along these lines and we suggest the following:

When carrying the rifle keep the muzzle pointed to the ground, or up in the air if on rocky ground.

Never point the weapon at any other person, even if you know it is unloaded. Take care that if your bullet misses its mark that it will not be likely to injure anything else. Always unload your rifle or gun before entering a house.

Do not leave a loaded gun leaning up against a fence, wall, etc., where it is liable to be knocked over and discharged.

Always clean your gun immediately after using.

If Lonies follow these rules, accidents will not happen.

We are glad to hear of an interesting Church Parade attended by the Elk Patrol of Maple recently, at which Scoutmaster Don Hutchison was present, and at which the Lonies joined with the Trail Rangers, Girl Guides, etc. We hear that there is likely to be a Troop at Maple before long, and the Lonies in this district are planning another Church Parade at Richmond Hill and have invited the Patrols at Unionville, Markham, Stouffville, etc., to join with them.

Some of the members of the Lion and Bear Patrols of the 3rd Troop, who are located at Lakefield, are planning to hold a summer camp somewhere near Toronto, which can be visited daily by Scoutmaster Vic Sheppard. We hope they have lots of fun.

Serious Fires Menace North

Parry Sound Area Rocked and Other Workers Stunned

Nobel, June 26.—With dramatic suddenness death struck here, and four men were killed in an explosion which rocked the countryside.

The blast occurred in the mixing house of Canadian Industries, Limited, and the explosives section of the plant is completely demolished. Property damage is set at $25,000.

The four dead were all employees engaged in mixing explosives. They are: P. Bazilsky, married, and father of three children; G. Stanyer, married; S. Marcovski, married, and E. Schneider, single. Their bodies were removed to Parry Sound for burial. All were terribly mutilated by the force of the explosion.

According to eye-witnesses, the explosion came with terrific force. There was just a shock, a flash and a cloud of smoke. All that remained of the mixing-house was a huge gaping cavity in the ground.

By a strange twist of fate, a delivery rig loaded with several hundred pounds of dynamite had just left the door of the mixing-house three minutes before the explosion.

W. S. Thatcher, manager of the plant, in a brief interview with the Canadian Press, declared he had no knowledge as to the cause of the accident. The mixing plant is a unit in which the ingredients for making high explosives are mixed.

More than a ton of dynamite exploded. The blast was terrific. In Parry Sound, seven miles away, windows were broken. Several workmen half a mile from the scene were thrown to the ground. One man was stunned for 20 minutes.

The victims were all experienced men. The mixing process is done in rubber-lined vats, and precautions are taken against friction or fire before men are allowed to enter the building. Signs are prominently displayed warning employees against carrying matches about the plant.

The building where the four men were at work is one of three or four in a group, half a mile from several other groups of buildings which comprise the entire explosive plant. An inspector, with three other men, had just completed a trip through the buildings and had reached another building 150 feet away when the explosion occurred.

The Nobel plant was one of the most active units in the manufacture of munitions during the war. At that time as many as 5,000 men were employed there, but now this number is reduced to 300.

Chilean Rivers to Get Million U.S. Salmon Eggs

Washington.—Salmon of American ancestry soon may be leaping about between the South Pacific Ocean and the headwaters of Chilean rivers.

The Foodstuffs Division of the Commerce Department has received a report from Ralph H. Ackerman, commercial attache at Santiago, that the Chilean fisheries bureau soon will plant more than a million eggs of North Pacific salmon in the rivers of Chile.

"I'm Glad You're My Mother"

Mrs. W. B. Bailey

"Mother, did you see that woman ahead of us down on Ontario Avenue jerk her little girl along and tell her to 'shut up'?"

"Yes, I did, Jerry, and I felt sorry for both of them."

"For both of them? Why I just felt sorry for the little girl. I wonder what she was crying about?"

Jerry and his mother were resting on the lawn under their favorite tree after their trip to town. Although only six years old, Jerry was learning to think reflectively.

Both were silent for a while, then the boy continued, "You wouldn't have done that way if something had bothered me until I cried, would you?"

"I hope not, Son, but a mother gets quite nervous and upset sometimes. What do you think I should have done?"

"Well, I believe you would have said, 'What's the trouble, Jerry boy, can't you stop crying and tell me about it?' Then I'd have tried to stop and if I couldn't you would have stood still and talked it out with me. Then everything would have been all right. But I'm too big to cry on the street though . . . . I'm sure glad you are my mother and that we can talk together the way we do."

"That is sweet of you, Little Man, and I appreciate it very much. I'm just as glad you are my son as you are that I am your mother."

"I guess we are chums," the boy said as he smiled up at his mother. Then he scampered off to meet his dog.

The mother sat wondering about the woman who had impressed her son so unfavorably. Why had she not tried to discover the source of the trouble and to remedy it instead of being so rude and unkind?

"Why is it," she thought, "that mothers so often forget that children are persons and should be treated with respect? How humiliating to a little girl to be handled so roughly and spoken to so rudely in public!

"I wonder if the child will ever feel like going to her and talking over her troubles. Will she tell her mother they are chums and she is glad to be her little girl? Why I'd almost have halted traffic, I believe, if necessary to see what caused the child to be unhappy enough to cry like that. Why didn't the woman lead her gently to one side where they could have discussed the matter quietly until unhappiness was erased from the sweet young face? Then this child, too, could have said, 'I'm glad you're my mother'." — Issued by the National Kindergarten Association, 8 West 40th Street, New York City. Friendly Animals

In the New York Hippodrome a short time ago a remarkable friendship existed between a baby elephant and a fine large boarhound, both belonging to Mr. George Power. The dog was in the habit of going regularly every morning to a butcher's shop close by the Hippodrome, where the butcher would give him a goodly parcel of bones and scraps of meat wrapped in brown paper. The dog would go straight home to the Hippodrome, lay the parcel down in front of the little elephant, and wait patiently until the young animal had turned out the contents on the floor. Not caring for meat, he would poke at it with his trunk disdainfully, and then take no further notice of it.

This was the moment when the boarhound would come forward and take it all up again—bone by bone, and scrap by scrap—carry it all over to his own kennel, and then make a good breakfast at his ease. But he was never once known to attempt to eat it without first offering it to his little friend.

Also, when he was given cake or biscuits, the dog would offer them first to the young elephant. But this was a different matter. Not a bit or scrap did the little elephant give back to his faithful friend. Once or twice, while watching them, I was amused to see the dog, after waiting patiently and watching the other's enjoyment, very cautiously put one paw forward as though to take a little bit of the dainty. But, at the first sign of such an action, the little elephant would lift up his trunk and his voice, and trumpet his very loudest, vastly indignant that the dog should try to get any. And then the funniest thing was to watch the dog's expression!

Such a meek, apologeic, reproachful expression. As though to say, as he licked his lips, "Well, I think you might have let me have a taste!"—Ellen Velvin, in "From Jungle to Zoo."

BABY'S OWN SOAP

Best for Baby — Best for You

Lilies For Dinner East of the Suez

A hungry Canadian workman would have something to say if stewed daffodils were placed before him after a heavy morning's work, but in other lands, particularly east of Suez, flowers play an important part in the daily menu.

In Madras and other parts of India, as well as in the wild regions of Afghanistan, flowers are cultivated for food, and in Southern India, where the population is mainly vegetarian, lotus jelly is considered a great delicacy. The petals of young flowers are soaked in a sugar solution, and boiled until they form a stiff paste, which is powdered with more sugar and moulded. But this is scarcely a dish for the Western palate.

Shrub cakes, made with blossoms, ghee and bazaar sugar are popular in the North, and sold at twopence apiece. They lead to abdominal troubles, but, as the natives enjoy the strange concoction, they attribute subsequent ailments to Providence.

Every visitor to Ceylon, however, should sample butter-blossom, which is boiled and flavored with cinnamon or cloves.

Food From the Florist's

Chinese cook lilies in milk and eat candied jasmine, while Japanese have a keen appetite for flowers, a taste which is shared by the Egyptians, who serve rose-petal jelly, prepared with powdered sugar, water and isinglass, at the end of a meal. In Morocco the coarse porridge is definitely improved when served with a jelly made from pomegranate flowers.

In the West Indies, where exotic plants are as plentiful as cowslips at home, floriculture caters for the tables of all classes. A confection of banana blossom delights the natives, and resident Europeans have been known to express their appreciation.

In Britain we make tea from stinging nettles, but have we thoroughly explored the possibilities of our countryside?

Declare Tobacco Contains Vitamins

Seeds of Plant Have High Food Value, Experimenters Says — Nicotine Absent in Tests

Washington.—The seeds of the tobacco plant have a high food value and include three of the essential vitamins in "reasonable abundance," according to the report of experiments conducted at Yale University. Tests on rats showed that any traces of the poisonous alkaloid, nicotine, cannot be demonstrated.

Rats fed on a diet consisting of 99 per cent. tobacco seed grew at the average normal rate for 109 days and showed no ill effects. They ate the seed greedily.

Thus, says the report, "there is reason to believe that tobacco seed contains proteins of good biological quality and that it includes at least vitamins A, B and G in reasonable abundance. No advantage seems to accrue from additions of a more complex salt mixture to this unusual ration. The further study of the nutritive factors in the tobacco seed is being prosecuted vigorously."

Nicotine Absent

"It was noted during a preliminary study of the seed," the report continues, "that nicotine, while entirely absent from the unsprouted seed, was present in conspicuous amounts in the sprouts that develop in about 12 days when the seeds are scattered on blotting paper moistened with distilled water. It is evident that this alkaloid is synthesized very early in the life of the plant."

The experimenters are trying to find out where the nicotine, a deadly poison in its pure state, comes from. Chemical analysis shows that the seed contains a high proportion of fat and a very low proportion of carbohydrates, thus somewhat resembling the soy bean and various oily nuts.

A method has been devised, the report states, of extracting the protein content of the seed, and a study of its chemical properties now is under way. The investigators are especially interested in the various water-soluble substances which may be present in the alkaline content.

Thus far they have demonstrated the presence of five bio-chemical substances—choline, an alkaline substance found in the yolks of eggs; betaine, found in beets; adenine, a product of growing plant cells; arginine and guanine. But there is no trace of nicotine, the alkoloid peculiar to tobacco itself. Somehow or other it is created in the laboratory of the growing plant.

Watercress Good

In connection with the chemical work, it is announced, an easy method has been found for the preparation of nicotine of high purity. The workers also isolated pure nicotimine, a little known volatile alkaloid that accompanies nicotine in tobacco, but is quite different, chemically, from the poison itself.

It is also reported that an abundance of vitamine E has been demonstrated in the leaves of watercress. Tests with rats indicate that the dried leaf of this plant is at least two or three times as rich in this essential constituent of diet as is the dried leaf of lettuce.

Emblems of Spring

(From Harper's Magazine)

When in the woods the small white trillium flower
After long seasons of the snow and rain,
Gleams in the dead moss, and a sudden hour
Of light is in the storm-clouds, and again
Birds make their nests under the southern eaves,
And sun and hail are alternative in the sky,
And the apple tree with blossoms hides its leaves,
And night is tremulous with the marsh frog's cry—
Then, by these signs, men know another spring
Has come upon the land, and are content.
Winter is now a gone, forgotten thing
As earth awakens to new merriment.
Earth has no memory: the glad birds sing
The song of last year's birds, who came and went.

At the Circus

Cascades of music from the band—
Ladies in gay attire—
Wonders out of every land,
And on a swinging wire,
Like a white carnation upside-down,
A girl in billows of tarlatan gown,
Nimble and swift as a whirling top,
Spins by as if she will never stop!
I forget the giants, the pygmies too,
And the Hindu eating fire,
To watch this girl go wheeling through
The air, on a silver wire!
With a parasol made from a piece of sky,
She swings and pirouettes, till I
See a top in perfect gyre;
Then a winsome girl with amber tress,
And a smile as sweet as a soft caress,
Folds a parasol blue as the bluest sky,
Blows a kiss or two, and breathes good-by!

—Mary Florence Richardson.

Individuality

The fiddles wishes he could sing,
The writer longs to paint,
The subject wishes to be king,
The devil would be a saint;
But wise is he who plods along
And leaves the singer to his song,

Oh, let the dancer dance, say I,
One job enough for me,

And take the artist's fee.
'Twere nice to do another's work,
But I've a task I mustn't shirk.

The farmer was the first man to make his appearance in this world, according to the record, and if things should come to the worst, the farmer would be the last man to be forced out of the race.

Mr. Pearce, the teacher, was explaining to the class of small children the meaning of the word "Collision."

Mr. Pearce—"A collision is when two things come together unexpectedly. Now can anyone give an example of a collision?"

Johnny—"Twins."

There is no one who knows quite so much about how a thing should be done as the fellow who doesn't know anything about it. The less a man knows about a matter, the more free he is with advice. Probably the first rain that fell in the Garden of Eden was right after Adam discarded his fig leaf for a pair of white duck breeches. Then there was the young bride who grew suddenly jealous when her husband revealed he was in love with his work. The woman who marries in order to obtain a meal ticket will often find that she has to earn the blamed thing over and over again.

Orator—"If the average man were to look himself squarely in the face and ask himself what he really needed most, what would be the answer?"

Heckler—"A rubber neck."

Something New in Styles

The girls once wore their skirts quite short,
And now they wear 'em long;
The drug store cowboy's trousers
Have pleats that look all wrong.

The golfers wear their plus fours neat
And feel just fine and dandy,
But wait till the Mahatma comes
And sets style a la Gandhi!

Another authority describes a pessimist as a man who sits under the tree of prosperity and growls when the fruit falls on his head. But an optimist is one who, under similar circumstances, rubs his head and grabs the fruit. There must have been a fair and open mind once upon a time, since someone had to invent that saying about there being two sides to every question. There is no record that man has ever been able to hide a garden where the insect pests could not find it. If some of these paragraphers, snaps our wife, had to stand over a hot stove and get a meal in the good old-fashioned way, they probably would do less wise-cracking about can-openers. A word to the wise is often resented. If you don't talk kinda mean to some folks they never believe you really mean what you say. There will be no more broadcasting from this station at this time. Hot weather has melted the microphone.

Nurses Wanted

The Toronto Hospital for Incurables, in affiliation with Fordham Hospital, New York City, offers a Three Years' Course of Training to Young Women, having the required education, and desirous of becoming nurses. This Hospital has adopted the eight-hour system. The pupils receive uniforms of the School, a monthly allowance and travelling expenses to and from New York. For further particulars write or apply to the Superintendent.

HEADACHES

Ended by Kruschen

"I was a martyr to headaches, with frequent attacks of dizziness affecting my vision. My occupation is a very sedentary one—a printer's reader. I gave Kruschen Salts a good trial, and from then onwards I seemed quite another person. The headaches disappeared and the dizziness, and the most wonderful thing to me is that I have gone back to weaker glasses, a lens which I had discarded some years ago as not being strong enough. I also suffered from bad circulation during the early mornings of winter. Now at 58 I can enjoy cold baths all the year round, enjoy and am eager for my food, and am what I consider very fit—the sort of fitness that makes living a joy."—(G. F.)

Headaches can nearly always be traced to a disordered stomach or to partial constipation—a complaint many indoor workers suffer from without ever suspecting it.

Kruschen Salts go right down to the root of the trouble and remove the cause by gently persuading the organs of elimination to function exactly as Nature intended they should.

More Air Stamps

Countries all over the world continue to issue special stamps to pay postage on letters conveyed by air mail, while Great Britain refuses to entertain the idea of special air mail stamps. Luxembourg has issued a set of four stamps, beautifully engraved and printed, the denominations and colors being: 75c brown, 1 franc red, 1¼ franc purple, and 1 5-8 franc blue. They can only be used on air mail correspondence.

Messrs. Whitefield King, of Ipswich, point out that the issuing of these stamps must be excellent propaganda in making the use of air mails a more popular method of despatching correspondence from one country to another.

No more COLIC pains

. . . give Castoria

A CRY in the night may be the first warning that Baby has colic. No cause for alarm if Castoria is handy! This pure vegetable preparation brings quick comfort, and can never do the slightest harm. Always keep a bottle in the house. It is the safe and sensible thing when children are ailing. Whether it's the stomach, or the little bowels; colic or constipation; or diarrhea. When tiny tongues are coated, or the breath is bad. When there's need of gentle regulation. Every child loves the taste of Castoria, and its mildness makes it suitable for the tiniest infant, and for frequent use.

And a more liberal dose of Castoria is usually all that's needed to right the irregularities of older, growing children. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. It's prescribed by doctors!

Much anxiety is felt about the condition of Mr. Salter, who is to undergo an operation in a Hamilton hospital Tuesday. We hope it may be entirely successful. It will be an anxious time for his wife and their friends

A big day in the city was given to the Entrance pupils numbering nine—and one for next year—from No. 9 School. It was effected by the kindness of the Teacher, Miss Peddie, and the generosity of Mr. J. Pickett and Mr. Arthur Fuller who took the young people in their cars. The pupils surely are greatly indebted to their teacher and the above mentioned gentlemen.

Mrs. John Coyne of Petrolia, and formerly of this district, is having the family plot in Bethel cemetery nicely fixed up.

Let us not forget our loved ones who sleep in these sacred places, but care for their plots.

We hear Bethel Church is to have a garden party.

We are enjoying lovely weather. Who would not care to live in the beautiful portion of God's great creation, the country, with waving fields of grain, clovers, with root and potato acres, and fruit lots, all to feed man, the animal and feathered creatures, created for man's use? These, along with the woods and streams—surely to live in the rural atmosphere is an earthly paradise.

Mr. John Orr is drilling for a greater supply of water at his residence.

Mr. John Dent has completed his hay shed.

The Misses Fuller of Detroit were week-end visitors with Mr. and Mrs Bert Fuller.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Ford have returned after visiting Mrs. Ford's relatives at Omemee.

A Good Garden Party

Trinity Church scored a big success last night with their annual garden party held on the Church grounds, an ideal spot, with the new Parish Hall, for a background, and the concert platform erected at its entrance. The weather was most propitious, rather a little on the warm side, but that meant a large volume of business for the refreshment booth.

The program was real good and the "British Trio" won a warm place in the hearts of their audience with the splendid rendition of their various numbers, with which they were very generous. The wonderful dancing of the little MacLean sisters and the recitations and dancing by Little Beth Watson, were admired by all. The accompaniments were played by Mrs. Ashton.

The Rector, Rev. R. J. W. Perry occupied the chair and extended a hearty welcome to the audience.

The success of the garden party was due to the energetic work of the Rector, the Wardens, and all those who lent their assistance in any way, and this event has passed into history as one of the best garden parties Trinity Church ever had.

Harvey Sibbald

News was received here this morning of the sudden death at Burford, of Harvey Sibbald, only son of Emory Sibbald. The funeral service will be held in the Streetsville United Church Saturday afternoon July 4th, at 4 o'clock D.S.T.

Interment in Streetsville cemetery

The sympathy of the community is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Sibbald and family in the sudden passing of their son, who was a bright young man, only in his 'teens and with the promise of a useful life ahead of him.

Here and There

Pictou lobster fishermen are trying a new venture in shipping lobsters to Boston, Mass. Recently a carload valued at $4,000 went through by express over Dominion Atlantic Railway lines to Yarmouth, being shipped thence to Boston.

Lovers of wild life will be glad to hear of the establishment of a second Bird Sanctuary in Canada, similar to that of Jack Miner, to be situated at Bird Haven Farm, by John W. Piggott, of Bridgetown, Nova Scotia. It will be located in the heart of the beautiful Annapolis Valley.

The first radio broadcast in history of musical entertainment from a steamship in motion, sent over a network of Canadian and United States land stations, was carried through successfully as the Empress of Britain was sailing up the St. Lawrence on her maiden voyage from Cherbourg June 1.

All records for the St. Lawrence route to Europe were shattered when the new Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain, 42,500-ton flagship of the company's Atlantic fleet, made the run from Cherbourg to Father Point in four days, nineteen hours, on her maiden voyage May 27-June 1.

"The train ride from Vancouver to Banff is the most wonderful I have ever taken," was the comment of the much-travelled and famous writer J. B. Priestley, of "Angel Pavement" and "The Good Companions" fame, interviewed recently at the Banff Springs Hotel. "These parts are too wonderful to describe," he said, and added he was coming again in September for the trail riding.

The Shield for efficiency among the four Canadian Pacific white Empresses of the Pacific, donated last year by E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the company, was presented for the second time at Vancouver recently to Captain A. J. Hosken and the ship's company of the Empress of Russia. During the presentation the gathering was entertained by the broadcast from the Empress of Britain, over 3,000 miles away, steaming down the St. Lawrence.

Definite promise of an international travelling Art School with headquarters to be established at Banff in 1932, or at one of the Bungalow Camps in the Rockies, has been given by Tom Hall, prominent London, England, artist who has been assured by a number of his confreres in England that they would join him in artistic exploitation of the scenic wealth of the Canadian Rockies.

Travelling by Canadian Pacific special train from Toronto to Victoria and return, over 100 members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association held their annual general meeting early in June and took the opportunity to make a Trans-Canada tour, including Winnipeg, Regina and Saskatoon, where they conferred with local industrialists and were given civic and provincial welcomes. The meeting coincided with the 60th anniversary of the entrance of British Columbia into Confederation. (744)

HOLIDAY?

We place a question mark after holiday because it would be interesting if each one who reads this far would say to himself what he thinks a holiday is. We have another reason for the query, because we are anxious to know what will be the results of the holiday.

Holidays are excellent. Everyone should have a chance to get away from his regular task, and this includes the housewife who has the hardest task of all. The break from the usual routine of life is a good physical and mental tonic. Holidays provide the time for recuperation and storing up of energy.

We are not going to attempt to plan your holiday for you. There are great differences in people and what appeals to one offers no attractions for others. The man who is fond of fisning cannot understand why everyone does not enthuse about rising at daybreak and going miles to catch fish. The golfer is sure that his game affords the one real holiday, and the young people are amused at their elder's idea of a good time.

Holidays should mean a good time, and all we have to suggest is that a bit of planning beforehand will not interfere with the good time, and it will prevent some of the occurrences which are apt to spoil a holiday.

It is certainly not a good holiday if you develop typhoid fever when you get back home. It would have been much better had you asked ahead of time about the water supply, or to have boiled or chlorinated the water you used if you were not sure of its purity. The clear stream or the sparkling spring may be contaminated with typhoid germs—Why take a chance?

Sunshine is good. A coat of tan is a coat of health. Over-exposure to the sun, however, leads to serious discomfort from sunburn, and if excessive, may cause heat prostration. Better, to go slowly and to be holidaying every day of your vacation than to spend several days in misery, shut out from the fun because you overdid exposure to the sun the first day or two.

There is really not much consistency about the parent who carefully safeguards his children at home and then, during vacation, exposes them to any danger that comes along because of some peculiar idea that disease is unknown in the country and that you become healthy just by living there. The country is a fine place, but disease germs are found there just as they are elsewhere. The tuberculous cows live on the farm, and if your children drink their milk while you are in the country, they will get tuberculosis just as surely as if they used that milk in the city. In most cities the milk is pasteurized and made safe. It is just as necessary to take this precaution in the country. You cannot tel from the appearance of a cow whether or not she is tuberculous.

Do not spoil your holiday by being over-fussy about things, but, on the other hand, do not spoil it by failing to give some attention to such important matters as water, milk and food supplies.

THE IDEAL GUEST

She writes without the least delay;
She knows exactly what to say.
She always comes to you on time;
She never talks of ills or crime.
She looks at you with smiling eyes;
She does not boast or criticize.
She fills a very modest place;
She moves and speaks with gentle grace.
She is not difficult to please;
She can be silent as the trees.
She shuns all ostentatious show;
She knows precisely when to go.

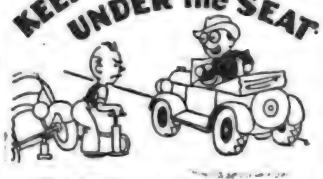
Mrs. John Hepton



There passed away at Brampton on Wednesday, July 1st, a lady who had spent practically all her life in Toronto Township, in the person of Mrs. John J. Hepton. She was born at Malton, and after marriage she and her husband resided on the farm on the Base Line, north west of Cooksville, until a few years ago. Recently they had made their home at Brampton.

Besides her husband, deceased is survived by one daughter, Mrs. John E. Dowling, Streetsville, and two sons, Elmer, Brantford, and Victor of Cooksville.

The remains are resting at the home of her daughter. The funeral will take place Friday afternoon at 2.30 (D.S.T.) Service will be held in Britannia United Church, where she formerly worshipped, at three o'clock, and interment will take place in the family plot in Bethany Cemetery Elmbank, Fifth Line East.

Barbara Bell, age 13, passed away with heart trouble on the holiday after bathing in the lake at Clarkson. She died while being taken to a Toronto hospital.

Frank Lang, age 24, of Toronto was drowned in the Humber River at Woodridge on Dominion Day

THE

TULE MARSH MURDER

STORY OF A MISSING ACTRESS AND THE TAXING OF WITS TO EXPLAIN HER FATE.

BY NANCY BARR MAVITY.

SYNOPSIS

Sheila O'Shay, formerly a popular actress, and now the wife of the young multi-millionaire Don Ellsworth, disappears, leaving no trace behind her. Don visits Dr. Cavanaugh, the famous criminologist, and confesses that his married life has been unhappy. Dr. Cavanaugh agrees to investigate the case. Peter Piper, reporter of The Herald, is sent to Dr. Cavanaugh's home. By accident he meets the doctor's adopted daughter, Barbara. Peter learns she is interested in the case for some reason. She confesses that she was engaged to Don Ellsworth before his marriage.

CHAPTER VII.—(Cont'd.)

For an instant a whimsical smile flitted across Barbara's eyes, like a shadow of a cloud drifting across a meadow. Then her face hardened again.

"It comes to this, doesn't it? You offer to sell your silence about my personal affairs for an interview with my father."

"Not exactly—though I admit you sound quite devastingly logical." Peter remained invincibly debonaire. "But it really isn't so bad as that. Remember, there is an actual possibility—even a probability—that the disappearance of Mrs. Ellsworth involves a crime. At least we'll have to go on that assumption until the lady herself turns up blithely to tell us differently. If that assumption is correct, finding out the facts is a far more important consideration than your very natural dislike of having your personal affairs become public property. I have gained the definite information that you were formerly engaged to Ellsworth; and there's nothing to prevent my making use of the facts gleaned in this interview with you. On the other hand, if I had a chance to talk the case over with your father, he might see things from an unguessed angle—turn up something quite different and more important. I'm more than willing to admit that he's a darn sight smarter sleuth than I am, I'd cheerfully let him knock all my flights of fancy into a cocked hat."

The slight figure in the driver's seat turned sidewise, facing Peter squarely, rigidly erect.

"You said you were being frank. Well, I'm going to be frank, too, Mr. ——"

"Piper—James Aloysius Piper, commonly called Peter."

"Mr. Piper. I'm not a society bud—at least, only a grafted one. I'm a gutter snipe, really. I grew up in a foundling's home. I was a homely, scrawny little thing, and my hair was straight, so the ladies looking for blue-eyed, curly-haired darlings always passed me by. They'd come and look us over, you know. And at last they didn't send for me any more, even to be looked over. After you're seven years old, there's not much chance. They put me down as 'unadoptable.' And all the time, as soon as I was old enough to think anything at all, I lived in two worlds. There was no hope for me, except to be put out to service as soon as I was old enough."

Barbara's eyes were gazing, sightless, through the window of the coupe beyond Peter's shoulder. Her voice rushed on, low and breathless.

"But I vowed I wouldn't be a gutter snipe—in my soul. Somebody sent an old set of Howard Pyle's King Arthur books to the orphanage in a Christmas box. I read about those knights—over and over. I lived in those stories. I didn't think much about honesty, but I came to care a lot about honor. Loyalty. The aristocratic virtues. The kind that are useless and expensive and that are not calculated to get you anywhere—if you are a gutter snipe. They had a reality beyond the reality of a foundlings' home. Incorruptible. Incorruptible beauty."

The hurried voice died away. Peter crouched forward in his seat, saying nothing.

"Well, when I was fourteen years old Dr. Cavanaugh was called in as consultant for one of the children, who had what they call a neurosis. Sensory anaesthesia, it was—it doesn't happen very often." Barbara's voice resumed its normal tone. "He is like that, you know. He will take any case, no matter how poor the patient, if it interests him. He saw me in the hall—almost ran over me, in fact, in the dim corridor—and when he had set me on my feet, he stopped to talk to me, casually. I stood there with my back against the wall, and before he had left I had told him what I had never told any one. I told him about the other side of me—the side that wasn't a gutter snipe.

"That's all, really—except that the chance stumble over an awkward little girl in an orphan asylum corridor changed all of life for me. I didn't know then, of course, that Dr. Cavanaugh was a great man, that I was the simplest sort of 1-2-3 problem in his hands. I only knew that I wasn't turned in on myself any more. There was some one else, now, who knew about that inside world of mine. I used to slip around the corridors, like a little gray flitter-mouse, on the days when he came to visit his patient. I wouldn't have taken a step towards him nor spoken to him for the world. But he always found me, and stopped to talk—or to let me talk, rather. I'd save up things in the night to say to him, hoard them and then pour them all out, pell-mell. He was the first human being, remember, to whom I had ever really talked."

Barbara paused, her dreaming eyes fixed on vacancy. There was no sound from the figure beside her. She might even have forgotten his presence.

"And then, as soon as the papers could be put through, he adopted me—me, the 'unadoptable' child, who had no other expectation in life than to live in that gray limbo of drab painted walls. He gave me more than luxury, and education, and normal amusements. He gave me life itself. If there happens to be a heaven, the thing that will shine out in Dr. Cavanaugh's record isn't the books that he's written, nor the cases he's solved, nor the cures he has made. If St. Peter tried to shut him out, there'd be the ghost of a little girl in a gray orphan asylum frock, pulling the gate open with her scrawny, unkept hands." Barbara glanced down at her slim manicured fingers. "So you see,"—she leaned back against the side window and turned on Peter the clearest, most ingenuous of smiles—"I'm not likely to try to bamboozle Dr. Cavanaugh for anybody, in any circumstances whatever."

Peter shook himself. He came, with an inner crash, out of a daze into the bumptious world of reality. His eyes scanned the face, tilted slighly upward, confronting him. There was a trace of inner triumph in that lingering smile.

"Is it possible," Peter mused aloud, "that you were clever enough to tell me all that in order to tie my hands—because you know that I can't possibly write anything about you now unless you're willing? I'm a bum reporter, I guess," he added disgustedly, "but I couldn't do it."

"It is quite possible," Barbara assented calmly. "I spent the most impressionable years of my life in fending for myself, single-handed. You mustn't forget that I'm essentially a gutter snipe."

CHAPTER VIII.

Peter Piper drove "Bossy" back to the Herald office in a state of inner turmoil much as he had seldom known.

"Well—for the moment—you win!" he had said. And Barbara had not refused the hand which Peter extended. At that moment of parting she had looked more than ever like Alice in Wonderland grown up.

Impossible to connect a girl like that with a secret—perhaps a sinister secret. Why, she would not have looked out of place playing house with acorn dishes under a spreading tree! Peter smiled at the picture—a dreamy boy's smile, such as no member of The Herald staff had ever seen on his face.

He brought himself up with a start. Because a girl was young and pretty—childlike even—was no reason at all why she might not be capable of the whole range of human passions and acts. The cleverest woman forger of her time, interviewed by Peter in the city jail where she awaited trial, had been a neat, motherly person, who looked as if she spent her afternoons in baking cookies and her evenings in tatting. Mary Saunders, the "tiger woman," who had killed her rival by inviting her to call and then efficiently battering her skull with the fire tongs, had a sweet, appealing face and the air of one misunderstood by a cruel, and captious world.

And there was more—much more—to Barbara Cavanaugh than an attractive face.

"That's where women have the edge on us every time!" Peter growled. "There's something to that Turkish veil idea. If they all wore veils, they'd get away with considerably less."

He forcibly clawed his mind away from the intrusive image of Barbara's yellow-brown hair, curved above small, close-set ears. He even shut his eyes, thereby narrowly missing collision with a lumbering tuck.

"All that aside—' he murmured.

All that aside, a wave of spontaneous admiration lifted him on its crest.

"Hoo-oo-oo, hu-hu-hu-hoo," he whistled under his breath.

"That girl is no fool!" he crowed, and found an inexplicable delight in the admission. Well, he was no fool, either, if it came to that. Suppose, with those fantastic storybook notions of honor in her head, she had felt that Don Ellsworth's defection was an affront to be avenged. Suppose she had taken matters into her own hands to oust Sheila O'Shay as an interloper. Suppose—nothing to be proved as yet, but a good deal that was worth watching. Peter Piper was seized with a desire to understand Barbara, to know of a surety what unifying reality lay behind that wide brow, and tiptilting nose, and firm chin. He wanted to know. He wanted to know, not because it might be news, but because the knowledge had somehow become important to him.

Radio Letters Mean Quick Delivery

London—Letters, written in mid-Atlantic on one day, will be delivered to their destinations in Britain the next, with a new service just inaugurated by the Post Office here. The Post Office refers to them as "letters" in making the announcement although really the correct name is "ship-letter-telegrams" which, although lengthy, explains the trick of the one day service. Messages will be accepted by the wireless operators in the ships and sent to the nearest short-wave radio station. There the message will be put into an envelope and posted as ordinary mail. Although still rather expensive the new method is decidedly cheaper than sending straight wireless messages. Fee will be threepence a word, as compared with eleven pence a word. There will be a minimum of 25 words.

6th Century B.C. Skull Found

The skull of a great saurian and finds dating from the days of the Celts in Germany—sixth to first centuries B.C.—have been brought to light by excavations in the Steinsburg, a small hill near Hildburghausen. The Celtic finds include parts of sword scabbards, iron vessels, bracelets of beautiful blue cobalt glass, shards of pottery and a number of stone hammers and hatchets.

What New York Is Wearing

BY ANNABELLE WORTHINGTON

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern

Here's something charming and chic in redingote—and kindly too if you're inclined to be a wee bit heavy.

You see the collar of the printed crepe silk dress gives a lengthened line, falling softly in rever fashion as it does over the coat of plain crepe silk.

Both the coat and the dress are finished with applied bands that have a tendency to diminish bulk about the hips. The dress sleeve peeps smartly 'neath the seven-eighth length coat sleeve.

It's an excellent ensemble for business or for travel and so splendid for town wear.

Style No. 3083 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust.

Wool crepe, shantung and many rayon novelties suitable.

Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards 39-inch for coat, with 4⅜ yards 39-inch for dress.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Enclose 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number, and address your order to Wilson Pattern Service, 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto.

Market Last Outpost of Rio's Traditional Color

Rio De Janeiro—Rio de Janeiro's last vestige of local color is to be found in its huge market place.

Although tourists are usually amazed at the sharp contrast of Rio's skyscrapers and Moorish-style buildings, the landscaped parks and small tropical overgrown gardens, they are astonished when they enter the market place and leave behind one of the most modern cities in the world.

The market, located by the sea, occupies six blocks and is a copy of the "marche St. Honore" in Paris. Fishing boats of every description are tied up alongside the market wharf, presenting a picturesque scene. Tropical and European vegetables and fruits are found in many varieties.

Tomorrow hath a rare, alluring sound; today is very prose. And yet the twain are but one vision seen through altered eyes. Our dreams inhabit one; our stress and pain surge through the other.—Richard Burton.

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

hat came before: Captain Jimmy and his dog Scottie have many strange adventures while flying over China. After escaping from bandits and enemy soldiers they finally land their plane at the military base from which they started, and are greeted with an unexpected surprise.

After escaping from the enemy's soldiers, we pushed the plane to an altitude of several thousand feet, and headed straight for Shanghai.

It was still early in the morning when we sighted the familiar flying field, spread out like a small green handkerchief in the early sunlight.

Heading the plane down in a wide spiral, we rolled to a stop outside the airdrome.

Then to our amazement, a Lieutenant and a detachment of soldiers drove up and told us we were under arrest.

We were dumfounded. "By who's orders are we under arrest?" I asked.

"General Lu's orders," replied the dapper little Chinese officer.

We were more surprised than ever. General Lu had been our friend and helper from the beginning of our trip. Now he had placed us under arrest.

"On what charge are we arrested?" I asked.

"Kidnapping Colonel Fong," responded the little officer.

We were bundled into an army truck and rushed through the streets with the siren screaming. In no time we arrived at the palace of General Lu.

General Lu welcomed me gravely, shaking hands with himself in Chinese fashion, and then dismissed the orderly. Then he unfolded a plan so amazing that I pinched myself to see if I were really awake.

He had SOLD OUT—can you beat that? SOLD OUT—his office as a General. Someone had paid him a great stack of money to quit—and being a business man first, he had accepted. To you and I this would be treason—inexcusable—but to General Lu war was simply a business proposition. Why shouldn't one take a job as General,—and after making a success of it, sell out?

I must have looked shocked, which seemed to hurt his feelings, but he stifled his pride and continued with his plan. He wanted to leave China promptly, go to Japan,—and I was to fly over with him. He offered me a round sum of money, or practically anything I could ask within reason for the trip. The arrest was simply a bluff. If I said "Yes" all would be well.

In a flash it occurred to me that here was all the equipment and help we needed to try to find Lieutenant Stone's brother, now held captive by the mountain bandit tribe. I accepted at once—with the understanding that Guy Stone would first be found. From that moment, there wasn't a thing we could ask for that we didn't get immediately—from extra heavy canvas to phosphorous paint.

Working secretly in a special guarded hangar, we fashioned our plane into the weirdest looking dragon you ever saw. Trailing out back was a long canvas tail, that floated straight out when we were in the air.

In the daytime it was a wild looking plane, but at night it was positively terrifying. So much so, that when Fu Hsu, the interpreter entered the hanger after dark one night, he nearly passed out entirely. Actually he fainted, and I thought we would never bring him around.

More Laughter Needed Says New Zealand Daily

The habitual optimist, the person with an ineradicable cheer-germ, the confirmed fun-maker, is worth more to us than gold these days, says The New Zealand Free Lance. The merry joker in the army in the dark years of the war was a treasure that inspired his comrades on many a weary march and through many a fearful test of spirit and courage. The people who in a similar spirit of cheerfulness proposed community singing in the towns devastated by the earthquake are doing their fellow-citizens a real service. Anything in that way that will help to relax now and again the mental strain of the moment is to be encouraged.

Some sanguine spirit has offered to help institute old English pageants and floral dances and that sort of thing in Wellington. The notion is not to be despised. It all makes for the brighter life, a colorful bit of relief against the too-drab background of working life. Many people happily are coming to realize the great worth of such color, such relaxation, a lightsome change from the prosaic and the sordid. The enormous psychological value of a new, bright and pretty dress to a woman is something all men should appreciate — though unfortunately they don't always recognize the fact.

This principle can be carried into a wider sphere. The house, the garden, the town, the streets, all can be made pleasanter to the senses, and unconsciously all this would be reflected in the general attitude toward life.

By the way, some one tells us that in Stockholm even the dustmen wear bright uniforms. Heaven knows we all have enough to worry about, but we need not parade our troubles. Even a cheerful, happy face in a tramcar of people, one has noticed, helps to leaven the whole lot with a little of its own pleasant-seeming outlook on life.

"... are you always rubbing it in on rich people?"

"They deserve it."

"Yes, but we can't all be poor, you know."

Japan Plans to Eradicate Leprosy in Twenty Years

Dr. Adachi, Minister of the Interior, soon after his appointment to the post, visited Kusatsu Hot Springs, Gumma, where there are about 200 leprous families with 900 members living around the town, says the Japanese correspondent of The Journal of the American Medical Association.

"It is reported that he intends to establish a self-governing leprosy village at Kusatsu, granting a large sum of money every year," he continues. "He also proposes to organize and anti-leprosy association with the aid of Viscount Shibuzawa and other influential men in Tokyo, with whom he held a conference in his ... residence. The projects of the proposed association have been

"... general plan is to eradicate the disease in this country in the next twenty years, though there are now some thousands of cases according to the investigation made several months ago.

"Dr. Aoki reports that there have been an average of 203-3 cases of leprosy among each 551,667 young men of conscription age every year during the six years 1924-1929. The government has established a leprosy asylum at Nagashima Island, Okayama Prefecture; the opening ceremony was attended by government officials and noted sanitarians.

"Dr. K. Mitsuta, former chief of the Zensei Asylum, has been appointed new chief, and the hospital has been named the Aisei Asylum. The total capacity is 500."

ASPIRIN

TRADE MARK REG.

Made in Canada.

The above photograph is of an 18-foot model of the new giant Cunarder now under construction at Clydebank, Scotland, in the yards of John Brown & Co. The model is shown floating in a specially built experimental tank in which Atlantic ocean conditions were reproduced in miniature. Wind and waves were artificially produced by mechanical devices to subject the model to severe tests. The new Cunarder will be the largest ship afloat, and will gross 73,000 tons. She will be 1018 feet long. Details of her construction which it is said will embody principles entirely new to ship building, are being jealously guarded. The picture above is the first to reach Canada of the model of the new Cunarder.

The Elixir of Youth

One reason some people stay young longer than others is that they are constantly up-and-doing, always engaged in something interesting, making a new acquaintance here, tackling a new enterprise there, drawing a new book from the library, attending a new show, learning a new song, taking up golf or the trombone or aviation for a fad, scooting across country on a trip to a different locality where they meet new sights and scenes.

So they make life one grand, sweet adventure and haven't time to grow old. The aging ones are the grumpy ones who have lost courage and interest and zest and too easily "stay put."

Molded Salads

While molded salads are more work, yet they look so tempting that they are worth while for special occasions. Gelatine is the element which turns the trick and makes the molded salad. As a base one may use meat broth or bouilion cubes or beef extract or tomato juice or the prepared gelatine mixtures which come in the package.

The boiling liquid is poured over the gelatine, if it is the prepared gelatine. Otherwise the gelatine is first soaked in four times its bulk of cold water for ten minutes. The liquid must begin to harden before the fillings are added to it. The mold must be wet with water, or, better yet, rubbed with oil, before the gelatine liquid is poured into it.

The salad may be as fancy as you wish to make it. It may be filled with almost anything which would naturally go into a salad—and there is little which will not. If one wants a very decorative salad, fancily cut vegetables may be arranged in artistic designs in the bottom of the pan or dish you use for a mold, and the gelatine poured in carefully in a thin layer, allowing the first layer to set before the rest of the liquid is added. Remember that the bottom of the pan will be the top of your gelatine when it is unmolded. To keep the remainder of your gelatine liquid from hardening while your thin first layer is doing it, set it in a pan of warm water, covered.

Some of the ingredients which are especially appropriate for gelatine salads are: minced carrot, minced pineapple, chopped cabbage, celery, green pepper, sliced radishes or tomatoes or onions, mixed cooked vegetables, such as diced turnips, carrots, string beans, corn, hard boiled eggs and pimentos. Flavors may be cloves, lemon juice, pepper, paprika, celery seed, bouquet herbs, bay leaf, caramel, maple flavor and the grated rind of lemon or orange.

Fruits are delightful in the molded salad: cherry, orange, pineapple, apples, pears, and bananas.

The Lawn

It is not really home if it is merely a house set in barren surroundings. It takes lovely shade trees, shrubs to hide the foundation and corners of the house, and a velvety green lawn to make it lovable. Mother Nature cooperates heartily with the house mother in nurturing these, if only the party of the second part will do her share.

If the grass is thin or there are bare spots, sow new seed, of the best quality obtainable. See that the lawn gets plenty of water. Do not mow the new grass until it gets a husky start.

Specialists tell us that the best way to fight weeds is to feed them, because the nourishment you give the weeds also makes the grass grow and it will run out the weeds. Probably the best fertilizer is rotted manure or leaf mold, but there are commercial fertilizers which serve very well if your grass needs a tonic. Do not water the lawn every day, lightly; but rather give it a good soaking occasionally.

Fashions, Fads, Foibles

Swirling circles of ruffles wind 'round and 'round the dainty party frock of to-day. The yards and yards of edges may be pinked or embroidered. We are back to all the fussiness of our grandmothers. The old fashioned shirred bands of the same material as the garment of days away back, are also here, to the despair of the ironer. And all this fuss and feathers on cotton goods.

Verily the wheel of fashion is a Ferris wheel and sets us down just where we started when we began our flight—toward silken garments and shorter and simpler styles. Lace and insertions and all the other gay frumpery which went with cotton elegance is itere once more. And there is something lovely about it, to think that glad young hearts can beat as proudly to-day under vestments of cotton as they did in the days "when Grandpapa was young."

Green shoes, scarf, gloves, purse and belt—there's an ensemble for you. Or the color might be red or lavender or yellow or what-have-you? These will add joy and come-hither to whatever sombre costume milady may don.

Beet and Horse-radish Relish

1½ cups solidly packed sliced beets, ½ cup prepared horse-radish, 1½ cups apple vinegar, 6½ cups sugar, 1 bottle pectin. Cook beets until tender and remove skins. Slice beets very thin. Measure beets into large kettle, using only enough juice to flood level. Add horse-radish, sugar and vinegar. Mix. Bring to a full rolling boil. Boil hard 2 minutes. Remove from fire and stir in pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 3 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating. Pour quickly. Cover hot relish with film of hot paraffin; when relish is cold, cover with 1-8 inch of hot paraffin. Roll glass to spread paraffin on sides. Requires about 1 pound beets. Makes about 9 eight-ounce glasses.

Household Hints

To pack away many ornaments will make the rooms look larger and more airy and orderly. To bring them out in the fall will give renewed pleasure in them and will make the rooms look comfy and cozy. To pack them away will lessen your cares for the summer and give you more time for play and the outdoor life.

Moths first attack soiled spots in fabrics. Put your winter clothing away clean.

Cheap cretonnes, in bright colors, seem to usher flowery spring and sunvery useful when a "potato" appears in somebody's heel just before inspection, and scissors, too, to snip off odd pieces of cotton or to neaten up a hair-ribbon which is developing a fringe.

You must think of other necessary equipment for yourselves, for now I want to say a few words about the box itself.

Even if you yourselves are not very good at carpentry, you will probably be able to find somebody who is, who will make you a nice strong box for quite a small sum. The box should not exceed 12 inches by 8 inches by 4 inches if possible, and a coating of enamel in the predominating Patrol color with the name printed on it in the other shade will make it look very neat.

If you cannot find a convenient brother or uncle to make you such a box, a confectioner or grocer will often have one which has contained sweets or groceries, which he will let you have. These boxes will probably be made of rather rough wood, but rubbed down with sandpaper and painted, they will be perfectly serviceable. If it already has a hinged lid, so much the better; if not (and this is the more likely) you should be able to fasten the lid on yourself, either with small metal hinges and thumb tacks, or else with very stout canvas and glue or drawing pins.

The question of a lock is rather a problem. The hardware man can sell you either a padlock or an ordinary inset one—you would be well advised to show him the box and ask his advice—be sure to have plenty of spare keys! If you can manage it, give a key to each member of the Patrol. The contents of the box will then be accessible only to the owners, and the box will indeed be a Patrol Box.

"Mixed Flower Seeds - —Ten Cents"

With one thin piece of silver I have bought
A treasure-trove so rich with lovely things;
Though feather-light, this little bag is fraught
With precious hoard beyond the richest king's.
For here I have the crimson heart of June,
The regal robes of amethystine seas,
The pearly radiance of the maiden moon,
The gilded girdling of the bumble-bees.

Here is the sapphire of the farthest star,
And here the fragrant scents of Araby,
Here is the splendor of a royal durbar,
Yet here the lesson of humility.
"Mixed seed," they say; nay, rather 'tis a key
That opens beauty's door full wide to me.

—Charles G. Wilson in "The Christian Science Monitor."

Tooth Brush Is Better Friend Than Toothache

"There are thirty-two reasons why every member of every family should have a toothbrush," says Dr. A. Lessard, head of the Provincial Health Department, in a statement to the public on oral hygiene, "every reason is a tooth."

"A toothbrush," he continues, "is a better friend than a toothache.

"A clean, healthy mouth is good life insurance.

"Brush your teeth after meals. Use a down stroke on the upper teeth. Stroke up on the lower jaw—jaws apart.

"Dirty teeth decay most at night.

"Many people are digging their graves with their teeth.

"If a tooth could talk it would surely say,

"I need to be brushed, three times a day."

Cottonseed Oil Waste Yields Nutritive Food By New Process

Years of research by Gaspar Schmitt, a chemist of Heidelberg, has established the fact that the great masses of waste material from cottonseed after the oil has been extracted contain unparallel human nutritive value. He has developed a process whereby that waste can be converted into a substance that can readily be utilized in conjunction with other foods to give them health-giving qualities.

His research has proved that over half of the substance of this former waste product is pure albumen, known to be a great body-building agent. The remainder of the substance contains considerable amounts of phosphoric acid and aluminum salts. Vitamins A, B, C and E have been found in the preparation, thus giving it more vitamins than tropical fruits, such as oranges, lemons, bananas and dates.

The use of cottonseed meal, or "Florida Albumen," as Schmitt calls his product, is considered feasible because of the low cost of the cottonseed after the oil has been extracted, as that product was formerly considered waste or used for cattle fodder.

The product has already been successfully introduced in Egypt, where it is used in coffee and cocoa, giving them additional health-giving properties without affecting the original flavor and aroma, as "Florida Albumen" is tasteless and odorless.

Numbers For Names

The fact the Primo Carnera, the famous boxer, has a brother named Secondo calls to mind the curious way Italian fathers and mothers have of overcoming the problem of "What shall we call them?"

When they can't think of names, they use the written form of numbers. The giant fighter's Christian name really means first and, in Italy, is often applied to the firstborn of the family. His next brother's name means second. After that there would come Terzo, Quarto, Quinto, Sesto, and Settino. If the family is very large, Ottavio, Nono, Decimo would follow—in other words, every number up to ten.

Girls as well as boys have numbers for names, but they are even more musical, for the feminine form ends in the letter "a." Thus Prima would be the eldest girl.

Octavia and Decima, derived from the Latin, are sometimes used in Britain and they mean the same thing as in the Italian. You can always tell when an Italian girl is named Decima that she comes from a large family—so this system of numbering off does give us more information than ordinary names would provide.—"Answers."

Simple Household Remedies

When I am weltering in woe,
It's time to bake or sweep or sew.
When I am bothered by the ache
Within my breast, it's time to bake
Or sew. And when I cannot sleep,
It's best to get right up and sweep.

For I can keep my tears from flowing
By seizing on a bit of sewing.
I can dissuade my heart from breaking
If I but singe my fingers baking
I can forego a fit of weeping
By getting up and at my sweeping.
—Margaret Fishback, from the New Yorker.

Milk-Fed Bees

The Bee Division o fthe Experimental Farm of the Dominion Department of Agriculture at Agassiz, B.C., making tests in respect to stimulative feeding for brood production used a syrup composed of sugar and milk in place of the usual sugar and water syrup. In an average of four colonies not only were a large number of combs covered by bees up to mid-July, but each milk-fed colony produced an average of 23 pounds more honey than the check lots.

Are We Entering The Glass Age?

Condensed by the Reader's Digest from an Article by W. P. Helm in World's Work.

When Smith's little colony at Jamestown made colored beads and baubles for the Indian trade in 1609, they started thereby the first factory in the western world. With sand from the James and hickory wood ashes, the Jamestown artisans produced their wares. Pittsburg, modern centre of the industry, first made glass more than a century ago. Since then machines have gradually taken the place of the old-time artisans. And so swift has been the advance in manufacturing technique in recent decades that to-day leading factors in the trade believe that their ancient industry aways on the threshold of a ow era—the Glass Age.

Research laboratories now dot the glass-making districts, and new uses for glass are found almost daily. Here is a glass that turns the bullet of the gangster; yonder are great mills making window glass that gives free passage to ultra-violet rayc barred by the window glass of yesterday.

Glass Age Developing

Architects in Chicago now are working on apartment houses to be built of glass. Factories turn out glass bricks to be used in building construction. Tinted glass of charming appeal to feminine tastes now goes into walls, ceilings and floors of milady's bathroom. Glass to turn away the sun's actinic ray shelters the largest dirigibles. Plate glass, as sparkling as the air, panels mammoth office buildings. Heat-resisting glass replaces metal pots and pans in the housewife's oven. Laminated, non-shatterable glass is marching into many new markets.

"Where will it end?" I asked a leading glass maker.

"It will not end," he said. "Glass has hardly yet begun to come into its own. Almost everything in daily use can be made of glass, and generally it can be made better than with any other material."

The Process of Manufacture

The tiny grains of silica that come from the many holes in the ground—when quarried they generally are in the form of stone—undergo remarkable changes en route to the consumer. First processing reduces them to powder almost as fine as talcum. This opaque dust thus started to transparency is mixed with soda ash, lime, and other ingredients for the melting pot or tank; though the standard mixtures are generally known, some makers still keep their formulas secret.

Thus dusty ash or mixture, called the batch, is placed in a fire-swept furnace and sprayed with flame under high pressure. Into the blistering heat of the melting pot also goes this, that, and the other ingredient to bring the rainbow to the finished product. Many are the formulas for tinting. A bit of finely powdered coal goes into the pot, for instance, and black glass emerges. Blue is the child of cobalt. Manganese tints the product green. The rare element selenium turns the output to transparent gold. And gold—the gold in a $20 minted double eagle—produces the finest of all tinted glass, a rich, royal ruby. One $20 gold piece, dissolved in acid, is mixed into a 300-pound batch.

From Greenland comes cryolite, found only in its icy mountains, to spray its milky translucency throughout what the trade calls opal glass. And from Death Valley comes borax to harden against heat the pots and pans now used in many a kitchen.

Again and again the glass maker has produced enthralling shades of color only to lose them. One manufacturer in the course of his experiments produced a delicate shade of pink that for sheer beauty was unrivalled. In his excitement he forgot what he had put in the batch, and six long and disappointing months dragged by before he found his precious formula again. Potassium carbonate was the base of the rare shade.

"The House of The Future"

"The house of the future," says John M. Hammer, editor of the American Glass Review, "will have walls of glass on steel ribs. The main part of the wall and the cornices will be of glass of various colors. The colors will be non-fading; only soap and water will be needed to keep them ever beautiful and gleaming. All windows and other transparent parts will be of glass that admits ultra-violet rays. Inside walls will be panelled with colored, non-shatterable glass. Roofs will be of corrugated wire glass. One-way glass, too, will play its part in the home. That is glass permitting one-way vision only. I can stand on one side and observe outside objects as clearly as through a window pane, yet I cannot be seen, except vaguely, from without."

Economic Unity

London Times: Economic unity in Europe, and a corresponding economic unity in the British Empire, are inevitable developments of the future, however much they may be delayed by temporary obstacles.

Between simple and noble people there is always a quick intelligence; they recognize at sight and meet on better ground than the talent and skill they possess, namely, on simplicity and uprightness. — Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Sunday School Lesson

July 12. Lesson II—The Preaching of The Apostles—Acts 4: 1-14. Golden Text—We ought to obey God rather than men.—Acts 5:29.

ANALYSIS

I. PETER'S PREACHING, Acts 3: 11-26.
II. THE OUTCOME, Acts 4: 1-22.
III. THE CHURCH THAT WINS, Acts 4: 23-31.
IV. PAUL'S PREACHING, 1 Cor. 1: 21-25.

INTRODUCTION—The believers met for their specifically Christian services in each other's homes. They did not, however, separate themselves from Judaism. They took their part in the synagogue services. In Jerusalem they went for public prayer to the Temple. It was on their way to the Temple service that the incident of healing the cripple occurred which led to the sermon which sounded the key-note of the early apostolic preaching.

I. PETER'S PREACHING, Acts 3: 11-26.

After the Temple service, preaching to the amazing crowd, Peter did not capitalize the healing to win popularity for himself. He gave all the credit to Jesus. The preacher's loyalty was matched by his courage. Boldly he proclaimed that the one whom they had crucified as a criminal was the promised Deliverer. The healing of the beggar was an example of his power.

Peter then appealed to his hearers to repent and thus win forgiveness and have their part in Messiah's kingdom. Messiah would remain in heaven until the time prophesied for "restitution" would arrive. Peter interpreted Jesus in the light of traditional Jewish hopes. Christianity was still bound to Judaism.

II. THE OUTCOME, Acts 4: 1-22.

(a) Antagonisms. The cure and the preaching attracted the attention of the ecclesiastical authorities. The rulers were alarmed lest the people should follow this new sect. The priestly authorities, being Sadducees, did not believe in a resurrection. They were antagonized because the apostles proclaimed the resurrection of Jesus. Conventionally religious people, such as they were, are certain to come in conflict, at one time or another, with Spirit-filled, and, therefore, fearless preaching. The apostles were arrested and lodged in jail for the night.

(b) Conversions. Peter and John, true to their Master, did not modify their message in order to win the influential, worldly-minded people. But men were won for the kingdom. The number of Peter's converts, not counting the women, was about five thousand.

(c) A Brave Defence. Before the Sanhedrin the next morning Peter proclaimed his message again. Loyal to his Master, he again gave credit to Christ for all that had happened. With magnificent boldness the man who not so long ago had flinched before a girl now accused the high priests of crucifying their Messiah. It was Messiah's power that had healed the cripple. Only through him could salvation come to men.

Such preaching from an uneducated layman astonished and indeed irritated the rulers. These Jesus-followers were dangerous. Their popularity with the people, however, made it unwise to molest them. Accordingly, the Sanhedrin declared their preaching illegal and let them go. But Peter and John exclaimed, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye. For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard." The apostolic preaching was characterized by that boldness which "feared not the face of any man."

III. THE CHURCH THAT WINS, Acts 4: 23-31.

Upon being released, Peter and John reported to the others what had happened. The believers gave themselves to prayer "with one accord"—that is, with united eagerness. They prayed intensely, passionately. In similar case, many Christians might decide that a delegation to the Sanhedrin would be a better plan. These believers gave themselves passionately to prayer. For what did they pray? For safety in the threatening future? No, they prayed for more of that quality of character which had so recently made so much trouble for two of their number—more boldness in preaching!

IV. PAUL'S PREACHING, 1 Cor. 1: 21-25.

Peter's preaching was that of a Jew to brother Jews. Jesus was the foreshadowed Messiah in whom they were to find the realization of Jewish hopes. His Messiahship was verified by his suffering, resurrection and risen power.

Paul, on the other hand, proclaimed a universal gospel. He liberated early Christianity from its Judaistic framework. He refused to trouble himself about Jewish "signs" or Greek "wisdom." He "knew" only Christ crucified, the power of God; the wisdom of God.

A Time to Talk

When a friend calls to me from the road
And slows his horse to a meaning walk,
I don't stand still and look around
On all the hills I haven't hoed,
And shout from where I am, What is it?
No, not as there is a time to talk.
I thrust my hoe in the mellow ground,
Blade-end up five feet tall,
And plod: I go up to the stone wall
For a friendly visit.
—Robert Frost, in "Mountain Interval."

Here and There

Feeding tobacco to sheep is the latest device to check internal parasites. The tobacco is given with salt in the proportion of ten pounds of salt to one of crushed tobacco leaf.

Latest available estimates place Canada's forest resources at 224,804 million cubic feet of standing timber, capable of yielding 424,637 million feet board measure of sawn lumber and 1,121,993 thousand cords of pulpwood, ties, poles and other smaller materials.

Western Canadians are showing resolution coupled with a high degree of industry, was the comment made by Grant Hall, vice-president, Canadian Pacific Railway, on his return from a recent tour of the company's western lines.

"Buyers' Week," which has been a great success in the past, will be held for the fourth time in Montreal commencing August 10 next. At the last one in February upwards of 1,100 buyers came to Montreal and purchased in round figures $950,000 worth of Canadian-made goods.

A man catching a fish is not news unless the fish is an outsize, but a fish catching a man rates a big type head. This happened at Lake Minnewanka, near Banff, recently when an angler was pulled off the pier into the lake by the sudden strike of a monster trout. Constable James of Calgary put off in a boat and landed both fish and fisherman.

Six days, nine hours and eleven minutes was the time of the record run of the "Empress of Japan," 26,000-ton flagship of the Canadian Pacific fleet, on her last trip from Yokohama to Honolulu, while a double record was made when the same ship completed the voyage from Honolulu to Victoria in four days, nine hours and 16 minutes.

For the second time in the past three years, Canadian Pacific Railway police are all-Canada revolver champions. The railway's Ontario team defeated Royal Canadian Mounted Police, of Lethbridge, in the finals for the trophy recently. The railway police scored 1410 out of a possible 1500 against the Mounties 1852 thus becoming Dominion Open Revolver Police Champions.

Hon. Gordon S. Harrington, Premier of Nova Scotia, and two hundred of the province's leading citizens, gathered at Yarmouth June 16 for the opening of the Lakeside Inn, Canadian Pacific hotel. This hostelry is the third of a chain across Nova Scotia opened by the railway in the past few years, testifying to the faith in the tourist possibilities of the province held by the Canadian Pacific. BRAMPTON

Peel County was the centre of a severe storm Friday, the storm area extending across the breadth of the county.

Windows were broken by hail in Norval, and a barn belonging to Mrs. Findlay, second line east, Dixie, and now used by her son-in-law, was burned, along with a truck and an automobile, when the barn was struck by lightning. The rain was very heavy on the west side of the county.

At Huttonville, holes a foot deep were gouged in the sandy earth by what seemed like a cloudburst, and at Cheltenham, on the third line west, the storm also had the appearance of a cloudburst, water running on the roads like rivers a few moments after the rain commenced.

On the fifth line west, fields were submerged in a few moments, only the tops of grain and vegetables showing above the water. Motorists proceeding on the fifth line north report their engines were stopped by the rain while lightning was continuous. It rained heavily on the east side of the county, with a continuous play of fork lightning and heavy thunder, but the only damage reported was the destruction of the one barn.

Over $10,000.00 in Cash Prizes

What is the Population of Canada?

Here is a question of national interest supported by a $10,000.00 Prize List. The Census in June will decide the answer.

The big Cash Prizes go to those who most closely estimate Canada's population according to the government figure.

Read the full details. This splendid offer is sponsored by The Streetsville Review and the Family Herald and Weekly Star, and open to readers of these two papers.

ACT NOW AND SHARE IN THIS WEALTH OF ATTRACTIVE AWARDS

How to Take Part and Win

The Government of Canada will take the census in June of this year. Every ten years the government takes this census to determine the population of the Dominion. In June Government representatives will set to work to cover every section and make a count of the number of people resident in Canada. Government statisticians will then determine just what is Canada's population.

Canada has grown rapidly since the last census in 1921. Just to what extent her population has increased is the problem of this contest.

The splendid cash awards shown on this page go to those who can most closely estimate what the Government will find our 1931 population in Canada to be.

What an opportunity for earning a marvellous cash prize with little or no effort. Be sure to take part.

RULES OF THE CONTEST

1.—The Contest is open to all readers of The Streetsville Review on the conditions following:

2.—The problem is to estimate what will be the population of Canada for 1931 according to the government census taken in June, 1931.

3.—Each contestant in order to win a prize must continue to be a subscriber to The Streetsville Review and the Family Herald & Weekly Star until the Contest is over.

4.—The Contest may close any time after notice has been given by the Streetsville Review and the Family Herald & Weekly Star.

5.—Seven estimates will be allowed for your club subscription for one year to The Streetsville Review and the Family Herald & Weekly Star provided it is renewed before the Contest closes.

How to Get Extra Estimates

6.—Every present subscriber to The Streetsville Review who secures one club subscription at $2.25 from someone who is not at present a subscriber to The Streetsville Review will be entitled to make seven estimates in the Contest, and the new subscriber will also be entitled to make seven estimates. Get extra estimates for the big prizes by sending in new subscriptions.

The more new subscribers you send in to The Streetsville Review the greater are your chances of winning the big $5,000.00 prize.

7.—All new subscriptions to count in the contest must be for persons living in Canada or Newfoundland.

8.—Estimates MUST accompany the subscription orders and cannot be accepted at a later date or in a separate envelope. All estimates and subscriptions must be mailed to The Streetsville Review.

9.—Credit cannot be given for subscriptions sent in before the Contest opened or after the closing date.

10.—No changes in the estimates will be allowed.

11.—A contestant may not claim the estimates of the new subscriber as well as his own. See Rule 6.

12.—Should two or more persons be tied for any prize that prize and as many others following as there are persons tied will be reserved for them before any prizes are awarded for less correct estimates.

13.—Only one of the first capital prizes will be paid to any one person, but more than one of the last ninety-five smaller prizes may be won by the same person, provided he (or she) is not also the winner of a capital prize.

14.—Orders and coupons must be dated.

15.—The prizes will be awarded and paid as soon as the official figures from Ottawa are issued. The census will be taken during the month of June.

The British Trio at Garden Party

We like to read the old Streetsville Review,
For the coming events always seems to come true.
This year when we saw what the Review had to say,
Where to have the best time on Dominion Day.
A good time was promised and we knew it was right,
The programme the Anglicans were giving at night.

The night came at last, and tickets Jack Drennen sold,
Made him feel like he struck, a good field of gold,
And it is always refreshing a hot night in July,
A hot dog if you are hungry, or lemonade if you're dry.
And wherever we looked, no one seemed alone
For there was a ginger ale bottle, or an ice cream cone.

Then Mr. Perry promised an intellectual treat
That would make all forget the day's terrible heat,
And the Reverend gentleman was at his best,
When he introduced the actors, and welcomed the guests,
And he new in the future, when years had passed by,
We would remember with pleasure this first night in July.

It was their first time in Streetsville, this British trio,
And they kept everyone laughing from the word go.
There was Copeland from Scotland, and the Englishman, Duff,
Of their acting and music, we could not get enough,
And the charming Margaret Williamson from Aberdeen,
No better dancing in that hornpipe ever was seen.

And when Miss Williamson sang it made us rejoice,
For she has the dear old, Jessie MacLachlan voice.
That night in our ears, that sweet voice seemed to ring,
When in Massey Hall, Miss MacLachlan would sing,
The good old tunes they played, in our memory will lie,
This British trio played, for us this first night in July.

When Miss Williamson sang, Whistle and I'll come to you, my lad,
Because Herm couldn't whistle' he was awfully sad.
Then he said when she comes to the Garden Party next year,
He will practice a tune, till he gets in high gear.
Then Jack said to me, between you and I,
We will beat Herm to it, the next first of July.

The glorious bagpipes, when the Scotchman did play,
We expected to see the Englishmen, all run away.
For dumbfounded, the English, they saw, they saw,
Dumbfounded they heard the blaw, the blaw,
Dumbfounded they a' run a-wa, a-wa,
Fra a hundred pipers, and a', and a'.

When he laid down the pipes, and to the audience spoke,
He said the bagpipes were an Irishman's joke.
They make a present to Scotchmen of their troublesome toys,
And to see Scotchmen walk to get away from the noise.
But we saw the bagpipes had the proper ring,
When the little girl was dancing the highland fling.

When they sang too proud to beg, too honest to steal,
We know what it is to be wanting a meal,
Their distress struck the heart of an Irish boy,
For to give others pleasure is an Irishman's joy.
So up to the actors, this little boy went
And gave all his trensures, his heart, and a cent.

Then the Scotchman thanked him and said, I declare,
A gift without the giver is bare.
If this audience would do like this little lad,
And give them their all, it would make them real glad.
But the audience looked Scotch and would argue and talk,
And say, 'lots of people go hungry and others must walk.'

We hope we will soon hear this refrain,
These artists will soon be back again.
And then we'll get another chanee,
To hear them sing, and see them dance.
No matter how, or where, or when,
We'll all be pleased to see them then.

TO ALL INTERESTED IN SWIMMING

Arrangements have been completed with the Royal Life Saving Society, to run a class in Swimming and life saving, in Streetsville. Mr. D. Barclay, chief instructor for the county has kindly offered his services, free of charge, and the class will be under his direction. These classes will be open to young men and boys of all ages, and will start just as soon as a class can be organized. Mr. Barclay will be at the High School, Monday evening, July 13th at 7 p.m. for the purpose of enrolling those wishing to join. An invitation is extended to every boy in the village, to attend this meeting.

The Royal Life Saving Society has for many years carried on the splendid work of promoting the knowledge of swimming and life saving and we hope many of our boys will take advantage of this opportunity to receive instructions.

If for any reason you are unable to attend this meeting, you can hand your name in to Mr. Jack Drennan, who will see that you are enrolled in the class.

This class is for young men and boys only, if however, it is successful a class for girls will be opened later on.

GARDEN PARTY

MARRIAGES

Vickers—McArthur

St. Pauls Anglican Church' Regina, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Tuesday evening, June 30th, when Jean Claire, daughter of Mrs. and the late Jas. McArthur, Dollard, Sask., became the bride of Fred Sherman, youngest son of Mrs. and the late John Vickers of Meaford, Ont. Rev. Cannon Irwin officiating.

A few intimate friends of the young couple were present for the occasion.

After a brief wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Vickers returned to Regina, where they will reside.
